LES DWELLERS NOTIFICATION

Dear LES Dwellers,

Hello, my name is David Zimmerman, I am the owner of Sammys Roumanian Steakhouse. Sammys's was in business for over 47 years at the same location, 157 Chrystie street and became a lower East Side institution. The business has been in my family since 1975, first being run by my father Stanley, and then me. It was with great pain that Sammy's was forced to close in 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Since we closed in March 2020, the first 2 years were very difficult and we weren't sure we would be able to open up Sammy's again because of the hardship we felt like many others during the pandemic. I debated many times to move to another neighborhood but it just never felt right. I grew up here as a child and I cant imagine it being any where else. Sammy's belongs on the Lower East Side. It's my second home. After a year of searching with multiple brokers, we finally found that space at 191 Orchard Street. When I walked into the space, it reminded me of the old Sammy's. I even took my wife and kids to see the space. It was a day full of mixed emotions for all of us. We are extremely excited to reopen and join the Lower East side neighborhood once again. Last week we learned that the news leaked to the public, and it appears that the public agrees and sent many messages of support for us to come back.

If you have any questions about our proposed operation, please let us know.
We look forward to working with you to bring back this Lower East Side institution.

Thanks again,
David Zimmerman
Owner

RESUME

David Zimmerman - Resume

Sammys Roumanian Steakhouse has been operated by my family since 1975. I began working with my father Stanley in the 1990's. First Starting as a bus boy, and then as a waiter, learning as much as I could about the business. I attended The University of Delaware and received a degree in Hotel Restaurant Management. I would come home every weekend to work and help my father run the restaurant. After graduating in 1996, I come home and worked full time at Sammy's. I then became the president and have since managed the day to day operations. It has become a family business that I share with my wife and 3 children.

Sammy's ownership is applying for a new liquor license for the long-vacant 191 Orchard St. between Houston and Stanton. The questionnaire isn't online just yet, so we'll have to wait and see what Sammy's 2.0 might look like in this 2,500-square-foot space.

Sammy's closed in early January 2021 after 47 years of serving up ice-encased vodka, smeared pitchers of schmaltz and enormous platters of meat from the lower level at 151 Chrystie St.

The restaurant had been shuttered since the PAUSE of March 2020, and this wasn't a business ready-made for delivery or outdoor dining.

In an Instagram post at the time, owner David Zimmerman left the door open for a return.

We may be closed now, but when all this is over and we feel safe enough to hold hands during the hora, we will be back stronger, louder, and tastier than ever before. We are New York. We will survive this. We will always cherish the memories we shared with all of you.

First, though, Sammy's will need to get approval from CB3. The space has been vacant since the Sixth Ward lost its liquor license in 2015 after eight years in business for reportedly serving burgers and steaks when it had applied for the requisite permits by stating it would sell vegetarian fare.

The bar had long drawn criticism from locals. In a denial for a new concept at the address in March 2022, the CB3 minutes state that the Sixth Ward "was a known problem... with SLA complaints of operating beyond its stipulations, operating beyond the legal capacity without applying for a certificate of occupancy, and using an illegal back yard that did not meet DOB requirements."

While this has nothing to do with Sammy's, the stigma of previous tenants can make it challenging for new applicants. Community groups and some residents have also spoken out against new applicants looking to open in this area below Houston dubbed Hell Square.

If they Deny Sammy's a Liquor License, that would be a disrespect to a cultural institution. This would only help the neighborhood.

While i miss Sammy's a site of many great times anyone else remember the old rolls royce that used to be parked in front that said a louder comeback their words in IG post above) isn't welcomed at all but CB3/SLA committee is taking hell square and scattering it around the LES and East Village allowing operators who simply don't give a hoot about being good neighbors and have records of being loud and obnoxious the go ahead so they'll get the license

NY Jewish restaurant Sammy's Roumanian closes but vows to reopen

The restaurant, stationed in a dingy basement location on Chrystie Street for decades, was almost equally known for its Jewish wedding party-style atmosphere.

The eatery's owner, David Zimmerman, confirmed the closure to Gothamist on Sunday but added that he hopes to revive the restaurant in a new location when things are "somewhat back to normal," after the COVID crisis that has decimated the dining industry.

