

COVID19 IMPACTS ON TRANSPORTATION

Produced by the NYC Department of City Planning's Transportation Division

December 1, 2020

- The NYC Department of City Planning's Transportation Division is compiling data to help understand the effects of COVID19 on the transportation network. This report and all prior reports beginning in April 2020 can be found at <https://www1.nyc.gov/site/planning/planning-level/transportation/transportation-overview.page>
- This week's report includes the following information:
 1. Executive Summary
 2. Citywide Trends
 3. MTA: Subway and Bus
 4. MTA: Metro North Railroad, Long Island Rail Road, Access-A-Ride
 5. Ferry
 6. Traffic
 7. Bicycles
 8. Timeline
- This report may serve to help in pandemic response and longer-term recovery. We are eager for feedback in how to make this more useful. Feel free to reach out to Laura Smith (lsmith@planning.nyc.gov) with questions or comments.

- There have been minimal changes to ridership on subways and buses week over week. Ridership dropped last week, attributed to the Thanksgiving holiday.
- As with other modes, ridership on commuter rail dropped during the week of Thanksgiving, though much more so on Metro North (-18%) than on Long Island Rail Road (-4%).
- Year over year, the greatest ridership differences are currently seen in neighborhoods with the strongest likelihood of having telework-capable populations, and telework-capable jobs. There is a fairly strong negative correlation between AM peak subway station entries and the telework-capability of residents in the surrounding neighborhoods.
- AM peak hour ridership on the Staten Island Ferry was 7am, consistent with November 2019; PM peak hour ridership was 4pm, compared to 5pm in November 2019.
- Weekend ridership on NYC Ferry has been higher in recent weeks than during comparable weekends in November 2019.
- Total average weekday daytime inbound vehicles to Manhattan and the Manhattan central business district are comparable to pre-pandemic levels, but reduced traffic and higher speeds were observed the week of Thanksgiving.
- Citi Bike ridership during the second half of November has declined with colder and wetter weather.

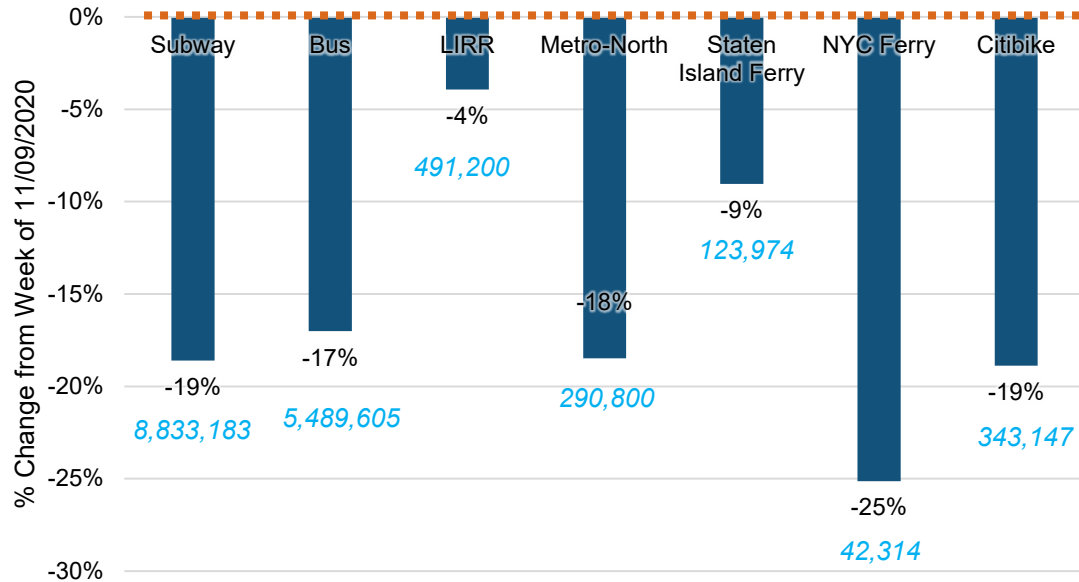

Citywide Trends

Citywide Trends

- The week of November 23rd has seen a significant drop in ridership across different modes compared to the previous week, likely due to Thanksgiving holiday and temporary school closures

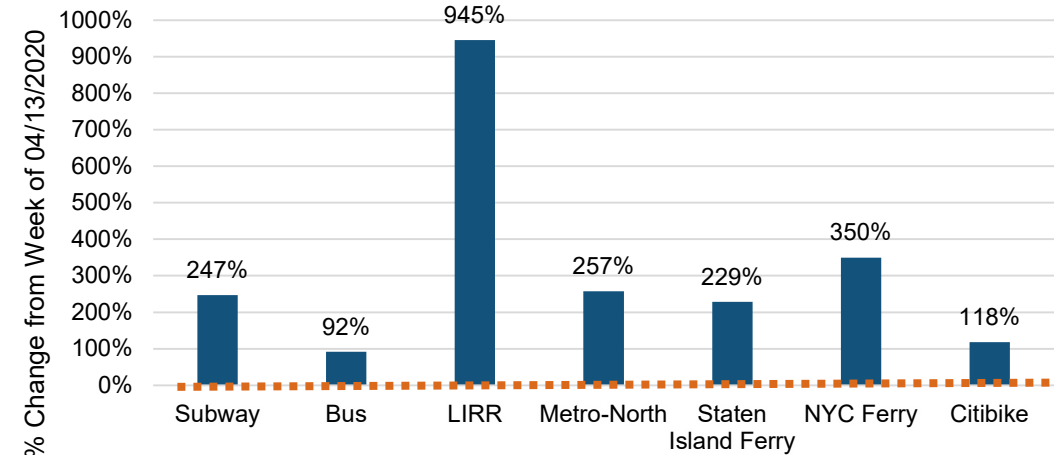

- Note: While bus ridership data had been estimated during the suspension of fare collection, bus ridership data from 10/1/20 onward is based on actual MetroCard and OMNY swipes and taps and an estimate of cash fares paid, which may account for some of the change observed this week over earlier in September.*

