"AVENUES FOR JUSTICE"

Avenues for Justice was launched on the Lower East Side in the mid-1970s by Robert Siegal and Angel Rodriguez, originally named the Andrew Glover Youth Program, after a policeman who helped Alphabet City youth. In the 1980s, Angel opened our community center at 100 Avenue B between East 6th and East 7th Streets, serving 100s of youth each year.

For over 40 years Avenues for Justice / Andrew Glover Youth Program has provided:

- Free court advocacy to ages 13 - 24 who are court-involved so that they receive our services for education, employment, and mentoring instead of incarceration.
- Open door to youth in need - whether court-involved or simply needing our help.
- High success rate - 90% or more in our program do not return to crime keeping our streets safe.

Andrew Glover Youth Program "AVENUES FOR JUSTICE"

Avenues for Justice was launched on the Lower East Side in the mid-1970s by Angel Rodriguez with local neighbors, originally named the Andrew Glover Youth Program, after a policeman who helped Alphabet City youth. In the 1980s, Angel opened our community center at 100 Avenue B between East 6th and East 7th Streets, serving 100s of youth each year.

For over 40 years Avenues for Justice / Andrew Glover Youth Program has provided:

- Free court advocacy to ages 13 - 24 who are court-involved so that they receive our services for education, employment, and mentoring instead of incarceration.
- Open door to youth in need - whether court-involved or simply needing our help.
- High success rate - 90% or more in our program do not return to crime keeping our streets safe.

"Avenues for Justice" beneath the East 6th Street sign, southeast corner of Avenue B
In recognition of their 40+ years of working with youth on the Lower East Side.
