LETTER FROM THE MAYOR

NEW YORK CITY: STRENGTHENING INVESTMENT IN THE ARTS

OUR CITY'S CULTURAL ORGANIZATIONS ARE ESSENTIAL to ensuring that New York remains one of the world's great cities. A magnet for talent from around the world, our creative community is also a thriving small business sector that exists in every neighborhood throughout the five boroughs. That is why our Administration has made supporting the arts a top priority, and why over the past five years—despite challenging times—we have strengthened our investment.

This report illustrates the many ways the Department of Cultural Affairs (DCLA) has succeeded at awarding more funding to more organizations, faster than ever before. DCLA is also leading the way in inter-agency collaborations—from the Department for the Aging and Department of Consumer Affairs to the New York City Economic Development Corporation—by developing creative partnerships that express how critical the arts are to New York City's vibrancy and to improving the lives of New Yorkers and visitors from around the world. In addition, the development of new information technology systems has enabled the Department to track these services and further advocate on behalf of culture's tremendous impact on our City.

And we continue to push boundaries in expanding our service to the creative sector. In the year ahead, we will make significant progress in a number of areas: on capital projects in all five boroughs, our Spaceworks initiative to create affordable studio and rehearsal space, and the innovative Culture Shed, a flexible arts and culture center like no other in the world, in New York's new Hudson Yards district. Advances such as this will continue to promote our thriving cultural community and encourage the next generation of arts innovators.

In every way the arts are a critical part of the City's economy, identity and quality of life. The innovative achievements described in this report would not have been possible without the leadership of First Deputy Mayor Patricia E. Harris, Cultural Affairs Commissioner Kate D. Levin and the entire DCLA staff, the Cultural Affairs Advisory Commission led by Chair Agnes Gund, and dedicated colleagues in City government. Together, their support helps ensure that our City stays on the cutting edge by expanding to meet the growing needs of our cultural community. We encourage you to visit nyc.gov for more information on our City's vibrant arts and cultural programs.

A PERIOD OF AGENCY INNOVATION

2007–2012: A PERIOD OF AGENCY INNOVATION

THE 5-YEAR PERIOD FROM 2007 TO 2012 WAS ONE OF INNOVATION for the Department of Cultural Affairs (DCLA). Beginning in 2007, the Agency launched a series of new initiatives that streamlined internal operations, improved engagement with the cultural field, and strengthened existing partnerships to increase arts offerings citywide. In the midst of a severe economic downturn, the Agency built on its commitment to support the nonprofit cultural community with improved funding programs and expanded resources. Key areas of innovation include:

FUNDING REFORM

Between fiscal years 2007 and 2008, DCLA initiated a series of funding reforms that streamlined the way the Agency reviewed funding eligibility, and allocated and distributed taxpayer dollars among cultural groups.

Expansion of the Cultural Development Fund

Prior to FY08, the majority of available funding for cultural programs was disbursed through line-item allocations in the Agency's budget for 172 organizations at amounts largely fixed prior to 1989.

In FY08 when Funding Reform was implemented, the CDF applicant pool grew by 22% to 1,066

The Cultural Development Fund (CDF) was introduced in 2002 and distributed a relatively small additional amount of funds across a much larger pool of applicants through a competitive, peer-panel-review grant process. In fiscal year 2007 the City granted a total of $23.6 million for cultural programming, $3.7 million of which was allocated to 609 groups through the CDF.

In 2008 DCLA worked with the Mayor's Office and the City Council to sunset the line-item process and significantly increase access to funding citywide via the CDF. Under the reformed process, organizations with budgets over $250,000 can apply for multi-year awards. Smaller organizations are eligible for annual awards, as their programs are more likely to vary and their budgets tend to grow more quickly. Thus, annual awards allow the groups to base their requests on more recent operating budgets and upcoming programming.

As a result of these reforms, funding allocated through the CDF grew significantly. By shifting line-item funds to the CDF, money awarded through the competitive process increased from $3.7 million in FY07 to $24.6 million in FY08. The number of applicants increased by 22% from 884 to 1,066 and the number of groups that received funding increased by 34% between those two years, from 609 to 817. The average award grew by 34%.

Introduction of CultureStat

In 2007 DCLA developed and introduced CultureStat, which outlined clear benchmarks for financial management, governance, and public access for the organizations comprising the DCLA's Cultural Institutions Group (CIG). CIG members are now expected to maintain full compliance with CultureStat, or risk forfeiting a portion of their City operating support.

INNOVATIONS IN CAPITAL FUNDING

Concurrent with program funding reform, DCLA restructured the way it distributes grants, provides ongoing assistance, and promotes design excellence for its capital projects.