Week of 11/23/2020 Compared to Week of 08/24/2020 (Weekly Total)

Baseline: Total trips week of 08/24/2020

Citywide Trends: Weekday vs Weekend

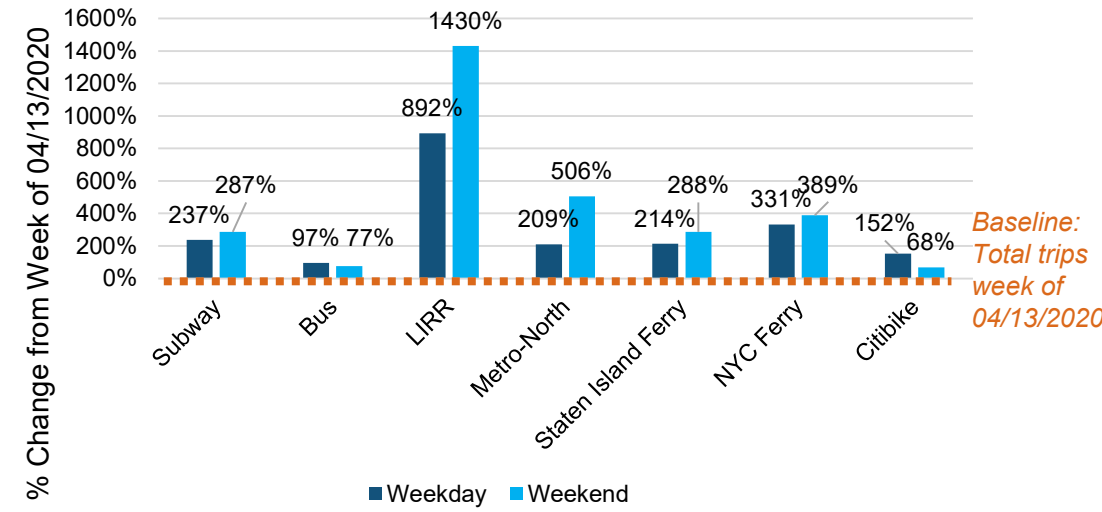

- Weekend ridership continues to be stronger on many modes compared to weekday ridership. Last week's Thanksgiving holiday contributed to declines on both weekday and weekend compared to the previous two weeks.
- Note: While bus ridership data had been estimated during the suspension of fare collection, bus ridership data from 10/1/20 onward is based on actual MetroCard and OMNY swipes and taps and an estimate of cash fares paid and thus may be unreliable to compare against ridership counts from earlier this year.*

MTA data: Subway and Bus

MTA Subway & Bus System-wide Ridership Changes

Percent Change of Estimated* MTA Subway & Bus Weekly Ridership
(March 1- November 29, 2020)

- Ridership on subway and bus declined by close to 20 percent during the week of November 23 compared to the week of November 9, due to Thanksgiving.

MTA Subway System-wide Ridership Changes

Estimated* MTA Subway Ridership (March 1- November 29, 2020)

- Weekday subway ridership was down 21 percent during the week of November 23 compared to the week of November 9, while weekend ridership was down 8 percent.

From the MTA: Subway ridership figures are determined from MetroCard and OMNY swipes and taps. Figures from recent days may be revised as data reconciliation processes are carried out. Data sources: MTA (<https://new.mta.info/coronavirus/ridership>)

MTA Bus System-wide Ridership Changes

Estimated * MTA Bus Ridership (March 1- November 29, 2020)

