

Comments Received by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection on Proposed Rules related to Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Service
Workers

IMPORTANT: The information in this document is made available solely to inform the public about comments submitted to the agency during a rulemaking proceeding and is not intended to be used for any other purpose

From: Briane Hatcher <Briane.Hatcher.587652674@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:47 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from briane.hatcher.587652674@p2a.co. Learn why this is important
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Briane Hatcher

From: Evan ali <Evan.ali.587652692@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:47 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from evan.ali.587652692@p2a.co. Learn why this is important
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Evan ali

From: Abdur Rahman <Abdur.Rahman.602967073@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:47 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from abdur.rahman.602967073@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Abdur Rahman

From: Abdur Rahman <Abdur.Rahman.602967073@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:47 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from abdur.rahman.602967073@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Abdur Rahman

From: Abderrezek Aliche <Abderrezek.Aliche.602989358@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:48 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from abderrezek.aliche.602989358@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Abderrezek Aliche

From: jack zelkowitz <jack.zelkowitz.587658678@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:48 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from jack.zelkowitz.587658678@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
jack zelkowitz

From: Dale Traverso <Dale.Traverso.613965000@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:48 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from dale.traverso.613965000@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Dale Traverso

From: Modou Samb <Modou.Samb.613965028@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:48 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from modou.samb.613965028@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Modou Samb

From: Luis paulino <Luis.paulino.613965145@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:49 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from luis.paulino.613965145@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Luis paulino

From: Leslie Randolph <Leslie.Randolph.613965154@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:49 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from leslie.randolph.613965154@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Leslie Randolph

From: alfredo vega <alfredo.vega.613965163@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:49 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from alfredo.vega.613965163@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
alfredo vega

From: Christopher Stewart <Christopher.Stewart.587649227@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:49 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from christopher.stewart.587649227@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Christopher Stewart

From: Gregor Bonny <Gregor.Bonny.613965361@p2a.co>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 4:49 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from gregor.bonny.613965361@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Gregor Bonny

From: Tracy Taylor <Tracy.Taylor.614321346@p2a.co>
Sent: Friday, March 31, 2023 10:59 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from tracy.taylor.614321346@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Tracy Taylor

From: Andrew Tran <Andrew.Tran.614506486@p2a.co>
Sent: Sunday, April 2, 2023 2:24 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from andrew.tran.614506486@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To The Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

We've said it before and we'll say it again. Please do not move forward with any new rules that would force apps to limit when and where I work.

The reason why I choose to work via food-delivery apps is because I enjoy the full flexibility to pick which days of the week, hours of the day, and parts of the city I work in. I don't want to compete with workers for the best time slots and I don't want to be locked out of apps.

Please listen to workers - don't force apps to take away my freedom & flexibility.

Regards,
Andrew Tran

From: Claudia Espinoza <Claudia.Espinoza.614859412@p2a.co>
Sent: Tuesday, April 4, 2023 4:02 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from claudia.espinoza.614859412@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

Al Departamento de Protección al trabajador y al consumidor:

Me dirijo a usted para instarle a que no promueva nuevas reglas que obliguen a las apps a limitar cuándo y dónde trabajo.

La razón por la que decido hacer entregas con la app de Uber es porque tengo toda la flexibilidad para elegir en qué días de la semana, a qué horas del día y en qué partes de la ciudad puedo hacerlo. No quiero competir con los demás repartidores por las mejores horas para hacer entregas y no quiero que se me excluya de las apps.

Le insto a que no fuerce a las apps a quitarme mi libertad y flexibilidad.

Regards,
Claudia Espinoza

From: Johan Gomez <Johan.Gomez.614861545@p2a.co>
Sent: Tuesday, April 4, 2023 4:04 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from johan.gomez.614861545@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

Al Departamento de Protección al trabajador y al consumidor:

Me dirijo a usted para instarle a que no promueva nuevas reglas que obliguen a las apps a limitar cuándo y dónde trabajo.

La razón por la que decido hacer entregas con la app de Uber es porque tengo toda la flexibilidad para elegir en qué días de la semana, a qué horas del día y en qué partes de la ciudad puedo hacerlo. No quiero competir con los demás repartidores por las mejores horas para hacer entregas y no quiero que se me excluya de las apps.

Le insto a que no fuerce a las apps a quitarme mi libertad y flexibilidad.

Regards,
Johan Gomez

From: Francis Cordero <Francis.Cordero.614869051@p2a.co>
Sent: Tuesday, April 4, 2023 4:10 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility

You don't often get email from francis.cordero.614869051@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

Al Departamento de Protección al trabajador y al consumidor:

Me dirijo a usted para instarle a que no promueva nuevas reglas que obliguen a las apps a limitar cuándo y dónde trabajo.

La razón por la que decido hacer entregas con la app de Uber es porque tengo toda la flexibilidad para elegir en qué días de la semana, a qué horas del día y en qué partes de la ciudad puedo hacerlo. No quiero competir con los demás repartidores por las mejores horas para hacer entregas y no quiero que se me excluya de las apps.

Le insto a que no fuerce a las apps a quitarme mi libertad y flexibilidad.

Regards,
Francis Cordero

From: Stephanie Hodge <Stephanie.Hodge.468103224@p2a.co>
Sent: Thursday, April 6, 2023 5:38 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please Protect My Flexibility as a NYC Food Delivery Worker

You don't often get email from stephanie.hodge.468103224@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Dear Department of Consumer and Worker Protection,

My name is Stephanie and I am a delivery worker and constituent in New York City. I am writing to urge you to revise the proposed rule that sets minimum pay for delivery workers. I support a minimum pay standard, but as currently written, the rule could ultimately take away my ability to work flexibly on platforms like DoorDash.

This draft rule threatens my ability to earn extra income making deliveries when, where, and how often I want. I choose to do this work because it allows me to earn on my own time and the freedom to choose which deliveries I accept, and I know many other delivery workers also depend on this flexibility. I worry that the high costs on consumers and resulting decline in orders from restaurants under the revised minimum pay rule could require platforms to restrict this flexibility. This will make it difficult for me to continue pursuing these earning opportunities altogether.

We want minimum pay protections, but also want to ensure that flexibility can continue and New Yorkers don't stop using delivery services altogether.

Please consider app-based delivery workers like myself before you enact this minimum pay rule.

Sincerely,

Stephanie Hodge
52 Arden St
New York, NY 10040

From: Elisabeth Dyssegaard <edyssegaard@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, April 6, 2023 10:33 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021

You don't often get email from edyssegaard@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Vilda Vera Mayuga
Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection 42 Broadway, 9th floor New York, NY 10004 via:
email

April 6, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

All of us who lived through COVID in New York will forever remember the risks delivery workers took to keep us safely inside and fed. And every day we all still see them battling the toughest conditions on the city's streets.

As a New Yorker, I write to express my deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work. There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated.

DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multiapping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,

Elisabeth Dyssegaard
212-420-1885

From: Cheyenna Weber <cheyennawebernyc@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, April 6, 2023 11:13 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Deliverista law comments

You don't often get email from cheyennawebernyc@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers deserve justice. I am a New Yorker who loves take out and I am writing to express deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, I am concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work. There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay 1

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,
Cheyenna Weber

--

Cheyenna Layne
Weber she/her

\(Why pronouns?\)

Cell: 917-319-1976

Mastodon: cheyenna@social.coop

Website: cheyennaweber.com

Schedule a meeting with me

All of the US is built on stolen Native land. Support the Native communities who make NYC home:
mannahattafund.org.

From: Sarah Tielemans <s.e.badgerow@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, April 6, 2023 3:48 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] minimum pay for Deliveristas

You don't often get email from s.e.badgerow@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Vilda Vera Mayuga Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection 42 Broadway, 9th floor New York, NY 10004 via: email

April 6, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits.

i am writing to express my deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, we are concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work. There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data. 1

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,

Sarah Tielemans
zip code 10033

--

"The practice of Love is the most powerful antidote to the politics of domination." bell hooks

From: Alex Zucker <alexz.nyc@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, April 6, 2023 4:46 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] minimum pay for app delivery workers

You don't often get email from alexz.nyc@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Vilda Vera Mayuga Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th floor New York, NY 10004 via: email

April 6, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga:

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits.

As a New Yorker, I am writing to express my deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, I am concerned that the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multibilliondollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work.

There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion-dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That Undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,

Alex Zucker
2171 Bragg St, Apt 3B
Brooklyn, NY 11229

From: Anne Kemper <akemper@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, April 6, 2023 7:50 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Minimum pay for delivery workers

You don't often get email from akemper@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits.

I write to express my deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, I'm concerned that the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work.

There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,

Anne Kemper

--

917-603-3995

<http://www.linkedin.com/in/annekemper>

From: Kate Huyett <kate.huyett@gmail.com>
Sent: Friday, April 7, 2023 6:58 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Supporting Minimum Wage for Delivery Workers

You don't often get email from kate.huyett@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Vilda Vera Mayuga Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection 42 Broadway, 9th floor
New York, NY 10004 via: email

April 7, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits. This is an unacceptable situation - especially given the rapidly rising costs of living.

I'm writing to express our deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, we are concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work.

There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,
Kate Huyett

--

Kate Huyett
cell: 617-921-5848

During this time of crisis, those who have the least are suffering the most.

If you are able to, please donate to the NYC Relief Bus whose team is actively risking their lives to still help the homeless community through their mobile outreach program:

<https://newyorkcityrelief.org/donate>

From: John W. Tomac <john@johnwtomac.com>
Sent: Friday, April 7, 2023 8:59 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Local Law 115 of 2021

You don't often get email from john@johnwtomac.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Commissioner Mayuga:

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits.

As a co-founder of Bike South Brooklyn, I write to express our group's deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, we are concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work. There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

1

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Thank you

-John Tomac

--

John W. Tomac | 347.560.6275 | johnwtomac.com

From: erin McPerson <alphabetmcadams@gmail.com>
Sent: Friday, April 7, 2023 11:18 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Delivery drivers

You don't often get email from alphabetmcadams@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Vilda Vera Mayuga
Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection 42
Broadway, 9th floor

April 07, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits.

I write to express my deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, I am concerned that the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work.

There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,
Erin Mcadams

Probably typed whilst walking, drinking coffee and finding my metrocard, please excuse errors

From: Claudia Corcino <claudia_corcino@yahoo.com>
Sent: Saturday, April 8, 2023 12:03 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Letter of support for Delivery Cyclists

You don't often get email from claudia_corcino@yahoo.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Mrs. Vilda Vera Mayuga Commissioner
Department of Consumer and
Worker-Protection 42 Broadway,
9th floor New York, NY 10004
via:
email

April 7, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits.

As Ciclistas Latinoamericanos de New York, representing cyclists in all five boroughs, we write to express our deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, we are concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time. In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work.

There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That Undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn't make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,

Claudia Corcino

Co-Founder

Ciclistas Latinoamericanos de New York

Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/groups/CiclistasNY/>

Instagram: <https://www.instagram.com/ciclistasny/>

Vilda Vera Mayuga
Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection 42
Broadway, 9th floor
New York, NY 10004
via: email

April 6th, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits.

I write to express our deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, I am concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work. There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in.

There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip.

Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,
Jackson Chabot

From: J <jclarkhoward@gmail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, March 29, 2023 8:48 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL]

You don't often get email from jclarkhoward@gmail.com. Learn why this is important
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

I support deliveristas get them a better wage

From: Alexandra Mendez <thebelovedalexa@gmail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, March 28, 2023 8:41 AM
To: Jung, Karline (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL]

You don't often get email from thebelovedalexa@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

As the spouse of a hardworking delivery worker I am asking that the original stipulations agreed upon be respected in the contract. Delivery workers rely on multiple platforms to make a living wage necessary for survival in New York City. Now they're calling to punish the workers for doing so? And after all the fees are collected the final salary drops from $19 to $12 an hour. This is inexcusable and unacceptable.

Please do something for the residents of this city; the employers have more than enough resources and support.

Sincerely,
Alexandra Mendez

From: Funny Reels <maxsolano13@gmail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, March 7, 2023 10:33 AM
To: Jung, Karline (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Re: DCWP NOH: Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Service Workers

You don't often get email from maxsolano13@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

As a delivery worker for 8 years, specifically working with the major app companies (Uber, Doordash, etc), I am very disappointed about the pursuing of a $25/hr wage guarantee. I believe simply forcing the companies to pay $5 base pay or more per delivery can be a much quicker solution and will allow more delivery partner's to retain their status as freelancers. Waiting 2 or more years for something that will probably force these companies to cut back on drivers and make it less accessible to the general public interested in gig work, is damaging. Push for $5+/delivery, this would be a much better approach. Also, distance and wait pay should also be considered in this calculation.

From: Luma Lima <Luma.Lima.615549758@p2a.co>
Sent: Thursday, April 6, 2023 10:55 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Please amend the proposed rules and support delivery workers

You don't often get email from luma.lima.615549758@p2a.co. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Luma Lima
Wild Turkey Rd
Queensbury, NY 12845

From: Ruth Goodrich <ruthgoodrich@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, April 6, 2023 1:21 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL]

You don't often get email from ruthgoodrich@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

The delivery workers are invisible to most new yorkers, yet these delivery people help in a major way , to drive the economy is this city. These workers are dirt poor, have to buy and keep up their own bikes, helmets, gloves, bike lights, wind/rain pants etc. police do not respond when they are hit. Increasing their hourly wage is the least nyc can do- protect our workers and economy and raise the hourly wage. Thank you - ruthie

From: Cheyenne Stewart <cestewrt@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, April 6, 2023 4:24 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Minimum Wage for Food Delivery Workers

You don't often get email from cestewrt@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Hello,

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling folks to stay safe at home. I use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage.

Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Thank you,
Cheyenne Stewart

Cheyenne Stewart, MPH
Pronouns: they/them/theirs
(217) 402-6332 | cestewrt@gmail.com

From: Chris Efthimiou <cefthimiou21@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, April 6, 2023 6:58 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Minimum pay for Deliveristas

You don't often get email from cefthimiou21@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Hello,

I would like to make a public comment in support of minimum pay for Deliveristas.

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Thank you,

Chris Efthimiou
32-84 39th Street
Astoria, NY 11106

From: Christine Berthet <christinemberthet@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, April 6, 2023 9:23 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021

You don't often get email from christinemberthet@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Vilda Vera Mayuga
Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker
Protection 42 Broadway, 9th floor
New York, NY 10004 via: email

April 06, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

The members of CHEKPEDS , a non profit for pedestrian safety are outraged that New York City's delayed the implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 and keep this essential population with substandard wages and without benefits.

It is not only an issue of equity, but it is also an issue of PUBLIC SAFETY: because of the low wages, deliveristas try to maximize their meager earnings by racing to deliver as many meals as possible. In order to do so, they run on sidewalks, go the wrong way and exceed the proper speed. And who could blame them? they cannot make ends meet. We receive constant complaints for our seniors and population in general about these practices.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, we are concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored

We urge you to vote on the final minimum wage and ensure these workers do actually get their full due.

Christine Berthet
CHEKPEDS
646 623 2689

From: David Roycroft <droycroft@gmail.com>
Sent: Friday, April 7, 2023 8:40 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Guaranteed Minimum Wage for Delivery Workers

You don't often get email from droycroft@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm disappointed in the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection. Its decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 is causing unnecessary delays and has resulted in the withholding of at least five months' pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. TNo further delay. Ensure that delivery workers are given are given a minimum wage now.

From: Mary Kathryn Fisher <fisher.marykathryn@gmail.com>
Sent: Friday, April 7, 2023 8:54 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Minimum pay for food delivery workers

You don't often get email from fisher.marykathryn@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Hello,

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept NYC fed and countless small businesses afloat over the past several years, and frequently use food delivery apps such as GrubHub, and it's unacceptable that delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Reissuing the LL115 fo 2021 decision is causing unnecessary delays, and withholding at least five months of pay from those essential workers who rely on tips. These working cyclists face countless risks on the job and keep NYC fed and cared for, and we need to do the same for them.

Thank you,
Mary Kathryn Fisher

From: Sergio Solano <solanosergio025@gmail.com>
Sent: Friday, April 7, 2023 9:38 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Testimonio sobre el pago mínimo

You don't often get email from solanosergio025@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Me dirijo a ustedes como el Departamento de protección al trabajador para dejar mi opinión como un trabajador de aplicación de Doordash y me gustaría que las aplicaciones nos pagaran mejor en cuanto al pago Base de $3 subirlo a $6 por viaje más propinas...no estoy a favor...ni en contra de la tarifa que ya está sobre la mesa de $19.86 Gracias por apoyarnos y dejar claro que la organización workers justice proyect No nos Representan a todos....

From: brianna rodriguez <kendraherrera66@gmail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, March 15, 2023 10:40 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL]

You don't often get email from kendraherrera66@gmail.com. Learn why this is important
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Hola mi nombre es brianna Martínez trabajo con las aplicacionesy estoy de acuerdo que se de un pago por horaya que hay mucho delivery extremadamente lejos y muy mal pagados.

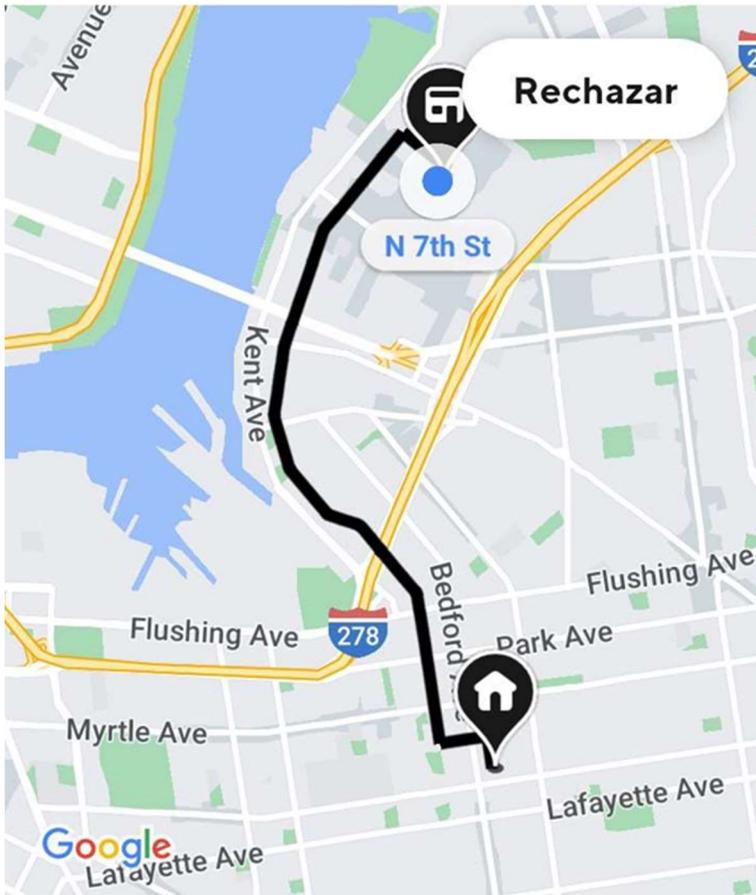

From: Pedro Rojas <pedroisaias1829@gmail.com>
Sent: Monday, March 20, 2023 5:12 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Minimum Pay is needed
Attachments: Screenshot_20230205-201839.png

You don't often get email from pedroisaias1829@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Hi,

This is example of how the app si paying really bad. This is deliviry without tip and making me travel really far. We need the app to Pay the waiting time.

Entregar antes del 8:44 p. m.

Playa Bowls

181 Bedford Ave

1 artículo • 2.7 mi • 21 min est.

$4.50

Gana $4.50 en el pago de DoorDash

Aceptar

From: Helen Bolton <helenbolton58@gmail.com>
Sent: Friday, April 7, 2023 3:57 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Pay delivery workers what they deserve!

You don't often get email from helenbolton58@gmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits.

As a union member, from the Center for Reproductive Rights Union UAW Local 2110, I am writing to express my deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, I am concerned that the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn't make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,
Helen Bolton

From: Laura Hogan <lhogan@fastmail.com>
Sent: Friday, April 7, 2023 11:14 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Support for minimum wage rule for delivery workers

You don't often get email from lhogan@fastmail.com. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

I'm writing in support of a DCWP a rule that would grant delivery workers a minimum wage instead of being paid per delivery.

Not only is this a social justice measure (we really shouldn't be paying people by piecework, and delivery workers deserve a living wage), it's a safety measure that would benefit all New Yorkers, not just delivery workers. Being paid by the delivery gives delivery workers an incentive to cut traffic safety corners so that they can squeeze out extra deliveries. A minimum hourly wage would remove that incentive, thus making the streets safer for everyone.

I respectfully ask that you implement a minimum pay rule for delivery workers.

Yours very truly,
Laura Hogan
Jackson Heights

From: Abbie Harper <abbieharper@me.com>
Sent: Friday, April 7, 2023 6:06 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Delivery Workers Deserve Dignity
[You don't often get email from abbieharper@me.com. Learn why this is important at <https://aka.ms/LearnAboutSenderIdentification>]

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov<<mailto:phish@oti.nyc.gov>> as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

To whom it may concern,

Hello! My name is Abbie Harper and I live in Astoria Queens.

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

What are we even doing here - dignity is a human right. Please, these folks need a living wage TODAY.

Thank you,

Abbie Harper

Vilda Vera Mayuga
Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th floor New York, NY 10004 via:
email

April 07, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

As a New Yorkers, I write to express our deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for food delivery workers by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

I am concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored. It is also alarming that it appears the delay and the disregard for the initial findings of the workers’ minimum pay study, conducted by your agency, were the result of unreported lobbying by the food delivery app companies.

Food delivery workers appear to be treated differently than other workers who have experienced similar woes in NYC. The proposal to reduce workers’ pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. This is yet another example of DCWP treating food delivery workers differently, less fairly, than other workers in NYC.

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

Ensuring that workers get paid a fair rate is an important tool to accomplish other transportation, livability, and socioeconomic goals. If workers have to fight for every dollar, we shall expect to continue seeing the poor rider behavior that has made our streets less safe since the proliferation of the app-based delivery services. We are all paying for the externalities of their business practices. It is the job of your department to protect us New Yorkers as consumers and the delivery workers as essential workers.

Sincerely,

Irene Figueroa Ortiz

BEFORE THE NEW YORK CITY DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER AND WORKER PROTECTION

Second Proposed Rule on Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers

Public Hearing: April 7, 2023

COMMENTS OF UBER TECHNOLOGIES, INC.

Josh Gold

3 World Trade Center
175 Greenwich Street
New York, NY 10001
Email: jgold@uber.com

INTRODUCTION

The New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (the “Department”) has published an amended rule to establish minimum payments for food delivery couriers (the “Second Proposed Rule”), updating a methodology originally set forth in, and responding to public comments on, a rule proposed in November 2022 (the “First Proposed Rule”). The Second Proposed Rule sets forth two methodologies by which app-based platforms can satisfy the requirements of the proposed minimum pay requirement: the “Standard Method” and the “Alternative Method.”