"Without question it has been the toughest year for all of us and everyone in our industry," Zimmerman said. "We can't wait and hope to see everyone enjoying latkes, vodka, chopped liver and steaks once again. We need this horrible time to pass and bring Sammy's back so we can celebrate again."

Sammy's Roumanian Steakhouse has closed for now on the Lower East Side

Word circulated this weekend that LES staple Sammy's Roumanian Steakhouse had closed for good on Chrystie Street after 47 years of serving up ice-encased vodka, smeared pitchers of schmaltz and enormous platters of meat to the backdrop of Yiddish sing-alongs.

This afternoon, Sammy's ownership (David Zimmerman) responded to the rumors in an Instagram post. (East Village-based storefront photographers James and Karla Murray initially observed what appeared to be a closure.)

It is with great sadness that we announce that the rumors are true and we have had to shut the doors to the infamous basement.

Sammy's Roumanian is more than just a restaurant. It's a community. A celebration of tradition. An experience difficult to put into words. It's where families come to dine weekly, where partygoers begin their night (if they survive the frozen vodka), and where Simchas are celebrated. It's a place where you can be yourself, make friends, discover what a Shiksa is, and maybe even get called out as one too. Above all, it's a place where everyone feels at home, welcome, and part of a larger family.

However, it sounds as if Sammy's is leaving the door open for a return some day in a new location.

So chins up fellow schmaltzers. All the years of devouring chopped liver with our special schmaltz, schmered on rye bread with a side of pickles and a shot (or glass) of frozen vodka to wash it down will be

He confirmed as much in a text message to Gothamist.

Sammy's had closed when the PAUSE went effect last March, and was never able to reopen. And this is not the kind of food that works for delivery.

NYC RESTAURANT OPENINGS COMING ATTRACTIONS

NY Icon Sammy's Roumanian Plots Its Big Return to Manhattan

The team is trying to reopen at a space on Orchard Street

by Emma Orlow | Apr 27, 2023, 2:26pm EDT

In January 2021, New York institution Sammy's Roumanian, known for its Jewish Romanian food and vodka-fueled parties, shuttered on the Lower East Side. Now it seems, the team is plotting a new location for the venue. According to Community Board 3 meeting list, Sammy's Roumanian has a lease in the works at 191 Orchard Street, between Houston and Stanton streets, where it's pursuing a liquor license application.

After 47 years in business, Sammy's had become synonymous with an old-school, midcentury vibe. Owner David Zimmerman, the son of Stan Zimmerman, who previously ran it, promised it would return in some form or another, at the time stating it was unlikely to remain at its basement-level Chrystie Street home. Eater has reached out to Zimmerman for more information.

Depending on who you ask, Sammy's has several different names: Sammy's Roumanian, Famous Sammy's, and Famous Sammy's Roumanian Steakhouse, among them.

It was a "den of schmaltz-covered, Ashkenazi fun," chronicled in Grub Street in 2021. "People would tell you that the food didn't really matter, that Sammy's was about the experience. And, to a certain extent, that was true. But the menu could still make a heart flutter."

Tables were adorned with schmaltz and old-fashioned seltzer; it was a favorite amongst birthday parties: "Sammy's ties a balloon to every table just in case, and half the time they're right," Eater reported in 2009. It was the place where "every night felt like a bat mitzvah," according to Food & Wine.

The late New York Times restaurant critic Mimi Sheraton gave the place three stars in a 1982 review; later, in 2014, critic Pete Wells dropped it to one, nevertheless celebrating its charms. "Known for selling vodka bottles encased in ice, Sammy's is New York's original bottle-service restaurant, and still the only tolerable one," he wrote.

Over the past couple of months, Dani Luv, the singer synonymous with Sammy's entertainment, known for "covers of Broadway classics and insult[ing] diners to their faces," has hosted various New York pop-ups at Quality Eats uptown and Edith's in Williamsburg.

For Sammy's to relocate to Orchard Street, the restaurant will need to receive liquor license approval from the community board; a meeting is set for mid-May. As EV Grieve reports, the space its eyeing has been vacant for a few years, but was formerly home to a bar, the Sixth Ward, that lost its liquor license, related to what the publication describes as "criticism from locals."
