Zoning for Accessibility (ZFA) – Subway Station Elevators - VOTE

- In collaboration with the Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA), the City Council, and the Mayor's Office for People with Disabilities (MOPD), DCP is preparing to expand and improve zoning rules that allow the MTA to leverage private developments to help create more accessible subway stations, to help expedite the delivery of a fully accessible transit system. Today, only about 30% of the City's 493 subway stations are fully accessible.
- ZFA seeks to expand existing zoning tools that help coordinate new developments near transit with the construction of improvements to station accessibility and capacity. Currently, this zoning tool is limited to a few areas of the city, mostly in Manhattan.
- This proposal would require property owners of developments near stations to proactively work with the MTA to provide station access easements; and would expand zoning incentives for developments in high-density districts to construct station improvements.
