HISTORY OF THE ROCKAWAYS

In the 1600's, the peninsula known as Rockaway was called Rek-ka-wanes "a sandy place" by the Rek-ka-wanes, later called the Rockaway Indians. They sold it to an Englishman, Captain John Palmer, for 31 pounds sterling, which is approximately $52.00. New York Governor, Thomas Dongan, in the name of James II, King of England, approved the Palmer land grant to Rockaway. The deed was entered into the official record on November 3, 1685.

The Rockaway's have some of the finest ocean beaches in the world. In the 1800's when its beaches were a playground for the well-to-do, Rockaway was described as "the brightest jewel within the diadem of imperial Manhattan."

In the early 1900's, it was primarily a summer resort of tents, cottages and hotels, with very few permanent residents. In the 30's, 40's and 50's, these gave way to year round dwellings, as the permanent population grew. In the 60's, oceanfront apartments were built to accommodate the many who wanted to make the peninsula their permanent home. While Rockaway is now a self-contained community of 120,000, it still accommodates millions of mainlanders each summer who enjoy swimming off its beautiful beaches. The future of the peninsula is brighter than ever with plans to develop the beachfront property and to expand the business community to make it possible for more residents to work locally.

ABOUT COMMUNITY BOARD 14

The Community Board role in land use planning is exercised under the Uniformed Land use Review Procedure (ULURP) whereby zoning changes, variances, capital projects, use of city-owned land sale or lease of property, etc., must first be reviewed by the community board, which makes a recommendation to the appropriate agency following an open public hearing.

The Community Board input into the budget process is exercised through an annual capital and expense budget recommendation submitted in order of local priority after a public hearing to the appropriate city departments. This is, in essence, a local "wish list" and the final decision is always with the city departments, mayor, budget director, and city council. Local priorities may thus not be acted on for many years.

The Community Board has a small budget, which is determined like that of any city agency; it provides for salaries, rent, office supplies, and office maintenance. The staff of the Community Board is hired and supervised by the District Manager. Executive authority is vested in the chairperson of the board. The Chairperson of the board appoints all Community Board Committee Chairpersons to conduct the monthly committee meetings and functions.

Community Board #14 represents all of Rockaway and Broad Channel. All monthly meetings are open to the public. There is an opportunity for public speaking. Individuals wanting to speak during that period must register. They will be able to speak on topics related to the day's agenda or on matters of general interest.

To get help from City agencies, call us directly at 718-471-7300. When help is needed after 5:00pm, please dial 3-1-1 to reach the City's non-emergency information and service request hotline. If the 3-1-1 system is unable to resolve your problem, please call us. Try to have your 3-1-1-service complaint service number available. We will work directly with you and the relevant City agencies to address your concerns.

Community Board Meets: The Second Tuesday of every month Time:

7:15pm

Recess: July and August

DO YOU HAVE A PROBLEM? CALL THE COMMUNITY BOARD!

For decades, political reformers had been seeking a method of bringing ordinary, everyday people into the governmental process because residents, mainly those in large urban areas tended to see City Hall as a remote unapproachable, unresponsive entity.

Former Mayor Wagner decided to try a different approach; he experimented with "Community Planning Councils". Then, Mayor Lindsey set up "Little City Halls". After twenty-five years of experimentation, the 1975 City Charter formally divided the city into 59 community-planning districts, each with its own community planning board. The name was later shortened to Community Board. All City agencies will make their offices, statistics and staff available to answer requests and complaints made by the Community Board.

Each Community Board has up to fifty members. They are expected to be persons that have demonstrated their interest in civic affairs through activity in block associations, civic associations, etc. The Borough President appoints these members. The City Council members serving the area nominate half of the board members. All board members serve without pay, Although the Community Board has very broad mandates, allowing them to deal with any issues "affecting the welfare of the residents of their districts", the charter specifies three major areas for Community Board involvement: planning and reviewing land use in the community, improving city services, and making recommendations on the city's capital and expense budgets. While the Community Board role in every case is advisory, the Board input is considered very valuable and is often followed.