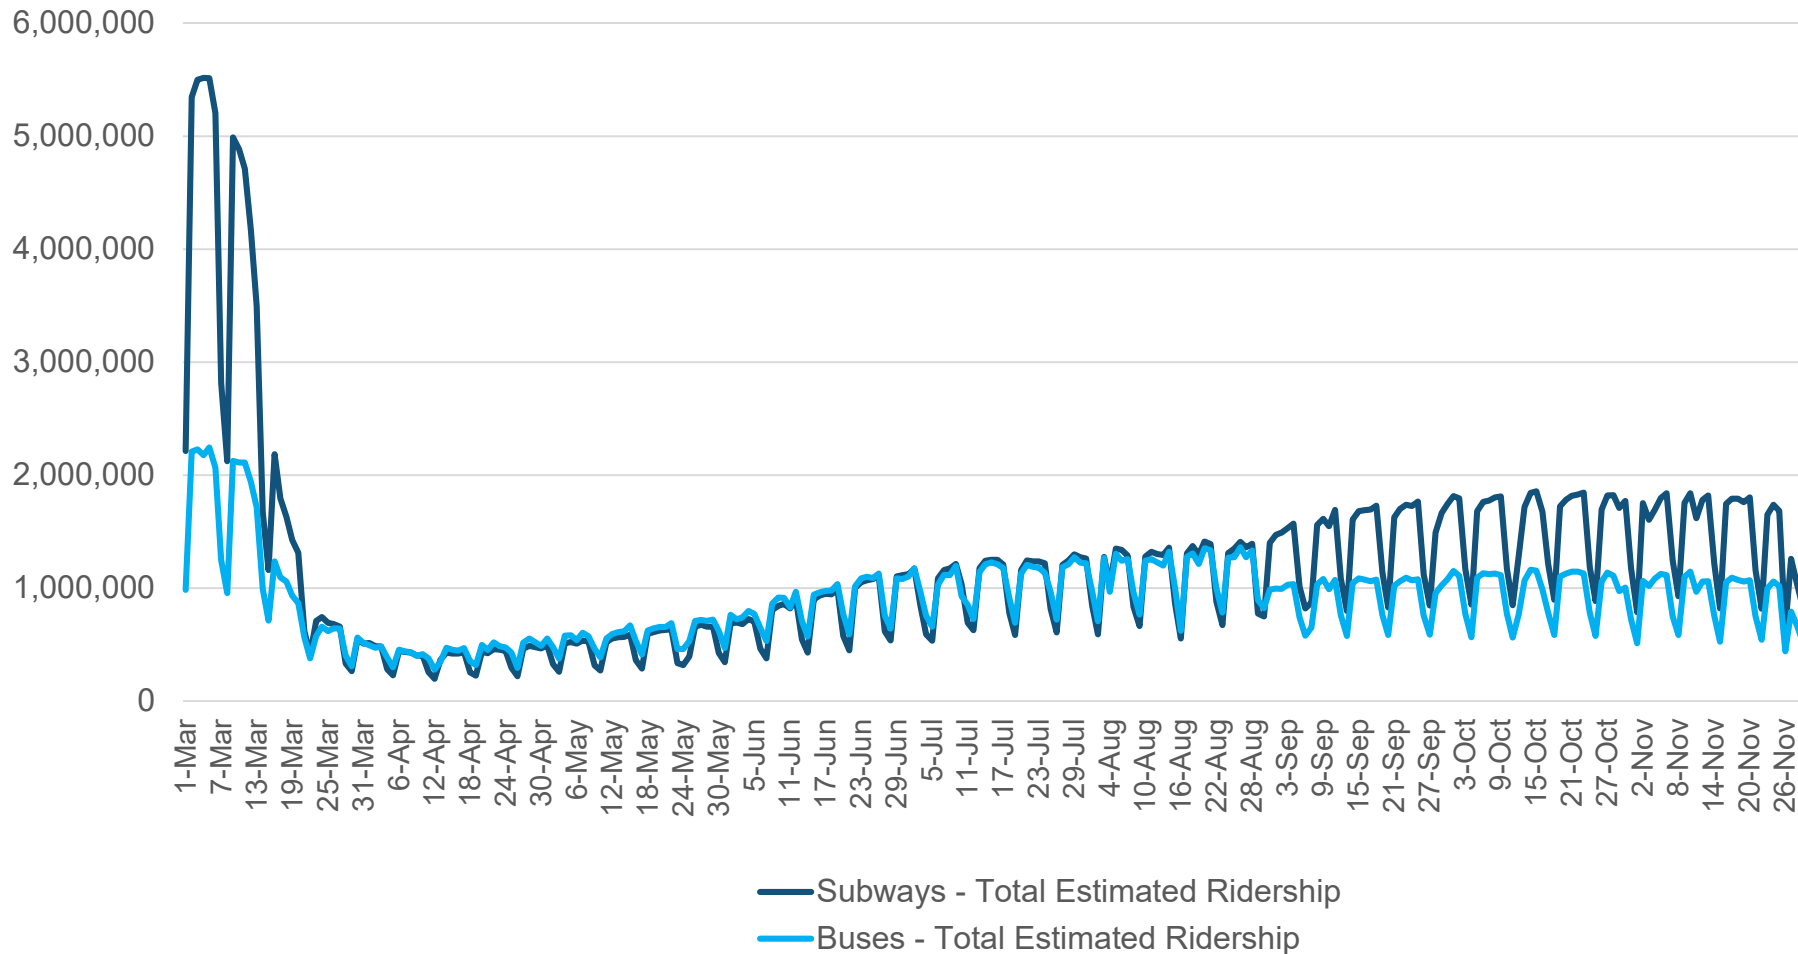

- Weekday bus ridership was down 20 percent during the week of November 23 compared to the week of November 9, while weekend ridership was down 7 percent.
- On October 1, the MTA changed how ridership is reported, noting on their website: “Bus ridership data from 10/1/20 onward is based on actual MetroCard and OMNY swipes and taps and an estimate of cash fares paid.”

From the MTA: Current bus ridership figures are estimated from models that use MetroCard and OMNY swipes and taps and Automatic Passenger Counter data that is available on a portion of our bus fleet. These figures are indicative of ridership but not a precise count. Figures from recent days may be revised as reconciliation processes are carried out. Data sources: MTA (<https://new.mta.info/coronavirus/ridership>)

MTA Subway and Bus System-wide Ridership Changes

Total Estimated MTA Subway and Bus Ridership

- Observing subway and bus ridership by total volume rather than percent, the majority of trips by subway becomes more obvious.
- Total bus and subway riders appeared to be nearly identical during the spring and summer, but the resumption of fare collection on buses in early September tipped the share of riders back towards the subway.

From the MTA: Current bus ridership figures are estimated from models that use MetroCard and OMNY swipes and taps and Automatic Passenger Counter data that is available on a portion of our bus fleet. These figures are indicative of ridership but not a precise count. Figures from recent days may be revised as reconciliation processes are carried out. Weekday AM Peak Subway Turnstile Data and Telework Capability

- A University of Chicago study estimated the “telework capability” of workers in different economic sectors.
- There is a fairly strong negative correlation between AM peak subway station entries and the telework-capability of residents in the surrounding neighborhoods.
- Manhattan has the most residents capable of teleworking and continues to see the greatest difference in AM peak hour subway entries compared to 2019.

