Flu shots — available for age 6 months and older — and the new COVID-19 vaccine booster — available for age 5 and older — are recommended right now. You should get the new COVID-19 booster, designed to protect against the new omicron subvariants, if you received your most recent COVID-19 vaccine dose at least two months ago.

Can I get the new COVID-19 booster at the same time as my flu shot?

Yes. You can get them at the same time or separately.

Can I get the new COVID-19 booster if I recently had COVID-19?

Yes, but consider waiting three months after you had COVID-19. You may want to get your booster sooner if you or a loved one are at higher risk of exposure to or severe illness from COVID-19. Talk to your health care provider if you have questions, or call 311 if you do not have a provider.

Which COVID-19 booster should I get?

You can get the updated Pfizer booster (if you are age 5 or older) or updated Moderna booster (if you are age 6 or older), regardless of the brand you received previously.
