The English language modules from which these translations were made was developed by the NYC Department for the Aging's (DFTA) Organization Development & Strategies Initiatives Unit under the direction of Bob Stephens. Thanks to Commissioner Edwin Méndez-Santiago, Assistant Commissioner Karen Shaffer, Deputy Assistant Commissioners Janice Chu and Jane Fiffer and DFTA's Public Affairs' Director Chris Miller and Deputy Director Mira Browne for their support in bringing this project to fruition.

Robin Fenley, Director of DFTA's Alzheimer's & Caregiver Resource Center, spearheaded the efforts necessary to bring these learning modules to NYC's multilingual communities. Her staff, including Sarah Bober Rapaport, Kenneth Lam, Elba Cabrera, and Luba Ivanova, are to be commended for their tireless work on this project.

Many thanks to Selina Chan of the Chinese American Alzheimer's Coalition, Nam Yeon Yim of the Korean American Alzheimer's Coalition, M. Alexander (Alex) Alvarez of the Latino American Alzheimer's Coalition, Lora Finkelman of the Jewish Community Council of Greater Coney Island, and B. Runi Mukherji of the South Asian Council for Social Services for volunteering their time on the individual introductions.

Barbara Ong-Shen contributed her artistic talents to the design of the CD; Sanjay Ghosh of RK Software provided initial translations and the technical structure of the CD; Jeeyae Seo of the Korean American Behavioral Health Association for Asian American Mental Health provided help with the Korean translation, and the NYC Department of Information & Technology's Assistant Commissioner Michael Forte and ace filmmaker Leonardo Guevara 'on the Bridge' brought their technological vision and expertise to bear on the final touches of this project.

An enormous degree of collaboration is required to see a project of this scope through from conceptualization to finished product. It is the hope of all involved that this CD will reach and assist as many professionals and families as possible in their caring for someone they love with Alzheimer's disease.
