Job Description

In 2010 the New York City Department of Environmental Protection launched Water-On-the-Go to provide tap water to New Yorkers at parks, plazas, and public events throughout the five boroughs and served more than 80,000 people during the summer months. DEP seeks enthusiastic and energetic college students for a paid, part-time position to implement Water-On-the-Go this summer. Selected candidates will complete simple reports on activities performed and provide informational and educational materials related to water. This position offers flexible hours, including evening and weekend hours.

The New York City Department of Environmental Protection delivers one billion gallons of water to nine million New Yorkers every day from nineteen reservoirs and three controlled lakes in the Catskills, Delaware, and Croton watersheds.