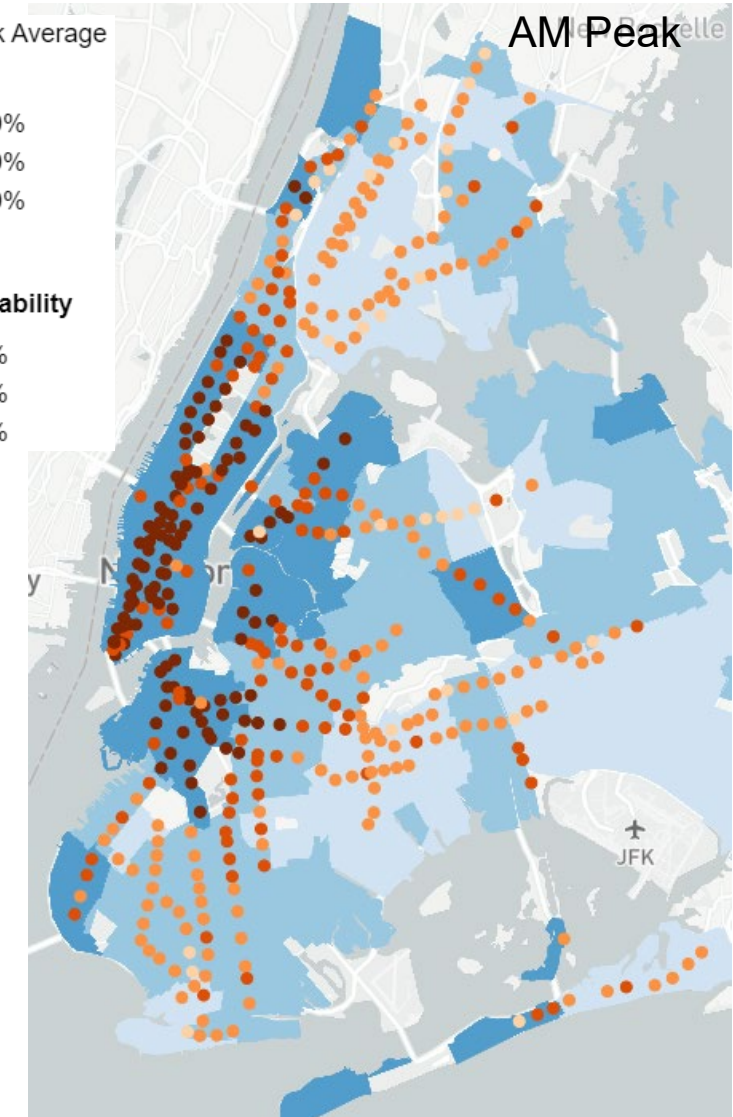

Subway Ridership Changes: Current Ridership vs. late November 2019 ridership

AM Peak Subway Ridership Change vs Telework Capability

● Brooklyn ● Bronx ● Manhattan ● Queens

Weekday AM and PM Peak Turnstile Data – Comparisons with Nov 2019

- While subway ridership has been increasing in recent months, AM and PM peak hour trips in remain substantially off from their volumes during the same weeks in 2019.
- The city's business districts in midtown and lower Manhattan, downtown Brooklyn, and Long Island City continue to see less than a quarter of their PM peak subway entries, indicating a very limited return to work in those areas.

MTA data:
Metro North Railroad, Long Island Rail Road, Access-A-Ride

Metro-North Railroad Ridership Changes

Estimated * MTA Metro-North Railroad (March 1- November 29, 2020)

