

ALFRED MORRIS

2011 PATIENT SAFETY CHAMPION

Mr. Alfred Morris is a quiet, unassuming gentleman who has been working at NCBH since 1992. His performance has been consistently reliable over the years, and he always goes above and beyond to do what is needed to keep the hospital looking good.

On October 15, 2010, Mr. Morris was working on the third floor when he smelled smoke. He went to investigate and saw smoke escaping from the computer storage room. Immediately, he informed his director of the problem and said that he was pulling the fire alarm. He proceeded to pull the fire alarm in order to get the appropriate help to find out what was wrong.

When he thought the alarm did not go through, he went to the next pull station and immediately activated the second alarm. He then returned to the original location and awaited help. It turned out to be a situation which required the Fire Department's assistance.
