

So Jim, this city has faced a lot in terms of disaster recovery, with this hurricane being our latest challenge. We have certainly proved to bounce back, rise and overcome any of these obstacles that have found us, and these M.E.R.P's that lay rest behind you are a perfect example of how New Yorkers do it....

Jane I couldn't agree with you more, right now thousands of homeless, jobless, and some hopeless people are going to sleep comfortably tonight aboard these vessels. This sleep won't cure their fears, or bring back their loved ones, but it is a critical step in picking up the fragments of there lives this storm tore through and begin to start a new day... We thank you New York, We love you New York.... I am going to give it back to you Jane, News reporter Jim is signing off...

Well Jim, thank you as usual for your in depth coverage of this, what very well might be, the first ray of light at the end of this long tunnel we all have to endure. Please stay tuned for further development on the hurricane that ripped through New York the city, but not New Yorkers. Be strong New York...
