Time and Cosmos in Greco-Roman Antiquity

October 19, 2016 – April 23, 2017

This exhibition explores the fascinating ways that time was organized in the Greco-Roman world, as well as how it was conceived in relation to the cosmos. Included are outstanding examples of the tools used to structure the personal and social experience of time, and a compelling selection of artifacts concerning representations of time, the universe, and their power to shape the environment and human destiny.

Free and open to the public:

Wednesday – Sunday, 11 a.m. – 6 p.m.

Fridays until 8 p.m.

(Closed Monday and Tuesday)

Free public tours every Friday at 6 p.m.