Uber continues to support reasonable protections for the couriers who deliver goods using Uber Eats and similar apps. But the Department has failed to adequately consider the impact of its proposed rule, or even turn over its modeling to commenters despite repeated requests. As New York courts have recognized, it is “of concern” when an agency relies on economic modeling in promulgating rules but fails to disclose that modeling to the public, as it provides an incomplete record for both the public and the courts to “evaluate the action taken . . . and whether such decision was rational.” ZEHN-NY LLC v. N.Y.C. Taxi & Limousine Comm’n, No. 159195/2019, 2019 WL 7067072, at *4-5 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Dec. 23, 2019). Nor has the Department adequately responded to serious criticisms of the First Proposed Rule, many of which continue to plague the Second Proposed Rule. Instituting the Second Proposed Rule would result in upheaval of the existing food delivery ecosystem, presenting significant risks for the restaurant industry, couriers, apps, and consumers, and likely force apps to engage in “gating & force offline”—i.e., limiting how and when existing couriers can access their platform based on certain criteria—which will in turn drastically reduce courier earning opportunities, flexibility, and choice.

Moreover, there are multiple, serious problems with the Department’s selected methods for implementing its minimum pay rate. Fundamental is the Department’s decision that couriers must be compensated for all time that they are logged on to apps, even if they are not actually available or intending to accept an offer. The Standard Method proposes to pay all couriers, in aggregate, for the total time all couriers are logged into the app. While the Alternative Method proposes the apps pay couriers only for their trip time using the hourly rate of the Standard Method and divided by a 60% utilization rate (which is equivalent to multiplying it by 1.67) to similarly purport to account for all time a courier is logged into the app. This means that for every 60 minutes a courier does deliveries, he or she gets an additional 40 minutes paid at the Standard Method’s minimum pay rate. But this calculation is based on an estimate of utilization rate that relies on data that does not account for how apps will react to the implementation of the minimum pay rate, and in any event is 45% higher than the 1.15 multiplier (based on an 87% utilization rate) that apps estimate using couriers’ actual working time.

There are a number of issues that the Department should take the necessary time to grapple with, and rectify, in order to achieve its goals of increasing courier payments without causing serious upheaval to the industry.

First, the Department's reliance on arbitrary assumptions has led to unreliable impact estimates that understate the adverse impacts of the Second Proposed Rule. These assumptions include, but are not limited to, the number of completed deliveries per hour that couriers will make, the elasticity between cost increases and demand, and the impact of the minimum pay rate on utilization rates or total trip length. These unfounded, and unexplained and unstated assumptions produce unreliable estimates of the impact of the Rule and even slight variations to the Department's assumptions lead to severe consequences including severe cost increases and reductions in demand of more than 20%, without even disclosing the impact on key metrics like total trip length, which likewise harms restaurants.

Moreover, the Department has failed to produce the model underlying the Second Proposed Rule, preventing restaurants, platforms, and couriers from fully understanding the significant changes to the industry that the Second Proposed Rule will cause. The model's projected outcomes are poorly explained and cannot be replicated, depriving parties from fully participating in the rulemaking process. What the Department has produced—just days before the April 7 public hearing—contains incomplete code underlying the First Proposed Rule, presented in an unnecessarily complicated fashion and without explanation or documentation. By failing to disclose its recent modeling and the inputs and outputs into its model, and given what it has produced is incomplete, the Department prevents the public, and courts, from evaluating whether the decision to promulgate the Second Proposed Rule was rational. Additionally, the Department's assumptions minimize the predicted adverse impacts of the Rule. The Department is gambling on the future of New York's restaurant industry. If those unsupported assumptions are incorrect, the adverse impacts of the Second Proposed Rule may be much larger than the Department suggests and may be devastating to couriers, customers, restaurants, and apps.

Second, the minimum pay rate under the Alternative Method depends on an arbitrary and inadequately explained utilization rate assumption of 60%. The data relied on to support that assumed figure does not reflect the impact of the Rule itself and is outdated. Moreover, the Department's 60% assumption completely ignores data from Relay—the app whose business model is most similar to how apps' models will change if the Second Proposed Rule is enacted. Any assumptions about what utilization rates will look like under the model for worker pay should appropriately account for the critical data from Relay. In fact, since Relay is the only app the Department sought data from that optimized for utilization during the period in which data was collected, the Department should rely solely on Relay's utilization rate.

Commenters previously explained to Uber that a 1.15 multiplier (representing an 87% utilization rate) better approximates the true working time of couriers and would therefore significantly reduce (or eliminate) the possibility that apps will be incentivized to use tools such as gating after the rule is implemented. The Department should adopt the proposed 1.15 pay multiplier, or, in the alternative, adopt something between that and the 60% utilization rate it has proposed (essentially a 1.67 multiplier) which will allow couriers to retain flexibility and not force apps to enforce extreme gating tactics.

Third, the Department should not mandate that apps use the Standard Method as a penalty to the extent a platform does not meet the utilization floor. The Second Proposed Rule allows apps to use the Alternative Method only if they maintain a 53% utilization rate on a payperiod (weekly) basis, thus penalizing apps that fall under this floor by mandating payments under the Standard Method. Instead of this penalty, the Department should amend the Rule to require an app that falls below the utilization rate floor to suspend giving new couriers access until the floor is achieved. This will protect existing and more tenured couriers from devaluing of the earning standard, encourage efficiency, and reduce the need for restricting existing couriers' access to work when and where they want.

Fourth, eligibility to use the Alternative Method should be determined based on a month-long assessment period, rather than the pay-period's one week basis. Given the high volatility of utilization rates throughout the week, a one week "lookback" period is unreasonable, administratively burdensome, and provides apps with little ability to manage this volatility of utilization rates, which may result in apps gating more than is necessary, to the detriment of couriers.

Fifth, the Standard Method and minimum pay rate are flawed in multiple ways. The requirement to pay couriers (in the aggregate) for all on-call time ignores the reality that couriers can decline offers at will (and make thorough use of this freedom) and threatens couriers' ability to do so if the apps are constrained to respond by gating or otherwise limiting access to couriers who reject trips. In fact, the Department's own study showed that while apps send couriers an offer every 4 minutes on average, couriers only accept an offer every 11 minutes – thus, turning down almost 3 offers before they choose to accept one. Proposing a method designed to restrict couriers' freedom directly conflicts with the New York City Council's policy choices that support courier flexibility, enabling couriers to set personalized maximum trip distances or restrict the bridges or tunnels they are willing to traverse. Further, the Minimum Pay Rate arbitrarily includes amounts for workers' compensation that the Department admits will not be used by couriers to purchase such insurance.

Sixth, the Department should implement the phase-in schedule as proposed originally in the First Proposed Rule (which starts at 75%) instead of using the aggressively accelerated phase-in schedule that starts at 90% of the full minimum pay rate. The Department has not explained why it made this change beyond generally referencing comments that complained the rulemaking implementation was too slow (and without acknowledging commenters who believed the phase-in proposal was too fast, or was appropriate). The Department should revert to the Commission's original phase-in schedule of 75%, 85%, and 100%, or, in the alternative, instead adopt a more reasonable schedule with rate increases representing 80%, 90%, and 100% of the minimum pay rate in 2023, 2024, and 2025, respectively. The potential harms of the Rule are too great to gamble on an immediate 90% starting point.

Seventh, the Department has failed to meaningfully respond to comments criticizing its use of unreliable survey data, further reflecting the arbitrary nature of its rulemaking process.

Eighth, the proposed recordkeeping requirements are invasive, confiscatory and burdensome for apps. Moreover, the Department has failed to articulate how these requirements serve the Department's calculation of minimum pay rates.

Finally, Uber reiterates and incorporates by reference the comments it has already submitted, and draws the Department's attention to previous issues that it has failed to adequately respond to.

BACKGROUND

The Second Proposed Rule allows for a "Standard Method" and an "Alternative Method." Under the Standard Method, apps must meet two separate requirements. First, under the "Individual Pay Requirement," apps must pay each worker an amount at least equal to that worker's total trip time during that week multiplied by the minimum pay rate ("MPR") set forth in the rule.¹ Second, each app's total payments to all delivery workers that use its app ("couriers") must equal the sum of all of their total trip time and on-call time during a pay period, multiplied by the minimum pay rate ("Aggregate Pay Requirement").² The Second Proposed Rule does not mandate how Aggregate Pay is paid out and thus leaves Apps discretion to determine which couriers receive money for on-call time and in what amount, so long as the total amount required is transferred.

Standard Method:

$$(1) \text{ Weekly Pay Per Courier} = \text{Minimum Pay Rule} \times \text{Courier's Total Trip Time}$$

&

$$(2) \text{ Weekly Pay (Aggregate)} = \text{Minimum Pay Rule} \times \left(\frac{\text{All Couriers' Total Trip Time} + \text{On-Call Time}}{\text{On-Call Time}} \right)$$

Under the Alternative Method, apps must pay each worker an amount at least equal to that workers' total trip time multiplied by the alternative minimum pay rate—calculated by dividing the MPR by 60%. The 60% figure is what the Department contends is a reflection of the average utilization rate among Uber Eats, Grubhub, and DoorDash from January 2021 through June 2022.

1

Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 4.

2

Id. As defined in the Second Proposed Rule, “trip time” means “the span of time between the moment a food delivery worker accepts an offer from a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service to perform a trip with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City, or receives an assignment to perform such a trip, through the moment such a trip is completed or canceled,” and “on-call time” means “the time a food delivery worker is connected to a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service’s electronic system for arranging or monitoring trips in a status where the food delivery worker is available to receive or accept trip offers or assignments with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City and excludes all trip time.” Id. § 7-803(a)(4), (7).

As of April 2024, an app may only apply the Alternative Method if it has a utilization rate (or “UR”) of at least 53% for the week-long pay period in which the method is applied. The Department states that it bases this 53% floor by subtracting the “standard deviation of 7%” that the “median app” had in its weekly utilization rate from the 60% average.³

Alternative Method:

$$\text{Weekly Pay Per Courier, if UR} \geq 53\% = \left(\frac{\text{Minimum Pay Rule}}{60\%} \right) \times \text{Courier's Total Trip Time}$$

I. The Department’s Impact Estimates Are Unreliable

The Department relies on a number of arbitrary and cherry-picked assumptions in the Second Proposed Rule that are unsupported and understate the adverse impacts it will have on merchants and consumers. This includes, but is not limited to, assumptions about the number of deliveries per hour that couriers will make following implementation of the rule, costs to consumers, impacts on demand, and utilization rates. These unfounded and unexplained assumptions produce unreliable estimates of the impact the Second Proposed Rule will have.

As an initial matter, the Department has failed to produce the model underlying the Second Proposed Rule and the Department’s decision-making. Uber first requested this model under the Freedom of Information Law over four months ago.⁴ The Department failed to produce the model and other requested materials in the original comment period, depriving commenters of the opportunity to verify and meaningfully comment on the Department’s expectations of the impact of the Rule on the industry. Uber recently reiterated its request for these materials as they relate to the Second Proposed Rule.⁵ The Department finally produced an incomplete form of its modeling on April 3, 2023—just days before the Department’s public hearing on the Second Proposed Rule. However, the files it produced contain code written in the language “R” and lack any explanation or documentation. Moreover, the documents all seem to relate to the First Proposed Rule, as the files are dated October 2022 and use the previous pay rates.

³ Id. at 12.

⁴ Ex. 2, FOIL Request (Nov. 29, 2022).

⁵ Ex. 3, FOIL Request (Mar. 24, 2023).

Regardless, this appears to be an incomplete collection of the calculations underlying the Report and does not include numerous other categories of documents requested by Uber. Notwithstanding those requests, the Department unilaterally extended its deadline to respond to Uber’s FOIL request to June 30, 2023, “due to the volume and complexity of records” that are potentially responsive.⁶ Given the volume of remaining documents the Department has not produced regarding the First Proposed Rule, let alone the production of no documents in response to Uber’s additional FOIL request for documents relating to the Second Proposed Rule, the Department has deprived commenters of the ability to meaningfully comment on its modeling and the impact of the minimum pay rate.

The Department’s statement that it “reviewed its impact model and assumptions in light of criticisms raised in comments but found that no changes were warranted”⁷ is ipse dixit. This falls flat when no commenters were able to actually critique the model itself, leaving merchants, platforms, and couriers unable to fully understand, comment on, or even verify the significant changes to the industry that the Department’s Rule will cause. Moreover, as New York courts have recognized, failing to provide the modeling “relied on” in promulgating a rule leaves

6

Ex. 4, Email from Records NYC to K. Dunn (Apr. 3, 2023). Delaying production of the requested key materials for six months is certainly not “reasonable under the circumstances of the request” as required by New York law, N.Y. Pub. Officers L. § 89(a)(3), particularly given the coming vote on the proposed rule. And the Department’s reasoning is backwards; the more “voluminous” and “complex” the Department’s modeling and assumptions are, the more the Department needs to disclose them to the public sufficiently in advance of passing a rule with such sweeping risks.

7

Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 15. courts without “a record to evaluate the actions taken by the [Department] and whether such decision was rational.” ZEHN-NY, 2019 WL 7067072, at *4-5.

Moreover, the assumptions the Department does make are arbitrary, unfounded, and unsubstantiated. For instance, to model the Second Proposed Rule, the Department assumes that apps will achieve a 60% utilization rate “consistent with the incentives under the alternative method.”⁸ The Department does not set forth a basis for this assumption and no such basis is apparent. Moreover, if apps do not meet the 60% utilization rate figure that the Department assumes, the impact estimates are in fact overstated in terms of courier earnings, spending on app delivery, and total deliveries.

The Department has also been inconsistent in its calculations, assumptions, and projections of deliveries per hour. The Department published a purported study concurrently with the First Proposed Rule titled, “A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC” (the “Report”). In the Report, the Department published a table showing the average courier deliveries per hour for the fourth quarter of 2021 based on different modes of transportation, the weighted average (based on the percentage of deliveries) of which is equal to 1.70 deliveries per hour.⁹ Yet in discussing the model measuring the impact of the minimum pay rate, the Department stated that current courier deliveries per hour is 1.63—with no explanation as to why these figures were different.¹⁰ Additionally, the Department initially assumed in its model measuring the impact of the minimum pay rate that courier deliveries per hour will increase to 2.50.¹¹ It also stated that it “projected [a] 51% increase in deliveries per hour,”¹² which (using the

8

Id. at 16.

9

Ex. 5, Report at 14, Table 3.

10

See id. at 34.

11 Id.

12

Id. at 35.

1.63 rate as a base) would be 2.45 deliveries per hour, not 2.50. Nor does the Department explain how it determined its 51% projected increase, simply stating that it expects that “the less efficient apps will increase . . . but not fully match the highest rate of deliveries per hour the Department has observed for an app.”¹³

Now, in the Second Proposed Rule, the Department’s projected outcomes assume that apps will average 1.94 deliveries per hour.¹⁴ But it has not explained how it determined this figure, or why it differs from the 2.50 assumption used in the Report and the First Proposed Rule, or how the increases will be achieved—such as in what part of the increase is caused by reducing waiting time and what amount of the increased is caused by limiting trip length, to the detriment of restaurants and consumers.

The deliveries per hour figure, which the Department has changed numerous times without explanation, is critical. The number of deliveries per hour that occur will determine the incremental costs of deliveries that will be passed on to consumers, and thus directly impacts how much the increased fees will decrease merchant orders and revenues. The Department already assumes significant loss of merchant orders and revenues, and in fact the impacts may be even greater, but the public cannot assess that without an explanation of how the Department derived these figures or the model. If the Department's unsupported predictions are incorrect, the impact on consumer costs and demands may be devastating.

In fact, Table 3 from the Second Proposed Rule presents a number of questions and cannot be replicated based on the limited information that has been disclosed. For instance, the Department has not explained how it determined that couriers would earn $23.56 per hour on

¹³

Id. at 34.

¹⁴

Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 16.

average when it expects three companies to operate under the Alternative Method and one company to operate under the Standard Method. It also entirely omits the Department's calculations for the years 2023 and 2024, a time period during which the minimum pay rate will be implemented and consumers, restaurants, and couriers will be required to adapt to it. This type of rulemaking in the dark flies in the face of the public notice and comment system, depriving participants and affected parties from fully participating in the rulemaking process.

Additionally, the Department has not even attempted to address previous comments from apps and others regarding the Proposed Rule's impacts on demand, costs per trip, and total trip length, or its dependence on flawed survey data. For instance, Uber previously explained the flaws in the Department's assumption that deliveries would increase from 1.63 per hour to 2.50 per hour, despite acknowledging that demand may go down by 15.6% due to an increase in costs.¹⁵

Following this critique, the Department lowered its assumption to apps averaging 1.94 deliveries per hour, as discussed above, but did not explain why it did so, how it got that figure, or if its reduction was in response to Uber's comment or something else.¹⁶

Even if the Department were correct in making this assumption, it ignores the reality that deliveries would increase at a much greater rate if not for the policies imposed via the rulemaking. Simply taking one previously unjustified assumption (increases in deliveries to 2.50 per hour) and replacing it with another unjustified assumption (increases in deliveries to only 1.94 per hour) does not reflect reasoned rulemaking, and in any event reflects the Department's failure to focus on what growth would have been in the absence of the rulemaking. Such arbitrary changes to an assumption in response to a critique does not reflect reasoned rulemaking.

¹⁵

Ex. 6, Uber's December 15, 2022 Comment at 2.

¹⁶

This difference is not explained by the Department's accounting of multi-apping either, as it determined that couriers will average 2.29 deliveries per hour after accounting for multi-apping. Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 16.

Nor did the Department even respond to Uber's comment that costs per trip will increase significantly, likely leading to greater reductions in orders placed with restaurants, if apps are unable to achieve a sustained average of 2.5, or 1.94, deliveries per hour.¹⁷ For instance, as Uber estimated at the time, if apps were only able to increase deliveries per hour to 2.05, demand would have been expected to drop by 22.0%.¹⁸ Yet faced with this information, the Department did not respond other than to say that it does not believe it needs to revise its assumptions.¹⁹ In fact, the Second Proposed Rule references demand only twice. When faced with this evidence that the drop in demand may be greater than estimated and have drastic consequences, the Department instead chose to hide their findings. Couriers, merchants, apps, consumers, and the courts are entitled under the law to understand the Department's explanation and reasoning, especially when the potential consequences are so significant.

The Second Proposed Rule contains the same risks. Even at the Department's arbitrary and unexplained assumptions of deliveries per hour at 1.94, and elasticity, cost per delivery would immediately increase by $4.91 in 2023, with apps facing a 14.8% reduction in demand, which harms restaurants.²⁰ These impacts would increase to $5.94 cost increases and a 17.9% reduction in demand by 2025, without even accounting for inflation adjustments. And the Department has not adequately considered or explained the ramifications if either of these critical assumptions is wrong, such as through a sensitivity analysis. For instance, if the Department’s arbitrary assumptions are correct except productivity stays at current levels, the immediate cost increase in 2023 would be $6.67 per delivery, resulting in an over 20% decrease in orders.

¹⁷

Ex. 6, Uber’s December 15, 2022 Comment at 2-3.

¹⁸

Id. at 3.

¹⁹

See Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 15.

²⁰

At a utilization rate of 60%, the Standard and Alternative Methods have identical impacts.

Impact of Pay Per Trip Requirement Under the Standard and Alternative Method¹ (utilization rate of 60%, elasticity of 1)
	2023 ($17.76 p/h)		2024 ($18.96 p/h)		2025 ($19.96 p/h)
Productivity (Deliveries Per Hour)	Added Cost Per Delivery	% Δ in Orders	Added Cost Per Delivery	% Δ in Orders	Added Cost Per Delivery	% Δ in Orders
1.94*	$4.91	-14.8%	$5.42	-16.4%	$5.94	-17.9%
1.87	$5.26	-15.9%	$5.79	-17.5%	$6.32	-19.1%
1.81	$5.58	-16.8%	$6.13	-18.5%	$6.68	-20.2%
1.75	$5.92	-17.9%	$6.49	-19.6%	$7.06	-21.3%
1.69	$6.28	-19.0%	$6.87	-20.8%	$7.46	-22.5%
1.63	$6.67	-20.2%	$7.28	-22.0%	$7.90	-23.9%

¹ * 1.94 deliveries per hour is the Department’s productivity assumption for apps from the Second Proposed Rule.  1.63 deliveries per hour is the Department’s calculation of current productivity.

The impacts on demand would be even greater if the Department’s unexplained elasticity assumptions are incorrect as well. For example, if all of the Department’s assumptions are correct except that elasticity is in fact 1.5, demand would drop by 26.9% based on the 2025 rates, 9 percentage points greater than under the Department’s assumptions.

Impact of Pay Per Trip Requirement Under the Standard and Alternative Method (minimum pay of $19.96 p/h, utilization rate of 60%)
		Elasticity = 1	Elasticity = 1.5	Elasticity = 2
Productivity (Deliveries Per Hour)	Added Cost per Delivery	% Δ in Orders	% Δ in Orders	% Δ in Orders
1.94*	$5.94	-17.9%	-26.9%	-35.9%
1.87	$6.32	-19.1%	-28.7%	-38.2%
1.81	$6.68	-20.2%	-30.3%	-40.4%
1.75	$7.06	-21.3%	-32.0%	-42.6%
1.69	$7.46	-22.5%	-33.8%	-45.1%
1.63	$7.90	-23.9%	-35.8%	-47.7%

Nor did the Department properly consider the impact of the MPR should apps fail to achieve the arbitrary assumption that they will reach 60% utilization. For instance, even if an app achieves a utilization rate of 56.5%, such that the alternative method is available to that app, but productivity does not change (for example, by having longer trips), apps would still see a $7.18 increase in delivery costs and would expect a 21.7% reduction in demand, which would harm restaurants.

Impact of Pay Per Trip Requirement Under the Alternative Method (minimum pay of $19.96 p/h, elasticity of 1)
		UR = 53.0%		UR = 56.5%		UR = 60.0%
Productivity (Deliveries Per Hour)	Added Cost Per Delivery	% Δ in Orders	Added Cost Per Delivery	% Δ in Orders	Added Cost Per Delivery	% Δ in Orders
1.94*	$4.74	-14.3%	$5.34	-16.1%	$5.94	-17.9%
1.87	$5.08	-15.3%	$5.70	-17.2%	$6.32	-19.1%
1.81	$5.39	-16.3%	$6.03	-18.2%	$6.68	-20.2%

1.75	$5.73	-17.3%	$6.39	-19.3%	$7.06	-21.3%
1.69	$6.08	-18.4%	$6.77	-20.5%	$7.46	-22.5%
1.63	$6.47	-19.5%	$7.18	-21.7%	$7.90	-23.9%

The Department’s failure to consider such an array of outcomes or adjust its models based on these factors reflects the arbitrary nature of its rulemaking process, and the risk it is imposing on New York restaurants. Just as importantly, the Department has not disclosed the impact on other key outputs under its modeling, including total trip length and distance which directly relate to courier preferences and flexibility, as well as merchant revenues.

