ZoLa: new web application that provides a new and simple way to find a wide range of land use information in interactive, highly readable map layers pertaining to a particular property, or to the city at large. ZoLa lets users enter an address and quickly find a wealth of information including: property ownership, zoning, land uses in the surrounding area, where landmarks are located and even who is the Councilmember representing that area. One can also select a citywide map to see where a citywide initiative is in place, such as the FRESH program that incentivizes neighborhood grocery stores. For the first time, this new application makes it easy to find in one place illustrated maps and data that help clarify and demystify important land use information. Zoning is the language of the physical city, and the Department of City Planning is committed to making zoning and other important land use information readily accessible to the public. With 112 rezonings adopted to date during the Bloomberg Administration, and more in the pipeline, ZoLa provides an easy way to see the zoning changes that have been adopted or proposals under consideration in a neighborhood or citywide. Visit <http://www.nyc.gov/planning> and click on the ZoLa logo, or visit ZoLa directly at <http://gis.nyc.gov/zola>.
