Re: Hotel Pennsylvania

Dear Bob,

I am writing to urge you to reconsider the Commission's position on the captioned property.

This hotel is both a structural and cultural landmark.

Physically, it is an imposing example of beautiful design and solid construction, from the era in which Warren and Wetmore designed Terminal City, which it mirrors.

It is also an icon with respect to the City's cultural and musical heritage.

Sincerely yours,

Re: Hotel Pennsylvania, 401 Seventh Avenue,
Manhattan

Dear Bob:

I am writing in support of Manhattan Community Board 5's November 2007 resolution urging the Landmarks Preservations Commission to evaluate and consider the merit of a designation hearing for the Hotel Pennsylvania, located at 401 Seventh Avenue.

The Hotel Pennsylvania is a significant building, designed by the firm of McKim Mead & White as one of three landmark-worthy buildings, together with the old Pennsylvania Station and the Farley Post Office. The hotel opened in 1919 as the City's largest, and one of the world's largest, hotels, with the world's first high-rise hotel elevator. Its façade is distinguished, attractive, and in good repair.

It is also one of a significant group of masonry buildings on Seventh Avenue, including the Affinia Hotel (built as the Hotel Governor Clinton) on 32nd Street across from the Pennsylvania Hotel, Macy's, and the Nelson Tower on 34th Street. The building's historic significance is enhanced by the fact that the hotel's phone number, Pennsylvania 6-5000, is the longest continually used telephone number in service to this day and that it hosted some of the country's finest musical groups. McKim, Mead & White designed the Hotel Pennsylvania to be what they thought was fitting to greet travelers emerging from the firm's original Pennsylvania Station.

I hope the Commission will calendar a hearing for this important building so it can be preserved for future generations of New Yorkers.

Best regards,

Very truly yours,

Richard N. Gottfried

RE: Hotel Pennsylvania designation.

Dear Chair Tierney:

At the regularly scheduled monthly meeting of Community Board Five on Thursday, November 8, 2007, the Board passed the following resolution recommending designation by a vote of 21 in favor; 8 opposed; 1 abstention, 2 present not entitled to vote:

WHEREAS, On Tuesday October 2, 2007, concerned members of the public appeared before Community Board Five at our Landmarks Committee meeting seeking support in the effort to designate as an individual landmark the building at 401 Seventh Avenue, located between West 32nd and West 33rd Streets, known as the Hotel Pennsylvania; and

WHEREAS, A subcommittee was formed in order to research and evaluate the history and worthiness of the building, and the potential to designate this as a historic landmark, so that this could be reported back to the committee at our meeting on Tuesday October 30, 2007; and

WHEREAS, In 1917, the prominent architectural firm of McKim Mead & White was commissioned to design and construct a hotel to accommodate the passengers of the Pennsylvania Railroad; and

WHEREAS, The firm of McKim Mead & White is credited as the creator of such renowned architecture as the Washington Square Arch (1889), the second Madison Square Garden, at Madison Square (1890), the Cable Building at 611 Broadway (1892), the Morningside Heights campus of Columbia University (1893), the Bowery Savings Bank's first headquarters (1893), the New York Herald Building (1894), the University Club (1899), the Pierpont Morgan Library (1903), the Manhattan Municipal Building (1909-1915), the Metropolitan Museum of Art (1911), the James A. Farley Building - New York City's General Post Office, (1912-1914) and New York's Pennsylvania Station, constructed between 1904 through 1910; and

WHEREAS, Despite being known for its Beaux Arts architecture at the turn of the 20th century, the firm remained active into the 1960's, long after the founders had passed away, one of their last works being the design of the prominent National Museum of American History in Washington DC, which opened in 1964; and

WHEREAS, The chief designer of the hotel is the architect William Symmes Richardson, who also helped design the Pennsylvania Station, as well as the National City Bank Building in New York, the Girard Trust Company Building in Philadelphia and the Bank of Montreal, Canada. Mr. Richardson had joined the firm of McKim Mead & White in 1906, and remained a working architect until about 1925; and

