

The New York City Citywide Asset and Logistics Management System (CALMS) is a web-based system designed to capture information about resources commonly utilized in disaster response. It is the only system in New York City that integrates multiple resource-management databases maintained by City, State, Federal, private and non-profit entities, providing a single view of resources owned and managed by or accessible to response agencies.

CALMS is organized around different asset types and datasets:

- Facilities
- Fleet
- Equipment and Supplies
- Personnel
- Demographic Data
- Logistics Tools

With CALMS, agencies are able to maintain information about equipment and supplies via the Web interface. Authorized users perform updates remotely and regularly, ensuring that information is current and accurate.

In addition, CALMS is automatically programmed to receive periodic uploads from several databases. Facility profiles are spatially displayed via a Geographic Information System (GIS) mapping tool.

As part of the Citywide Logistics Management Plan, CALMS is supported by documented and approved protocols.