Creation of the Cultural Capital Grant

In 2009, in partnership with the Department of Design and Construction (DDC) and the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), DCLA launched a pilot plan to simplify contract processing for City-funded construction projects managed by cultural organizations. The new Cultural Capital Grant (CCG) streamlines the City's review process and provides cultural organizations with greater flexibility to procure contractors. In doing so, the CCG processing time compared to the previous pass-through process has been reduced by more than half on average, while still retaining all the protections of the City's investment. Since the pilot launch, the Capital unit successfully designated and activated 56 new projects as CCGs.

Community Arts Development Grant

DCLA's Community Arts Development Program (CADP) re-grants the federal Housing and Urban Development Department's Community Development Block Grant funds to small arts organizations serving low-income communities. When it was first introduced in 1979, the program served as one of the only funding options for organizations in non-City-owned buildings seeking equipment and facility renovation support. However, in 1999, eligibility for capital support expanded beyond City-owned facilities and, shortly after, the Bloomberg administration increased funding for capital projects across the City. This enabled DCLA to award new capital funds to groups that previously relied on CADP grants only.

Accordingly, in 2009 the CADP was transformed into a high-impact initiative offering nonprofit arts groups a way to build their capacity while experiencing the challenges that a large-scale capital project can bring about. Through this year-long intensive program, organizations are partnered with an arts management expert to engage in strategic planning, business planning, or board development. In the last CADP funding cycle (FY11), 11 groups received a total of $330,000 in capacity-building assistance. The next cycle of the CADP program will begin in FY13.

Culturals Lead the Department of Construction’s Design Excellence Program

In 2004 the Department of Design and Construction (DDC) inaugurated the Design + Construction Excellence program to partner the most creative and experienced design professionals in the world with institutions undergoing capital projects. Since the program’s inception, 38 of DCLA’s capital projects have participated in the program, more than any other City agency. Four of the 23 DCLA projects initiated in the last five years have gone on to receive Awards for Excellence in Design from the Public Design Commission, including: the rehabilitation of the Bronx River Arts Center (FY09), the renovation of 122 Community Center (FY10), the construction of the rooftop pavilion at the Brooklyn Children’s Museum (FY10) and the three carriage houses at the Staten Island Historical Society (FY12).

Building More “Green”

With the administration’s adoption of Local Law 86 in 2005 and the launch of Mayor Bloomberg’s 2008 PlaNYC campaign to create a greener, more sustainable New York, today a significant portion of the DCLA-funded capital portfolio reflects efforts to significantly enhance energy efficiency.

Examples of completed DCLA-supported capital projects with benchmark sustainability achievements include:

- The Queens Botanical Garden Visitor and Administration Center was the City’s first LEED Platinum facility, completed in 2007, with features including wastewater and rainwater recycling.
- The Brooklyn Children’s Museum became one of the City’s first LEED Silver museums in 2009, with renovations incorporating cutting-edge technologies like geothermal wells that helped establish standard design practices for geothermal engineers in New York City.
- Staten Island Children’s Museum’s permanent outdoor tent enhanced the Museum’s energy efficiency with the integration of solar panels for added lighting. The project was completed in 2012.
- Brooklyn Botanic Garden’s Visitor Center, opened in May 2012, is a 22,000 square foot LEED-certified space, which includes geo-thermal heating and cooling, reused and recycled building materials, and a 10,000 square foot “living” green roof.

AFFORDABLE WORKSPACE

In response to the rising costs of real estate, DCLA has worked to provide space for the City's creative community by renovating existing cultural facilities and repurposing public and private spaces for cultural use. Recent initiatives include:

Maximizing Underutilized Space

In 2008, with strong support from the New York City Council, DCLA partnered with the Department for the Aging (DFTA) to launch SM(ART)S: Seniors Meet the Arts, a $1 million Council-funded initiative to bring cultural organizations and senior centers together to enhance senior participation in the creative life of the City. Selected through a competitive application process, 57 cultural organizations partnered with more than 150 senior centers in neighborhoods across the five boroughs to provide a variety of hands on programs, such as jewelry design, blues cabaret, creative writing, and cinema.

Inspired by the success of SM(ART)S, DCLA worked with DFTA to reformulate the program so it could also address the need for artists' studio space. Together in 2009, the agencies launched a pilot program called Space for Art that placed 12 artists-in-residence at nine senior centers throughout the City. In exchange for studios in underutilized areas of each facility, the selected artists engaged seniors in a variety of artistic endeavors from ceramic classes to portraiture to storytelling and oral history. The program was launched as part of the City's Age-Friendly NYC initiative to make the City more livable for the growing population of older adults.