In addition, the Department recognized “that app-based delivery is less costly to provide where there are high order volumes and short trip distances,” but the Department failed to analyze the effects of the minimum pay rate’s impact on total trip length.²² As the Department seemingly recognizes, the Second Proposed Rule provides a strong incentive to shorten total length in order to increase the amount of deliveries per hour and spread the increased costs per hour across multiple customers. To achieve this goal, apps will be forced to reduce the maximum delivery radius, thereby limiting consumer choice and shrinking the potential customer pool for restaurants. But the Department may have not even considered these harmful effects, but it has not disclosed its analysis or explained why they may be acceptable.

II. The Pay Rate Under the Alternative Method Is Arbitrary

Uber Eats welcomes the addition in the Second Proposed Rule of the Alternative Method, in that it provides for payment only for time spent on trip. However, the decision to set the alternative method rate at the MPR/.60 is arbitrary. The Department should reevaluate the Alternative Method Rate and calculate it by using a utilization figure of around 87%.

The Department provides its 60% utilization rate figure “reflects” the “average weekly utilization rate from January 2021 through June 30, 2022 for Uber Eats, Grubhub, and DoorDash, combined. This means that across this 18-month period, in the average week, workers at these apps were engaged in trip time 60% of the time and on-call time 40% of the time.” As a starting point, the Department's selection of 60% and its explanation are arbitrary and insufficient. The Department does not adequately explain why the time period it selected is appropriate, as opposed to a more recent period of data reflecting current trends, what the outcome would be during other options, or in what sense the “average week” was average.

The Department also in making its calculations excluded data from Relay. Relay is the app with the highest utilization, and thus its exclusion from the data set appears results

22

Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 16. oriented. And, Relay is the app whose business model may have more similarities to how the app’s model will change if the Rule is enacted, making the exclusion of Relay data arbitrary. Currently, Relay is the only app that directly compensates couriers for on-call time, as will be the case following implementation of the minimum pay rate, and engages in the extensive type of gating practices that could result following implementation of the minimum pay rate. Yet, the Department excluded Relay from its measurement of average utilization rates. In other words, the Department excluded from calculations, for purposes of setting rates in the future, the app behaving most like apps may have to behave like in the future. If anything, the Department should have only considered Relay in assessing apps’ future utilization given the expected changes in behavior. Thus, the Department has failed to adequately consider the impact of its rule and engaged in arbitrary rulemaking. The Department should have included data from Relay.

The Department’s use of a utilization rate of 60% to calculate the hourly rate under the Alternative Method is also arbitrary and flawed because it includes on-call time that should be excluded. Couriers, as independent contractors, are empowered to accept or reject trip offers based on personal preferences (or may simply have an app open for hours on end with no intention of completing any trips). The Department’s proposal fails to recognize courier prerogative to accept or reject trips, including based on whatever factors may motivate a courier at a particular moment in time. Because couriers’ freedom of choice reduces utilization rate for factors beyond the control of the platforms, making a minimum pay rate based on all on-call time is flawed.

The Alternative Method’s use of a multiplier on the standard MPR is similar in some ways at a very basic level to previous proposals submitted by Uber and other apps in response to the First Proposed Rule. Commenters proposed indexing to the time between completion of a trip and receipt of the next offer while not including the time between offers in “on-call time” if the courier rejects the latest offer, as well as excluding the time a courier is logged onto an app before their first delivery and after their last delivery, provided a more accurate representation of time for which couriers should be compensated.²³ In particular, Uber proposed that the Department use a 1.15 multiplier to the minimum pay rate for each trip (achieving the same effect as using an 87% utilization rate). Uber calculated this multiplier based on the average length of time that a courier waited before accepting an offer divided by the average trip duration.²⁴ This proposal accurately accounted for the fact that many couriers may be engaged in some other nondelivery activity, or simply exercising the freedom and choice couriers have, and which the City Council sought to expand with a package of laws that gave couriers more control and information about each delivery they take.

The Department rejected Uber’s and other recommendations, instead calculating the Alternative payment rate based on a utilization rate of 60%, which includes time when couriers are not accepting multiple offers. The Department appears to have based its decision on the view that couriers decline offers because apps are making low-paying offers.²⁵ In reality there are many reasons couriers reject trips (with no penalty to them)—including couriers being busy delivering for other apps, couriers not ready and willing to work in that moment, courier preferences about delivery distance and route,²⁶ market dynamics, and perhaps for no reason at all other than the courier's mood at the time. The Department did not ask couriers their reasons for rejecting trips in its survey, and thus lacks a complete understanding why couriers reject trips, let alone assume it is due to below-market offers.

23

Ex. 7, Uber's December 8, 2022 Comment.

24

Id. at 3.

25

See Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 12.

26

See N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 20-1521(a)(1) - (3).

The Department relies on reasoning that will no longer be applicable if the Rule is enacted. If the Rule takes effect, pay rates will be set at or above the level the Department determines and there will be no such thing as a "below market" offer.²⁷ To the extent the Rule is enacted and couriers continue to reject offers, the on-call time preceding those offers will not confer financial benefits to the apps, merchants, or consumers and is beyond the apps' control.

Further, calculating the Alternative Method Pay Rate based on historical utilization data from January 2021 through June 2022 is arbitrary because, as the Department recognizes, if the Rule is enacted apps will likely have to "condition future work opportunities on workers' performance during on-call time, for example by giving preference in platform access to workers who accept a certain proportion of trip offers."²⁸ The Second Proposed Rule's incentives to increase utilization, in effect, render the data relied on by the Department stale and irrelevant.

As Uber previously explained, a utilization rate of 87% better approximates the true working time of couriers, and is more appropriate for determining rates going forward.²⁹ Alternatively, if the Department believes (after a thorough explanation) that some adjustment from that proposal is warranted, the Department should adopt a middle ground rule using a utilization rate of 75%-80% instead of the Department's assumed average of 60% utilization rate.

III. The Department Should Not Mandate Payment Under the Standard Method As the Penalty To the Extent a Platform Does Not Meet the Utilization Floor.

The Department's Second Proposed Rule in effect allows apps to use the Alternative Method so long as they maintain a 53% utilization rate on a pay-period basis, and then

27

In addition, the data on which the Department relies for its projections will be wholly stale once the minimum payment rule is implemented. The rule will change the amount of time spent between offers and before offers not accepted and will impact the "multi-apping adjustment" factor used in the minimum pay rate calculations. The Department has failed to explain how these inputs will change as a result of the rule and has made no attempt to estimate the impact.

28

Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 12.

29

Ex. 7, Uber's December 8, 2022 Comment at 2-3.

penalizes them if their utilization falls below 53% in any pay period by mandating payments under the Standard Rate.³⁰ Apparently apps will determine if they have 53% utilization rate based on their proprietary data (which does not include data on multi-apping), hence without the benefit of any multi-apping adjustment.³¹ As the Department acknowledged in the Second Proposed Rule that adjustments for multi-apping are necessary given its prevalence, the Department needs to clarify how the apps can account for multi-apping when determining whether they meet the 53% utilization rate. Requiring the use of the Standard Method is a severe penalty for any app with utilization below 53% for short stretches of time, as it would require apps to pay the exorbitant MPR for all of the at least 47% "on call" time, and thus compel apps to "gate" and force offline couriers and/or reduce opportunities for couriers that reject offers or make other choices that reduce their utilization rates (as the Department recognizes). The Department's motivation for the utilization floor is that "[w]ithout this threshold, the increase in labor supply arising from higher pay could produce longer wait times for trip offers and pay per hour worked (including both oncall time and trip time) would therefore be less than intended."³² Thus, the Department should not mandate Standard Method compliance if the floor is not met in a pay period. Instead, the Department should amend the Rule to require an app that misses the floor to suspend new courier onboarding (limiting new labor supply) until the floor is achieved. In other words, to the extent

30

It is not clear exactly how this critical 53% figure was calculated. The Department purportedly arrived at this 53% floor based on the “median app[’s] . . . standard deviation of 7% in its weekly utilization rate (i.e., on average, its weekly utilization rate was 7% above or below its mean utilization rate for the period)” and subtracting that from the calculated average of 60%. It is unclear what exactly “median app” means in this context—which app was the “median”? And median based on what – utilization rate, deviation in utilization rate, total trip volume, or something else entirely? Also, as data from Relay is missing from the average of 60%, it probably also is missing from the 7% standard deviation. As noted above, the Department should have included data from Relay when calculating the standard deviation. Likewise, the Department does not explain how or why it determined one standard deviation was appropriate instead of two or three, for example (i.e., 14% or 21% below the average utilization rate). 31

When multi-apping is prevalent in on-call time but is not accounted for, apps’ utilization rates will look artificially depressed.

32

Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 12.

an app does not achieve the utilization floor in a pay period, that app would have to not allow new couriers to enter on-call status or receive trip offers, until its utilization met the floor for a pay period. This courier-focused proposal would protect the value of the Alternative Method, while also supporting existing couriers and avoiding the types of supply constraints that existing couriers oppose, like gating, forcing offline, or other impacts on courier choice.

IV. The Department Should Determine Alternative Method Eligibility Based On a Month-Long Assessment Period

As currently written, the Second Proposed Rule provides that a platform’s eligibility for the Alternative Method will be determined based on utilization each and every week long pay period. This short assessment period is both unreasonable and administratively burdensome for apps and the Department, and also detrimental to couriers. A short one week “lookback” period provides apps with little ability to manage the volatility of utilization rates throughout the week; apps will have to protect themselves against potential drops in utilization later in the week by gating and otherwise limiting courier platform access early in the week. This may result in apps gating more than necessary, to the detriment of couriers. Likewise, if use of the Standard or Alternative Method is assessed every pay period, pay method may change frequently, and couriers may receive different amounts and rates of pay on a weekly basis, interjecting excessive confusion. The Department can avoid this concern by setting a one month assessment period, whereby an app can use the Alternative Method for four consecutive pay periods, so long as its utilization rate exceeded the floor on average over the preceding month

(whether calendar month or four pay periods).

V. The Standard Method and Minimum Pay Rate Are Flawed

The MPR set forth for purposes of the Standard Method, and the Standard Method itself, are flawed. The Department should not set forth a method requiring payment for all “on call” time, and neither should it establish the MPR at the levels set.

First, for the reasons set forth above and in Uber’s earlier comments, the Standard Method’s requirement to pay couriers (in the aggregate) for all “on-call” time ignores the reality that couriers can decline offers at will, and they enjoy the freedom and flexibility to do so.

Second, the Department’s proposal contradicts the policy established by, and delegation given by, the City. Mandating payment for all on-call time stands in direct conflict with the City Council’s policy choices that support courier flexibility. New York City recently enacted an ordinance that enables each courier to set a personalized maximum trip distance, and to restrict the bridges or tunnels that courier is willing to traverse.³³ This policy choice comes with a clear, understandable trade-off—couriers can control a variety of parameters to limit the trips they choose to accept, but this self-limitation will result in fewer trip offers and fewer trips per hour. As we have previously explained, this combination of policy choices self-evidently results in more on-call time.³⁴ New York City law thus supports the same flexibility that couriers appreciate about independent contracting and have come to expect from Uber Eats and similar apps, and why they chose to work for these apps when they are gated out of other apps like Relay.

In terms of delegation, Local Law 115 asks the Department to merely consider the “on-call time and work hours of food delivery workers” in developing a minimum payment method for couriers.³⁵ But the Department’s proposal erases this distinction, premising its proposed

33

See, e.g., N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 20-1521(a)(1).

34

Ex. 8, Uber’s December 16, 2022 Comment § I.C.

35

Local Law 2021-115 § 20-1522(a)(3).

earning standard on the assumption that couriers should be paid for on-call time in the same way as they are paid for trip time. Moreover, given the City Council’s direction to support courier choice and flexibility (discussed above), paying couriers based on aggregate decisions lacks reason, nor has the Department provided one. By so acting in contravention of the authorizing statute, the Department is engaging in inappropriate ultra vires rulemaking.

Finally, the rate set as the MPR is arbitrary, for at least the reason that it includes amounts for workers’ compensation insurance, in addition to the time off and sick leave benefits that are already incorporated, that the Department acknowledges will not be used by couriers to acquire such insurance. The Department did not adequately respond to comments regarding its method for calculating the workers’ compensation component of the minimum pay rate. The Second Proposed Rule includes $1.68 per hour to compensate couriers for the absence of workers’ compensation coverage, but contains no mechanism nor requirement for couriers to actually use those funds to purchase insurance coverage or to cover injuries. The Department now concedes that couriers are unlikely to purchase workers’ compensation insurance, explicitly stating that “[t]he purpose of the workers’ compensation component is not to enable workers to purchase their own insurance.”³⁶

By including the additional workers’ compensation allowance into the minimum pay rate while acknowledging couriers won’t buy compensation insurance, the Department is arbitrarily awarding amounts with no basis. Despite previously providing multiple alternative proposals that would better address the workers’ compensation issue,³⁷ the Department has provided no explanation as to the reasons they were rejected or why its approach is superior.

36

Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 8.

37

Ex. 9, Uber's December 12, 2022 Comment at 5.

VI. The Department Should Delay the Phase-In Schedule

The Department now proposes an overly aggressive schedule which would phase in the pay increases for couriers starting at nearly the entire rate. Under the First Proposed Rule, the minimum pay rate was phased in over two years, with the rates in 2023, 2024, and 2025 representing 75%, 85%, and 100% of the full rate, respectively.³⁸ The Department now accelerates the phase-in to 90%, 95%, and 100% of the full rate over the same time period but has presented no justification for its decision to significantly accelerate the schedule.

The decision to accelerate the phase-in rate was purportedly made in response to certain commenters who believed the rate proposed by the First Proposed Rule was too low. But the Department does not explain why it made changes based on those comments or even identified or responded to contrary comments which had asserted the phase-in was too fast, or recognized that many comments did not make note of the previous phase-in rate, because it was perceived to be a reasonable rate (i.e., whether or why it agreed with the comments, and disagreed with the overwhelming majority of commenters who did not urge a faster phase-in rate). The brand new unjustified accelerated schedule is too aggressive and will significantly increase costs for apps at a time when inflation is trending downward.³⁹

The Department should instead revert to the original proposal, or if it believes (after a thorough explanation) that some adjustment from that original proposal is warranted, adopt a “middle ground” schedule, with rates in 2023, 2024, and 2025 representing 80%, 90%, and 100% of the full rate, respectively. This will address the concerns of commenters who felt the First

38

Ex. 10, First Proposed Rule at 5.

39

See, e.g., Monthly 12-Month Inflation Rate in the United States from February 2020 to February 2023, STATISTA, <https://www.statista.com/statistics/273418/unadjusted-monthly-inflation-rate-in-the-us> (last visited Mar. 20, 2023); Jeanna Smialek, Inflation is Slowing, Good News for American Consumers and the Fed, N.Y. TIMES (Jan. 12, 2023), <https://www.nytimes.com/2023/01/12/business/inflation-gas-discounts.html>.

Proposed Rule was too slow without causing an abrupt hike that might dramatically harm New York’s restaurants, consumers and couriers.

VII. The Department Should Not Base the Second Proposed Rule on Unreliable Survey Data

The Department has failed to meaningfully respond to comments criticizing its use of unreliable survey data. As previously explained, the Department’s “surveys were systematically biased and violated fundamental principles of survey science...and it would not be consistent with accepted survey science to rely upon their results for use in justifying the Proposed rule at issue here.”⁴⁰ But the Department does not meaningfully engage with this critique. Instead, without explanation, the Department simply declares that it has “reviewed the methodological critiques provided in the comments but was not persuaded that the survey is inappropriate for its applications within the Department’s expense calculations.”⁴¹ This ipse dixit response constitutes a failure to meaningfully respond to these issues and further reflects the arbitrary nature of its rulemaking process.

VIII. The Department’s Proposed Recordkeeping Requirements Remain Invasive, Unnecessary, and Inefficient

The Second Proposed Rule continues to require delivery platforms to keep and report information about the fees collected from consumers and merchants and other data that are not reasonably related to the administration of the Rule, which turns exclusively on the amount of time spent engaging with a food delivery platform (whether merely online or executing trips). The Department has failed to articulate how these recordkeeping requirements serve, or are consistent with, the Second Proposed Rule’s calculation of minimum courier payments. The Department

⁴⁰

Ex. 8, Uber's December 16, 2022 Comment, Ex. B at 3.

41

Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 9.

requests data unrelated to the payment standard, such as courier's cell phone model, and other items listed in Section 7-805 (d)(9)-(15):

- The number of consumers who received at least one delivery with a pickup or dropoff location in New York City;
- The number of completed deliveries with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
- The total amount charged to consumers for the food, beverage, or other goods on deliveries with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
- The fees charged to consumers on orders for delivery with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
- The subscription and membership fees charged to consumers in New York City;
- The number of merchants who prepared at least one order for delivery with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City; and
- The delivery fees, payment processing fees, and other fees charged to merchants on orders for delivery with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City, itemized by type.

As Uber has previously explained, the Department has no reasonable basis to increase burdensome recordkeeping/reporting demands around these data types as part of this minimum earnings rule because these data have no role in calculating minimum earnings, and invade into regulated entities' trade secret and proprietary information.⁴² The Department responded by asserting that these recordkeeping requirements "enable the Department to effectively monitor compliance with the minimum pay rule."⁴³ But the Department has not explained how these recordkeeping requirements relate to the administration of the rule. The Department should dispense with such ultra vires recordkeeping requirements as unnecessary,

42

Ex. 8, Uber's December 16, 2022 Comment § VI.

Ex. 1, Second Proposed Rule at 15.

wasteful, very costly to platforms, and inappropriately and unlawfully invasive into highly confidential business information.

IX. Uber Reiterates and Incorporates by Reference the Comments It Has Already Submitted

Uber reiterates its previous comments submitted to the Department in connection with its development of the Minimum Pay Rate and the First Proposed Rule and incorporates them by reference here.⁴⁴ In addition to the many issues with the Second Proposed Rule described above, these previous comments defined a number of other issues with the First Proposed Rule that also plague the Second Proposed Rule. Among other things, those comments explained that:

- The Proposed Rule should recognize that gratuities are and will continue to be substantial, as it has been culturally adopted in New York City's food and service industries, including in traditional food delivery⁴⁵;
- The Proposed Rule should consider the time and distance a courier spends delivering food over the course of a two-week period and apply the earnings standard over that period⁴⁶;
- The Department should consider information gathered from third-party delivery services, third-party courier services, and delivery workers directly employed by restaurants, recognizing that each is a part of the food-delivery industry⁴⁷;
- The Department should permit restaurants to absorb the costs of compliance with Department regulations, instead of forcing restaurants to pass those costs on to customers⁴⁸;
- The Proposed Rule will reduce service and harm underserved communities and local restaurants⁴⁹;

⁴⁴

Ex. 11, Uber's June 15, 2022 Submission; Ex. 7, Uber's December 8, 2022 Comment; Ex. 9, Uber's December 12, 2022 Comment; Ex. 6, Uber's December 15, 2022 Comment; Ex. 8, Uber's December 16, 2022 Comment.

⁴⁵

Ex. 11, Uber's June 15, 2022 Comment at 2.

⁴⁶

Id. at 3.

⁴⁷

Id. at 2.

48

Id. at 5.

49

Ex. 8, Uber’s December 16, 2022 § I.E.

- The Department should tie future adjustments to the minimum pay rate to changes to the New York City minimum wage, which purportedly serves as the foundation for this rule, rather than by imposing an inflation adjustment that has no analog in the minimum wage regime⁵⁰; and
- The Department should not require apps to pay couriers when there is fraud or misconduct, for example when couriers engage in “longhauling” or accept trips with no intention of completing them.⁵¹

Uber also underscores and amplifies the comments of the hundreds of couriers who have asked the Department not to force Uber to take away their freedom and flexibility, as the Second Proposed Rule would do.

CONCLUSION

Uber supports the protection of courier payments. But the minimum pay rate put forth in the Second Proposed Rule will shut out thousands of couriers from the industry and increase costs for consumers, restaurants, and apps. Based on the serious concerns detailed above and in Uber’s prior comments, it is imperative that the Department fully consider the impact of the Second Proposed Rule, and the issues raised herein, before taking any further action. Uber thanks the Department for the opportunity to submit these comments and looks forward to continuing to engage in productive dialogue toward an appropriate solution.

50

Id. § IV.B.

51

Id. § IV.C.

EXHIBIT 1

New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection

Notice of Public Hearing and Opportunity to Comment on Proposed Rules

What are we proposing? The Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (“DCWP” or “Department”) is proposing to add rules establishing methods for determining the minimum payments that must be made to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service, as required by New York City Administrative Code § 201522.

When and where is the hearing? DCWP will hold a public hearing on the proposed rule. The public hearing will take place at 11:00am on April 7. The public hearing will be accessible by phone and videoconference.

- To participate in the public hearing via phone, please dial 646-893-7101 o Meeting ID: 273 020 226 537 o Passcode: R3sJ2u
- To participate in the public hearing via videoconference, please follow the online link: <https://tinyurl.com/nhcp5t8d> o Meeting ID: 273 020 226 537 o Passcode: R3sJ2u

How do I comment on the proposed rules? Anyone can comment on the proposed rules by:

- Website. You can submit comments to DCWP through the NYC rules website at <http://rules.cityofnewyork.us>.
- Email. You can email comments to Rulecomments@dcwp.nyc.gov.
- By speaking at the hearing. Anyone who wants to comment on the proposed rule at the public hearing must sign up to speak. You can sign up before the hearing by calling (212) 436-0396. You can also sign up on the phone or videoconference before the hearing begins at 11:00am on Friday, April 7. You can speak for up to three minutes.

Is there a deadline to submit comments? Yes. You must submit any comments to the proposed rule on or before Friday, April 7.

What if I need assistance to participate in the hearing? You must tell DCWP’s External Affairs division if you need a reasonable accommodation of a disability at the hearing. You must tell us if you need a sign language interpreter. You may tell us by telephone at (212) 436-0210 or by email at Rulecomments@dcwp.nyc.gov. Advance notice is requested to allow sufficient time to arrange the accommodation. Please tell us by Friday, March 31.

Can I review the comments made on the proposed rules? You can review the comments made online on the proposed rules by going to the website at <http://rules.cityofnewyork.us/>. A few days after the hearing, all comments received by DCWP on the proposed rule will be made available to the public online at <http://www1.nyc.gov/site/dca/about/publichearings-comments.page>.

What authorizes DCWP to make this rule? Sections 1043 and 2203(f) of the New York City Charter and Sections 201506(a), 20-1507(c), and 20-1522(a)(3) and (d) of the New York City Administrative Code authorize the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection to make these proposed rules. The proposed rule was included in the agency’s regulatory agenda.

Where can I find DCWP’s rules? The Department’s rules are in Title 6 of the Rules of the City of New York.

What laws govern the rulemaking process? DCWP must meet the requirements of Section 1043 of the City Charter when creating or changing rules. This notice is made according to the requirements of Section 1043 of the City Charter.

