Several Board members objected to the elimination of commercial space from the first floor of the building, observing that commercial tenants would generate income and create a more appropriate streetscape. Others noted that the Lantern Group needed the space for programming and decent sized rooms and the trade off of commercial space for better services was worth it.

Ms. Cohen reviewed the back ground of the resolutions. At the June Land Use Committee meeting several hundred community people expressed their concerns about the two buildings Extell is building in Broadway between West 99th and 100th Streets. The Committee decided to look at zoning on Broadway above West 96th Street and added it to its July agenda. Several residents asked for Board action at that meeting. A resolution was adopted that asked the Committee to meet with the Department of City Planning (DCP) and explore what could be done. A building collapse occurred during the initial phase of demolition of the Gristede's building, causing further concern about the project.

Lelia Stroud, representing State Assemblymember Daniel O'Donnell's office, asked that the north side of Broadway, north of West 96th Street, be down-zoned and that construction be stopped until the DOB investigation was completed.

Toni Cindrich, West Siders for Reasonable Development, stated the community needs to know something is happening and expressed concern about development of soft sites along Broadway.

Commerce Committee

George Zeppenfeldt-Cestero, Chairperson

July 13, 2005

The discussion of what businesses can do for the community and what the community and government can do for business developed from the initial focus of the meeting on the impact on small businesses from the expansion of retail chain stores in the neighborhood. Each member of the panel gave a brief description of the mandate of their agency/organization and the type of services which they could provide for small businesses.

In response to the chairman's questions about getting the chain stores and large corporations to participate in the community, to know the contact people responsible to deal with the community, and to offer jobs to local people, Margie Russell said she had lists of building managers who could help find the managers and contact people at chain stores. Assistant Commissioner Michael Hecht also agreed to assist in facilitating the identification of the community relations' contacts at some of the large retail chain stores which the board has been unsuccessful in identifying. Council Member Gale Brewer cited her success in filling over two hundred jobs in the Mandarin Hotel, Time Warner Center, as a result of her office's efforts through dozens of meetings.

Michael Hecht described NYC Business Solutions incentive approach to the chain stores: For example, the city paid for truck driver training for young neighborhood people to prepare them for jobs promised by Fresh Direct and Target. The agency will offer up to $100,000 to businesses for upgrading employee skills. Before small business owners call their lawyers and accountants, Hecht says they should call the SBS for information on establishing and running a business, requisite permits and hiring practices, health insurance and funded job training.

Six Hispanic businesses had been displaced by a large Duane Reade drug store in the constantly changing and increasingly upscale neighborhood of Manhattan Valley, Peter Arndsten explained. Council Member Brewer mentioned that the Zangone fruit store that had remained in the neighborhood since her childhood because the shop owners own their building. A community member suggested that a group of shopkeepers might rent a large space together, and hire a manager to oversee the operation of the site.

Commercial real estate broker Rafe Evans explained why realtors prefer chains: public companies are responsible for the lease even if they vacate, they can afford to pay higher rents, and are easier to deal with than several small owners. He says small spaces on Columbus mean more small stores. Larger spaces on Broadway allow for larger stores. He counsels business owners, "know your lease."

Adam Wolff mentioned that the Department of City Planning is considering permitting more stores on sides streets, but residents often oppose the added traffic. A more detailed briefing to the Board will be made.

Community members and Doug Griebel suggested that businesses accept the free market and promote themselves through advertising, fixing up their shops, being responsive to customers and participating in trade organizations rather than seeking protection from change. But a business owner from Amsterdam Avenue tells of renovating and upgrading her business and premises and then having the landlord refuse to renew her lease.

Landlords now charge $200-225 per sq. foot on Broadway, according to Sherry Kern of Big Nick's, which has retained its space by paying above market rates. A six month security deposit and personal financial guarantees are now often required of new businesses. But a community member remarks that on-line purchasing from Staples, etc. might make the large stores more virtual and less demanding of real estate.

Stores often stay empty for a long time because former tenants still pay lease, or the higher rent is worth the wait, e.g. realtor Gottlieb, "the accidental preservationist" of the meatpacking district.

