Thomas Took Her In. Now She's His Law Clerk.

By STEVE EDER and ARBIE VANSICKLE
The email went out to members of Justice Clarence Thomas's law clerk network late last month celebrating his newest addition to an exclusive club. The justice's selection needed no introduction.
"Crystal Clanton's clerkship by SCOTUS was announced by Scalia Law today," wrote an assistant to Justice Thomas, the justice's wife, who is known as Ginni. The email referred to the 2023 clerk of the court, and the support. Consider reposting, replying or adding your own.

The Thomas and Ms. Clanton, a 29-year-old conservative organizer turned lawyer, have built such a close relationship that the couple informally refer to her as their "adopted daughter," Ms.

sage, including one that read "I HATE BLACK PEOPLE," has lived in the Thomas home, assisted Ms. Thomas in her political consulting business and joined her in a "girls trip" to New York.
In 2019, at the Thomases' urging, Ms. Clanton enrolled at Antioch Scalia Law School at George Mason University in Virginia, where Justice Thomas has taught. She received a full merit scholarship, according to another judge who knew her.
Her upcoming Supreme Court clerkship, one of the most coveted in the American legal

Trump Venture Opens the Door To Ethics Issues

By SHARON LAFRANIERE
When former President Donald J. Trump's social media company went public this week, supporters and investors betting on Mr. Trump's political success helped drive the value of a loss-making firm through the roof. Mr. Trump ended the first day of public trading at $24.80 per share.

FOUNDER OF FTX GIVEN 25 YEARS IN CRYPTO SCAM

FORFEITING $11 BILLION
He Apologizes, but Judge Says, 'He Knew It Was Criminal'

By DAVID YAFFE-BELLANY and EDWARD MORENO
San Bankman-Fried, the founder of the FTX cryptocurrency exchange who was convicted of stealing billions of dollars from customers, was sentenced to 25 years in prison on Thursday, capping an extraordinary saga that upended the crypto industry and became a cautionary tale of greed and hubris.
Mr. Bankman-Fried's sentence was shorter than the 40 to 50 years that federal prosecutors had sought after a jury found him guilty of fraud, conspiracy and money laundering — charges that carried a maximum penalty of 100 years behind bars. But the punishment was far above the six and a half years requested by his defense lawyers.
Mr. Bankman-Fried, 32, did not visibly react as Judge Lewis A. Kaplan handed down the sentence in Federal District Court in Manhattan. His parents, the law professors Joe Bankman and Barbara Fried, sat two rows from the front, staring at the floor.
"He knew it was wrong. He knew it was criminal," Judge Kaplan said of Mr. Bankman-Fried's actions.
Before the sentence was ordered, Mr. Bankman-Fried, clean-shaven and wearing a hooded brown jail uniform, apologized to FTX's customers, investors and employees.