Statement of Basis and Purpose of Proposed Rule

The Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (“DCWP” or “Department”) proposes these rules to implement Local Law 115 of 2021, which required DCWP to study the pay and working conditions of food delivery workers and, based on the results of its study, to establish a method for determining the minimum payments that third-party food delivery services and third-party courier services (together, “apps”) must pay to food delivery workers. See NYC Admin. Code § 20-1501 (defining “food delivery worker,” “third-party food delivery service,” and “third-party courier service”).

Background. Prior to the passage of Local Law 115 of 2021, there were no minimum earnings protections for food delivery workers who work for apps as independent contractors. The legislative record indicated that these workers faced low pay and high expenses. Local Law 115 of 2021 charged DCWP with studying this workforce and developing an appropriate minimum pay rate to ensure adequate compensation for these workers.

First Proposed Rule. To implement Local Law 115 of 2021, DCWP published a proposed rule in the City Record on November 16, 2022 (“First Proposed Rule”). The First Proposed Rule made the following amendments to Subchapter H, of Chapter 7 of Title 6 of the Rules of the City of New York:

- Section 7-801 added definitions of “on-call time”, “pay period”, and “trip time”;
- Section 7-805 added recordkeeping and reporting obligations for a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service;
- Section 7-806 clarified what constitutes “required” travel across a bridge or through a tunnel;
- Section 7-807 established that compensation must be calculated for each pay period; and
- Section 7-810 set minimum pay rates, the time periods for which such pay rates apply, and the inflation adjustments required for such pay rates.

Concurrently with the publication of the First Proposed Rule, DCWP published a report titled A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC (“Report”). Sections 1 through 4 of the Report discussed the Department’s sources, methods, and findings concerning the delivery industry and the working conditions of food delivery workers. (Report at 1-26.) Section 5 of the Report described the First Proposed Rule. (Report at 27-33.) Section 6 of the Report modeled the impacts of the First Proposed Rule on food delivery workers, apps, restaurants, and consumers. (Report at 34-36.)

The First Proposed Rule was the subject of a public hearing held on December 16, 2022. The Department received comments on the First Proposed Rule from food delivery workers, third-party food delivery services (Uber Eats, GrubHub, and DoorDash), a third-party courier service (Relay), worker advocates, transportation safety advocates, restaurants, researchers, elected officials, and members of the public, among others.

Second Proposed Rule. The Department made certain changes after consideration of comments received in response to the First Proposed Rule and is now proposing these revised proposed rules (“Second Proposed Rule”). Specifically, the Department is making the following changes from the First Proposed Rule:

- Section 7-801 retains the definitions of “on-call time,” “pay period,” and “trip time” from the First Proposed Rule and adds definitions of “cancellation,” “cancelled,” “internal identifier,” and “utilization rate.”
- Section 7-805 retains most recordkeeping and reporting obligations for a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service from the First Proposed Rule, but narrows the scope of apps’ reporting obligations and adds to apps’ recordkeeping requirement an obligation to maintain a food delivery worker’s taxpayer identification number and certain information about a food delivery worker’s phone.
- Section 7-806 retains the clarification of what constitutes “required” travel across a bridge or through a tunnel; from the First Proposed Rule and adjusts apps’ disclosure requirements to reflect changes to the minimum pay rate.

- Section 7-810: retains the inflation adjustment methodology from the First Proposed Rule, adjusts the minimum pay rate to reflect “multi-apping” and to incorporate the latest inflation data; renames the minimum pay method set forth in the First Proposed Rule “the standard method;” adds an alternative method for determining minimum pay; adjusts the effective date of implementation; and adjusts the phase-in schedule for the minimum pay rate.
- The Second Proposed Rule also corrects minor typographical errors in the First Proposed Rule and makes technical corrections to clarify certain text.

The “Standard Method” to Meet the Minimum Payment Requirement

The Second Proposed Rule retains the individual pay and aggregate pay requirements set forth in the First Proposed Rule for apps to determine the minimum payments they must make to food delivery workers each week. In the Second Proposed Rule these two requirements are referred to as the “standard method.” Under the standard method, an app’s payment to each delivery worker, individually, would have to meet or exceed the minimum pay rate multiplied by the sum of each individual worker’s own trip time during the week; and the app’s total payments to all its delivery workers, together, would have to meet or exceed the minimum pay rate multiplied by the sum of all workers’ total trip time and oncall time during the week.

The “Alternative Method” to Meet the Minimum Payment Requirement

After consideration of relevant comments, the Department has added an alternative option to the standard method. Under the alternative method, an app must pay each food delivery worker individually for trip time at no less than the alternative minimum pay rate. The alternative minimum pay rate is calculated by dividing the minimum pay rate by 60%. Under this method, food delivery workers have a right to higher pay for their trip time, but no additional right to compensation for their on-call time. The 60% figure reflects the proportion of time food delivery workers spend engaged in trips, known as the “utilization rate.” An app may choose the alternative method or the standard method, provided that after April 1, 2024, an app may only choose the alternative method if its food delivery workers, in aggregate, have a utilization rate of at least 53% (i.e., they spend at least 53% of their trip time and on-call time engaged in trips).

Table 1 summarizes the calculations the Department performed to develop the minimum pay rate under the First Proposed Rule and Second Proposed Rule.

Table 1. Minimum Pay Rate Calculations Under the First Proposed Rule and Second Proposed Rule ($)

	First Proposed Rule	Second Proposed Rule
Base Pay
Pay for Wages and Time Off	18.34	18.12
Base Pay Subtotal, less Adjustment for Medicare and Social Security Contributions
	1.52	1.50
Adjustment for Medicare and Social Security Contributions
Base Pay Subtotal x employer share of Medicare and Social Security contributions (7.65%)
	19.86	19.62
Base Pay Subtotal
Workers’ Compensation
Workers’ Compensation if App Delivery Workers were Employees Pay for Wages and Time Off x expected costs (7.84%)	1.44	1.42

	0.26	0.26
Adjustment for Medicare and Social Security Contributions Workers' Compensation Subtotal, less the employer and employee shares of Medicare and Social Security contributions (15.3%)
Workers' Compensation Subtotal	1.70	1.68
Pay such that after adjustment for Medicare and Social Security contributions (15.3%), app delivery workers receive the same value as the coverage they would receive if they were employees
<hr/>
Expense Component
Average Hourly Expenses of E-Bike Workers See Report at 18-20, 30-31	2.26	2.26
<hr/>
Total
Subtotal Sum of Base Pay Subtotal, Workers' Compensation Subtotal, and Average Hourly Expenses of E-Bike Workers	23.82	23.56
Adjustment for Multi-Apping Component Subtotal x multi-apping adjustment factor (1 - 0.8471) (applies to Second Proposed Rule only)	0.00	-3.60
Adjusted Total Sum of Subtotal and Adjustment for Multi-Apping	23.82	19.96

Notes: Adapted from Report at 31.

Table 2 summarizes the phase-in schedule under the First Proposed Rule and Second Proposed Rule.

Table 2. Minimum Pay Rate Under the First Proposed Rule and Second Proposed Rule, 2023-2025 ($)

	First Proposed Rule	Second Proposed Rule
2023	17.87	17.96
April 1, 2024	20.25	18.96
April 1, 2025	23.82	19.96

Notes: All values shown are prior to inflation adjustment. In the First Proposed Rule, the 2023 rate was scheduled to take effect January 1, 2023. In the Second Proposed Rule, the 2023 rate takes effect 30 days after adoption.

The following sections discuss key components of the Second Proposed Rule and summarize the Department's deliberations on comments received from the public on these components.

Base Pay Component

The Department made minor changes to the base pay component of the minimum pay rate in the Second Proposed Rule. The base pay component of the rate in the Second Proposed Rule is $19.62, a reduction of $0.24 from the original proposed $19.86.

The basis for the base pay component of the rate is similar in the First Proposed Rule and the Second Proposed Rule. For both the First Proposed Rule and Second Proposed Rule, the Department derived the base pay component of the rate from the New York City Taxi and Limousine Commission's (TLC) minimum per-minute payment rate for high-volume for-hire vehicle service drivers ("high-volume drivers"), which TLC developed as the independent contractor equivalent of the 2019 minimum wage. (Report at 21.) When first implemented, this rate was $17.22 per hour. (Id.) TLC has updated the $17.22 rate for inflation several times since. (Id.) In proposed rules published on September 6, 2022, TLC proposed an inflation-adjusted rate of $19.86 per hour, which reflected inflation data through June 2022. (Id.; Proposed 35 RCNY § 59D-22(a)(2) and (b)(1).) For parity, the Department also used $19.86 as the base pay component in its First Proposed Rule. (Report at 29.) Since then, TLC has implemented a $19.62 per hour rate for "high-volume drivers," reflecting the December price level. For parity, the Department is also using $19.62 as the base pay component in its Second Proposed Rule.

Comments:

Several commenters, including members of the public, elected officials, worker advocacy groups, bicycle safety advocates, and food delivery workers, expressed support for the base pay component, noting that as independent contractors these workers do not receive a minimum wage or other employee benefits. Many workers described low pay they currently earn working for apps and their need for a higher wage to survive in New York City and support their families. Several described the impacts of recent inflation on their ability to earn a living working for apps.

DoorDash, Uber Eats, Grubhub, and tech industry advocates commented that the base pay component of the rate should factor in workers' tip earnings or should be based on the hourly pay of tipped workers. Uber Eats contended that to the extent an earnings standard is based on the minimum wage equivalent, it should not be adjusted for inflation and should instead be adjusted based on future increases in the minimum wage. Uber Eats also contended that delivery workers should be paid less than high-volume drivers, citing differences between the two occupations, including differences between transporting people and food, licensure requirements, expenses, and skillsets.

Conversely, workers, worker advocates, and industry researchers commented that tips are unreliable, and customers may decrease tips or not tip at all due to factors outside workers' control. Some worker comments described situations in which customers revoked promised tips after receiving a delivery, leaving the worker with very low compensation for the trip.

Uber Eats, DoorDash, Grubhub, and tech industry advocates commented that the base pay rate should take into consideration the flexibility of food delivery workers' work arrangement and would appropriately be lower than the minimum wage applicable to employees. Some workers, while expressing a desire for higher pay, also described why they value the flexibility of gig work for apps. Conversely, industry researchers and other workers commented that the minimum pay rate should be increased to account for the unique stresses for food delivery workers who are managed by algorithms, including unpredictable availability of work, changing compensation levels, and management decisions based on customer ratings, acceptance rates, and delivery speeds.

Response:

The Department is not incorporating the recommendation to base the rate on the hourly pay of tipped workers for reasons set forth in the Report, which are summarized here. (Report at 29-30.) First, Section 20-1522(b) of the Minimum Pay Law states that "any minimum payment rate determined by the department pursuant to this section shall not include gratuities." Using a tip credit rate as a base rate would conflict with the letter and spirit of that legal requirement. (Id.) Second, under New York State law, the tip credit is a special permission afforded to a subset of restaurants, not a general exception for delivery as an occupation. (Id.) Currently, the tip credit under New York State law does not apply to delivery workers employed by fast food restaurants or to delivery services in the convenience and grocery sectors that use an employee model and would not apply if the restaurant apps were to classify their workers as employees. (Id.) Finally, tips are an unreliable form of income and apps may respond to these rules by reducing or removing tipping features on their platforms. (Report at 23, 36.)

The Department is not incorporating the recommendation to index the minimum pay rate to future changes in the New York State minimum wage. The base pay rate builds on the City's existing determination of appropriate compensation for low-wage independent contractors and sets a clear and consistent standard for independent contractors working for apps in related industries. Further, the real value of the New York State minimum wage of $15 has declined significantly due to inflation since it went into effect in December 2018, and it is not possible to predict when or whether the State Legislature will increase it. If the New York State minimum wage were to increase such that the food delivery worker minimum pay rate would no longer approximate the total compensation app-based restaurant delivery workers would receive if classified as employees, the Department can revisit the minimum pay rate in future rulemaking at that time.

The Department is not incorporating the recommendation to set a lower rate due to the flexibility of app-based delivery work and is also not incorporating the recommendation to set a higher rate due to the unique stresses delivery workers face. As comments from apps, workers, and industry researchers demonstrate, app delivery can have unique benefits and challenges, from flexibility to instability. Each worker may subjectively value these characteristics of the work differently.

Lastly, the Department is not incorporating Uber Eats' recommendation to set a base pay component that differs from the per-minute rate guaranteed to high-volume drivers. The differences Uber Eats noted in expenses between the two workforces is not relevant to this base pay component of the rate; such differences are reflected in the expense component of the rates applicable to each workforce. The Department determined that the other differences Uber Eats cited do not support setting a different base pay rate between food delivery workers and high-volume drivers. There are close similarities between the two workforces, in that both are independent contractors performing on-demand piece work on mobile applications involving the transport of goods or persons short distances within New York City, and both receive customer tips. Further, as set forth in the Report, the TLC's per-minute rate reflects a determination about the minimum amount that should be paid for an hour of a worker's labor, regardless of occupation; differences in Medicare and Social Security contribution requirements between independent contractors and employees; and average levels of paid leave received by workers in a U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics occupational category that includes both app delivery workers and high-volume drivers (production, transportation, and material moving employees). (Report at 29.) None of these factors distinguish delivery workers from high-volume drivers.

Workers' Compensation Component

The Department made no changes to its method for calculating the workers' compensation component of the rate in the Second Proposed Rule. However, in both the First Proposed Rule and Second Proposed Rule the Department calculates the workers' compensation component as a function of the base rate. (see Table 1.) As a result, the change in the base pay component from $19.86 in the First Proposed Rule to $19.62 in the Second Proposed Rule produces a $0.02 reduction to the workers' compensation component from $1.70 to $1.68.

The purpose of the workers' compensation component is to compensate for expected income loss and medical expenses associated with on-the-job injuries that food delivery workers experience. (Report at 30.) Although food delivery workers experience high rates of injury on the job, they do not have access to traditional workers' compensation, as workers classified as employees in New York State do. Unlike high-volume drivers, who have the Black Car Fund, food delivery workers also do not have access to an alternative system for medical care and wage replacement for on-the-job injuries. (Id.) DCWP calculated the workers' compensation component of $1.68 to provide for comparability to the actuarial value of the workers' compensation coverage received by employed restaurant delivery workers in New York State (7.84% of payroll). The workers' compensation component also includes an adjustment to reflect differences in how federal Medicare and Social Security contributions apply to independent contractor income and employee benefits (i.e., independent contractors pay 15.3% in contributions to Medicare and Social Security on their income, while an employee does not make any contributions to Medicare and Social Security on the value of benefits like workers' compensation). This ensures that app delivery workers receive the same value, despite a less advantageous tax treatment. (Id.) The components of this adjustment are detailed in Table 1, above.

Comments:

Comments from Uber Eats, DoorDash, tech industry advocates, and business advocates stated that the minimum pay rate should not include a workers' compensation component. These commenters contended that it was unlikely workers would purchase workers' compensation coverage and recommended that the Department consider alternatives, such as exempting apps that provide occupational accident insurance, requiring apps to offer occupational accident insurance, or working with New York State to establish a compensation fund for delivery workers, similar to the Black Car Fund that exists for rideshare drivers. DoorDash stated that it offers an occupational accident policy that covers medical expenses and disability payments for some occupational injuries and may stop doing so if it is required to pay the workers' compensation component.

Other commenters, including elected officials and food delivery workers, stated that the workers' compensation component of $1.68 should be higher, because $1.68 is inadequate to compensate workers for the frequent workplace injuries they experience and the attendant out-of-pocket medical costs. Comments from food delivery workers and their family members described the dangers of delivery work, such as traffic accidents, robberies, assaults, and severe weather conditions. Some described suffering injuries on-the-job and incurring medical expenses and lost work time for which they received no compensation due to the lack of workers' compensation coverage and stated that apps' insurance coverage was burdensome or impossible to access.

Response:

After considering these comments, the Department determined that retaining the workers' compensation component is necessary to compensate workers for lost income and out-of-pocket medical expenses associated with job-related injuries. Food delivery workers' rates of injury and work-loss time are high. (Report at 24-26.) Workers report substantial out-of-pocket medical expenses associated with work related injuries that are not reimbursed by the apps. (Report at 26.) Comments show that three of the four largest apps offer no occupational injury or accident coverage. The occupational injury policy offered by DoorDash does not provide coverage for injuries sustained during on-call time; such injuries can and do occur before a worker accepts a trip or after dropping off a delivery. Its policy also contains coverage exclusions that make benefits difficult or impossible for injured workers to access, and includes coverage terms that are less generous than the requirements of the New York State workers' compensation system.

The purpose of the workers' compensation component is not to enable workers to purchase their own insurance, as some commenters asserted. Rather, the purpose is to compensate food delivery workers for their exclusion from the workers' compensation benefits available to most workers. Were food delivery workers to gain a legal right to a benefit equivalent to the workers' compensation coverage currently available to employees, the Department may choose to revisit the workers' compensation component at that time. The existing occupational injury coverage offered by DoorDash is inadequate to warrant exemption from the workers' compensation component. However, in a future rulemaking the Department may consider providing for an exemption for policies that meet minimum coverage and accessibility criteria.

In response to comments that $1.68 is inadequate, the Department acknowledges that its approach only partially compensates workers for injuries. The workers' compensation benefit provided to employees in New York State also does not fully replace workers' lost income or compensate for pain and suffering. Because the Department derived the workers' compensation component to provide for equivalence with the benefits provided to employees, the minimum pay rate component also reflects these limitations. It is also possible that given food delivery workers' exceptionally poor safety conditions (Report at 25), they may be at higher risk than the population of insured employees from which the Department derived the workers' compensation component. However, the detailed data necessary to perform an actuarial analysis of food delivery workers' work-related injury and illness costs does not exist. For this reason, the Department chose to base the component on the claims experience of the closest-comparable insured population within the New York State workers' compensation system, despite this limitation. See Report at 22 (referring to employed delivery workers, who belong to rate class 7380, which includes commercial drivers, chauffeurs, and their helpers).

Expense Component

The Department made no changes to the $2.26 expense component of the rate in the Second Proposed Rule. The purpose of the expense component is to compensate food delivery workers for necessary expenses they incur to perform delivery work. (Report at 18-20; 30-31). The expense component of $2.26 is DCWP's estimate of average hourly expenses for workers who perform deliveries using an electric bicycle ("e-bike"), less the cost of traffic or parking tickets, which are not deductible under IRS rules.

Comments:

DoorDash, Uber Eats, their experts, and some tech industry advocates commented that the expense component of the rate is too high, arguing that the Department relied on a biased survey, did not account for use of equipment and services outside of delivery for restaurant apps, and did not account for tax deductibility of expenses. Some of these commenters proposed alternatives for the expense component of the minimum pay rate.

Several other commenters, including members of the public, elected officials, worker advocacy groups, bicycle safety advocates, and food delivery workers, commented that the $2.26 expense component of the rate is too low, and recommended increasing it by $5.00 to $7.26 per hour. These commenters expressed concern that DCWP may not have adequately considered workers' expenses for items such as GPS trackers, monthly subscriptions for GPS services, battery replacements, mopeds, gas, weather-proof clothing, safety gear, incidents of theft, insurance, registration, or anti-theft alarm devices.

Response:

After considering apps' and workers' comments and proposed alternatives, DCWP determined that $2.26 is appropriate for the expense component of the rate.

First, DCWP's expense measurement is methodologically sound. As part of its expense measurement, DCWP fielded a survey of all workers who accepted an offer to perform a delivery in NYC between October 1 and December 31, 2021 for Uber Eats, Grubhub, DoorDash, Relay, Chowbus, or HungryPanda, except a small number of workers whose contact information was missing or suppressed. (Report at 2.) In its fielding and analysis of this survey, the Department used appropriate controls to authenticate responses, exclude submissions from inattentive or unreliable respondents, and address possible non-response bias. (Report at 2-5.) The 8,000 responses the Department used from the survey represent a response rate of 6.5%, which is several times the rate obtained by leading academic researchers conducting surveys of low-wage work. (Report at 3.) The Department then validated these survey responses against matched administrative records from the apps. In consideration of the foregoing, the Department reviewed the methodological critiques provided in comments but was not persuaded that the survey is inappropriate for its applications within the Department's expense calculations. Specifically, the Department used the survey to measure the frequency with which workers experience loss or theft of their e-bike, purchase replacement batteries or e-bike accessories, and buy and trade-in phones. The Department separately gathered market prices for relevant equipment from retailers and other independent sources, including for the specific makes and models of the phones workers reported buying and selling, and did not use workers' recollections of the dollar amounts they spent on any item. (Report at 5.) Further, the Department's methods for estimating e-bike depreciation, maintenance, and data plan costs did not draw on survey responses at all. To confirm that the Department's estimates of e-bike-related expenses is not overstated, the Department, in a supplemental analysis, found that e-bike rentals and sales in promotions marketed by Uber Eats and DoorDash are significantly more expensive than the costs reflected in the expense component of the minimum pay rate. Additionally, the Second Proposed Rule amends apps' recordkeeping requirements to include certain information about the phones food delivery workers use. This information will enable the Department to efficiently measure phone expenses without reliance on a survey should it choose to reestimate expenses for use in future rulemaking.

Second, DCWP's method appropriately reflects the tax deductibility of expenses. The minimum pay method is designed such that a worker who deducts expenses from taxable income will be taxed on their earnings net of expenses.

Third, DCWP's methodology for accounting for the use of equipment and services outside of app delivery is sound. With respect to phone expenses, the Department assumes that workers' data plans, as well as all phones workers report purchasing for work with apps, are also used for personal use at typical levels, and allocates cost proportionate to use. Under this method, the expense component of the rate reflects only 37% of total phone costs. (Report at 19.) This is consistent with IRS principles. With respect to e-bikes and e-bike accessories, the Department attributes the entire cost to app delivery. Seventy percent of e-bike workers report app delivery as their only job, and another 7% as their main job. (Report at 15.) This sets a low upper limit on the amount of use such equipment could be put towards other purposes. Further, DCWP determined that e-bike and e-bike accessory costs should be fully covered by the minimum pay rate, and that the economies of scope some workers achieve by applying their equipment to additional uses should accrue to their benefit.

Fourth, the Department is not incorporating the recommendation to increase the expense component of the rate by $5.00, as some commenters recommended. DCWP considered all appropriate expenses for the equipment, services, and accessories necessary to perform delivery on e-bikes, which is the most common and economical means of making most deliveries. (Report at 2-5; 18-20; 30-31.) However, the Department recognizes that some workers, such as car drivers, have higher expenses.

Lastly, the Department notes that costs may change over time in ways that are difficult to predict in advance. For instance, workers may respond to higher pay by purchasing different equipment. Average hours may also change, which will impact average hourly costs. The market for e-bikes, batteries, and related technologies is also evolving rapidly, as is the regulation of these goods, and for this reason there is no guarantee that the mix of items available to workers will remain consistent over time. For these reasons, the Department may consider reassessing expenses after an appropriate interval.

