The NYC Department of Correction mourns the loss on Jan. 2, 2012 of Fred Milano, a paralegal who helped inmates in jail law libraries for the past 8 years, and a member of the early doo-wop group Dion and the Belmonts, where he sang tenor on songs including "A Teenager in Love." Milano, 72, who still performed, is remembered for his dedication to his job at DOC, where his colleagues recall his friendliness and exuberance. The band members, including Milano, were all friends from the same area in the Bronx and named themselves "The Belmonts" after the street on which Fred Milano lived at the time.
