NEW YORK CITY DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

What the New Sanitary Inspection Grades Mean to You

Free Training for Food Service Operators

Starting in July 2010, the New York City Health Department will require certain types of food service establishments to prominently post letter grades that correspond to their sanitary inspection scores. During June, the department will offer free workshops in all five boroughs to explain the grading program so that establishment operators can comply with the new rules. For more information on the free workshops, see the schedule below.