Community members debated whether tourists are attracted to familiar or unique Westside shops and eateries. NYC & Co., which works to attract conventions to the city, will help businesses attract tourist patrons, Councilperson Brewer says.

Owners of shops on Amsterdam in the 80's complain of unruly teenagers, garbage, noise.

Barbara Adler proposed a BID as a possible solution. Council Member Brewer proposes scheduling a separate meeting, with the Commerce Committee, and her staff to discuss the Amsterdam Avenue merchant issues.

Parks and Preservation Committee

Lenore Norman, Chairperson

July 14, 2005

Chair Lenore Norman opened the meeting at 7:15 p.m. The following items were discussed:

I. Update by the Department of Parks and Recreation on the proposal to construct paved paths along the "desire lines" between Riverside Drive and the service road from West 99th to 101st Streets.

Margaret Bracken, Landscape Architect, Riverside Park, presented the plans for this seriously eroded pathway of between 70,000 to 100,000-feet in length and 6-feet in width. The material to be used is "exposed" asphalt, a softer quality asphalt that is more naturalistic and appealing looking than what is there now. A berm will be created on one side to encourage people to stay on the path and to control water from settling on the walkway.

Resolution to give preliminary approval to the construction of paved pathways between Riverside Drive and the service road from West 99th to 101st Street by S. Fine, seconded by K. Neuwelt. Unanimously approved.

2. Presentation by the Central Park Conservancy on the reconstruction of the West 110th Street playground.

Gary Dearborn, Senior Landscape Architect and Jeannine Freed, Assistant Landscape Architect, the Central Park Conservancy presented the plans for the reconstruction of the playground. Few changes have been made since it was built in the 1930's, and it has not served the needs of the community well. Private funds, totaling $600,000, have been contributed for the reconstruction. With the objective of safety and accessibility, a new park entrance in the center of the playground will be created. There will be three separate play areas, circular in shape. The center area will be open space for water play and other active games when the water cannot be used. The area to the east, which is shadier, will be for preschool children and will have bucket swings, a sand box and appropriate climbing equipment. The area to the west will consist of the larger, more advanced play structures, appropriate for young school-age children. The 7-foot steel picket fence surrounding the playground will be replaced with one 5-foot high. No bathroom facilities could be provided because of the expense, but there are facilities at the nearby Dana Discovery Center. No trees will be removed for the new design. New seating areas and an accessible drinking fountain will be provided. The selection of colors and finishes will be chosen to compliment the rustic character of the surrounding park, and natural materials, such as stone and wood, will be employed wherever possible.

The Conservancy has not held a formal meeting with the community on the plans, but has spoken with parents who bring their children to the playground, who have reacted favorably.

S. Fine commented that the population served is appropriate and the design, offering intimacy, is a good choice

A resolution to approve the reconstruction of the 110th Street Playground was made by P. Gunther, seconded by K. Neuwelt. Unanimous approval was given.

3. Presentation by the NYC Police Department on the renovation of the Central Park Precinct Station located off of the West 86th Street transverse.

Presentations were made by Fred Basch and Jayne Rattner, the Associate Project Manager and Project Manager of Karlsberger Architects and Claudia Kavenagh, Director of Building Conservation Associates, Inc., hired by the NYC Police Department.

Built in 1871 by Jacob Wrey Mould as the first building of a Parks Administration Complex, the conversion to the Central Park Police Precinct took place in 1936. Originally, it was a stable for the police horses. It is built around a central courtyard. This High Victorian Gothic Cottage style building is one and one-half stories in height. The exterior walls are mostly brownstone and the roof is slate-covered mansard with repeating small dormer windows and Gothic arches that encircle the central courtyard. The building, which has been designated a national and NYC landmark, is surrounded by Parks Department property. The reservoir is to the north and the Great Lawn to the West. There are 254 officers, 40 auxiliary officers and 15 civilians stationed in the precinct. In 2001, the building was determined unusable and a temporary building was built in the parking lot.