In 2012 the initiative was expanded to Seniors Partnering with Artists Citywide (SPARC), funded by a $200,000 Our Town grant from the National Endowment for the Arts and administered in partnership with DFTA and five borough arts councils. Through a competitive application process, 50 artists from 244 applicants were selected for residencies at 44 senior centers. In exchange for a stipend, access to supplies at Materials for the Arts, and the use of available work space in the senior centers, artists conducted six-month residencies of hands-on art making for over 900 seniors, with culminating public events for the surrounding community. Projects ranged from photography workshops to magic classes to the creation of a ukulele ensemble, and the public programs were featured in over 25 press outlets, including the New York Post, New York Daily News, and News 12 Brooklyn. Exit surveys that integrated quality of life metrics developed by the National Center for Creative Aging (NCCA) yielded the following promising results: 60% of respondents said that they socialized more through SPARC, and 64% reported that SPARC gave them the opportunity to express themselves creatively. 94% of respondents said that they would participate in SPARC if it were offered again. With funding from DFTA and management support from DCLA, a second complete cycle of SPARC will launch in 2013.

New Workspace Added Across the City

DCLA's Capital Projects Unit has facilitated the development of multi-use, community-oriented facilities that promote and support rehearsal needs and creation of new work. Recent examples include:

- Mark Morris Dance Group completed Phase IV of its multiyear expansion in 2009. Today, the five-story building includes seven studios available for rent at discounted prices to other nonprofit dance companies.
- Actors Fund of America's Schermerhorn House provided a new home for the Brooklyn Ballet and a black box theater in the Schermerhorn House, an affordable housing complex for artists and other low-income residents. The facility was completed in 2011, and was funded by a joint venture between The Department of Housing Preservation and Development (HPD), the Department of Homeless Services (DHS), the Actors Fund, and DCLA.
- DiMenna Center for Classical Music, owned and operated by the Orchestra of St. Luke's, boasts first-class, much-needed rehearsal, education, and recording facilities that serve the resident company as well as many of the City's other orchestras and choruses. The Center opened in 2011.

Creation of Spaceworks

During 2011 and 2012, DCLA spearheaded the creation of Spaceworks, a nonprofit real estate organization dedicated to developing long-term, affordable workspace for artists in New York City. Combining expertise in real estate development and operations with an understanding of artists' specific space needs, Spaceworks fills the gap that exists between property owners and the cultural community. Its approach is collaborative, working first with DCLA and other City agencies to secure underutilized City property, and partnering with local arts groups to fill the newly constructed studios and rehearsal spaces. By mid-2012, Spaceworks formalized its status as an independent nonprofit and is currently planning to open its first studios in 2013. Over the next five years, Spaceworks plans to create over 100,000 square feet of new affordable studio space across the City.

Announcement of urbancanvas Design Competition

In 2010, in partnership with the Department of Buildings (DOB) and the Public Design Commission (PDC), DCLA helped launch the urbancanvas Design Competition, a unique opportunity to expand public art venues by providing graphic templates to be used on temporary protective structures at construction sites. At the competition's end, four winning designs were selected and installed at 11 locations in Brooklyn and Manhattan. The designs remain available for property owners and developers to use at future development sites.

UPGRADED INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

DCLA has harnessed new technology to both serve the cultural field at large and enhance its own internal operations. A number of new online initiatives in the last five years have improved funding application procedures, increased opportunities for advocacy and analysis, and enabled Agency staff to streamline the grant process from initial inquiry to final report.

CDF Application Brought Online

Following program funding reform in FY08, DCLA brought the CDF grant application online. This development streamlined the application process for groups and improved the Agency's ability to review and process proposals. For FY11 the CDF Final Report was also digitized, further reducing processing time between the end of each grant cycle and the distribution of final payments to organizations.

New Cultural Management Planning System Installed

In partnership with the Department of Information Technology and Telecommunications (DoITT), DCLA launched its new Agency-wide database, Compass, in 2009. For the first time, all of DCLA's engagement with the field—from funding to capital project management to general communication—is compiled in one centralized location. For CDF applicants, Compass eases the application process by storing data and auto-populating it for subsequent grant cycles. The same year the database launched, DCLA received the City of New York 2009 Commissioner's Award for Technology-Driven Business Transformation. DCLA continues to refine and enhance the database, regularly adding components to improve usage, and collect and organize data.

NYCulture Calendar Launch

In early 2007 DCLA and DoITT launched the NYCulture Calendar to drive more audiences to the vast cultural offerings presented across the five boroughs and provide arts groups with a free marketing resource. To date, nearly 25,000 public events have been submitted to the calendar, and were subsequently published on nyc.gov and also shared with 311 call centers, nycgo.com, and other mobile-friendly calendars.