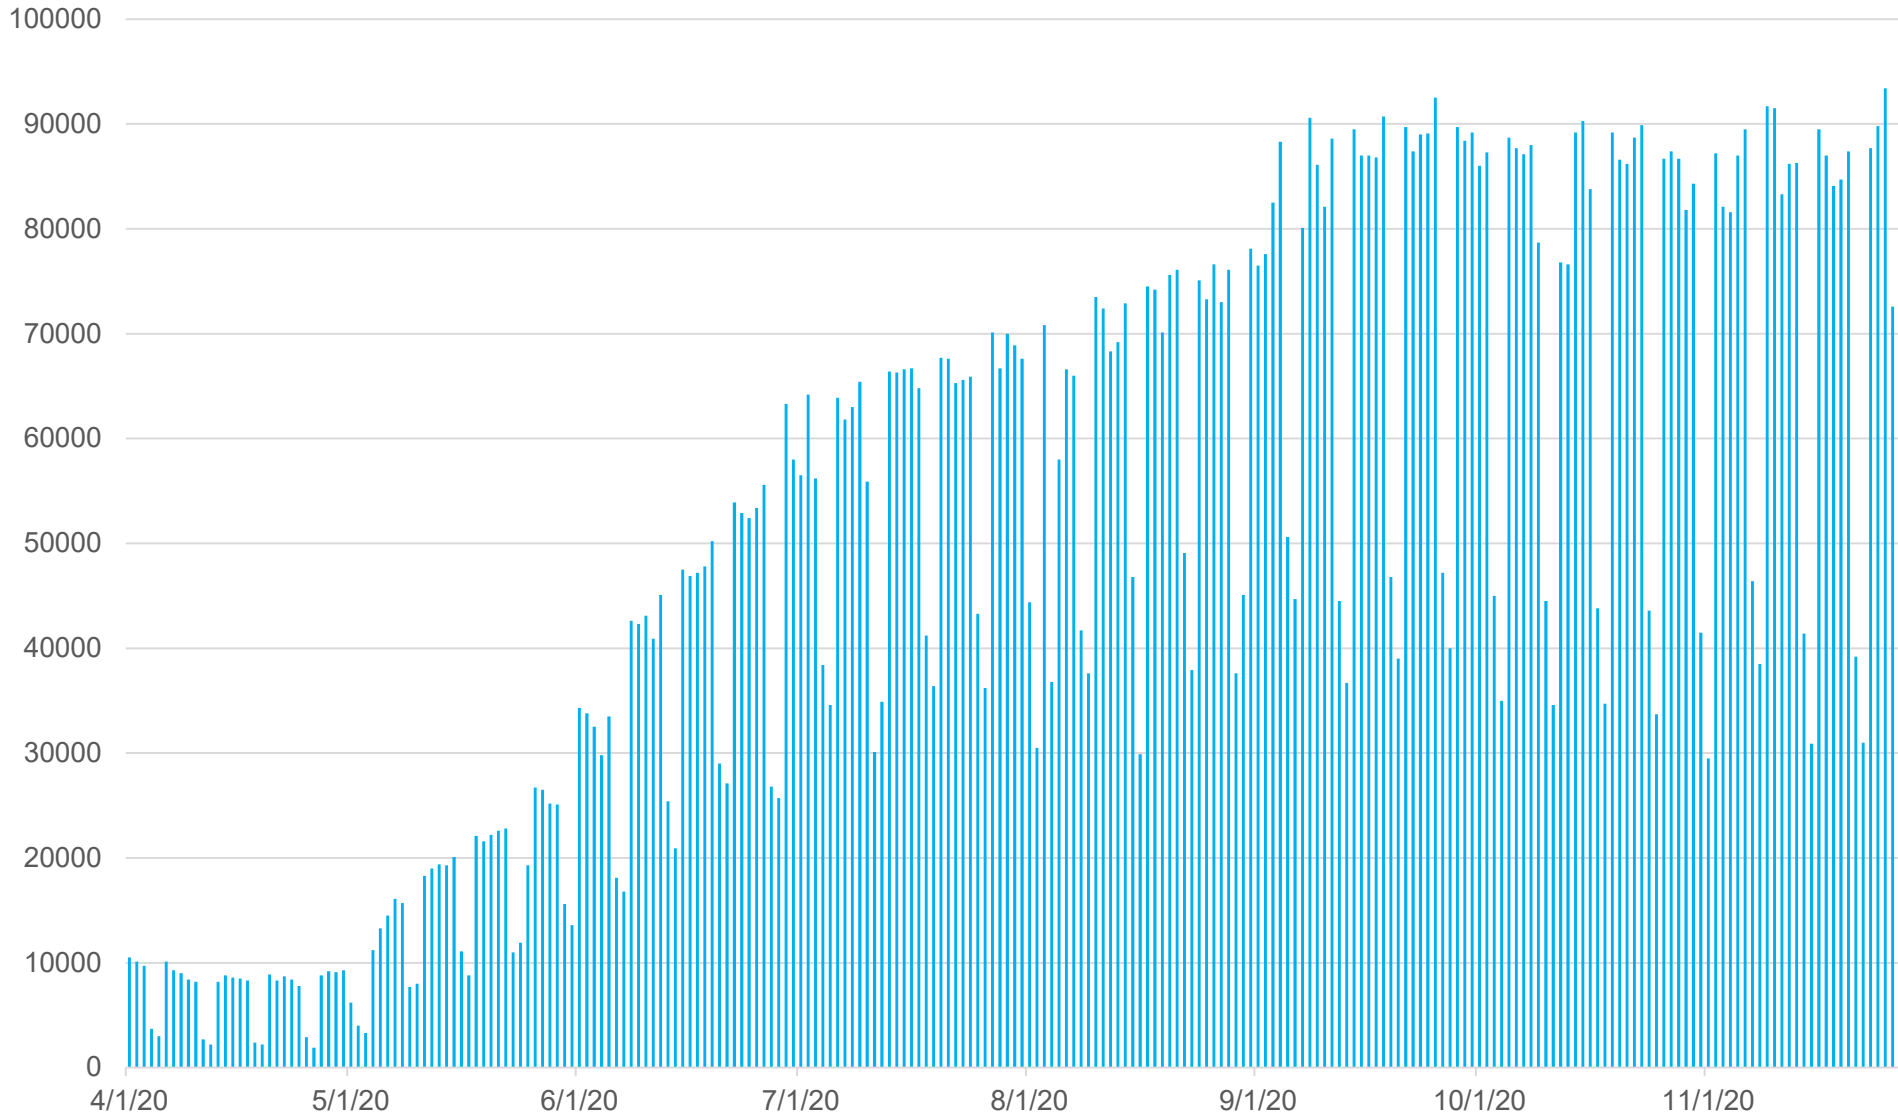

- Weekday and weekend Metro-North Railroad ridership for the week of November 23 was down 21 and 12 percent, respectively, compared to the week of November 9.

From the MTA: Metro-North ridership is estimated by a model using monthly, weekly, ten-trip, and daily ticket sales. Percent change is calculated based on 2019 monthly average weekday/Saturday/Sunday ridership figures. Data sources: MTA (<https://new.mta.info/coronavirus/ridership>)

Long Island Rail Road Ridership Changes

Estimated * MTA Long Island Rail Road Ridership (April 1- November 29, 2020)

- Weekday LIRR ridership for the week of November 23 was down 4 percent compared to the week of November 9, while weekend ridership was down 3 percent.

