Biographical/Historical Information

---

John Purroy Mitchel was born in New York City in 1879. He was Irish Catholic, and was educated at Fordham Preparatory School, Columbia College, and New York Law School. Early in his career, he worked as a private attorney, entering city politics in 1906 when he worked for New York City Corporation Counsel investigating Manhattan Borough President John Ahearn's office for corruption. He worked as assistant corporation counsel and then investigated the finances of city departments with the Commissioner of Accounts. In 1909, Mitchel was elected President of the Board of Alderman, and as such, served as Acting Mayor for a brief period in 1910, when Mayor Gaynor was shot and in recovery. Known as a reformer, Mitchel was elected in a landslide as an Anti-Tammany mayor in 1914. He was also known as the Boy Mayor, since he was the youngest mayor yet to serve the City of New York, at 34 years old. As Mayor, Mitchel continued his quest to reform the city, focusing especially on the Police Department. He also attempted, unsuccessfully, to bring the rapid transit system under municipal control. Though Mitchel ran for Mayor again in 1917, he ultimately lost, due to his pro-war and pro-military stance. After this loss, he joined the military, specifically the Air Service, and died tragically in a plane crash during training, in 1918.