Introduction of the Cultural Data Project in New York

DCLA joined together with the New York State Council on the Arts (NYSCA) and private grantmakers to bring the Cultural Data Project (CDP) to New York State in 2009. CDP enables organizations to track their financial and programmatic performance over time, run benchmark comparisons against their peers, and use CDP-generated reports in applications to participating grantmakers. It was first launched in Pennsylvania in 2004 as a response to the need for longitudinal data about the cultural sector that would help better assess the contributions, impact, and needs of the field. The CDP has since expanded across the country, using a state-based model supported by task forces comprised of public and private funders as well as advocacy agencies. As a founding member of the New York State Task Force, DCLA continues to provide the leadership necessary to foster and maintain collaborations throughout the state, support fundraising, and encourage research using CDP data.

Launch of Sharepoint for Capital Funding Requests

In 2011 in conjunction with the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) and DoITT, DCLA launched Sharepoint, an online portal that allows organizations to submit capital funding requests to a central database accessible to DCLA and elected officials. Sharepoint streamlined request submissions by eliminating the need for cumbersome paper applications, and by allowing elected officials and DCLA to review the same request at the same time. In this way, a determination about project eligibility can be made quickly and with increased transparency.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

DCLA has expanded its direct capacity-building support for arts organizations, public schools, and individual artists through free services that aim to lessen the costs of needed goods and services and increase financial literacy. In addition, the Agency has provided a series of convenings and information sessions to disseminate key information to the field, not only about its own programs, but also about other resources available to the cultural community beyond City government.

Materials for the Arts

DCLA's Materials for the Arts (MFTA) continues to operate as the City's largest municipal reuse operation, collecting high-quality goods from businesses, nonprofits, and individuals that are then made available at no cost to nonprofit organizations and public schools. In 2009 the City expanded MFTA's Long Island City warehouse by 10,000 square feet, to 35,000 square feet in order to accommodate the program's growth and increased educational offerings.

Friends of Materials for the Arts (FOMA), which was founded in 2002 to support the work of MFTA, has contributed significantly to MFTA's operation. With FOMA's support, in 2008, MFTA began providing educational programming for public school students and a wider variety of professional development workshops for teachers. In the first year, 300 students and 500 teachers attended on-site educational programming. By 2012, those numbers rose to 2,000 students and 1,600 teachers.

Art of Money

Art of Money: Personal Finance Resources for Artists is a partnership between DCLA and the Department of Consumer Affairs Office of Financial Empowerment, designed to help self-employed artists, arts workers, and independent contractors improve their financial literacy. First presented in 2009, the workshop offers free, confidential, one-on-one consultations with financial advisors as well as the opportunity to meet representatives from service organizations offering affordable health care and accounting support. Art of Money has been presented in collaboration with local organizations in Harlem, Long Island City, and Bedford Stuyvesant, and attracted more than 500 attendees.

Agency Outreach

Today, DCLA holds 12 Application Funding Seminars each year in order to assist organizations requesting CDF funding. These two-hour seminars take place in every borough, and introduce interested groups to every step of the granting process, ensuring that both new and returning applicants are familiar with the funding eligibility and application guidelines. In 2011, 420 people representing 350 organizations attended the seminars. Similarly, for each CADP cycle, the Agency hosts three to four seminars throughout the City to assist eligible groups in the application process. Lastly, for the FY11 funding cycle, the Agency introduced a seminar for capital requests; due to high attendance, the Agency added a second seminar to accommodate the number of interested organizations. For FY12 more than 100 organizations attended the two workshops offered.

Nonprofit Assistance Initiatives

In 2009, Mayor Bloomberg announced a series of initiatives to help nonprofit organizations maintain financial stability during the economic downturn, including:

- Greater New York

Greater New York strategically pairs business executives with nonprofit executive directors in two-year, one-on-one partnerships. Together, they develop and implement innovative solutions to nonprofit business challenges using best practices from both the private and nonprofit sectors. The initiative's inaugural class included Theatre for a New Audience, Ghetto Film School, and Martha Graham Dance Company, among the participants.

- Group Purchasing

In 2011 the City launched a model partnership with Essensa, a group purchasing company that leverages the buying power of nonprofits as an incentive to vendors to offer below market rates. Participating nonprofits can take advantage of competitively-priced office supplies, health insurance, food services, and other resources available throughout the City. Lower prices are passed on to members without requirements for minimum purchases or fees to join. With DCLA's encouragement, 97 out of the 241 organizations (40%) that registered for Essensa accounts in FY12 were cultural nonprofits.

