

WWII Pvt. Wing Hom's Return Home After Nearly 80 Years

After a 79 year search, WWII U.S. Army Private Wing O. Hom of Brooklyn, New York and later Boston, Massachusetts has finally returned home--his remains now interred at the Evergreens Cemetery in his home borough.

Hom was a member of Company B, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Infantry

Division when his unit entered combat near the town of Cistera di Latina, Italy. His remains were interred in Sicily-Rome American Cemetery in Nettuno, Italy until they were exhumed by The Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency (DPAA) in September of 2021. According to the DPAA's records, 5,775 WWII Servicemembers with New York home addresses are still missing.

Private Hom is among a vanguard of approximately 20,000 Chinese Americans who served in the US Armed Forces during World War II – all winners (posthumously and otherwise) of the Congressional Gold Medal for their service. Private Hom and his comrades served in the face of overwhelming cultural and systemic racism.

Commissioner Hendon, alongside his counterpart from Boston's Veterans Serivces Agency, Robert Santiago, members of the Hom Family, and others, attended Private Hom's burial service this past Wednesday, October 11th.

Commissioner Hendon extended his condolences to the Hom family in a letter, writing, "Bob Dylan once said that 'a hero is someone who understands the responsibility that comes with his freedom.' Your uncle had less than freedom – compared to what we know it as now in the United States. Yet still, he appreciated what he did have. He understood how his service would advance a better tomorrow. And he gave everything. Private Wing O. Hom is a hero."

Cat accused of wiping US Veteran Affairs server info after jumping on keyboard

US govt confirms outage, leaves feline in quantum state of uncertainty

Published: Thu 5 Oct 2023 | 14:29 UTC By: Thomas Claburn | The Register

EXCLUSIVE A four-hour system interruption in September at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Kansas City, Missouri has been attributed to a cat jumping on a technician's keyboard.

So we're told by a source, who heard the tale on one of the regular weekday calls held by the US government department with its CIO, during which recent IT problems are reviewed. We understand that roughly 100 people – contractors, vendors, and employees – participate in these calls at a time.

On a mid-September call, one of the participants explained that while a technician was reviewing the configuration of a server cluster, their cat jumped on the keyboard and deleted it. Or at least that's their story.

Kurt DelBene, assistant secretary for information and technology and CIO at the Department of Veterans Affairs, is said to have responded on the call with words to the effect that: "This is why I have a dog." There was laughter and not much more – it was a short incident report.

This is not an unheard of problem. Anecdotes of feline data vandalism abound in various online forums. This reporter has personal experience with typos introduced by an orange tabby conducting a keyboard crossing to reach a sunny spot by the window, and one of El Reg's editors has suffered similar issues.
