

November, 2011 District Manager's Report

Borough Service Cabinet Meeting held 10/28/11

Presentation on City Benches given by Manhattan Borough Commissioner Margaret Forgione:

The CityBench program is an initiative to increase the amount of public seating on New York City's streets. DOT is installing attractive and durable benches around the city, particularly at bus stops, retail corridors, and in areas with high concentrations of senior citizens. These benches will make streets more comfortable for transit riders and pedestrians, especially for those who are older and disabled. Anyone can request a bench. DOT encourages all New Yorkers to recommend locations for benches. If you know of a good location that meets the requirements below, please complete the below form.

In order to support walking and transit, priority bench locations include:

- Bus stops without shelters
- Sidewalks near transit facilities (e.g. subway stations)
- Senior centers
- Hospitals and community health centers
- Commercial zones and shopping districts
- Municipal facilities (e.g., public libraries)

For Safety and Engineering reasons, below are the base requirements for City benches:

- Sidewalk width must be a minimum of 12 feet wide from building to curb
- Proposed location cannot be directly opposite a building entrance or cellar door

Benches cannot be placed within:

- 25' of an intersection
- 15' of a subway exit, newsstand or fire hydrant
- 8' of a bicycle rack
- 7' of a driveway
- 5' of a sidewalk café, tree or stand pipe
- 4' of a phone booth, mailbox, street light, parking meter, news rack or utility poles
- 3' of a canopy, utility hole, grate, vent, sign pole or tree pit

For further information visit Department of Transportation's website at www.nyc.gov/dot.

Presentation on Alcopops Legislation given by, Senior Legislative Analyst Jillian Youngblood:

Excessive drinking is a significant problem in the U.S. and in NYC it is the third leading behavioral cause of death in the US and has been linked to intentional and unintentional injuries, cancers, sexually transmitted infections, and other adverse health consequences. In NYC, youth who drink and adults who binge drink are more likely to have multiple sex partners, and an estimated one in ten hospitalization are alcohol-related.

The alcohol industry trade groups have established voluntary standards for alcohol advertising near youth-frequented locations, these standards are self-regulated and may not always be adhered to. Furthermore, standards that restrict advertising around schools do not apply to all school and advertisement types. For example, the Beer Institute restricts alcohol advertisements on billboards to a radius of at least 500 feet around primary and secondary schools, places of worship, and public playgrounds. This marketing standard does not apply to two-or four-year colleges that are comprised of 18-24 year olds, including many students under the legal drinking age and who suffer a high alcohol-related mortality burden.

Alcopops are sold alongside soda, juice, and milk, in convenience stores and delis. More than 7% of New York high school students who drink reported purchasing or otherwise obtaining their alcohol from retail stores (e.g. delis, grocery stores, mini-marts, etc.). Moving alcopops to liquor stores will significantly reduce the number of opportunities for youth to purchase them.

California, Utah, Maine, and Nebraska have already reclassified alcopops as spirits, limiting sales to liquor stores. New York should join them by enacting a measure to reduce underage drinking. DHMH is asking support in establishing legislation to limit the sale of alcopops to liquor stores only. (see attached Alcopops Legislation Statement of Support).

Alcopops Legislation Statement of Support

We, the undersigned, recommend reducing youth access to sweetened, soda-like alcoholic beverages known as "alcopops" by limiting their sale to liquor stores only.

Also known as flavored malt beverages, alcopops are sweet pre-mixed alcoholic beverages, in sharp contrast with bitter beers or dry wines. Examples include Joose, Mike's Hard Lemonade, Smirnoff Ice, and wine coolers. Four Loko is also an alcopop, although it no longer contains caffeine. Although production begins with a malt brewing process, alcopops are later filtered, and sweetened flavorings are added, often including distilled spirits or wine products.

Because they are sweet and do not taste like alcohol, alcopops appeal to children who might not otherwise drink an alcoholic beverage. These drinks are branded with catchy names and packaged in bright colors and appealing designs, similar to sports and soft drinks. Some alcopops have an alcohol content as high as 12% -- higher than most beers.

A majority of teens aged 14-18 years old report having tried alcopops, in comparison with only a quarter of adults. Younger drinkers, aged 12-15, report an overwhelming preference for alcopops in comparison with other alcoholic beverages. The American Medical Association found that approximately one-third of teenaged girls and one-fifth of teenaged boys have tried alcopops. Drinking during adolescence can lead to a lifetime of alcohol problems. Two out of five adolescents who begin drinking before age 15 will become alcohol dependent in their lifetimes, and one in eight youth aged 18-20 years is already alcohol dependent.

Alcopops are sold alongside soda, juice, and milk, in convenience stores and delis. More than 7% of New York high school students who drink report purchasing or otherwise obtaining their alcohol from retail stores (e.g. delis, grocery stores, mini-marts, etc.). That's an average of two students in every classroom. Moving alcopops to liquor stores will significantly reduce the number of opportunities for youth to purchase them.

California, Utah, Maine, and Nebraska have already reclassified alcopops as spirits, limiting sales to liquor stores. New York should join them by enacting a measure to reduce underage drinking.