SUPPORT FOR PUBLIC ART PROJECTS

Each year dozens of groups and individuals seek support from the City to create public art projects that engage visitors and residents with New York's landscape in new ways. DCLA now works closely with the Office of Citywide Event Coordination and Management (OCECM), established in March 2007, to facilitate public art projects that occur on streets, sidewalks, and plazas while enforcing public safety measures and maintaining quality of life for all New Yorkers. As innovative public art projects have grown in scale and sophistication, DCLA and OCECM's efforts to communicate with the police and fire departments, assist with publicity, and coordinate logistics have become essential to ensuring that projects run smoothly and successfully. Examples of recent public art projects include:

- Make Music New York

DCLA provides funding and in-kind support for Make Music New York (MMNY), a lively, day-long festival of free concerts in public spaces, held annually on June 21 to celebrate the first day of summer. In the summer of 2012, MMNY hosted 1,049 concerts across the City.

- Festival of Ideas for the New City

In May 2011 the New Museum launched The Festival of Ideas for the New City, a collaboration among dozens of organizations based in Lower Manhattan which served as a platform for artists, architects, designers, and other leaders to explore new ways of improving urban life. The Festival included StreetFest, which featured over 100 organizations and small businesses along the Bowery and throughout the Lower East Side.

- Poem in Your Pocket Day

In 2002 Poem in Your Pocket Day (PIYP) was established collaboratively between the Office of the Mayor, the Department of Education, the City University of New York, and DCLA to showcase the talented faculty and student poets within the City's school system. Within a few years the project grew into a citywide initiative that celebrates National Poetry Month and encourages literacy through the development of a broader poetry curriculum for K-12 students, a Twitter "Poetweet" contest, and an original poem written by Mayor Bloomberg each year. On April 26, 2012, PIYP celebrated its 10th anniversary with an event in Times Square, coproduced with the Poetry Society of America, the Times Square Alliance, and the NYC Taxi and Limousine Commission.

- Key to the City

In June 2010 the City worked with public art organization Creative Time to present Key to the City by artist Paul Ramírez Jonas. A public art project that reinvented the civic honor of bestowing keys on heroes and dignitaries, Key to the City offered participants the opportunity to unlock steel gates, PO Boxes, secret doors, and compartments to explore over 20 unique sites spread across the entire five boroughs.

- Event Horizon

DCLA offered logistical support to the Madison Square Park Conservancy and Mad. Sq. Art for Event Horizon, created by artist Antony Gormley in 2010. The installation featured 31 life-size bodies placed on rooftops and sidewalks throughout the Flatiron District and Union Square, and included one installation on the observation deck of the Empire State Building.

- The New York City Waterfalls

In June 2008, the City welcomed The New York City Waterfalls, a collaboration between the Public Art Fund and artist Ólafur Elíasson. The installation brought new attention to the City's waterfront with four man-made waterfalls placed at different locations along the East River. By the installation's end, more than 320,000 people made their first trip to the Lower Manhattan or Brooklyn waterfront to see the waterfalls. The installation had an estimated economic impact of $69 million on the City.

- Sol LeWitt Structures, 1965-2006

In 2011 DCLA supported Sol LeWitt Structures, 1965-2006, curated by the Public Art Fund. The installation at City Hall Park was the first-ever out-door survey of LeWitt's three-dimensional "structures," and featured 27 artworks ranging from stark geometric forms to playful volcanoes of color.

- Total Recall

In November 2010 the Public Art Fund presented Total Recall at Brooklyn MetroTech. The installation featured five large-scale sculptural commissions by New York-based artists Martin Basher, Zipora Fried, Sam Moyer, Matt Sheridan Smith, and Kevin Zucker.

- Tatzu Nishi: Discovering Columbus

In 2012 DCLA worked with the Department of Parks and Recreation and DDC to plan the conservation of the Christopher Columbus statue following the exhibition of Tatzu Nishi's Discovering Columbus. Presented by Public Art Fund in the fall of 2012, the temporary installation invited visitors up to a living room built around the monument to experience the statue and the City's landscape as never before.

PART II

AGENCY PORTFOLIO, FY12

PROGRAM SERVICES

THE PROGRAM SERVICES UNIT IS PRIMARILY CHARGED WITH ADMINISTERING THE CULTURAL DEVELOPMENT FUND (CDF), through which DCLA awards funds to a vast array of programs provided by the City's arts and cultural organizations.

