

New restaurants, bars, bakeries and butcher shops may be eligible for a new, streamlined program from the New Business Acceleration Team (NBAT). This program will make it possible for entrepreneurs to open their doors more quickly and help businesses get the answers and services they need. With approximately 4,600 new restaurants opening annually, New York City restaurants are a visible and valuable part of the City's neighborhoods that employ over 260,000 people.

As part of the program, NBAT works with qualifying businesses to schedule and coordinate most plan review appointments and required inspections. Such inspections include, but are not limited to, those conducted by the New York City Fire Department, the Department of Environmental Protection, the Department of Buildings, and the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene.

NEW BUSINESS ACCELERATION TEAM

THE IDEAL PARTICIPANT:

1. Restaurants, bars serving food, catering halls, bakeries, butcher shops, juice bars, and cafés.
2. Supermarkets, delis, and grocery stores.

WHAT TO DO AND EXPECT:

1. If your business qualifies for the program, an introductory meeting can be scheduled, preferably at your site, to review permit and license requirements.
2. Next, your building plans can be submitted to a NBAT Plan Examiner to undergo plan review as required by the Department of Buildings (DOB). Plans previously disapproved by DOB can also be reviewed by the NBAT Plan Examiner to resolve outstanding objections.
3. After work has been completed and requirements satisfied, you can contact NBAT to request a coordinated NBAT inspection.
4. If your business passes its inspection, your business will be ready to open. If your business does not pass its inspection, you will be notified immediately of what issues must be corrected and a re-inspection date assigned.