WHEREAS, The renowned hotelier Ellsworth Statler – who was later named by the American Hotel Association as “Hotel Man of the Century” – was contracted to manage this property. When The Statler Hotel Pennsylvania opened its doors in 1919, it was considered to be the largest hotel in the world. The original hotel had 2,200 bathrooms, 3,537 beds and the world’s first “high rise” elevators. Statler remained involved with the hotel for many years and eventually purchased this altogether in 1949; and

WHEREAS, Through the 1930's and 1940's the hotel's Café Rouge was considered to be one of the most popular nightclubs in New York. Among the big bands that performed here were Duke Ellington, Count Basie, the Dorsey Brothers, and most notably the Glenn Miller Orchestra. The hotel's phone number, Pennsylvania 6-5000, is immortalized in their hit tune, and is New York's longest continually used telephone number. It remains the same to this day; and

WHEREAS, After 1954, when the Statler Company merged into Hilton Hotel Corporation, the property has had several owners, and several names. Statler's name remained on the hotel until 1983, when this was renamed The New York Penta Hotel. The original historic name Hotel Pennsylvania reappeared in the 1990's; and

WHEREAS, There has been restorative work performed to the hotel in the mid 1980's and at the early part of this century; and

WHEREAS, Hotel Pennsylvania is bounded on the west by Seventh Avenue and on the north and south by West 33rd Street and West 32nd Street respectively. The building was erected on a site measuring 200' X 400'. There are 22 floors from street level to roof, including three levels in the penthouse. On the ground floor there are lobby entrances from West 32nd Street and West 33rd Streets to the lobby, and a ballroom entrance on West 33rd Street; and

WHEREAS, The base of the building is constructed of Indiana Limestone with Milford Pink Granite at the grade levels. Much of this has been painted over. The rusticated stone façade is punctuated by a series of pilasters, the predominant number of these having scrolled capitals. At the Seventh Avenue entrance to the hotel, there are six massive stone columns capped by an ornate stone balustrade; and

WHEREAS, In between the windows of the first two floors there are several Rosso Levanto Marble decorative spandrels, many of the third floor windows appear to be original, with ornamental metal framing, six paned over six, in matching pairs. Windows from the fourth floor and above are predominantly one over one, there is stone dentil course between floors three and four; and

WHEREAS, Above the fourth floor there is a pronounced setback in the overall structure. Rising from the limestone base, the majority of the building is constructed of tan colored brick. At West 32nd Street, the building forms four individual towers partially conjoined at the building's center. These were constructed to maximize the exposure to sunlight and airflow. At West 33rd Street the two central towers are fully conjoined; and

WHEREAS, The façades above the 17th Floor are heavily ornamented in stone and terra cotta, including fluted pilasters and a massive ornamental limestone cornice. The penthouse structures above appear to be habitable space at the Seventh Avenue side of the building, and for mechanical usage at the east; and

WHEREAS, As it is today, boasting 1,700 hotel rooms and approximately 500,000 square feet, Hotel Pennsylvania is New York's fourth largest hotel; and

WHEREAS, In 1998 Vornado Realty Trust entered into an agreement to increase its interest in the Hotel Pennsylvania from 40% to 80, and then in 1999, by acquiring Planet Hollywood International's 20% interest in the hotel, Vornado owned this outright, and in connection with the 1999 transaction, Vornado also terminated the licensing agreement with Planet Hollywood for an Official All-Star Hotel; and

WHEREAS, Demolition plans have been announced for the hotel and a 2,500,000 square foot office tower will be built by 2011 on its site, a building of this size would have significantly more square footage than The Empire State Building, although this may not be as tall; and

Hotel Pennsylvania 11/8/07

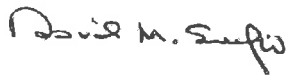

WHEREAS, Upon evaluation of the information pertaining to the architecture and rich cultural history of the hotel, during Community Board Five's October 30th Landmarks Committee meeting, the subcommittee voiced opinions both in favor and against designation; and

WHEREAS, After hearing opinions both in favor and against designation, the committee voted to recommend in favor; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That Community Board Five strongly RECOMMENDS DESIGNATION as an individual landmark, the building at 401 Seventh Avenue, known as the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this matter.

