

September 25, 2009

The Board of Directors
TSASC, Inc.

In planning and performing our audit of the financial statements of TSASC, Inc. ("TSASC") as of and for the year ended June 30, 2009, in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America, we considered TSASC's internal control over financial reporting (internal control) as a basis for designing our auditing procedures for the purpose of expressing our opinion on the financial statements, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of TSASC's internal control. Accordingly, we do not express an opinion on the effectiveness of the TSASC's internal control.

A control deficiency exists when the design or operation of a control does not allow management or employees, in the normal course of performing their assigned functions, to prevent or detect misstatements on a timely basis. A significant deficiency is a control deficiency, or combination of control deficiencies, that adversely affects the entity's ability to initiate, authorize, record, process, or report financial data reliably in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles such that there is more than a remote likelihood that a misstatement of the entity's financial statements that is more than inconsequential will not be prevented or detected by the entity's internal control.

A material weakness is a significant deficiency, or combination of significant deficiencies, that results in more than a remote likelihood that a material misstatement of the financial statements will not be prevented or detected by the entity's internal control.

Our consideration of internal control was for the limited purpose described in the first paragraph and would not necessarily identify all deficiencies in internal control that might be significant deficiencies or material weaknesses. We did not identify any deficiencies in the internal control that we considered to be material weaknesses, as defined above.

This report is intended solely for the information and use of TSASC's Audit Committee, the Board of Directors, management and others within TSASC. This report is not intended to be and should not be used by anyone other than these specified parties.

Sincerely,

Marks Paneth & Shron LLP

MARKS PANETH & SHRON LLP