From the MTA: LIRR ridership is estimated by a model using monthly, weekly, ten-trip, and daily ticket sales. Percent change is calculated based on 2019 monthly average weekday/Saturday/Sunday ridership figures. Data sources: MTA (<https://new.mta.info/coronavirus/ridership>)

Access-A-Ride Scheduled Trip Changes

Estimated* MTA Access-A-Ride Scheduled Trips (March 1- November 29, 2020)

- Weekday Access-A-Ride scheduled trips for the week of November 23 were down 17 percent compared to the week of November 9, while the weekend scheduled trips were down 11 percent.

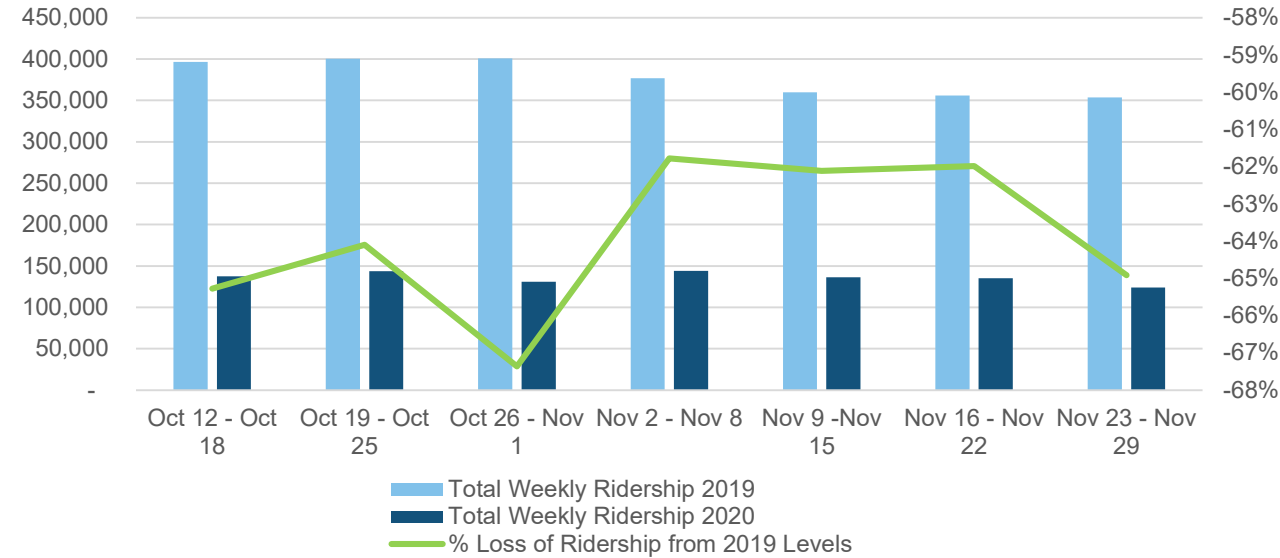

From the MTA: To provide timely updates, this data presents scheduled Access-A-Ride trips as an indicator of demand, rather than completed trips. The process to reflect completed trips, including adjusting for on-demand trips, cancellations, no shows, and on-street issues, would delay release of data for several weeks.. Ferry

The Staten Island Ferry and NYC Ferry

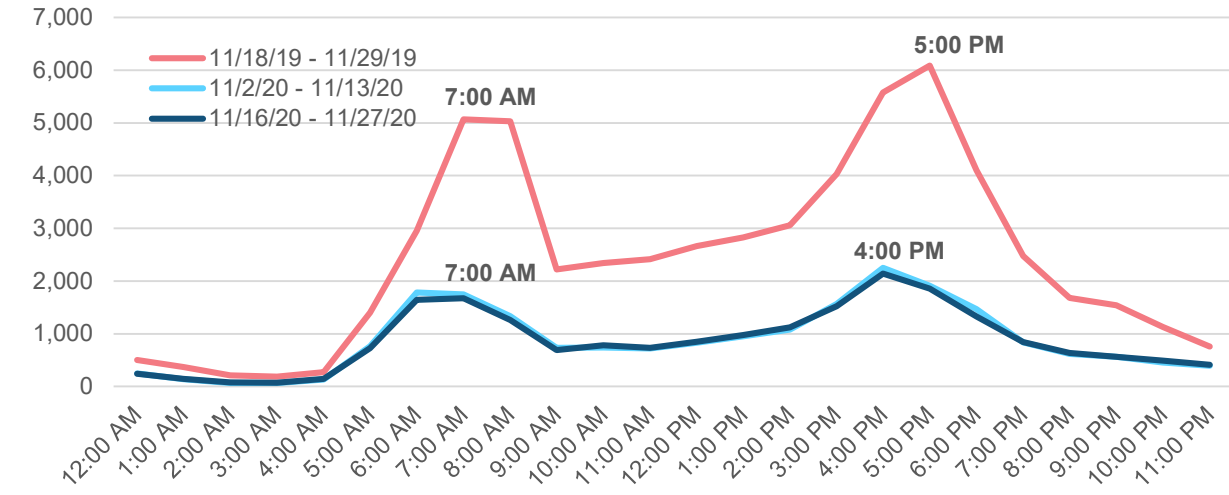

SIF Total Weekly Ridership

- The two-week period of November 16 to November 29 saw a daily weekday average of about 20,900 Staten Island Ferry riders. During these two weeks, the SIF has recovered an average of about 37 percent of its daily ridership, compared to 2019 levels.
- For the SIF, weekday peak hour ridership for the two-week period of November 16 to November 29 was 7:00am and 4:00pm compared to 7:00am and 5:00pm in November 2019.
- The two-week period of November 16 to November 29 saw NYC Ferry weekly ridership average 53 percent of its weekday ridership, and average 144 percent of its weekend ridership, compared to 2019 levels. Comfortable weekend weather likely contributed to high weekend ridership.