Dear Commissioner Tierney:

The Historic Districts Council requests that the Landmarks Preservation Commission consider the Hotel Pennsylvania in Manhattan for designation as an individual New York City landmark.

After designing Pennsylvania Station and the Farley Post Office, the architectural firm of McKim Mead & White was commissioned in 1917 to design and construct a hotel to accommodate the railroad's passengers. The elegant hotel, managed by renowned hotelier Ellsworth Statler, opened two years later. Its Café Rouge was one of the most popular nightclubs in the city during the 1930's and 1940's featuring such performers as Duke Ellington, Count Basie, the Dorsey Brothers and the Glenn Miller Orchestra who immortalized in song the hotel's phone number, Pennsylvania 6-5000.

Much discussion, planning and money have gone into the planning of the revival of the Pennsylvania Station area. It is ironic that the Hotel Pennsylvania, designed by the same architectural firm as the station, should not be part of these plans. Additionally in this boom time of New York City hotels, what was thought to be the largest hotel in the world at the time of its opening should not be consigned to the dustbin of history.

We respectfully ask that a designation hearing be held for this significant, endangered building.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

I truly hope that the Hotel Pennsylvania will become an interior + exterior landmark. I think some people have forgotten, or do not realize about the historic + beautiful parts of the hotel that still DO exist, such as the stairs leading to the mezzanine level of the lobby, the original ballrooms, elevator call panels, the famous Cafe Rouge (where Greta Miller performed). We need to learn from past mistakes and not repeat them. If we lose the Hotel Penn, we lose more than a hotel, we lose our diminishing historic heritage. It would be the shame of the century. Greed is destroying our city, Hotel Pennsylvania should be viewed as a monument of our glorious past, and as a gift to our future generations of New Yorkers, and the world.

Dear Mr. Riddle:

Thank you for requesting the comments of the State Historic Preservation Office concerning your project's potential effect upon historic resources. I have reviewed the documentation which you provided in accordance with the provisions of Section 14.09 of the New York State Historic Preservation Act of 1980.

Based on the documentation submitted, the properties listed below do not appear to meet the criteria for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places:

- Westyard Distribution Center, 386-404 Tenth Avenue
- 544-556 West 30th Street
- The former John H. Young Studios, 536 West 29th Street
- Former State Bank and Trust Company, 681-685 Eighth Avenue

- 300 West 38th Street
- 301 West 37th Street
- 369-371 West 35th Street

The remaining properties appear to meet the National Register criteria. Many of the eligible properties in the study area can be organized thematically by historic context according to National Park Service guidelines (National Register Bulletin 16B: How to Complete the National Register Multiple Property Documentation Form). A historic context is a body of information about related properties organized by theme, place, and time. Based on the information provided we have identified the following historic contexts within the study area boundary: the Garment Industry; the Printing Industry; the Residential, Institutional, Industrial and Commercial Development of Hell's Kitchen; the Industrial History of Chelsea; and the Commercial Development around Penn Station.

SR/NR-eligible Garment Industry Resources:

Eligible historic resources representing New York's Garment Industry retain sufficient period integrity and meet Criterion A in the areas of commerce or industry. Many of these resources also meet Criterion C in the area of architecture as intact examples of garment lofts.

Unevaluated Resource/Documentation Request:

As discussed, our office determined in 1989 (Route 9A project) that the High Line was not National Register-eligible. Based on information that was recently submitted by the Save Gansevoort Market Task Force, we have reversed our determination and noted that the section of the High Line that runs from Horatio Street to West 16th Street is a contributing element of the National Register-eligible Gansevoort Market Historic District. In order to assess the integrity of the remaining section of the High Line that runs north of Gansevoort Market into the project area, we are requesting that you map and photograph the High Line and note which portions have been altered.

Comments on Study Area:

OPRHP will defer to NYC Landmarks Preservation Commission's request to retain the 400-foot study area boundaries.

If you have any questions regarding this review, please call me at (518) 237-8643, ext. 3266. Please refer to the Project Review (PR) number noted above in any correspondence.
