Allegation (B) Force: Chief Terence Monahan authorized use of physical force against

It is undisputed that on the evening of May 29, 2020, thousands of members of the public gathered for protest in front of and in the streets surrounding the Barclay's Center in Brooklyn and engaged in tumultuous behavior (Board Review 10). It is also undisputed that instructions were constantly being given to the crowd to disperse (Board Review 10). Finally, it is undisputed that Sgt. Hockaday, and likely other officers, used their batons to push (STC) and other civilians off streets and away from a NYC Transit Authority Building (NYCTA) (Board Review 12).

On March 29, 2021, Chief Monahan retired from the NYPD (Board Review 06).

During his CCRB statement, stated that he arrived at the Barclay's Center on the evening of May 29, 2020, to document the 2020 George Floyd protests in his capacity as a photojournalist on assignment for ABC news (Board Review 03). While there, he had his press credentials displayed on a lanyard that was around his neck, and multiple cameras and camera equipment on his person. Sometime between 9:00 p.m. and 10:30 p.m., he began to document "pushing back and forth" between protestors and officers near the intersection of Atlantic Avenue and Flatbush Avenue. When the pushing started, street, was not able to get on the side of the NYPD line because officers were not allowing him to.

As $87(2)(b) was taking photos, an officer approached him with his baton parallel to the ground, holding it at both ends. $87(2)(b) told the officer he was press and held up his press pass, but the officer said he did not care and pushed $87(2)(b) at his chest with the baton. $87(2)(b) then began to step backward, and the officer pursued him, walking forward, continuously pushing him at his chest. After walking back "a few steps," $87(2)(b) tripped over the sidewalk curb and fell onto his back. The officer then walked away as protestors helped $87(2)(b) to his feet.

was not able to provide identifying information for the officer who pushed him beyond a general description and did not identify any witnesses or other means of evidence collection.

provided a photo of his NYC issued press pass (Board Review 04). The press pass has an expiration date of January 15, 2021 and lists him as an affiliate of ABC news.

Chief Monahan stated that between 6:00 p.m. and 6:30 p.m., he deemed civilian protestors congregating at the Barclay's Center pavilion in Brooklyn and the surrounding streets unlawful assembly (Board Review 05). For that reason, he instructed SRG supervisors to clear the pavilion and surrounding streets, and officers did so. That consisted of officers getting civilians off the streets, instructing them to leave or placing them under arrest for participating in an unlawful assembly. A Long-Range Acoustic Device (LRAD) broadcast multiple orders to disperse before SRG began clearing civilians from the plaza.

At 9:00 p.m., Chief Monahan still considered the crowd at the Barclays Center to be an unlawful assembly because civilians were still throwing objects at officers. For that reason, the dispersal instructions remained.

Sgt. Hockaday stated that on the day in question NYPD officers did use their batons to disburse civilians from the location (Board Review 13). He did not issue the instruction to remove civilians from the vicinity of Barclay's center. The instruction came to him via the chain of command.

On March 25, 2022, the investigation received video captured by Sgt. Hockaday's BWC on the incident date in question (Board Review 12). At four seconds, seconds, seen in the frame, and between seven seconds and 13 seconds, Sgt. Hockaday seemingly pushes him with his baton multiple times. At that time, seconds, seconds on an island next to a NYC Transit Authority (NYCTA) building, which is in the middle of three roadways, Atlantic Avenue to the South, Flatbush Avenue to the East, and 4th Avenue to the West.

Just over a minute later, at 1:54 $87(2)(b) reappears in the frame (Board Review 12) (Board Review 15). Between 1:55 and 1:58, the view of Sgt. Hockaday's BWC is obstructed by other officers, who may have possibly interacted with $87(2)(b) At 1:59, he is positioned in the center of the frame, off left, and he trips over a curb and onto the sidewalk. It is unclear if he is pushed
