Partners in Health

Partners In Health is a 501(c)(3) non-profit corporation based in Boston, Massachusetts, and active in the Caribbean, Latin America, Africa, Russia, and the United States. Its mission is to provide a preferential option for the poor in health care. Through service, training, advocacy, and research, and by establishing long-term relationships with sister organizations, PIH strives to achieve two overarching goals: to bring the benefits of modern medical science to those most in need of them and to serve as an antidote to despair. PIH has been working in Haiti for 20+ years and provides comprehensive healthcare from its twelve clinical facilities across Haiti's Central Plateau and Artibonite Valley. The organization works in close partnership with the Haitian Ministry of Health.

After the earthquake PIH quickly established field hospitals in Port-au-Prince, helping set up 20 operating rooms, 12 of which were able to function around the clock. PIH was the first group designated by the World Health Organization to serve as the primary coordinators of University Hospital in Port-au-Prince (HUEH) and will continue to support the Ministry of Health leadership at HUEH. PIH established a comprehensive triage and relief transfer system to move patients back and forth from Port-au-Prince to PIH sites in the Central Plateau and Lower Artibonite Valley based on the services available at various sites. It was also one of the first NGOs to evacuate patients in critical condition to hospitals in the United States and Dominican Republic as well as to the United States Naval Ship, the U.S.N.S. Comfort. PIH has sent 66 plane loads with more than 235 medical volunteers – orthopedic surgeons, anesthesiologists, surgical nurses and other medical professionals – and roughly 100,000 lbs of medical supplies to support the large network of PIH's local health care providers already working in Haiti.

UNICEF works to overcome obstacles that poverty, violence, disease and discrimination place in a child's path. The organization advocates for measures to give children the best start in life, as it believes that proper care at the youngest age forms the strongest foundation for a person's future. UNICEF has had a presence in Haiti since the 1940s.

In Haiti UNICEF and its partners are intensifying emergency operations to protect the health and safety of children at risk, especially children who have become separated from their families and may find themselves without shelter, food, water or other basic necessities. Almost half the population of Haiti is under 18 years old and children are at a high risk for diarrhoeal diseases. UNICEF is using materials already in the country and is sending supplies from its regional stock in Panama, including water tanks, water purification tablets, water bladders, and oral rehydration salts for children with diarrhea. UNICEF is continuing to deliver these materials to the Port-au-Prince and Santo Domingo airports. Additionally, UNICEF specialists are on hand to try to reduce bottlenecks at transportation hubs to ease distribution of relief materials.

The World Food Programme (WFP) is the world's largest humanitarian agency fighting hunger worldwide. In emergencies, WFP gets food to where it is needed, saving the lives of victims of war, civil conflict and natural disasters. After the cause of an emergency has passed, it uses food to help communities rebuild their shattered lives. WFP is part of the United Nations system and is voluntarily funded. Born in 1962, WFP pursues a vision of the world in which every man, woman and child has access at all times to the food needed for an active and healthy life. WFP works towards that vision with sister UN agencies in Rome -- the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) and the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) -- as well as other government, UN and NGO partners.

WFP has now reached over 3 million people (3.2 million) in Port-au-Prince and across the disaster zone with food supplies since the earthquake struck. Outside the capital, WFP has reached more than 200,000 people in and around Leogane, is providing over 30,000 people in Jacmel with a daily cooked meal and is expanding distributions to 50,000 people from the new St Marc office.