The architects of the Police Department, separate from the Parks and Recreation Department, plan to bring back the look of the original design by replacing the bricks that were used to reinforce the brownstone facade with brownstone. In order to give adequate space to the main desk, to which everyone coming into the Precinct must report, a structure was designed in the courtyard to provide a central entranceway and more space for additional and upgraded technology, security and communications. This new structure would consist of a lightweight copper canopy raised several feet higher than the original building over glass enclosed sides and front, letting in light and providing a more open feeling. The curved roof canopy was designed so that rain water would be automatically shed. The new roof would be somewhat visible from the reservoir, the great lawn and the bridal path, which is parallel and to the north of the precinct.

K. Neuwelt raised concern about the design of the new structure and parking spaces for too many cars.

NYC Design and Construction spoke in favor of the renovation. Gary Dearborn, on behalf of the Central Park Conservancy, stated that the Conservancy could not formally comment, but that their preservation plans were well thought out.

Resolution to approve was made to approve the general direction of the plans by K. Neuwelt, seconded by L. Norman, with reservations about the canopy and the parking lot. Unanimous agreement.

4. 450 Amsterdam Avenue d/b/a Land (Thai Kitchen) (West 81st). Application #057395 to the Landmarks Preservation Commission to legalize the installation of a storefront infill.

restaurant. The details for the new proposed storefront plans were described and provided in a handout.

Resolution to approve was made by P. Gunther, seconded by L. Norman. Unanimous agreement.

5. 119 West 82nd Street (Columbus - Amsterdam Avenues). Application #3056209 to the Landmarks Preservation Commission to construct a rooftop addition.

Jay Butler, engineer, presented the plans for the brick rooftop addition that would be 32' x 19" x 8 1/2' high and 17 ' back from the front of this five story cooperative building. The Landmark Commission's objections were resolved with the reduced size of the addition and being placed further back on the roof. All the cooperatives have given their approval to this addition, which is only visible from 82nd Street.

Questions were raised by members about the design of the windows. Chair L. Norman stated a good number of letters were received all objecting to them. The Committee asked that the engineer present the plans to the Committee at a meeting at 6:30 p.m. prior to the full Board meeting on Tuesday, September 6th when the item would be on the agenda.

6. 336 West 71st Street (West End Avenue). Application to the Landmarks Preservation Commission to extend the front chimney and replace the existing retaining wall.

Jason Gold, architect, presented the plans for the conversion of this building from a multiple to a single-dwelling. Owner Brian Roth contributed to the discussion. The Commission staff approved the original requests, but for the meeting with the Commission members, scheduled for next month the restoration of the portico and grillwork were added.

a. The chimneys from the building next door at 338 and this building would be straightened since they are both on an angle and raised several feet. Only old brick will be used and only the front chimney will be visible from the street.

b. Originally, there was a double portico with the building next door, but since that was removed, it would be a single portico, which the owner wants to restore. It would be stucco but faced in brownstone color.

c. The owner would like a new look to the grillwork, but is willing to keep the original iron grillwork, which the Committee recommended.

d. The retaining wall will be replaced by moving it forward a little less than 3 feet and adding a 8 inch ledge on which there will be "Juliet" balcony.

Resolution to approve the requests was made. Unanimously approved.

7. 169, 171 and 173 West 81st Street. Application #057395 to the Landmarks Preservation Commission to install bracket signs.

Simom Thierer, Architect, presented the request for installing the commercial signs in these three bricked over brownstones. Three would be at the parlor level and six below street level. Each one is angled, as recommended by the Commission, and attached to the window frame joints with metal brackets painted black.

Resolution to approve was made by S. Fine, seconded by P. Gunther. K. Neuwelt approved the resolution. L. Norman abstained.

8. 2360 Broadway, aka 201 - 225 West 86th Street, The Belnord Apartments (Broadway - Amster-dam Avenue) Application #056209 to the Landmarks Preservation Committee to install new entrance gates and a new security guard booth.

Richard Saunderson, associate architect, Avinash K. Maalhotra, architect, presented the need to replace the iron gates that were installed in the 1950's, but are not the original ones. The design of the new ones is more ornate. They would cover both the vehicular and pedestrian entrances to the courtyard of this building that covers an entire block.

The original Security Guard booth from 1904, that sits just inside the gates, would be replaced by a modern booth that has polished brass designs around the windows and door.

Resolution to approve made by K. Neuwelt, seconded by P. Gunther. S. Fine voted to approve. L. Norman abstained.
