Join the New York City Department of Transportation (NYC DOT) for an informative session focused on accessibility improvements at bus stops and along bus routes. This event is designed for people with disabilities and older adults.

While the Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA) operates the buses, NYC DOT is responsible for everything around them, from the roadway and curb to bus shelters and seating. At this online info session, you'll learn how NYC DOT is working to make bus stops and travel more accessible.

What to Expect:

- Hear about improvements to bus stops under elevated train lines
- Understand how bus lanes and cameras keep buses moving safely
- Learn who to contact with your bus-related questions

This is the third event in NYC DOT's Access to Independence program. This event series helps older adults and people with disabilities learn about accessible transportation and connect with service providers.