Multi-Apping

In response to comments, and in light of changes to the basis of pay discussed below, in the Second Proposed Rule the Department is reducing the minimum pay rate to account for the time workers spend connected to multiple apps ("multiapping").

Comments:

Several commenters, including Grubhub, Uber Eats, DoorDash, tech industry advocates, and business advocates contended that because workers spend a significant amount of time simultaneously engaged in trip time or on-call time on multiple apps, the Department's methodology produces total pay per hour that is above the level intended under the rule. These commenters recommended that the Department incorporate into its minimum pay methodology an adjustment to account for this practice of "multi-apping." This adjustment is included in Table 1, above.

Response:

The Department is incorporating this recommendation. Under the First Proposed Rule framework, apps would have reduced the proportion of time that workers spent on-call. (Report at 32.) This would have also led to less multi-apping, as workers who were more engaged during their time on an app would have less need and ability to simultaneously work for another app. However, under the Second Proposed Rule, if apps use the alternative method for determining minimum pay, this may result in continued high levels of multi-apping. This is because an app using the alternative method pays its workers the same amount regardless of how much time they spend on-call. For this reason, an adjustment to the rate for multi-apping is appropriate. The study found that in the fourth quarter of 2021 workers spent an average of 17.7% of their combined trip time and on-call time logged into multiple apps simultaneously (Report at 5), that during this time they were connected to 2.02 apps, on average, and that multi-apping occurred at all apps. Department assumes that Uber Eats, Grubhub, and DoorDash, which do not currently pay workers for on-call time, will choose the alternative method, and that Relay, which already pays workers for on-call time, will choose the standard method. The Second Proposed Rule therefore applies a multi-apping adjustment factor of 0.8471 in its calculation of the minimum pay rate for both the alternative and standard methods. This figure represents the unduplicated work hours of food delivery workers (i.e., the time a food delivery worker spends engaged in on-call time or trip time with at least one app), divided by the total recorded hours of food delivery workers (i.e., the sum of a food delivery workers' on-call time and trip time at each of the apps they work for).

The calculation is as follows: $\frac{1}{(1-0.177)+(2.02 \times 0.177)} = 0.8471$.

The fourth quarter of 2021 was chosen as the reference period for the multi-apping adjustment because this is the sole period for which the Department received data from the apps to perform such an analysis. The Department subpoenaed this information from the apps for a longer time period, but apps did not produce it. The proportion of time spent multi-apping can be affected by many factors and potentially by implementation of the minimum pay rate itself. For this reason, the Department may in future rulemaking revise the multi-apping adjustment once apps, workers, consumers, and restaurants have adjusted to the new rule. In advance, the Department is amending the recordkeeping requirements in this Second Proposed Rule to include food delivery worker taxpayer identification number, which will ensure the Department can access the information necessary to re-estimate multi-apping when warranted.

Basis of Pay

The Department made changes in the Second Proposed Rule to add an alternative to the methodology for calculating compensation to workers for trip time and on-call time, in consideration of comments and recommendations received from apps, tech industry advocates, and workers.

The First Proposed Rule required an app to satisfy two requirements each week: an individual pay requirement and an aggregate pay requirement.

- 1) Individual Pay Requirement: The app's payment to each delivery worker, individually, would have to meet or exceed the minimum pay rate multiplied by the sum of each individual worker's own trip time during the week; and
- 2) Aggregate Pay Requirement: The app's total payments to all its delivery workers, together, would have to meet or exceed the minimum pay rate multiplied by the sum of all workers' total trip time and on-call time during the week.

(Report at 28.) This method combined two key features: 1) a requirement that apps assume financial responsibility for all time that workers spend working, including on-call time and trip time, and 2) flexibility for apps to determine how they pay each worker. (Report at 31.) Rationales underlying this method included: (1) to incentivize apps to make operational changes to use workers' time on the apps more efficiently, thereby increasing deliveries per hour, partially offsetting apps' increase in unit labor costs associated with higher pay, and increasing workers' tips per hour; (2) to accommodate the variety of pay arrangements already present in the industry, which includes per-trip rates and hourly pay; (3) to guarantee that each app will pay at or above the intended average hourly pay each week, regardless of what variations occur in the mix of trip time and on-call time; and (4) to use a method that is feasible to implement for both apps and the Department. (Report at 31-32.)

Comments:

Comments from Uber Eats, DoorDash, Grubhub, tech industry advocates, and business advocates stated that the minimum pay rule should not require apps to compensate workers for aggregate on-call time. These commenters contended that the aggregate on-call payment component of the rule would require apps to make operational changes that (i) control labor supply by restricting platform access; (ii) limit worker flexibility to reject trip offers; and (iii) create earnings uncertainty for workers. Some food delivery workers and worker advocacy groups shared similar concerns.

To compensate workers for on-call time, Uber Eats and DoorDash suggested that the Department apply a fixed, industrywide multiplier to the minimum pay rate, which would be paid on each worker's trip time. These commenters analogized favorably to the TLC framework for high-volume for-hire vehicle drivers, under which the minimum pay rate is set based on an industry-wide utilization rate multiplier that indirectly compensates workers for on-call time. These commenters also recommended that, in calculating a minimum pay rate applicable to trip time, the Department include only a subset of on-call time. Uber Eats suggested including only the on-call time between trip offers. DoorDash suggested including only the on-call time that precedes an accepted trip offer.

Comments from many food delivery workers, worker advocacy groups, elected officials, and industry researchers emphasized the importance of compensating workers for on-call time. These commenters described workers' long wait times to receive trip offers and described the ways in which unpaid on-call time places economic pressure on workers to accept trip offers for very low pay, rather than continue waiting on-call for no pay. These commenters also noted that other essential workers are paid for on-call time. However, some of these commenters expressed concern about the aggregate pay methodology, noting that it may not result in adequate compensation if some workers still receive no pay at all for their on-call time. Some of these commenters urged the Department to require payment of the full minimum pay rate for all trip time and on-call time, with some recommending integration of a utilization rate into the calculation of minimum pay.

Response:

The Second Proposed Rule is responsive to, and accommodates, key priorities apps and workers raised in comments. In the Second Proposed Rule, the Department retained the individual pay and aggregate pay requirements set forth in the First Proposed Rule, now referred to as the standard method. However, after consideration of relevant comments, the Department revised the First Proposed Rule to allow an alternative to the standard method. As suggested by apps in comments, the alternative method would allow apps to pay workers for trip time only at a set multiplier of the standard minimum pay rate, so that workers are paid a rate for trip time that indirectly compensates them for uncompensated on-call time. Under the alternative method, the alternative minimum pay rate is calculated by dividing the minimum pay rate by 60%. The 60% figure reflects the average weekly utilization rate from January 2021 through June 30, 2022 for Uber Eats, Grubhub, and DoorDash, combined. This means that across this 18-month period, in the average week, workers at these apps were engaged in trip time 60% of the time and on-call time 40% of the time. The Department excluded Relay from this calculation because its practice of directly compensating for on-call time differs from the requirements under the alternative method. The Department used the period from January 2021 through June 30, 2022 because this is the period for which the Department obtained aggregate data from the apps. (Report at 2.)

To avoid exacerbating the concerns expressed by workers related to not being paid for on-call time, after April 1, 2024, the alternative method will only be available to apps with a utilization rate above 53%. If an app's utilization rate is less than 53% in a week, the alternative method is not available to the app, and it must calculate minimum pay based on the standard method. Without this threshold, the increase in labor supply arising from higher pay could produce longer wait times for trip offers and pay per hour worked (including both on-call time and trip time) would therefore be less than intended. The Department derived 53% as the utilization floor by assessing variation in utilization rates over the 18-month period at each of Uber Eats, Grubhub, and DoorDash. The Department found that the median app had a standard deviation of 7% in its weekly utilization rate (i.e., on average, its weekly utilization rate was 7% above or below its mean utilization rate for the period). Subtracting 7% from 60% yields 53%. The Department selected April 1, 2024 for the utilization floor to take effect to give apps adequate time to adjust their utilization rates.

The Department is not incorporating the recommendation from apps to exclude portions of workers' on-call time from the calculation of utilization rates. Apps derive financial benefit from the time they propose to exclude from the calculation of on-call time, in part by using it to provide for high service availability, and these portions of on-call time are reasonably related to the service workers perform for apps. For example, under apps' proposals, on-call time that occurs during scheduled shifts would be excluded, as would on-call time after a trip, in which a worker is ready and waiting for the next offer, but never receives one. Further, apps can and often do condition future work opportunities on workers' performance during on-call time, for example by giving preference in platform access to workers who accept a certain proportion of trip offers. Finally, the Second Proposed Rule's approach to calculating on-call time is consistent with TLC's minimum pay standard, which sets trip time rates that provide for indirect compensation of all on-call time in aggregate, and does not exclude portions of on-call time. (Report at 32.)

The Department's use of a 60% utilization rate for calculating minimum pay for the alternative method, and 53% floor for utilization, reflects past experience by the apps. If utilization patterns change, the Department can revisit this utilization rate and utilization floor in future rulemaking.

Effective Date

The Department made changes to the effective date of the rate in the Second Proposed Rule in response to comments from apps.

Comments:

DoorDash, Uber Eats, tech industry advocates, and business advocates requested that the effective date of the rules be extended from January 1, 2023 for a period of time to allow apps to implement the minimum pay method and recordkeeping requirements. One app requested 120 days for implementation.

Response:

The Department partially incorporated this recommendation. First, the effective date of the minimum pay rate is 30 days following adoption of a final rule, consistent with the requirements of the City Administrative Procedures Act for the effectuation of new rules, rather than January 1, 2023, as in the First Proposed Rule. Thirty days provides sufficient time for apps to prepare to comply with this requirement and any further delay would cause an undue hardship to workers. Second, the effective date of the requirement for apps to maintain a minimum utilization rate of 53% to use the alternative method goes into effect April 1, 2024. This provides apps with additional time to prepare for compliance with this requirement and, for any app that has utilization rates below 53%, an opportunity to reduce on-call time in advance of the requirement's effective date.

Phase-in

The Department made changes to the phase-in of the rate in the Second Proposed Rule to accelerate the pay increases for workers.

The First Proposed Rule phased in the minimum pay rate over two years, with the rates in 2023, 2024, and 2025 representing 75%, 85%, and 100% of the full rate in the First Proposed Rule, respectively. The Second Proposed Rule replaces this phase-in with 90% of the full rate in the Second Proposed Rule in 2023 ($17.96), 95% in 2024 ($18.96), and 100% in 2025 ($19.96).

Comments:

Several commenters, including members of the public, elected officials, industry researchers, worker advocacy groups, bicycle safety advocates, and food delivery workers, commented that the phase-in rate in 2023 was too low, noting that after workers' expenses for equipment and workers' compensation, the 2023 rate would be below the $15 minimum wage that applies to employees. These commenters recommended that DCWP phase in the full minimum pay rate more quickly.

Response:

The Department's decision to accelerate the phase-in is responsive to these comments. The accelerated phase-in also partially offsets food delivery workers' lost pay as a result of the delayed effective date of the rule.

Inflation Adjustment

The Department made no material changes to the inflation adjustment methodology between the First Proposed Rule and the Second Proposed Rule. To ensure that the rate keeps pace with the cost of living, the Second Proposed Rule provides for inflation adjustments to the minimum pay rate on April 1 of every year. DCWP chose the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the New York-New Jersey-Pennsylvania metropolitan area as the most appropriate index to capture changes in NYC delivery workers' cost of living.

Comments:

DoorDash contended that inflation adjustments should not be incorporated, or should be reduced to no more often than once every five years. One elected official recommended that the Department adjust the inflation methodology by annually reviewing worker expenses and separately calculating inflation for the base pay, workers' compensation, and expense components of the rate.

Response:

The Department is not incorporating the recommendation to set a rate that excludes inflation adjustments or reduces inflation adjustments to once every five years. Annual adjustments ensure that inflation will not devalue the minimum pay rate.

Though inflation in delivery workers' expenses and New York State workers' compensation coverage may differ from inflation in workers' general cost of living, the Second Proposed Rule does not separately adjust each component, but rather applies the chosen index to the entire rate, so that each inflation adjustment is predictable, ministerial, and relies on consistent data and methods. If in the future the Department has reason to believe that expenses or the basis of the workers' compensation component have materially changed since issuance of a final rule, it may reassess these components at that time.

Recordkeeping

The Second Proposed Rule amends the Recordkeeping requirements from the First Proposed Rule to correspond to changes in the basis of pay, further clarifies certain language to ensure recordkeeping requirements are narrowly tailored to the information DCWP needs to discharge its responsibilities under the statute, and adds taxpayer identification number and phone information as required records for use by the Department in performing updates to the rate in future rulemaking. The taxpayer identification number serves as a unique identifier of a worker across the various apps a worker may use. This information will enable the Department to match workers across multiple apps, re-evaluate rates of multi-apping after a final rule goes into effect, and appropriately update the multi-apping adjustment in the minimum pay rate. Information about the phones food delivery workers use will enable the Department to efficiently and reliably measure phone expenses without reliance on a survey should it choose to re-estimate expenses for use in future rulemaking.

Comments:

Comments from Uber Eats, DoorDash, and Grubhub stated that the additional recordkeeping requirements in the First Proposed Rule go beyond what is necessary to monitor compliance with the minimum pay rule or require the collection and reporting of personal information of workers. These commenters contended that data points on their platforms such as distance traveled by workers, number of orders, number of merchants, or cost of food ordered by consumers, number of consumers, or amount of gratuities have no relation to calculating minimum pay.

Other commenters, including elected officials, worker advocates, and industry researchers, urged DCWP to closely monitor apps' compliance with the minimum pay rate. Some of these commenters recommended adding additional recordkeeping requirements, such as reporting on worker equipment theft and breakage and on-the-job accidents and injury, to inform re-assessments of the adequacy of the minimum pay rate.

Response:

The recordkeeping requirements in the Second Proposed Rule will enable the Department to effectively monitor compliance with the minimum pay rule. These requirements will also enable the Department to carry out its statutory obligation under subdivisions (c) and (d) of Section 20-1522 of the Administrative Code to amend the minimum pay method, if warranted or necessary, and to complete its statutorily required reporting obligations.

Impacts on Workers, Apps, Consumers, and Restaurants

The Report summarized results from the Department's impact modeling of the First Proposed Rule. (Report at 34-36.) Due to the changes from the First Proposed Rule, the Department is updating its estimate of impacts to reflect provisions of the Second Proposed Rule. The Department is not otherwise changing its estimate of policy impacts.

Comments:

Comments from DoorDash, Uber Eats, and industry advocates suggested larger increases in costs to consumers and restaurants, and larger declines in the demand for delivery, than those set forth in Section 6 of the Report. Some apps stated that even if costs rose $5.18 per order as the Department predicted, such an increase will place food delivery out of reach for many families.

Relay commented that because it does not have a customer-facing platform that would enable it to pass its increased costs on to customers, it should be exempt from the minimum pay rule altogether. A comment signed by over two hundred restaurant operators echoed Relay's recommendation.

DoorDash contended that the Department did not adequately study the impact of the rule on workers, consumers, and restaurants in low-income areas of the City. It noted that workers have lower utilization rates in low-income communities and contended that apps would have to limit opportunities for workers in such communities to reduce on-call time. DoorDash contended that restaurants with lower menu prices serving working-class communities will experience the cost of delivery as a greater percentage of each total order.

DoorDash requested that the Department exempt trips its food delivery workers make from businesses other than food service establishments, such as convenience and grocery stores, from the minimum pay method.

Some commenters, including apps, asserted that the Department has not made adequate disclosures concerning the methods it used to estimate impacts.

Response:

The Department updated its impact estimates to reflect the changes between the First Proposed Rule and the Second Proposed Rule. The impact estimates assume that Uber Eats, GrubHub, and DoorDash will choose the Alternative Method and Relay will choose the Standard Method. The updated estimates show that the changes between the First Proposed Rule and Second Proposed Rule will reduce delivery workers’ average hourly earnings, but increase aggregate hours worked, resulting in little difference in aggregate earnings between the two versions of the minimum pay rate. Impacts on consumers are not materially different between the First Proposed Rule and Second Proposed Rule. Under both the First Proposed Rule and Second Proposed Rule, delivery workers experience a large increase in earnings and app delivery continues to grow. The Department reviewed its impact model and assumptions in light of criticisms raised in comments but found that no changes were warranted.

Table 3. Minimum Pay Rate Projected Outcomes under the First Proposed Rule and Second Proposed Rule

	First Proposed Rule	Second Proposed Rule
Worker Outcomes
Pay per hour ($)	23.82	23.56
Tips per hour ($)	10.28	9.41
Expenses per hour ($)	2.82	2.82
Net earnings per hour ($)	31.28	30.15
Net earnings per year ($)	33,670	32,453
Total hours (in millions)	71	76
Total net earnings ($, in billions)	2.3	2.3
Consumer Outcomes
Average order cost, including taxes, tips, and fees ($)	38.38	39.17
Total spending on app delivery ($, in billions)	6.8	6.8
App Outcomes
Total deliveries (in millions)	178	173
Total gross margin ($, in millions)	746	725

Notes: First Proposed Rule values are as published in Section 6 of the Report, except for Total hours, which in the Report was expressed as a percentage change from 2022. All estimates are for 2025. To model the Second Proposed Rule, DCWP assumes that apps that currently pay per trip will begin to use trip time more efficiently and maintain a 60% utilization rate, consistent with the incentives under the alternative method. Based on differences DCWP observed between apps, DCWP assumes this will result in apps averaging 1.94 deliveries per hour in 2025. Under the Second Proposed Rule, DCWP also assumes multi-apping will continue at the same level as in the fourth quarter of 2021 (see above), i.e. that workers will spend an average of 17.7% of their combined trip time and on-call time logged into multiple apps simultaneously (Report at 5). Because of this, workers are projected to receive the equivalent of $23.56 per hour, taking into account the multiple apps they work for, even though each app will only pay $19.96 per hour, on average. Similarly, workers will average 2.29 deliveries per hour, taking into account the multiple apps they work for. All other modeling assumptions and inputs are as described in the Report. (Report at 34-36).

The Department is not incorporating the recommendation from Relay and some restaurants that Relay be exempt from the minimum pay rule, because there is no reason to believe its food delivery workers have less need for the protections of a minimum pay rate than food delivery workers engaged by other apps.

The Department recognizes that some consumers may be more price-sensitive than others, that app-based delivery is less costly to provide where there are high order volumes and short trip distances, and that willingness to pay is likely greatest on larger orders. The Department subpoenaed data from the apps that would have enabled it to model incidence of higher pay on detailed subsets of merchants and consumers, but the apps did not produce it. The Department did use the data apps provided to measure differences in app-based delivery between zip codes and found that low-income zip codes order app delivery less frequently, but order sizes are approximately the same. (Report at 9.) The Department determined that raising food delivery workers' pay is valuable, and that some consumers' inability or unwillingness to pay for the cost of their labor does not justify limiting food delivery workers' incomes below the levels provided for in this Second Proposed Rule.

The Department is not incorporating DoorDash's recommendation to exempt from the minimum pay method deliveries that its food delivery workers make from businesses other than food service establishments. Food delivery workers require adequate pay for these trips as well. The protections of Subchapter 1 of Chapter 15 of Title 20 of the Administrative Code generally apply to such trips, and the law does not specify that minimum pay protections should apply more narrowly than other protections.

The Department disagrees with commenters' statements that the Department did not adequately disclose the methods it used to estimate impacts. The Report discusses the methods the Department used, and the Department has published additional information on its website, taking care not to compromise information deemed confidential by the apps. More detailed disclosures could violate confidentiality agreements that govern the use and disclosure of most data the apps produced in response to the Department's subpoenas. Apps required the Department to enter into such agreements as a condition of producing this data.

Fraud and Misconduct

The Second Proposed Rule adds "cancellation" and "cancelled" as defined terms with respect to a trip or delivery that ends prior to drop-off with a consumer. This change helps clarify apps' obligations under the rule and establishes a clear and consistent standard for when payment is owed to a food delivery worker.

Comments:

Comments from Uber Eats and Grubhub recommended that the minimum pay rule allow apps to withhold payment from a worker where the app believes the worker engaged in fraud or misconduct. Some apps expressed concern that they were unsure how to compensate workers for cancelled orders under the First Proposed Rule because "cancelled" was not a defined term. These commenters contended that the minimum pay rule should not require apps to compensate workers that end a trip before delivery or fail to complete a trip. These commenters further contended that requiring apps to compensate workers for cancelled shifts would incentivize workers to prolong trips or accept trips with no intention of completing them.

Response:

The Department considered apps' proposal in which they would have discretion to withhold payment based on their determination of whether misconduct occurred, but it is not incorporating it. Workers commonly report instances in which they believe an app unfairly denied them the payment they were owed (Report at 23), and the Department is unable to conclude that inappropriate withholding of payment by apps is less of a concern than fraudulent conduct by workers. Apps also have other tools to deter misconduct, for example, by deactivating the worker found to have engaged in it. Higher pay will also make the threat of deactivation more effective than it is at present and produce a more stable workforce where fewer trips are offered to new entrants who lack an established pattern of faithful performance.

Apps, workers, and the Department require a clear, consistent, and easily observed standard for determining the amount of payment due. To further this objective, the Department is incorporating the recommendation to define "cancellation" and "cancelled" in the rules.

New material is underlined.

[Deleted material is in brackets.]

“Shall” and “must” denote mandatory requirements and may be used interchangeably in the rules of this Department, unless otherwise specified or unless the context clearly indicates otherwise.

Subchapter H of Chapter 7 of Title 6 of the Rules of the City of New York is amended to read as follows:

Subchapter H: Third-Party Service Workers § 7-801 Definitions.

(a) As used in this subchapter, the following terms have the following meanings:

- (1) “Cancellation” or “Cancelled”, when used with respect to a trip or delivery, means that the trip or delivery ends prior to drop-off of an order with the consumer. When used with respect to trips including multiple deliveries, the terms mean that the trip ends prior to the completion of all planned drop-offs on the trip. The terms encompass cancellation initiated by a consumer, a food delivery worker, or a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service.
- (2) “Deactivation” means a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service ceases to offer shifts or trips to a food delivery worker on a temporary or permanent basis.
- (3) “Internal identifier” means a character string comprised of letters, numbers, or symbols that a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service assigns to a food delivery worker for purposes of uniquely identifying such worker within its records.
- (4) “On-call time” means the time a food delivery worker is connected to a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service’s electronic system for arranging or monitoring trips in a status where the food delivery worker is available to receive or accept trip offers or assignments with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City and excludes all trip time.
- (5) “Pay period” means a fixed and regularly recurring period of 168 hours or seven consecutive 24-hour periods.

([2]6) “Trip” has the same meaning as set forth in Section 20-1501 of the Administrative Code, provided that a single trip may encompass multiple deliveries.

