Irreversible and Irretrievable Commitment of Resources

Resources, both natural and man-made, are expended in the construction and operation of proposed developments. These resources include the building materials used in construction; energy in the form of gas and electricity consumed during construction and operation of development by various mechanical and processing systems; and the human effort (time and labor) required to develop, construct, and operate various components of a development. These are considered irretrievably committed because their reuse for some purpose would be highly unlikely.

Introduction

As described in Chapter 1, Project Description, the Proposed Action would create a ~~special permit~~ Special Permit for hotels Citywide. The Proposed Action is not anticipated to directly induce development and, consequentially, would not involve resources in the form of building materials, energy, or human effort. Therefore, further analysis is not warranted.