Traffic

MTA Bridge and Tunnel Traffic Volumes

Estimated * MTA Bridge and Tunnel Traffic Counts (March 1 - November 29, 2020)

- Weekday traffic counts on MTA bridges and tunnels during the week of November 23 were down 6 percent compared to the week of November 9. Weekend traffic counts were down 4 percent.

MTA crossings include:

- Bridges: Robert F. Kennedy, Throgs Neck, Verrazzano Narrows, Bronx-Whitestone, Henry Hudson, Marine Parkway-Gil Hodges Memorial, and Cross Bay Veterans Memorial bridges.
- Tunnels: the Hugh L. Carey Tunnel and the Queens Midtown Tunnel.

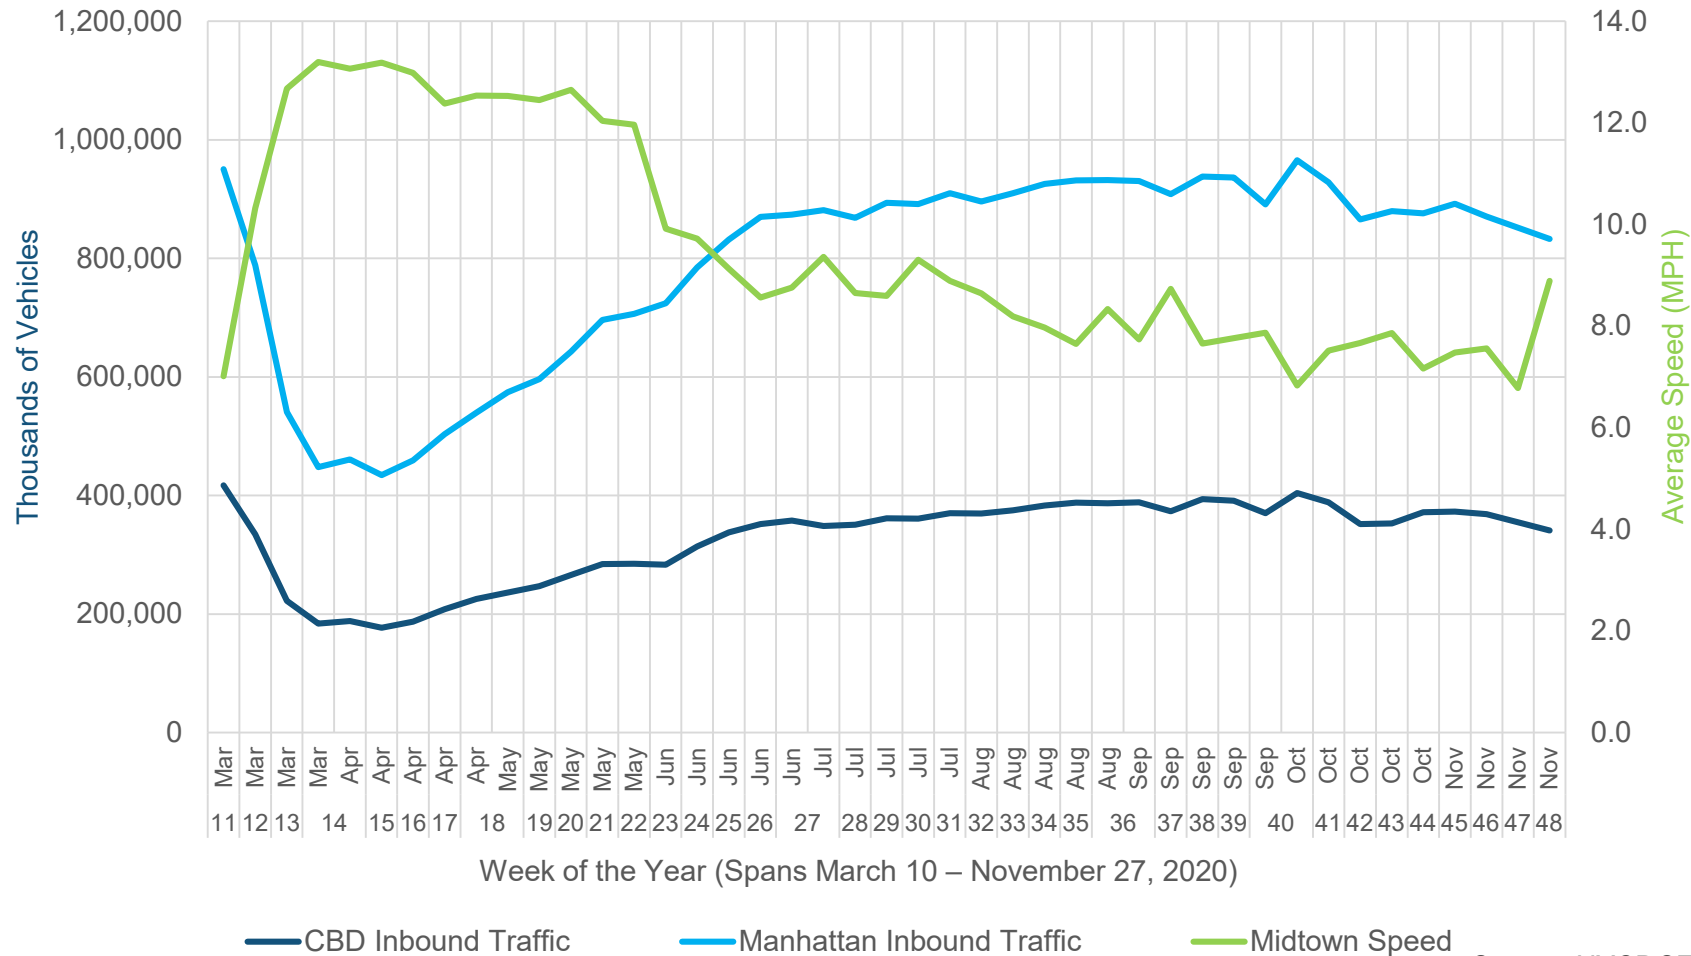

Real-time Traffic Flow Speed by Hour in NYC (Jun 8, Jun 29, Jul 13, Sep 21, Oct 5, Nov 23 2020)

- Compared to earlier weeks, AM peak hour traffic flow speeds on Monday, Nov 23 were higher than September and October, and PM peak hour speeds were much slower than those observed in June.

Manhattan Inbound Traffic

Total average vehicles entering Manhattan CBD and Manhattan via river crossings and average weekday daytime travel speeds in Midtown

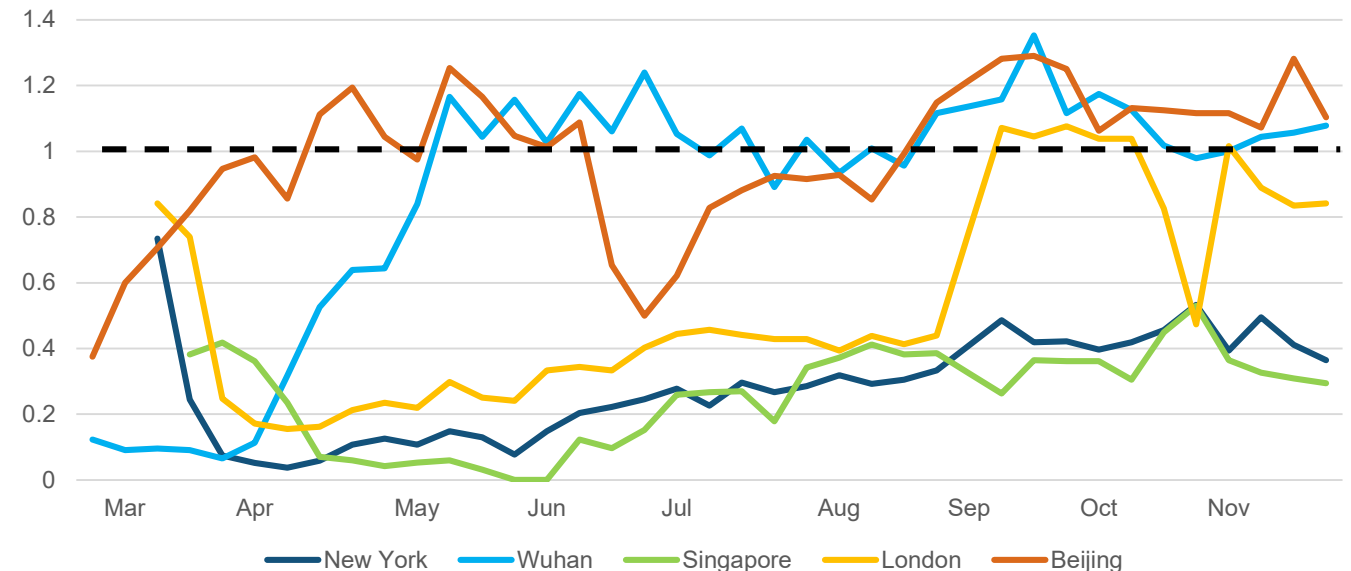

- Total average weekday daytime inbound vehicles to Manhattan and the Manhattan central business district are comparable to pre-pandemic levels.
- After peaking in early April at about 13 mph, average Midtown Manhattan speeds dropped sharply in early June and have held at about 8 mph in recent weeks.
- Reduced traffic and higher speeds were observed the week of Thanksgiving.

Source: NYCDOT, providing data from NYCTLC, Port Authority, Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority

Traffic Congestion

- These charts show average citywide congestion during the morning peak at 7am or 8am depending on the city.
- Congestion is a measure of the average amount of additional travel time needed to get to a destination anywhere in a city compared to free flow conditions. Zero percent represents free flow speeds; 100 percent represents 2019 yearly average congestion for each city.
- After a significant initial decline in congestion in March, congestion in NYC has been slowly increasing since June.
- Internationally, Beijing, Wuhan and London are currently seeing around average congestion levels.

*Some weeks contain less than five days due to holidays and gaps in the data.

Bicycles

Citi Bike Ridership (January 1, 2020 – November 28, 2020)

- Citi Bike ridership was trending up between early March 2020 and June, and ridership is highly correlated with weather. Ridership has been stable in recent months.
- Saturday, November 7 saw a spike in ridership* – attributed to wonderful weather and activity associated with the announcement of election results.
- Ridership during the second half of November has declined with colder and wetter weather.