(7) “Trip time” means the span of time between the moment a food delivery worker accepts an offer from a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service to perform a trip with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City, or receives an assignment to perform such a trip, through the moment such trip is completed or cancelled.

(8) “Utilization rate” means a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service’s total trip time divided by the sum of its trip time and on-call time.

(b) As used in this subchapter, the following terms have the same meanings as set forth in Section 20-1501 of the Administrative Code: “Food delivery worker,” “food service establishment,” “third-party courier service,” and “thirdparty food delivery service.”

§ 7-804 Notice of Rights.

(b) The notice of rights required by Section 20-1505 of the Administrative Code must be provided by email and as a link within a text message sent to the food delivery worker. In addition to provision by text [or]and email, such notice must also be made continuously available to all active food delivery workers through any website, mobile application, or other internet service used by a food delivery worker to perform work for a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service.

(d) If the commissioner updates the information in the notice of rights pursuant to § 20-1505(a) of the Administrative Code, no later than thirty (30) days following the effective date of such update, a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must provide such updated notice to all food delivery workers in the manner provided in subdivisions (a) through ([f]c) of this section.

§ 7-805 Recordkeeping.

(a) (1) A request or subpoena for information or records from the Department must be served on a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service in writing in person, via mail, or via email. When the Department issues a written request or subpoena for data, information or documents under Section 20-1506(a) of the Administrative Code, a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must provide all responsive data, information, or documents to the Department within thirty (30) days of receiving such request or subpoena. The Department may issue such written request or subpoena for purposes of discharging any of its responsibilities under Sections 20-1507 or 20-1522 of the Administrative Code.

(2) A deadline of more than 30 days may be agreed to on consent by the Department and the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service.

(3) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must provide data, information, or documents to the Department in their original format or, if so requested, in the comma-delimited formats and layouts prescribed by the Department in such written request or subpoena.

(4) The Department may issue a notice of violation to a third-party food delivery service or third party courier service who fails to provide true and accurate electronic records or information by the deadline provided in the written request or subpoena or the deadline agreed to by the parties, provided that any monetary penalties authorized by law for a violation of Section 20-1506 of the Administrative Code shall not apply while such written request or subpoena is the subject of a [pending]timely-filed pre-compliance review proceeding.

(b) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must create and maintain contemporaneous, true, and accurate records documenting compliance with the requirements of Chapter 15 of Title 20 of the Administrative Code and any rules promulgated thereunder for a period of three years. If, in the ordinary course of business, any record required to be maintained under this subdivision is created by a person other than such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service, it is the responsibility of such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service to obtain a copy of such record.

(c) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must maintain the [data specified in this subdivision, or a copy of such data, according to record layouts prescribed by the Department, provided that such record layouts have been published and made available on the Department's website. Such data shall include] following data and records:

(1) With respect to all food delivery workers, first name, last name, phone number, email address, [a unique] internal identifier [for the worker], taxpayer identification number if required to maintain such number under federal or state law, preferred language, first date hired, retained or engaged, and last date hired, retained or engaged.

(2) With respect to the notice of rights, data sufficient to show each email [or]and text message containing the notice of rights that was sent to a food delivery worker, the date and time such email or text message was sent, the first name, last name, and [a unique] internal identifier of the recipient, and[, as applicable,] the phone number [or]and email address of the recipient.

- (3) With respect to the maximum distance, bridge, or tunnel parameters set or updated under Section 20-1521(a)-(b) of the Administrative Code, the date, time, and content of every selection of or update to such parameters and the first name, last name, and [a unique] internal identifier of the food delivery worker who selected or updated such parameters.
- (4) With respect to each trip offered to a food delivery worker:
- (i) All information disclosed to a food delivery worker before such worker accepts a trip under Section 20-1521(d) of the Administrative Code, including:
- a. The address(es) where the food, beverage or other goods must be picked up;
- b. The estimated distance for the trip;
- c. The estimated time for the trip or, if disclosed in lieu of estimated time for the trip pursuant to 6 RCNY § 7-80[7]6([e]f) of this subchapter, the expected or required time of the last drop-off on the trip;
- d. The amount of any gratuity(ies) specified by the consumer(s); and
- e. The amount of compensation excluding gratuity to be paid to the food delivery worker for the trip or, if disclosed in lieu of compensation excluding gratuity pursuant to 6 RCNY § 7-80[7]6(h), the hourly pay rate applicable to the trip;
- (ii) The date and time that the trip offer was made to the food delivery worker;
- (iii) If different from the date and time that the trip offer was made to the food delivery worker, the date(s) and time(s) that the information required to be disclosed by Section 20-1521(d) of the Administrative Code was first disclosed to a food delivery worker;
- (iv) Whether the offer was accepted, declined, or expired, and the date and time at which this status was recorded;
- (v) The route used to generate the estimated trip distance disclosed to a food delivery worker pursuant to Section 20-1521(d)(2) of the Administrative Code and the date and time it was generated. Such route must include a sequence of latitude and longitude coordinates;
- (vi) The route distance between the first food service establishment from which the food, beverage or other goods must be picked up on the trip and the last delivery address on the trip;
- (vii) The address(es) of where the food, beverage or other goods must be picked-up and, for the location(s) to which the food, beverage, or other goods must be delivered, the zip code and the latitude and longitude [of the location(s) to which the food, beverage, or other goods must be delivered], accurate to a precision of three decimal places;
- (viii) The gratuity the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service charged to the consumer(s) for the order(s) on the trip;
- (ix) The gratuity the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service paid to the food delivery worker for the trip;
- (x) The compensation, excluding gratuity, paid to the food delivery worker for the trip. If a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service compensates a food delivery worker on an hourly basis, the amount of compensation for a trip is the time between the acceptance of an offered trip and its completion or cancellation, multiplied by the hourly payment rate for that trip;

- (xi) Whether the trip was completed or cancelled, and the date and time of completion or cancellation; and if cancelled, whether the cancellation was initiated by the food delivery worker, the customer, the business from which the food, beverage, or other good was to be picked-up, or the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service;
- (xii) The first name, last name, and [a unique] internal identifier of the food delivery worker to whom the offer was made; and
- (xiii) Whether each business from which the food, beverage or other goods must be picked up was a food service establishment.

(5) With respect to each pay[ment to] period during which a food delivery worker engaged in any trip time or on-call time:

- (i) The first name, last name, and [a unique] internal identifier of the food delivery worker [receiving payment]; [and]
- (ii) The date[and], time, and amount of any payment [,the start and end date of the pay period, the amount of compensation, and all fees or deductions from compensation, itemized by type.] made to the food delivery worker for the pay period, or any part thereof;
- (iii) The start date and time and end date and time of the pay period;
- (iv) The minutes of trip time worked by the food delivery worker;
- (v) The minutes of on-call time worked by the food delivery worker;
- (vi) The compensation, excluding gratuities, paid to the food delivery worker and the basis for such compensation, including rates of pay and units of pay. Such records must distinguish between compensation creditable towards a thirdparty food delivery service or third-party courier service's obligations under 6 RCNY § 7-810 and any other compensation the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service may have paid to the food delivery worker;
- (vii) The gratuities paid to the food delivery worker for trips with a pickup or drop off location in New York City;
- (viii) All deductions from, additions to, or adjustments of compensation owed or paid to the food delivery worker, itemized by type.
- (ix) The minimum pay method chosen for the pay period pursuant to 6 RCNY § 7-810(c).

(6) With respect to each pay period:

- (i) The start date and time and end date and time of the pay period;
- (ii) The total minutes of trip time for all food delivery workers;
- (iii) The total minutes of on-call time for all food delivery workers;
- (iv) The total compensation paid to all food delivery workers. Such records must distinguish between (a) compensation creditable towards a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service's obligation under Section 7-810 and any other compensation the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service may have paid to the food delivery worker;

(v) The minimum pay method chosen for the pay period pursuant to 6 RCNY § 7-810(c).

(7) With respect to each insulated food delivery bag provided to a food delivery worker:

- (i) The first name, last name, and [a unique] internal identifier of the worker to whom the delivery bag was provided; and
- (ii) The date of provision, and whether provision was by pickup or whether the third-party food delivery service or thirdparty courier service sent the insulated delivery bag to the food delivery worker.

([7]8) With respect to each deactivation of a food delivery worker:

- (i) The first name, last name, and [a unique] internal identifier of the worker who was deactivated;
- (ii) The date and time of deactivation;
- (iii) The date and time of reactivation, if applicable;
- (iv) The reason for the deactivation; and
- (v) Whether the deactivation was effected through an automatic or a manual process.

(9) With respect to each instance in which a food delivery worker is connected to a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service's electronic system for arranging, monitoring, and performing trips:

- (i) The first name, last name, and internal identifier of the food delivery worker;
- (ii) The start date and time and end date and time of each span of on-call time;
- (iii) The start date and time and end date and time of each span of trip time; and
- (iv) The manufacturer, name, and model number of the phone that connected to such electronic system.

(d) In accordance with applicable law and upon receipt of appropriate notice, a third-party food delivery service or thirdparty courier service must produce reports to the Department concerning such third-party food delivery service or thirdparty courier service's operations in New York City for all periods on or after January 1, 2022; provided however, that for all periods between January 1, 2022 and the effective date of this subdivision, a third-party food delivery service or thirdparty courier service must produce reports only to the extent that such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service maintained all or part of such records. The reports required to be produced pursuant to this subdivision may be required by the Department no more frequently than monthly and must be produced in accordance with a format, layout, and procedure prescribed by the Department, provided that this subdivision shall not be construed as requiring a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service to submit reports on orders for which it had no responsibility for facilitating or arranging the delivery or pickup of food, beverages, or other goods by a food delivery worker. A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must maintain the records used to produce such reports for a period of three years. Such reports may include the following information for each pay period aggregated citywide and by zip code of the pickup or drop-off location in New York City, food delivery worker mode of transportation, and merchant line of business:

- (1) The number of food delivery workers who engaged in any trip time;
- (2) The number of food delivery workers who engaged in any on-call time;

- (3) The number of trips with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
 - (4) The minutes of trip time;
 - (5) The minutes of on-call time;
 - (6) The total amount paid to food delivery workers, excluding gratuities, creditable towards a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service's obligation under 6 RCNY § 7-810;
 - (7) The total gratuities paid to food delivery workers for trips with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
 - (8) The minimum pay method chosen for the pay period pursuant to 6 RCNY § 7-810(c);
 - (9) The number of consumers who received at least one delivery with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
 - (10) The number of completed deliveries with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
 - (11) The total amount charged to consumers for the food, beverage, or other goods on deliveries with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
 - (12) The fees charged to consumers on orders for delivery with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
 - (13) The subscription and membership fees charged to consumers in New York City;
 - (14) The number of merchants who prepared at least one order for delivery with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
 - (15) The delivery fees, payment processing fees, and other fees charged to merchants on orders for delivery with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City, itemized by type.
- (e) The Department may prescribe data specifications, including field definitions, record layouts, and uniform codes, for any record required to be maintained pursuant to subdivision (c) or (d) of this section. If prescribed by the Department, a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must maintain the required records in accordance with such specifications.

§ 7-806 Delivery Distance and Route.

(j) For purposes of Section 20-1521(a)(1)-(3) of the Administrative Code and this section, a trip offered to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service requires travel across a bridge or through a tunnel if the shortest route generated by a routing engine selected by the Department for such trip involves passage over such bridge or through such tunnel, unless such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service produces contemporaneous records showing that it provided an alternative route not requiring passage over such bridge or through such tunnel to such food delivery worker and that such route was consistent with the time and distance disclosed under Section 20-1521(d)[(2)] of the Administrative Code.

§ 7-807 Payments to Workers.

(a) For purposes of Section 20-1523(a) of the Administrative Code, a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service shall be considered to have charged or imposed a fee on a food delivery worker for the use of a form of payment selected by such service if (1) the service does not offer a form of payment to a food delivery worker free from any fees charged or imposed by a financial intermediary or other person or (2) a fee for payment is charged or imposed on a food delivery worker by any parent, affiliate, or subsidiary entity of the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service.

(b) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must calculate compensation owed to a food delivery worker for each pay period. The pay period need not coincide with the calendar week but may begin on any day and at any hour of the day. A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must establish a single pay period for all food delivery workers it engages. Once the beginning time of the pay period is established, it must remain fixed, and may be changed only if the change is intended to be permanent.

(c) [Pursuant to Section 20-1523(b) of the Administrative Code, a] A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must pay [a food delivery worker for work performed weekly and] all compensation owed to each food delivery worker for a pay period no later than seven (7) calendar days after the end of [the week in which the work was performed] such pay period.

§ 7-810 Minimum Pay.

(a) When the [d]Department issues a subpoena for data, information or documents under § 20-1522(a)(2) of the Administrative Code, a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must provide all responsive data, information or documents to the [d]Department within 30 days of receiving such subpoena and, if so requested, in the comma-delimited formats and layouts prescribed by the [d]Department in such subpoena.

(b) Standard Method. A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must make payments to food delivery workers for their trip time and on-call time in a pay period that meet the individual and aggregate requirements of subparagraphs 1 and 2 of this subdivision.

(1) Individual requirement. A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must pay to a food delivery worker who engages in trip time in a pay period no less than the sum of such food delivery worker's trip time in that pay period multiplied by the following minimum pay rates:

(i) $17.96 per hour, for pay periods that start on or after the effective date of this section;

(ii) $18.96 per hour, adjusted for inflation as set forth in subdivision (g) of this section, for pay periods that start on or after April 1, 2024; and

(iii) $19.96 per hour, adjusted for inflation annually as set forth in subdivisions (h) and (i) of this section, for pay periods that start on or after April 1, 2025.

(2) Aggregate requirement. A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must pay, in aggregate, to the food delivery workers who engage in trip time or on-call time in a pay period no less than the sum of all such food delivery workers' trip time and on-call time in that pay period multiplied by the following minimum pay rates:

(i) $17.96 per hour, for pay periods that start on or after the effective date of this section;

(ii) $18.96 per hour, adjusted for inflation as set forth in subdivision (g) of this section, for pay periods that start on or after April 1, 2024; and

(iii) $19.96 per hour, adjusted for inflation annually as set forth in subdivisions (h) and (i) of this section, for pay periods that start on or after April 1, 2025.

(c) Alternative Method. Notwithstanding the requirements of subdivision (b) of this section, an eligible third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service may use the alternative method specified in this subdivision to determine the minimum payments it must make to food delivery workers for their trip time and on-call time in a pay period.

(1) For pay periods that begin prior to April 1, 2024, any third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service is eligible to use the alternative method specified in this subdivision. For pay periods that begin on or after April 1, 2024, a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service is eligible to use this alternative method only if its utilization rate for the pay period is greater than or equal to 0.53. If an eligible third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service chooses this alternative method, the method applies to each and every food delivery worker who engages in trip time in the pay period. An eligible third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service that chooses the alternative method for a pay period must document its utilization rate and choice of method no later than when payment is due pursuant to Section 20-1523(b) of the Administrative Code and 6 RCNY § 7-807.

(2) An eligible third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service that chooses the alternative method must pay to each food delivery worker who engages in trip time in a pay period no less than such food delivery worker's trip time in that pay period multiplied by the alternative minimum pay rate. Such alternative minimum pay rate is calculated by dividing the minimum pay rate otherwise required by subdivision (b) of this section by 0.60. Such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service is not required to pay a food delivery worker for the pay period if the food delivery worker engages in on-call time but no trip time.

(d) Bases of Pay. A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service may fulfill its obligation under subdivision (b) or subdivision (c) of this section using any basis of pay it chooses, including paying an hourly rate, a pertrip rate or other piece rate, a bonus or other lump-sum payment, or any other basis.

Example: In a pay period that begins on April 1, 2024, 5,000 food delivery workers, in aggregate, engage in 55,000 hours of trip time and 45,000 hours of on-call time. Worker A, individually, engages in 30 hours of trip time and 5 hours of oncall time. Following a 2% inflation adjustment performed by the Department pursuant to subdivision (g) of this section, the minimum pay rate is $19.34. The alternative minimum pay rate is $19.34 divided by 0.60.

Standard Method: The third-party food delivery service meets the requirements of both subdivision (b)(1) and subdivision (b)(2) of this section if it pays its food delivery workers as follows:

1. Each food delivery worker is paid at least an amount equal to their trip time multiplied by $19.34. For instance, worker A receives at least $580.20, which is $19.34 multiplied by 30 hours; and
2. The total the third-party food delivery service pays for the pay period meets or exceeds the aggregate amount of trip time and on-call time (100,000 hours) multiplied by $19.34, which equals $1,934,000. Worker A's payment of at least $580.20 for trip time is credited towards the aggregate requirement and Worker A may, or may not, receive an additional payment.

Alternative Method: The third-party food delivery service has a utilization rate of 0.55, which is its trip time (55,000) divided by the sum of its trip time and on-call time (100,000). Since 0.55 is greater than 0.53, the third-party food delivery service is eligible under subdivision (c)(1) to use the alternative method to determine the minimum payments it must make to its food delivery workers for the pay period. If the third-party food delivery service uses the alternative method, it meets the requirements of subdivision (c) if each food delivery worker is paid at least an amount equal to their trip time multiplied by $19.34 divided by .60. For instance, worker A receives $967.00, which is $19.34 divided by .60 multiplied by 30 hours.

(e) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service may not use gratuities paid to a food delivery worker to offset such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service's obligation to pay the food delivery worker the minimum pay required by this section.

(f) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service may not use amounts paid to a food delivery worker for trips with a pickup and drop-off location outside of New York City to offset such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service's obligation to pay to the food delivery worker the minimum pay required by this section.

(g) The Department shall perform the inflation adjustment required by subdivisions (b)(1)(ii) and (b)(2)(ii) of this section by multiplying $18.96 by the percent change in the All Items Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the NY-NJ-PA metro area between December 2022 and December 2023 and rounding to the nearest cent, provided that if the percentage change is zero or negative, the adjustment shall be zero. The Department shall post the Consumer Price Index adjusted minimum pay rate on its website on or before the first day of February 2024.

(h) For pay periods beginning on or after April 1, 2025 and before April 1, 2026, the Department shall perform the inflation adjustment required by subdivisions (b)(1)(iii) and (b)(2)(iii) of this section by multiplying $19.96 by the percent change in the All Items Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the NY-NJ-PA metro area between December 2022 and December 2024 and rounding to the nearest cent, provided that if the percentage change is zero or negative, the adjustment shall be zero. The Department shall post the Consumer Price Index adjusted minimum pay rate on its website on or before the first day of February 2025.

(i) Beginning with the minimum pay rate for pay periods that start on or after April 1, 2026, and continuing each calendar year thereafter, the Department shall post the inflation-adjusted minimum pay rate required by subdivisions (b)(1)(iii) and (b)(2)(iii) of this section on or before the first day of February of the calendar year in which the rate will take effect. Such inflation adjustments will be performed by multiplying the minimum pay rate in effect prior to adjustment by the most recent December to December percent change in the All Items Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the NY-NJ-PA metro area and rounding to the nearest cent, provided that if the percentage change is zero or negative, the adjustment shall be zero.

NEW YORK CITY LAW DEPARTMENT
DIVISION OF LEGAL COUNSEL
100 CHURCH STREET
NEW YORK, NY 10007
212-356-4028

CERTIFICATION PURSUANT TO CHARTER §1043(d)

RULE TITLE: Calculation of Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Service Workers

REFERENCE NUMBER: 2022 RG 076

RULEMAKING AGENCY: Department of Consumer and Worker Protection

I certify that this office has reviewed the above-referenced proposed rule as required by section 1043(d) of the New York City Charter, and that the above-referenced proposed rule:

- (i) is drafted so as to accomplish the purpose of the authorizing provisions of law;
- (ii) is not in conflict with other applicable rules;
- (iii) to the extent practicable and appropriate, is narrowly drawn to achieve its stated purpose;
and
- (iv) to the extent practicable and appropriate, contains a statement of basis and purpose that provides a clear explanation of the rule and the requirements imposed by the rule.

/s/ STEVEN GOULDEN
Acting Corporation Counsel

Date: February 27, 2023

NEW YORK CITY MAYOR'S OFFICE OF OPERATIONS
253 BROADWAY, 10th FLOOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007
212-788-1400

CERTIFICATION / ANALYSIS
PURSUANT TO CHARTER SECTION 1043(d)

RULE TITLE: Calculation of Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Service Workers

REFERENCE NUMBER: DCWP-31

RULEMAKING AGENCY: Department of Consumer and Worker Protection

I certify that this office has analyzed the proposed rule referenced above as required by Section 1043(d) of the New York City Charter, and that the proposed rule referenced above:

- (i) Is understandable and written in plain language for the discrete regulated community or communities;
- (ii) Minimizes compliance costs for the discrete regulated community or communities consistent with achieving the stated purpose of the rule; and
- (iii) Does not provide a cure period because it does not establish a violation, modification of a violation, or modification of the penalties associated with a violation.

/s/ Francisco X. Navarro
Mayor's Office of Operations

February 28, 2023
Date

EXHIBIT 2

WRITER'S DIRECT DIAL NUMBER

(202) 223-7308

WRITER'S DIRECT FACSIMILE

(202) 379-4217

WRITER'S DIRECT E-MAIL ADDRESS

kdunn@paulweiss.com

November 29, 2022

TO: John DeVito
JDeVito@Dcwp.nyc.org

Freedom of Information Officer
NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP)
42 Broadway, 8th floor
New York, NY 10004

To the Freedom of Information Officer at the DCWP:

Pursuant to Section 84 et seq. of the New York Public Officers Law, I request the following records from the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (the "Department")² in connection with the Proposed Rule to implement Local Law 115 of 2021 that the Department released on November 16, 2022 (the "DCWP Minimum Pay Rule") and a report the Department released on the same date entitled "A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC" (the "Report"):

1. All records referring to, reflecting, or containing the records, data, material, or information referenced in the "Sources and Methods" section of the Report, and/or on which the DCWP Minimum Pay Rule and/or the Report is purportedly based, including, but not limited to:

² For purposes of these requests, "the Department" shall refer to the Department and anyone employed or otherwise engaged by the Department.

a. the NYC Delivery Worker Survey and its results;³

³ My prior request, dated July 14, 2022, FOIL-2022-866-00337, requests, among other things, information relating to the NYC Delivery Worker Survey. The request remains outstanding and unfulfilled. For the avoidance of doubt, I am re-including

- b. the Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey and its results;
- c. the NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey and its results;
- d. the “qualitative information” the Department collected “through frequent meetings, conversations, and interviews with delivery workers, worker advocates, app representatives, and restaurant association representatives,” Report at 4;
- e. information gathered from officiates at other City agencies, including, but not limited to, NYC Department of Small Business Services, the Fire Department of the City of New York, the NYC Department of Health and

Mental Hygiene, the NYC Taxi and Limousine Commission, and the NYC Department of Transportation; and

- f. each and every “structural model of app delivery in NYC,” “model,” or “modeling,” or draft thereof, that the Department used to estimate or assess the impacts or potential impacts of the DCWP Minimum Pay Rule or any alternatives, including, but not limited to, the status quo, Report at 34–36.