In FY12 DCLA convened 21 CDF panels of seven members each that yielded the following outcomes:

- 899 groups—representing 74% of all applicants—received a total of $31 million;
- 380 (43%) of funded organizations reported annual operating budgets of less than $250,000. The total amount that was awarded to these groups was $4.17 million;
- 47% of the organizations presented programs that had an educational component, providing arts to the City's students in every discipline and every format ranging from basic audience exposure through performance and exhibitions to in-depth, pre-professional training;
- 40% of the organizations funded reached a constituency that included underserved communities, including the elderly, immigrants, the disabled, and the incarcerated.

CULTURAL AFTER SCHOOL ADVENTURES

Cultural After School Adventures (CASA) was established in 2006 by the City Council in partnership with the Department of Youth and Community Development (DYCD) and DCLA to bring cultural activities and experiences to youth across the City. CASA was developed as part of DYCD's Out-of-School Time initiative which provides academic, recreational and cultural activities for students after school and during breaks. For CASA, each Council Member designates five distinct partnerships between public schools and cultural organizations that lead the programs. DCLA has administered the program since 2010 and in fiscal year 2012 facilitated the distribution of $5.1 million to arts partnerships between 90 cultural institutions and 255 public schools.

CULTURAL INSTITUTIONS GROUP

NEW YORK CITY PROVIDES FUNDING TO CULTURAL ORGANIZATIONS that operate in or on City-owned property. Organizations that comprise the DCLA-managed Cultural Institutions Group (CIG) receive significant capital and operating support to help meet basic security, maintenance, administration and energy costs. The CIG represents a broad spectrum of cultural endeavor, including art and natural history museums, theaters, performing arts centers, botanical gardens and zoos. In return for City support, these institutions operate as publicly-owned facilities whose mandate is to provide cultural services accessible to all New Yorkers.

Today the Cultural Institutions Group stands at 33 members, after the FY08 merger of Snug Harbor Cultural Center and the Staten Island Botanical Garden.

PERCENT FOR ART

*Time Cast, by Nobuho
Nagasawa, at the Columbia Street Waterfront District in Brooklyn*

PERCENT FOR ART (PERCENT) IS NEW YORK CITY'S PERMANENT PUBLIC ART PROGRAM that commissions and acquires artwork within City-funded capital construction projects. Since its inception in 1982, Percent has commissioned 374 artists for 291 projects at City-owned properties, with 82 commissions awarded during the Bloomberg Administration. These permanent works of art continue to enhance the City's landscape with installations at municipal buildings and adjacent outdoor spaces, schools, transportation hubs, parks, plazas, and streets across the five boroughs.

Seven new Percent for Art installations were completed in FY12

Donations to MFTA in FY12 were valued at $5.8 million

MATERIALS FOR THE ARTS PROVIDES DURABLE GOODS TO cultural nonprofits, schools, and civic arts programs for creative and administrative purposes. These goods range from supplies for theater sets and costumes to office furniture and equipment.

In FY12 MFTA received donations from 1,658 companies and individuals, and facilitated 5,458 shopping transactions, when organizations and schools pick up items free of charge for their creative endeavors. Additionally, with support from Friends of Materials for the Arts, MFTA's educational programs reached 15,000 people, including nearly 10,000 students, as well as teachers, community-based educators, and the general public.

Through MFTA an estimated 584 tons of durable goods avoided the landfill through creative reuse

CULTURAL AFFAIRS ADVISORY COMMISSION

THE CULTURAL AFFAIRS ADVISORY COMMISSION IS A CULTURAL ADVOCACY BODY mandated by the City Charter. For over 35 years it has advised the Mayor, the Cultural Affairs Commissioner, and other City officials on issues relating to the City's cultural life. The Commission functions as a "working board" to assist DCLA in serving New York City's nonprofit cultural community, providing assistance and advocacy in several areas of critical need affecting cultural groups. Commission members represent the broad strength and diversity of the City's cultural community.

MAYOR'S AWARDS FOR ARTS AND CULTURE

THE MAYOR'S AWARDS FOR ARTS AND CULTURE, established in 1976 and revived by Mayor Bloomberg in 2005 after a ten-year hiatus, honor the role that artists, educators, cultural organizations, and funders play in the public/private partnerships that sustain the City's creative vitality and economic well-being. The awards especially recognize accomplishments in the realm of public service. In 2008, the Bloomberg administration resumed awarding the Handel Medallion, New York City's highest award for achievement in the arts.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The initiatives and work highlighted in this report are made possible by a citywide network of committed artists, administrators, board members, funders, and audiences who are at the core of all of DCLA's endeavors.

DCLA—and by extension the entire City of New York—benefits from the visionary leadership of Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg and First Deputy Mayor Patricia E. Harris, and the day-to-day support of our colleagues across other agencies.

