When have you tried a new thing, not knowing how it would turn out?

“A couple months ago, I moved out on my own, I was very anxious and worried about how it would be. With time, I now know that it was the best decision for me and despite the hardships I’m glad I did that for myself.”

When have you tried a new thing, not knowing how it would turn out?

“When I left fashion in 1997 and started teaching art later that year because I needed to pay the rent. Who knew that it would become a lifelong career and passion?”

When have you tried a new thing, not knowing how it would turn out?

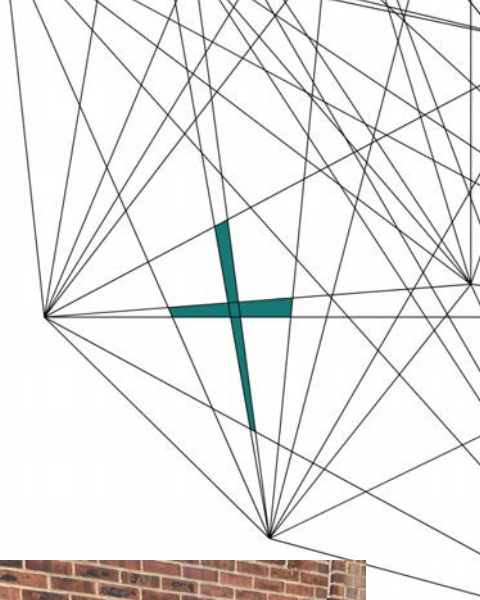

“After playing guitar in several other bands all my life, this Saturday I'll be recording my very own solo album and ive composed and arranged all the parts.”

Artist Residency 2024

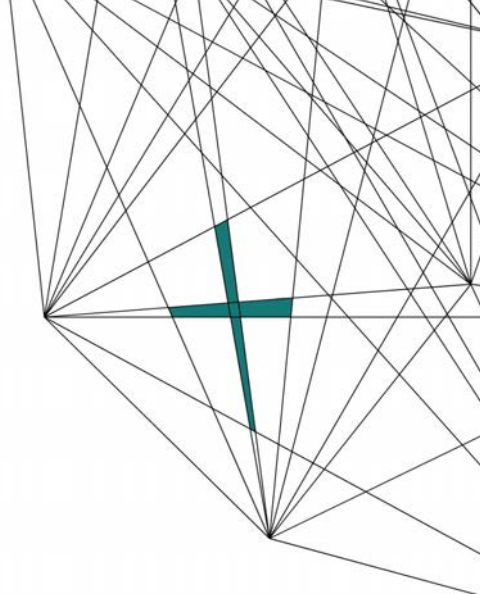

Heather Jones

The Episcopal Mission in Sunnyside
announces its inaugural Artist in Residence:

Heather Jones

Heather Jones (they/them) is a singing actor with deep roots in many traditions of sacred music, and who has gained a reputation for amplifying queer and trans stories in opera.

After building a career as a professional mezzo soprano over the course of a decade, Jones has begun medically transitioning using testosterone. This residency provides emotional and spiritual support for Jones through this tender and exciting time.

Bad Student

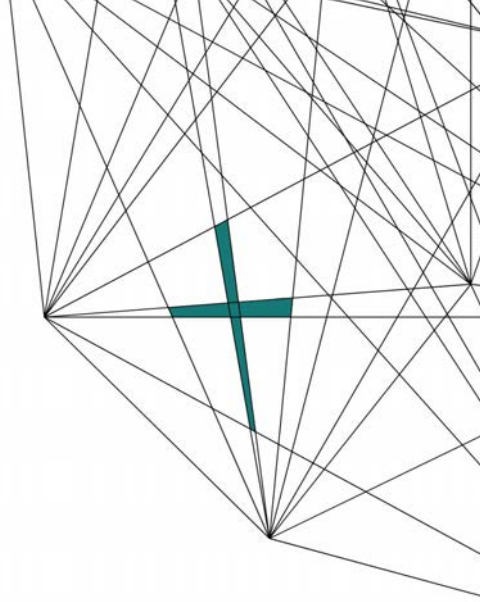

YAY!!!

The Episcopal Mission in Sunnyside
is thrilled to announce its 2025 Artists in Residence:
Pau Tiu and Felize Camille Tolentino-Tiu
Bad Student

Bad Student is a small risograph art press that Pau started in the Philippines in 2017.

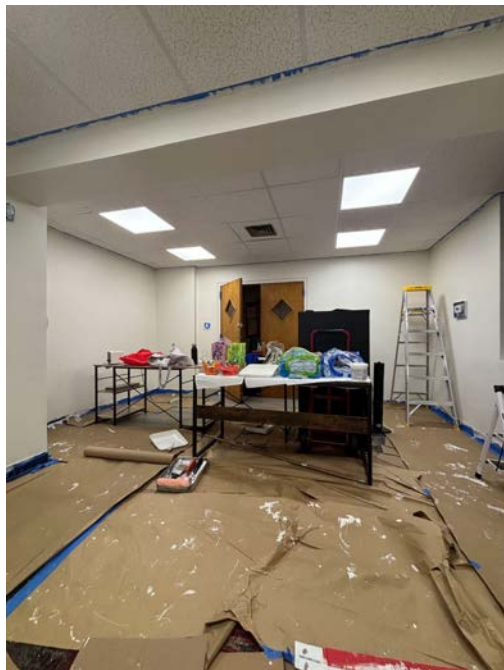

Risograph (or “riso”) printing uses a machine that looks like a photocopier, but functions like a screen printer. By building up layers of color one at a time, riso printing can create fine art prints of remarkable depth and vibrancy. But it can also cheaply print at high volumes, which has made riso popular in schools and among political activists around the world.

In the Philippines, Bad Student quickly became the center of a renaissance of risograph printing for art books and prints. Since Pau joined their wife Felize here in Sunnyside in