This request, and the requests below, include all analyses, models, calculations, data, spreadsheets, and other computer files and code (with all formulas intact), communications, documents, and other records that are used therein, and any and all of their modules for any purpose, including for analyzing, calculating, and/or modeling the baseline alternative, all policy options discussed, and all policy options that were otherwise tested or modeled and not discussed. This request further includes all inputs for and outputs produced by these analyses, models, calculations, data, spreadsheets, and other computer files and code, communications, documents, and other records. These requests, and the requests below, include all responsive records in the possession of the Department, including any consultant or team member engaged with the preparation and/or development of the DCWP Minimum Pay Rule and/or any underlying reports, analyses, models, calculations, spreadsheets, or other computer files and code.

- 2. All records related to the decision to propose or approve a rule that would:
 - a. add definitions of “on-call time,” “pay period,” and “trip time”;
 - b. add the recordkeeping and reporting obligations for a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service;

the request in this request. The re-inclusion of this request is not intended to, and does not, relieve the Department of its obligation to produce responsive documents in a timely manner in response to FOIL-2022-866-00337.

- c. clarify what constitutes “required” travel across a bridge or through a tunnel;
 - d. establish that compensation must be calculated for each pay period; and/or
 - e. set the minimum pay rates, the time periods for which such pay rates apply, and/or the inflation adjustments required for such pay rates.
3. All records containing comments received by the Department or any other entity of the City of New York in connection with its consideration, preparation, and promulgation of the DCWP Minimum Pay Rule or any related regulation or legislation that includes, but is not limited to, comments received in connection with (a) the Department’s June 15, 2022 public hearing on Delivery Workers, (b) the Department’s December 16, 2022 public hearing on Minimum Pay Rate, (c) the New York City Council’s (the “City Council”) June 8, 2021 meeting, and (d) the City Council’s September 23, 2021 meeting.
4. Any contract or other agreement between the Department and any consultant or team member in connection with the development and/or preparation of the DCWP Minimum Pay Rule and/or the Report, including, but not limited to all of the individuals and entities mentioned in the “Acknowledgments” section on page i of the Report.
5. All communications, and all records referring to, reflecting, or containing such communications, with respect to any economic, policy, data, or other analysis performed in connection with the DCWP Minimum Pay Rule and/or the Report, between:
 - a. the Department and anyone employed by the City Council, including, but not limited to, any member of the City Council and any staff representatives;
 - b. the Department and anyone employed by the Office of the Mayor of New York City, including, but not limited to, the Mayor of New York City and any staff representatives;
 - c. the Department and any consultant engaged or otherwise consulted regarding the development and/or preparation of the DCWP Minimum Pay

Rule and/or the Report, including, but not limited to all of the individuals and entities mentioned in the “Acknowledgments” section on page i of the Report;

- d. the Department and any representatives of any organization that represents delivery workers, restaurants, and/or restaurant workers; and/or
 - e. the Department and any other individual or entity.
6. All records relating to the consideration, preparation, and publication of the Report, including, but not limited to:
- a. All records regarding, concerning, or discussing (i) the “assumptions about how apps, consumers, workers, and restaurants will respond to the minimum pay rate” upon which the Department relied, (ii) the “assumptions about how the delivery industry in NYC would evolve in the absence of a minimum pay rate,” and (iii) the “alternative assumptions for key parameters [the Department] and considered [] in its deliberations.” Report at 5.
 - b. All records regarding, concerning, or discussing the Department’s conclusion that “[d]espite large losses at the corporate level, apps comfortably cover delivery worker pay on the average order.” Report at 8.
 - c. All records regarding, concerning, or discussing the Department’s analysis of “the spread between revenue and delivery worker pay” for the period of time outside of January 2021 to June 2022. Report at 9.
 - d. The results of the “estimated average hourly expenses” analyzed by the Department for gas moped users, electric moped users, and walkers, Report at 18, and all records regarding, concerning, or discussing the Department’s determination that “misreporting of illegal mopeds did not have a material impact” on the Department’s “estimates of true e-bike expenses,” Report at 20.

For purposes of these requests, I request that the datafiles be produced as a CSV file, or in the original data format if not feasible.

Finally, I remind the Department of its obligation to respond to my request numbered FOIL-2022-866-00337, dated July 14, 2022, which remains outstanding and unfulfilled.

Thank you for your prompt attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

/s/ Karen L. Dunn

Karen L. Dunn

EXHIBIT 3

WRITER'S DIRECT DIAL NUMBER

(202) 223-7308

WRITER'S DIRECT FACSIMILE

(202) 379-4217

WRITER'S DIRECT E-MAIL ADDRESS

kdunn@paulweiss.com

March 24, 2023

TO: John DeVito
JDeVito@Dcwp.nyc.org

Freedom of Information Officer
NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP)
42 Broadway, 8th floor
New York, NY 10004

To the Freedom of Information Officer at the DCWP:

Pursuant to Section 84 et seq. of the New York Public Officers Law, I request the following records from the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (the "Department")⁴ in connection with the revised proposed rule to implement Local Law 115 of 2021 that the Department released on March 7, 2023 (the "Second Proposed Rule"), which amended the proposed rule that the Department released on November 16, 2022 (the "First Proposed Rule").

These requests include all analyses, models, calculations, data, spreadsheets, and other computer files and code (with all formulas intact), communications, documents, and other records that are used therein, and any and all of their modules for any purpose, including for analyzing, calculating, and/or modeling the baseline alternative, all policy options discussed, and all policy options that were otherwise tested or modeled and not discussed. These requests further include all inputs for and outputs produced by these analyses, models, calculations, data, spreadsheets, and other computer files and code, communications, documents, and other records. These requests include all responsive records in the possession of the Department, including any consultant or team member engaged with the preparation and/or development of the Second Proposed Rule and/or any underlying reports, analyses, models, calculations, spreadsheets, or other computer files and code.

⁴ For purposes of these requests, "the Department" shall refer to the Department and anyone employed or otherwise engaged by the Department.

1. Each and every “structural model of app delivery in NYC,” “model,” or “modeling,” or draft thereof, that the Department used to estimate or assess the impacts or potential impacts of the Second Proposed Rule, or any and all alternatives considered by the Department.⁵

For purposes of these requests, I request that any data files be produced as a CSV file, or in the original data format if CSV is not feasible.

2. All records containing comments received by the Department or any other entity of the City of New York in connection with its consideration, preparation, and promulgation of the Second Proposed Rule or any related regulation or legislation that includes, but is not limited to, comments received in connection with the Department’s April 7, 2023 public hearing on the Second Proposed Rule.
3. All records related to the decision to propose the following features of the Second Propose Rule as they relate to the First Proposed Rule:
 - a. “retain the definitions of ‘on-call time,’ ‘pay period,’ and ‘trip time’ from the First Proposed Rule”;
 - b. “add[] definitions of “cancellation,” “cancelled,” “internal identifier,” and “utilization rate”;
 - c. “add[] to apps’ recordkeeping requirement an obligation to maintain a food delivery worker’s taxpayer identification number and certain information about a food delivery worker’s phone”;
 - d. “add[] an alternative method for determining minimum pay”;
 - e. “ma[k]e no changes to its method for calculating the workers’ compensation component of the rate in the Second Proposed Rule,”

⁵ My prior request, dated November 29, 2022, FOIL-2022-866-00509, requests, among other things, the same information as to the First Proposed Rule. The request remains outstanding and unfulfilled. For the avoidance of doubt, I am re-including the request in this request. The re-inclusion of this request is not intended to, and does not, relieve the Department of its obligation to produce responsive documents in a timely manner in response to FOIL-2022-866-00509.

including the determination that “retaining the workers’ compensation component is necessary to compensate workers for lost income and out-of-pocket medical expenses associated with job-related injuries”; and

- f. continued reliance on the Department’s survey after a determination the survey is not “inappropriate for its applications within the Department’s expense calculations.”
4. All records that support the Department’s decision to propose the following aspects of the “alternative method” in the Second Proposed Rule, including:
- a. the decision to divide the minimum pay rate by 60% to calculate the alternative minimum pay rate;
 - b. the decision to omit data from Relay in the calculation of the 60% figure used in calculating the alternative minimum pay rate;
 - c. the decision to make the alternative method only available “to apps with a utilization rate above 53%”; and
 - d. the decision to “not incorporat[e] the recommendation from apps to exclude portions of workers’ on-call time from the calculation of utilization rates.”
5. All records related to the Department’s updated “impact estimates to reflect the changes between the First Proposed Rule and the Second Proposed Rule,” as illustrated in Table 3 of the Second Proposed Rule, including, but not limited to:
- a. the Department’s assumption “that apps that currently pay per trip will begin to use trip time more efficiently and maintain a 60% utilization rate, consistent with the incentives under the alternative method.”
 - b. the Department’s statement that the Second Proposed Rule will cause workers to average 2.29 deliveries per hour, and all records that relate to the decision to revise this estimate down from the 2.50 deliveries per hour that was estimated in the First Proposed Rule;
 - c. the Department’s assumption that the Second Proposed Rule will “result in apps averaging 1.94 delivers per hour in 2025”;
 - d. the Department’s assumption that “multi-apping will continue at the same level as in the fourth quarter of 2021 . . . i.e., that works will spend an average of 17.7% of their combined trip time and on-call time logged into multiple apps simultaneously”;

6. All records showing minimum pay rate projected outcomes under the First Proposed Rule and Second Proposed Rule for years 2023 and 2024, including all of the data fields shown in the rows of Table 3 of the Second Proposed Rule.
7. All communications, and all records referring to, reflecting, or containing such communications, with respect to any economic policy, data, or other analysis performed in connection with the Second Proposed Rule between:
 - a. the Department and anyone employed by the City Council, including, but not limited to, any member of the City Council and any staff representatives;
 - b. the Department and anyone employed by the Office of the Mayor of New York City, including, but not limited to, the Mayor of New York City and any staff representatives;
 - c. the Department and any consultant engaged or otherwise consulted regarding the development and/or preparation of the Second Proposed Rule;
 - d. the Department and any representatives of any organization that represents delivery works, restaurants, and/or restaurant workers;
 - e. the Department and any individual or entity who submitted a comment including, but not limited to, comments received in connection with the Department's April 7, 2023 public hearing on the Second Proposed Rule; and/or
 - f. the Department and any other individual or entity.

Thank you for your prompt attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

/s/ Karen L. Dunn Karen L. Dunn

EXHIBIT 4

From: donotreply@records.nyc.gov <donotreply@records.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, Apr 03, 2023 at 4:26 PM
To: Dunn, Karen L <kdunn@paulweiss.com>
Subject: [OpenRecords] Request FOIL-2022-866-00509 Extended

The Department of Consumer Affairs (DCA) has extended the time to respond to your FOIL request FOIL-2022-86600509 for the following reasons:

You can expect a response on or about Friday, June 30, 2023.

Additional Information:

Please be advised that due to the volume and complexity of records concerning FOIL-2022-866-00509, it will take additional time to produce the remainder of the records to complete this request. Please note, some information responsive to your request is available at this link: <https://www.nyc.gov/site/dca/workers/Delivery-Worker-PublicHearing-Minimum-Pay-Rate.page>. Additional documents were provided today. The Department anticipates providing the remaining responsive records on a rolling basis, with a final response by June 30, 2023.

Please visit FOIL-2022-866-00509 to view additional information and take any necessary action.

EXHIBIT 5

A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC

© November 2022. New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection. All rights reserved.

Eric L. Adams
Mayor

Consumer and Worker Protection

Vilda Vera Mayuga
Commissioner

Acknowledgments

The Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (the Department) acknowledges the following staff who contributed to this report: Marlee Belford, Matt Bondy, John De Vito, Anastasia Eriksson, Maria Jennings, Sam Krinsky, Elizabeth Major, Bryan Menegazzo, Maria Milosh, Alex Moran, Michael Papadopoulos, David Rauch, Michael Tiger, and Elizabeth Wagoner.

The Department also collaborated with several partners and contractors. James Parrott, Ph.D., Director of Economic and Fiscal Policy for the Center for New York City Affairs at the New School, worked with the Department on an analysis of existing wage and benefit standards in NYC. Suresh Naidu, Ph.D., Professor of Economics and International and Public Affairs at Columbia University, worked with the Department in studying the effects of the proposed rule. Professor Adam Reich, Ph.D., and Patrick Youngblood of Columbia University, Andrew Wolf, Ph.D., of Rutgers University and the City University of New York (CUNY), Kate Sargent, Jen Robertson, Moriah Richardson, and Dorotya Miketa of Sam Schwartz Engineering, and Hildalyn Colón Hernández and Ligia Guallpa of the Worker's Justice Project, with the Department, developed and implemented a field survey of delivery worker expenses and working conditions. This survey was supported, in part, through funding from the Open Society Foundations and the Ford Foundation. Sherry Baron, M.D., M.P.H., Professor at the Barry Commoner Center for Health and the Environment and the Urban Studies Department, Queens College, CUNY, contributed to the Department's analysis of delivery workers' occupational injuries. Steven Picker of the Food and Beverage Industry Partnership at the NYC Department of Small Business Services (SBS), Andrew Rigie of the NYC Hospitality Alliance, and Kevin Dugan of the New York State Restaurant Association, with their colleagues, contributed to the Department's survey of restaurant operators and distributed the survey questionnaire. Rodney Stiles, formerly of the NYC Taxi and Limousine Commission (TLC), Kerem Levitas of the City of Seattle Office of Labor Standards, and Erica Groshen, Ph.D., Senior Economics Advisor at the Institute for Labor Relations at Cornell University, provided advice and consultation. Julia Kite-Laidlaw, William Carry, and colleagues of the NYC Department of Transportation (NYC DOT), Fabricio Caro and Nicole Simmons of the Fire Department of the City of New York (FDNY), and Charlene Obernauer and Lara Maldjian of the New York Committee for Occupational Safety and Health (NYCOSH) provided insights into the safety and health concerns relating to app delivery. Do Jun Lee, Ph.D., Assistant Professor at the Urban Studies Department, Queens College, CUNY, and Jing Wang, Adjunct Assistant Professor at Brooklyn College and the College of Staten Island, CUNY, advised on the experiences of Chinese delivery workers in NYC. Ryan Wanttaja and James DiGiovanni of TLC shared their experiences implementing NYC's minimum earnings standard for app for-hire service drivers. James Parrott, Suresh Naidu, Sherry Baron, Rodney Stiles, and Kate Sargent, with her colleagues at Sam Schwartz Engineering, also reviewed and commented on drafts of this report.

Abstract

In this report, the Department discusses the findings of its study into the working conditions of restaurant delivery workers who are engaged by apps as independent contractors in NYC. This report includes an analysis of the pay and working conditions of this workforce, describes the Department's proposed rule to establish a minimum pay rate for this work, and examines the minimum pay rate's anticipated impacts on apps, consumers, restaurants, and workers.

The Department's analysis is based principally on data obtained from apps and an online survey distributed to 123,000 workers who performed deliveries in NYC in the fourth quarter of 2021. The Department supplemented these sources with an online survey distributed to all restaurants in NYC, an in-person field survey of more than 400 delivery workers, testimony from a public hearing, interviews with stakeholders and other experts, and analysis of publicly available data on pay, benefits, and safety conditions.

The Department's study finds that NYC's app-based restaurant delivery workers currently earn $14.18 per hour with tips and $7.09 per hour without tips. Delivery workers' hourly expenses are $3.06, reducing their take home pay to $11.12 per hour with tips and $4.03 per hour without tips. The Department also finds that appbased restaurant delivery workers experience high rates of occupational injury.

The rate set forth in the proposed rule, after a two-year phase-in, would require restaurant apps to pay delivery workers who are engaged as independent contractors an average hourly rate of $23.82 per hour excluding tips, which is comprised of a $19.86 base rate, $1.70 to compensate for the absence of workers' compensation insurance, and $2.26 to reflect workers' expenses. Pay at this rate will provide for parity with workers covered by NYC's existing minimum earnings standard for app for-hire service drivers and approximates the total compensation app-based restaurant delivery workers would receive if classified as employees.

The Department's study projects that the minimum pay rate will encourage apps to use workers' time more efficiently, increasing deliveries from 1.6 to 2.5 per hour. Apps may choose to pass their remaining increase in labor costs to consumers through higher fees, increasing consumers' cost of delivery by $5.18 per order, on average. Though higher fees will moderate growth, the Department projects that the number of app deliveries will still increase by 35% by 2025. The Department also projects that restaurants will be mostly unaffected by the minimum pay rate but may see a modest increase in profits if consumers respond to higher app fees by purchasing directly from restaurants.

Table of Contents

1 Introduction	64
2 Sources and Methods	141
3 Overview of the Apps, Consumers, and Restaurants	145
4 Delivery Workers' Pay and Working Conditions.....	153
5 Design of the Minimum Payment Standard.....	171
6 Effects of the Minimum Payment Standard	179
7 Conclusion	181

1 Introduction

Section 20-1522 of the NYC Administrative Code requires the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (the Department) to study the pay and working conditions of app-based restaurant delivery workers and, no later than January 1, 2023, establish a minimum pay rate for their work by rule.⁶ Referenced herein as the Minimum Pay Law, this section was enacted in fall 2021 as part of a broader package of protections for appbased restaurant delivery workers in NYC, known as the Delivery Worker Laws.⁷ This report refers to the appbased restaurant delivery workers who are covered by the Delivery Worker Laws as “app delivery workers.” A related package of laws, also enacted in fall 2021, requires most apps to obtain a license to operate in NYC and regulates their interactions with restaurants and consumers, including setting a limit on the fees that apps can charge restaurants.⁸

This report summarizes the results of the Department’s study of the restaurant delivery app industry in NYC, discusses the Department’s proposed minimum pay rate, and examines the minimum pay rate’s prospective impact on apps, consumers, workers, and restaurants. Concurrently with release of this report, the Department is publishing the proposed rule establishing the minimum pay rate in the New York City Record.

Throughout this report, the Department refers to “apps,” “app delivery,” and “restaurant apps” as shorthand to describe the third-party food delivery services and third-party courier services covered by the Delivery Worker Laws. These phrases do not encompass delivery from apps that are not covered by the Delivery Worker Laws, such as supermarket or quick-delivery convenience store apps.⁹

The report is organized as follows. Section 2 briefly summarizes the Department’s sources and methods. Section 3 describes the apps, consumers, and restaurants, providing essential context for the analysis presented in the following sections. Section 4 describes the present conditions of app delivery workers, including their pay, hours, modes of transportation, expenses, safety conditions, and demographics. Section 5 presents the Department’s proposed minimum pay rate and discusses its key features. Section 6 models the minimum pay rate’s impact on apps, consumers, restaurants, and workers. Section 7 concludes. Throughout this report, for ease of reference, key terms are introduced in bold.

2 Sources and Methods

The Department’s study draws principally on data that the Department obtained from apps in response to administrative subpoenas combined with a survey that was distributed to nearly all of the approximately 123,000 workers who performed app deliveries in NYC between October and December 2021. The study also draws on additional sources, including a separate in-person field survey of more than 400 delivery workers, a survey of restaurant owners and managers that was distributed to all of the approximately 23,000 restaurants in NYC, testimony from a public hearing on delivery worker pay and working conditions, expert and stakeholder interviews, and public information. This section provides a high-level summary of these sources and their use in the study.

Sources

Pursuant to its authority under the Minimum Pay Law,¹⁰ the Department issued subpoenas requesting data and documents to all apps identified as potentially engaging independent contractors to perform restaurant deliveries in ⁶ NYC Administrative Code § 20-1522.

⁷ Id. §§ 20-1501–1524, 20-563.2, and 20-563.6.

⁸ Id. §§ 20-563–20-563.13.

⁹ See id. § 20-1501.

¹⁰ Id. § 1522(a)(2).

NYC. These subpoenas resulted in the production of information covering January 1, 2021 through June 30, 2022 from Uber Technologies, Inc., Grubhub, Inc., DoorDash Inc., and Relay Delivery, Inc. (hereinafter referred to as Uber Eats, Grubhub, DoorDash, and Relay respectively). The Department determined that these apps are collectively responsible for 99% of app deliveries in NYC. Through this process, the Department also obtained data and information from all other apps it identified as engaging independent contractors to perform deliveries in NYC. These apps are Chowbus Inc. (Chowbus), Club Feast Inc. (Club Feast), Just Order Enterprises Corp. (Fantuan), HungryPanda US Inc. (HungryPanda), Patio Delivery, Inc. (Patio), and GoHive Inc. (GoHive).

The information produced by Uber Eats, Grubhub, DoorDash, and Relay included four types of data. First, record-level data for all workers who accepted an offer to perform a delivery in NYC in the fourth quarter of 2021, including the phone and email from each account profile and information about each trip, payment, and login in the quarter. Second, ZIP code summary data on sales and payments to workers aggregated by consumer and worker ZIP code for the fourth quarter of 2021. Third, merchant summary data on sales aggregated by type of merchant for the fourth quarter of 2021. Fourth, weekly summary data for each week from January 1, 2021 through June 30, 2022, including, for each app, total deliveries, hours, and pay.

The Department entered into confidentiality agreements with the apps that govern the Department's use of data and other information that the apps consider to be trade secrets. Though the Department used such information in its study and deliberation to determine the minimum pay rate, the Department is not publishing any information that the apps designated confidential pursuant to these agreements.

To obtain information about workers' expenses, demographics, and safety conditions, the Department used the worker contact information obtained from the apps to conduct the NYC Delivery Worker Survey, a large-scale, representative survey of app delivery workers in NYC. The Department distributed an online survey form by text message and email to all workers who accepted an offer to perform a delivery in NYC between October 1 and December 31, 2021 for Uber Eats, Grubhub, DoorDash, Relay, Chowbus, or HungryPanda, except a small number of workers whose contact information was missing or suppressed. In total, between June 8 and July 26, 2022, the Department sent messages to 179,354 phone numbers and 192,546 email addresses, each including a custom link allowing the Department to match survey responses to the other record-level data obtained from the apps. The Department estimates that these phone numbers and emails belonged to 122,539 unique individuals, including 122,104 individuals who had worked for Uber Eats, Grubhub, DoorDash, and/or Relay. The text messages, emails, and survey forms were delivered in Arabic, Bengali, Chinese, English, French, Korean, Russian, Spanish, and Urdu. To limit the survey length, the Department divided its questionnaire into three modules, focusing on vehicle-related expenses (including e-bike, car, and moped expenses), non-vehicle expenses (e.g., phones), and safety and demographics. Each account was randomly assigned to receive one of the three modules. Within each module, survey length varied due to use of branching and skip logic. On average, respondents took four minutes and 23 seconds to complete the survey, answering 12 questions.