DCLA is grateful for its partnership with the New York City Council under the generous leadership of Speaker Christine C. Quinn, as well as Domenic M. Recchia, Jr., Chair of the Finance Committee, and Jimmy Van Bramer, Chair of the City Council Committee on Cultural Affairs, Libraries, and International Intergroup Relations.

DCLA is also thankful for the continued guidance from Agnes Gund and the Cultural Affairs Advisory Commission, and for Friends of Materials for the Arts, which supports and promotes the mission and programs of Materials for the Arts.

DCLA's ability to support arts and cultural organizations is enhanced greatly by the support of Megan Sheekey and The Mayor's Fund to Advance New York City, and Mary McCormick at the Fund for the City of New York.

DCLA has also benefitted from the generous contributions and partnerships with the National Endowment for the Arts and the ArtPlace initiative, Deutsche Bank, Ford Foundation, The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, David Rockefeller Fund, The New York Community Trust, The Pew Charitable Trusts, and The Charles H. Revson Foundation.

DCLA would also like to acknowledge the staff members who served the agency during the period of this report: Shruti Adhar, Barney Ashley, Catherine Behrend, Jamie Bennett, Elizabeth Bennett, Evan Bjornen, Susan Chjin, Vickie Davie, Katie Denny, Mark diBiase, Katie Dixon, Andrew Frank, Brian Healy, Edith Henegan, Mark Hsiao, Shannon Insana, Michele Kennedy, Nellie Killian, Lisa Kim, Sean McGlynn, Amanda Wells Miller, Kelly Pajek, Marian Ponomarenko, Jill Putterman, Chelsea Scott Rao, Evans Richardson IV, Susan Rothschild, Sara Rutkowski, Rebecca Lynch Rutherford, Andrea Sholler, Vanessa Silberman, and Katherine deRosset Uziel.

