

Regulatory Review Panel Fact Sheet

What is the Panel?

The Regulatory Review Panel was created pursuant to Local Law 45 of 2009 by Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg and City Council Speaker Christine C. Quinn to review the structure and function of City regulations and their impact on small businesses.

Why do we need a Panel?

The Panel will, with significant input from City agencies, businesses, consumers, and the public at large, seek out ways to reduce or eliminate unnecessary costs and burdens of City regulations.

What will the Panel do?

The Panel will develop recommendations on how to enhance the City's regulatory system, with a focus on both specific regulations and the general rulemaking process. These recommendations will be included in a final report to the Mayor and the Speaker at the end of the year. The Panel will focus on reviewing regulations that impact small businesses and other vital sectors of the City's economy, such as the hospitality and tourism industry. The report will also include recommendations on how additional regulatory review affecting other sectors can be undertaken beyond 2009.

What will the Panel's report include?

The Panel's report will include a series of recommendations that are expected to fall into the following categories:

Changes in Law

The Panel may recommend that regulations or laws be amended, or operational changes be made, to address the Panel's findings in ways that would reduce regulatory burdens.

Customer Service

The Panel will recommend ways to explain or simplify complex regulations so that they are easily understood by the public and administered by agencies.

Transparency

The Panel will seek to leverage modern technology and the Internet to make information on regulations and processes easier to access.
