IT'S STILL the missing link.

Three Bronx activists are breathing new life into an old pipe dream to build a waterfront path on the Hudson River, connecting the Manhattan Greenway and Old Croton Aqueduct Trail in Yonkers.

"It's too good of a resource not to take advantage of," said Bob Bender, one of the three members of Bronx Community Board 8's new special committee created to tackle the long-desired Hudson River Greenway project.

Park advocate groups, including Friends of the Hudson River Greenway, have pushed for such a link for nearly 20 years.