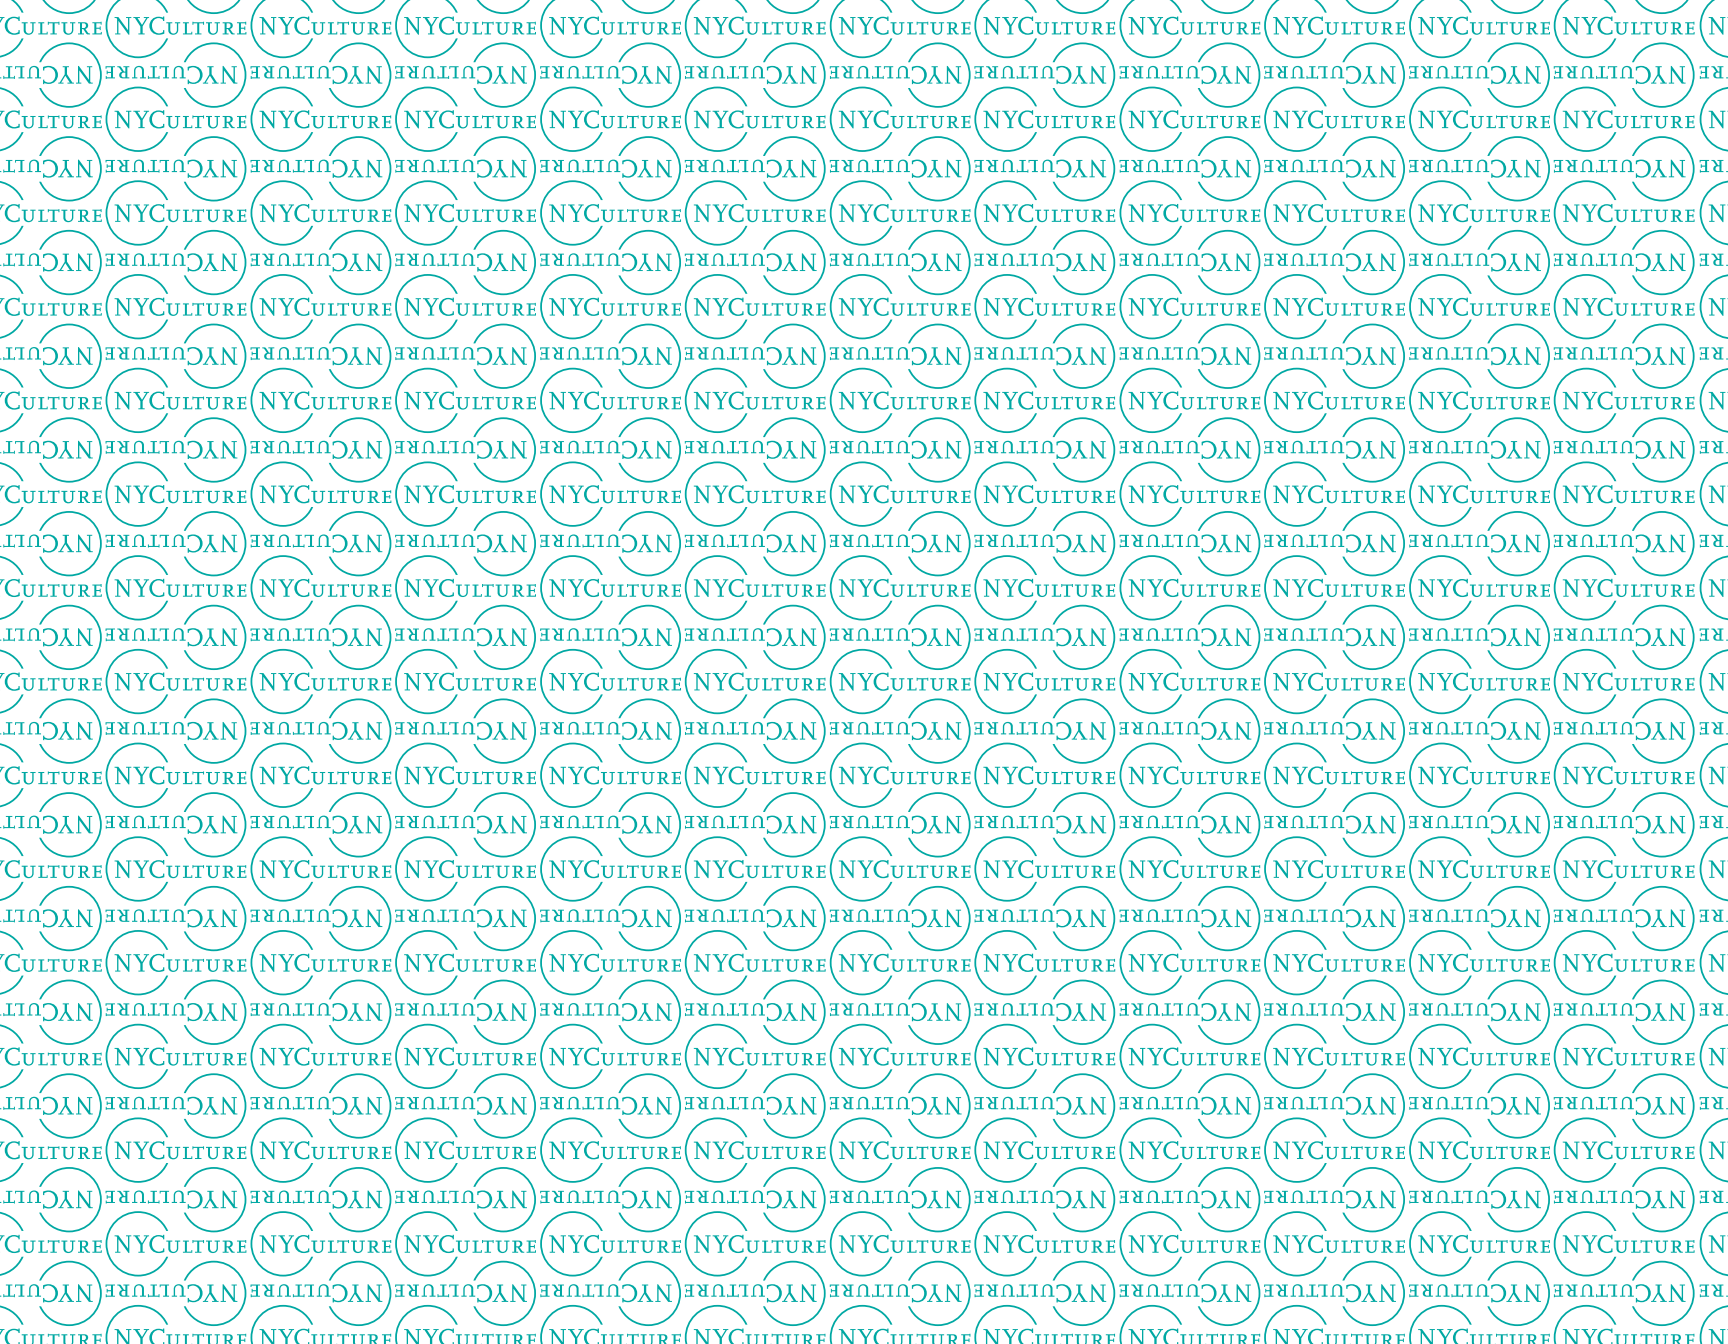

This report reflects the invaluable efforts of DCLA's entire staff. It was assembled under the coordination of Pamela Epstein and Shirley Levy.