The Department received 7,956 responses from workers at Uber Eats, Grubhub, DoorDash, or Relay that satisfied its inclusion criteria,¹¹ consisting of 2,963 for the vehicle expense module, 2,843 for the non-vehicle expenses module, and 2,150 for the safety and demographics module. The combined 7,956 responses represent 6.5% of the estimated 122,104 unique individuals in the sample for these apps, after accounting for some workers' practice of maintaining multiple accounts. This response rate is several times the rate obtained by leading academic researchers conducting online surveys concerning low-wage work.¹²

¹¹ The Department excluded responses if the respondent did not affirm that they were over 18 and freely participating in the survey, if the respondent reported that they had never worked for an app, if the respondent failed certain tests for reliability embedded into the questionnaires, if more than one response was associated with a worker's contact information, or if the record-level data obtained from apps showed no working hours for all accounts associated with the respondent's phone number. The Department also excluded some responses due to a technical failure in certain text messages.

The Department also conducted a separate in-person field survey of delivery workers, in partnership with Sam Schwartz Engineering, a leading transportation engineering firm, Worker's Justice Project, a NYC-based worker center and sponsor of the Los Deliveristas Unidos campaign, and the Columbia University Labor Lab, an applied research program of Columbia University (referenced herein as the "Columbia-Sam Schwartz Deliveristas Survey"). The 58-item questionnaire asked workers about their work history, expenses, experiences with discipline and non-payment on the apps, and safety conditions. Respondents were recruited from delivery workers visiting Worker's Justice Project offices, at Los Deliveristas Unidos events held throughout the city, and through street canvassing at locations where delivery workers are known to congregate. Respondents completed the survey using an online form, mostly onsite at these locations. The survey was fielded between April 25 and July 15, 2022 in Bengali, Chinese, English, French, and Spanish, and generated 465 responses that met the Department's inclusion criteria.¹³ Though covering similar material as the Department's NYC Delivery Worker Survey, the two questionnaires differed in their design and wording.

To adequately consider the impacts of a minimum pay rate on restaurants, the Department fielded a survey of restaurant owners and managers (the "NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey"). The self-administered online survey consisted of 15 questions about the volume of deliveries at respondents' restaurants and how these deliveries were fulfilled. The survey was distributed by the NYC Department of Small Business Services' (SBS) Food and Beverage Industry Partnership, the NYC Hospitality Alliance, and the New York State Restaurant Association to their respective contact lists of restaurant owners and managers. It was fielded between June 28 and July 22, 2022. The SBS contact list is continuously updated based on the contacts listed in restaurants' food service establishment permit applications and is comprehensive of the approximately 23,000 restaurants in NYC. The Department's NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey was fielded in Chinese, English, and Spanish. The Department received 371 responses that met the Department's inclusion criteria,¹⁴ equal to approximately 1.61% of the restaurants in NYC. The distribution of respondents by cuisine, borough, number of employees, and level of service (i.e., full-service vs. limited service) was representative of all food service establishments in NYC.

To gather additional information on delivery worker pay, working conditions, and the delivery industry, the Department used its authority under the City Charter to hold a public hearing on June 15, 2022.¹⁰ The Department received written or oral testimony from 73 individuals and 45 organizations.¹⁵ Members of several worker advocacy groups testified, including Worker's Justice Project, the NYC Food Delivery Movement, International Alliance of Delivery Workers, New Immigrant Community Empowerment, the National

¹² See, e.g., Daniel Schneider & Kristen Harknett, Schedule instability and unpredictability and worker and family health and wellbeing, Washington Center for Equitable Growth (Sept. 2016) (discussing a survey response rate of 0.4% to Facebook advertisements targeting low-wage service-sector workers), <http://cdn.equitablegrowth.org/wp-content/uploads/2016/09/12135618/091216-WP-Schedule-instability-andunpredictability.pdf> (last accessed Oct. 28, 2022).

¹³ The Department excluded responses if the respondent did not affirm that they were over 18 and freely consenting to participate or if the respondent reported that they had never worked for an app.

¹⁴ The Department excluded responses if the respondent did not affirm that they were over 18 and freely consenting to participate. ¹⁰ See NYC Charter § 2203(h).

¹⁵ See Delivery Worker Public Hearing Transcript, NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (June 15, 2022) and Delivery Worker Public Hearing Written Testimony, NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (June 15, 2022), <https://www.nyc.gov/deliveryapps>. ¹² See NYC Administrative Code § 20-1501 ("trip" is "the time spent, distance travelled, and route followed by a worker to provide delivery services to a consumer through a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service, including travel to a business, picking up the food, beverage, or other goods for delivery, and taking and depositing such delivery at a different location as requested").

Employment Law Project, and Desis Rising Up and Moving. Representatives from DoorDash and Uber also testified.

The Department gathered further qualitative information for the study through frequent meetings, conversations, and interviews with delivery workers, worker advocates, app representatives, and restaurant association representatives. The Department also heard presentations from DoorDash, Uber Eats, and Grubhub in which they presented their views about the minimum pay rate. The Department also gathered information from officials at other City agencies with relevant subject matter expertise, including SBS, the Fire Department of the City of New York (FDNY), the NYC Department of Health and Mental Hygiene (DOHMH), the NYC Taxi and Limousine Commission (TLC), and the NYC Department of Transportation (NYC DOT).

Lastly, the Department used publicly available information in portions of its study, including prior studies, news articles, corporate financial reports, legal and regulatory documents, and public use data from government agencies.

Methods

This report presents results from descriptive analyses of apps, consumers, restaurants, and delivery workers (sections 3 and 4) and a structural model the Department developed to estimate the prospective effects of the proposed minimum pay rate (section 6). Except where noted, the report presents results only for Uber Eats, DoorDash, Grubhub, and Relay.

Though each section of the report notes the methods that produced the accompanying results, the Department presents a few general comments here.

First, some terminology. The Department uses “delivery” to refer to the pickup and drop-off of a single order and “trip” to refer to the unit of work offered to a delivery worker, consistent with the definition of this term in the Delivery Worker Laws.¹² A trip usually consists of a single delivery but may include multiple deliveries. The Department uses both terms in this report depending on context and the nature of the underlying data. When discussing workers’ incomes, “pay” refers to the compensation paid by the app exclusive of tips, “earnings” is the sum of pay and tips, and “net pay” and “net earnings” are pay and earnings, respectively, less expenses. With respect to workers’ time, “hours worked” or “working time,” as used in this report, consists of all “trip time” (i.e., the time between acceptance of a trip offer and its completion) and all “on-call time” (i.e., time in which a worker is connected to the app in a status where they can receive or accept trip offers, excluding trip time). Trip time includes travel to a restaurant, any time waiting for an order to be prepared, pickup at the restaurant, travel to the destination, and drop-off with the consumer.

Second, except where noted, the Department takes care to only present statistics that reflect controls for the common practice of workers maintaining accounts with multiple apps (“multi-apping”), including the less frequent practice of logging into multiple apps concurrently. The Department assessed multi-apping by matching worker accounts across apps using their account phone numbers and analyzing their responses about the apps they work for from the Department’s NYC Delivery Worker Survey. For example, the recordlevel data obtained from apps showed that 219,787 accounts were associated with a delivery in NYC at Uber Eats, Grubhub, DoorDash, or Relay in the fourth quarter of 2021 and that these accounts logged 20.21 million hours of working time. However, after adjustment for multi-apping, the Department estimates these accounts were held by 122,104 unique individuals who spent 17.16 million hours connected to at least one app. These adjustments reflect the Department’s estimate of the percent of workers with multiple accounts (56.3%), which it calculated from the NYC Delivery Worker Survey, and the Department’s estimate of the percent of working time workers logged concurrently. To estimate the latter, the Department used the record-level data it obtained from the apps to analyze the login and logoff times of workers who used the same phone number with multiple apps, then extrapolated to the 56.3% of the workers who maintain multiple accounts (as measured from NYC Delivery Worker Survey data). Using this method, the Department estimates that workers spend 17.7% of working time connected to more than one app. The Department performed this analysis separately for non-car workers, car workers, and all workers.

Third, in its measurement of delivery worker expenses, the Department generally adheres to Internal Revenue Service (IRS) guidelines for the deduction of business expenses on tax returns. For most cost categories, the Department identified the items purchased by workers through its NYC Delivery Worker Survey and separately gathered market prices from retailers or other independent sources. Using market prices rather than workers' recollections of dollar amounts they spent generally provides for more accurate expense estimation.

Fourth, in all its analyses of its NYC Delivery Worker Survey, the Department applied post-stratification weights to address possible non-response bias. To develop the weights, the Department defined 20 strata within the record-level data by the mix of apps (Uber Eats only, DoorDash only, Grubhub only, Relay only, and multiple) and quartile of hours worked. This allows the Department to control for differences in response rates between workers with more hours and workers with fewer hours, for differences in response rates between apps, and for differences in response rates between workers who work for multiple apps and workers who work for only one app. The Department developed separate post-stratification weights for each survey module and for analyses that pooled multiple modules. The Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey was drawn from a convenience sample, so results are presented without weighting. Because responses to the Department's NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey showed good representativeness on observables, the Department determined weighting was unnecessary.

Fifth, for convenience, the Department refers to the merchants on apps' platforms as "restaurants." Restaurant delivery is a requirement for an app to be covered under the Delivery Worker Laws, though some covered apps also engage workers to perform deliveries from convenience stores, grocery stores, or other retailers, in addition to restaurants. However, non-restaurant deliveries are not provided by covered apps in NYC on a scale sufficient to justify a differentiated analysis. Except where noted, restaurant and non-restaurant deliveries are treated as undifferentiated throughout this report. The Department interprets its findings aware of this limitation and determined that it does not materially impact the study results or the basis for the minimum pay rate.

Lastly, the model used by the Department to estimate potential impacts relies on assumptions about how apps, consumers, workers, and restaurants will respond to the minimum pay rate. It also relies on assumptions about how the delivery industry in NYC would evolve in the absence of a minimum pay rate. Though the results reported reflect the Department's best estimate of likely impacts, the Department also estimated results under alternative assumptions for key parameters and considered them in its deliberations.

3 Overview of the Apps, Consumers, and Restaurants

This section provides information the Department gathered for the study on apps, consumers, and restaurants.

Apps

Apps provide either or both of two related services: a marketplace service that allows a consumer to search for restaurants and place orders online; and a courier service, in which the app dispatches a worker to a restaurant to pick up the food and deliver it to the consumer. If an app provides a marketplace service, NYC requires the app to obtain a license from the Department and limits the fees it can charge restaurants.¹⁶ If an app provides a courier

¹⁶ Id. §§ 20-563 and 20-563.1. Apps that provide a marketplace service are also required to disclose to a delivery worker how much such worker earned in gratuities and to enter into an agreement with each restaurant on its platform that allows workers to use such restaurant's bathroom. See id. §§ 20-563.2 and 20-563.6.

service, it is covered by the Minimum Pay Law, as well as most other provisions of the Delivery Worker Laws.¹⁷ In the case of the three largest delivery apps, Uber Eats, Grubhub, and DoorDash, the two services are usually combined, so when a consumer orders through an app, a worker dispatched by that same app arrives at the consumer's door. A restaurant may also elect to receive orders through an app's marketplace but still send its own employee to do the delivery. Conversely, a restaurant might receive an order over the phone or through its own website but then use one of the delivery apps to dispatch a worker to come pick the food up and deliver it. A restaurant might also receive an order through one app's marketplace but use another to fulfill the delivery. Consumers also use apps' marketplace service to place orders that they pick up themselves.

When app delivery first developed in NYC, it was a marketplace-only service, with the deliveries still performed by restaurant employees. Over time, delivery by workers dispatched by apps, and engaged by the apps as independent contractors, became the more common arrangement. Growth was rapid throughout the 2010's and increased sharply with the onset of the pandemic, as orders increased by more than 50% in the NYC metro area¹⁸ and doubled nationally.¹⁹ Since then, the app delivery industry has not contracted to its prepandemic size. Growth has only continued.²⁰ In NYC, there were 17% more deliveries in the first six months of 2022 than the same period in 2021,²¹ and app delivery in the United States is now more than four times larger than at the start of 2018.²²

This fast growth has resulted in delivery apps quickly becoming an important part of the NYC restaurant market. Between March 2021 and May 2022, app deliveries accounted for $3.6 billion of the $24.7 billion in NYC restaurant sales (15%).²³ Meals ordered through an app, either for consumer pickup or delivery by a restaurant employee, account for an additional share of sales.

Figure 1. Restaurant Sales in NYC ($, in billions)

¹⁷ Id. §§ 20-1501–1524.

¹⁸ See U.S. Food Delivery Mid-Month update: Data through 6/21/22, YipitData (June 23, 2022).

¹⁹ See Kabir Ahuja et al., Ordering in: The rapid evolution of food delivery, McKinsey and Company (Sept. 22, 2021), <https://www.mckinsey.com/industries/technology-media-and-telecommunications/our-insights/ordering-in-the-rapid-evolution-of-food-delivery> (last accessed Oct. 28, 2022).

²⁰ See YipitData, supra note 15.

²¹ Department analysis of weekly aggregate data obtained from apps.

²² See Kabir Ahuja et al., supra note 16.

²³ Department analysis of weekly aggregate data obtained from apps, in combination with data on taxable sales in New York. Taxable sales and purchases by geography and industry through May 2022, NYS Department of Taxation and Finance (July 21, 2022), https://www.tax.ny.gov/research/stats/stat_excise/taxable_sales_and_purchases/taxable_sales_and_purchases_open_data.htm (last accessed Sept. 30, 2022).

Values for app delivery only include deliveries in which the app engaged the delivery worker to perform the delivery. Source: Department analysis of weekly aggregate data obtained from apps and quarterly data on taxable sales from the NYS Department of Taxation and Finance.²⁴

The Department has identified 10 apps that engage independent contractors to perform restaurant deliveries in NYC. The four largest (Uber Eats, Grubhub, DoorDash, and Relay) are responsible for nearly all app deliveries in NYC (99%), performing 124 million deliveries in NYC between July 2021 and June 2022.²⁵ The remainder of the market consists of three smaller apps (Chowbus, HungryPanda, and Fantuan), one app catering business (Club Feast), and two recent entrants to the NYC market (Patio and GoHive). Additional businesses offer marketplace services to restaurants in NYC but do not hire, retain or engage delivery workers.

The three largest apps (Uber Eats, DoorDash, Grubhub) are all global, publicly-traded companies. According to a report by McKinsey & Company, Uber Eats, including Postmates Inc. (Postmates) which it acquired in 2020,²⁶ is the market leader locally, with approximately 40% of marketplace sales in NYC.²⁷ Grubhub, which merged with Seamless in 2013²⁸ and was purchased by the Netherlands-based Just Eat in 2021, has about 35%.²⁹ DoorDash, which is the largest and fastest-growing nationally,³⁰ holds only about a 25% share in NYC.²⁸ The Department estimates that the deliveries that Uber Eats, DoorDash, and Grubhub perform in NYC generate about 4.8% of their global delivery revenue³¹ and 2.5% of their revenue across all lines of business.³² Despite large losses, which are not uncommon for growing technology companies, the three apps had a combined $75 billion market capitalization as of October 2, 2022.³³

²⁴ See NYS Department of Taxation and Finance, supra note 20.

²⁵ Department analysis of weekly aggregate data obtained from apps.

²⁶ See Uber Completes Acquisition of Postmates, Uber Investor (Dec. 1, 2020), <https://investor.uber.com/news-events/news/press-releasedetails/2020/Uber-Completes-Acquisition-of-Postmates/default.aspx> (last accessed Sept. 30, 2022).

²⁷ See Kabir Ahuja et al., supra note 16.

²⁸ See Seamless and Grubhub Announce Merger, PR Newswire (May 20, 2013), <https://www.prnewswire.com/news-releases/seamless-and-grubhub-announce-merger-208124841.html> (last accessed Sept. 30, 2022).

²⁹ See Kabir Ahuja et al., supra note 16.

³⁰ *Id.*²⁸ Id.

³¹ See Uber Tech., Inc., Quarterly Report (Form 10-Q) (Aug. 4, 2022); see DoorDash, Inc., Quarterly Report (Form 10-Q) (Aug. 5, 2022); see Half Year 2022 Results, Just Eat Takeaway.com (Aug. 3, 2022), <https://s3.eu-central-1.amazonaws.com/takeaway-corporatewebsite-dev/0308-2022-Press-Release-Just-Eat-Takeaway.com-Half-Year-2022-Results.pdf>.

³² See id.

³³ See Market capitalization of DoorDash from 2020-2022, Companies Marketcap, <https://companiesmarketcap.com/doordash/marketcap> (last accessed Oct. 5, 2022); see Market capitalization of Just Eat Takeaway from 2016 to 2022, Companies Marketcap, <https://companiesmarketcap.com/just-eat-takeaway/marketcap> (last accessed Oct. 5, 2022); see Market capitalization of Uber from 2019-2022, Companies Marketcap, <https://companiesmarketcap.com/uber/marketcap> (last accessed Oct. 5, 2022).

Relay, the fourth largest delivery app, is an NYC-based startup, and the only one operating in NYC that does not have a consumer-facing mobile application or website. Instead of marketing to consumers, Relay serves restaurants as a lower-cost option to fulfill their deliveries.³⁴

Delivery apps generate revenue by charging fees to restaurants and consumers (except for Relay, which charges only restaurants). Delivery worker pay is the main cost they incur.

Figure 2. Unit Economics of App Delivery in NYC, July 2021 – June 2022 ($)

Source: Department analysis of weekly aggregate data obtained from apps. Visualization adapted from Kabir Ahuja et al.³³

Figure 2 breaks down the amount paid by a consumer on an average order in NYC between July 2021 and June 2022. Moving left to right, the total cost to the consumer was $33.09, consisting of the $18.33 that went to the restaurant, $4.11 to the worker in tips, $2.11 in taxes, $3.06 in fees charged to the consumer by the app, and $5.48 that the app received as its share of the order subtotal (i.e., the app’s commission, usually taken by the app as a percentage of the order subtotal). App revenue ($8.54) is the sum of the consumer fees and this commission. Out of this, apps paid an average of $4.32 to the delivery worker, leaving a remainder of $4.22 as the app’s gross margin.

Several insights emerge from this analysis. At $33.09, the total cost to the consumer is 39% more than the $23.81 order subtotal (represented in Figure 2 as the sum of the restaurant share of order and the commission charged to the restaurant). Sixty-four percent of apps’ revenue comes from the commissions they charge to restaurants ($5.48), with the remaining 36% from fees charged to the consumer ($3.06). Apps retain 49% ($4.22) of their revenue on each order, paying out the remaining 51% to the delivery worker ($4.32). Despite large losses at the corporate level, apps comfortably cover delivery worker pay on the average order.

Figure 3. App Revenue per Delivery and Delivery Worker Pay per Delivery in NYC ($)

³⁴ See Grow your restaurant’s margins by switching to Relay, Relay, <https://www.relay.delivery> (last accessed Sept. 30, 2022).

Source: Department analysis of weekly aggregate data obtained from apps.

³³ See Kabir Ahuja et al., supra note 16.

As shown in Figure 3, the spread between revenue and delivery worker pay has grown over the period for which the Department obtained data (January 2021 – June 2022), driven by both increasing revenue and decreasing pay.

Consumers

For consumers, the apps have increased convenience and expanded the availability of delivery. Though restaurant delivery still represents only 0.7% of household expenditures,³⁵ delivery sales have been growing faster than the restaurant industry as a whole,³⁶ especially among younger consumers.³⁷

In NYC, consumer expenditures on app delivery are greatest in the highest-income areas. In the top 20 ZIP codes with the highest income, residents spent $36.64 per person per month on app delivery in the fourth quarter of 2021, 73% more than the $21.15 spent by residents in the 20 ZIP codes with the lowest income. The difference is explained mostly by higher delivery volumes. The 20 ZIP codes with the highest income ordered 1.5 deliveries per person per month in the fourth quarter of 2021 (approximately one order per person every 20 days), with an average subtotal of $24.56 per delivery, while the 20 ZIP codes with the lowest income ordered 0.9 deliveries per person per month in the same period (approximately one order per person every 33 days), with an average subtotal of $23.35 per delivery.³⁸

³⁵ Department analysis of data from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics Current Expenditure Survey and the Purdue University Consumer Food Insights survey. Food away from home, which includes dine-in, take-away, and delivery, comprises 3.9% of household expenditures.

Restaurant delivery (including fast food delivery) comprises 17% of this category for urban consumers. See Jayson L. Lusk & Sam Polzin, Consumer Food Insights, Purdue University (April 2022), https://ag.purdue.edu/cfdas/wp-content/uploads/2022/05/Report_04-2022.pdf; see also Expenditure Surveys, 2020, U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics (Sept. 2021), <https://www.bls.gov/cex/tables/calendar-year/mean-item-shareaverage-standard-error/cu-income-before-taxes-2020.pdf>.

³⁶ See Kabir Ahuja et al., supra note 16.

³⁷ Id.

³⁸ Department analysis of ZIP code summary data obtained from apps and the U.S. Census Bureau 2016-2020 American Community Survey.

See 2020 American Community Survey: 5-Year Estimates – Table B19013: Median Household Income in the Past 12 Months, U.S. Census Bureau, <https://data.census.gov/cedsci/table?t=Income%20and%20Poverty&g=0400000US36%248600000&y=2020&tid=ACSDT5Y2020.B19013&moe=false> (last accessed Oct. 25, 2022). To limit bias from deliveries to work addresses, the Department excludes ZIP codes with more than two jobs for every five residents from its analysis, comprising 39 of the 179 ZIP codes entirely within NYC that have ZIP-code-level U.S. Census Bureau data for

As shown in Figure 4, deliveries, including those to both home and work addresses, are concentrated in Manhattan below 110th Street and nearby areas of Brooklyn and Queens.

Figure 4. Monthly App Deliveries in NYC by ZIP Code, Fourth Quarter 2021 (in thousands)

Restaurants

For NYC restaurants, the growth of app delivery has had a mixed impact. During the early phases of the pandemic, app delivery provided a lifeline, especially to restaurants that did not previously offer delivery by allowing them to pivot quickly to delivery and stay in business.³⁹ For restaurants that previously offered delivery, the apps have allowed them to expand their service areas, increase delivery sales, and attract new consumers (although also at the cost of increased competition).⁴⁰

However, the switch in consumer demand towards app delivery has left restaurants highly dependent on the apps, forcing them to accept high commissions (23% of the order subtotal is the maximum apps can charge to restaurants under NYC law).⁴¹ A recent analysis found that margins on app deliveries were slightly negative for restaurants nationally, and that profitability tends to decline as the delivery share of sales increases.⁴²

Based on responses to its NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey, the Department estimates that 92% of NYC restaurants prepare orders for delivery, and that on average, delivery represents 27% of sales.

Table 1. Restaurant Delivery Sales in NYC

income, jobs, and population. For the remaining 140 ZIP codes, the ratio of jobs to residents is 0.25 at the top 20 by income, and 0.18 in the bottom 20 by income.

³⁹ See NYC Council, Committee Report of the Governmental Affairs Division (Aug. 26, 2021) at 13-14.

⁴⁰ Id. at 4-5.

⁴¹ See NYC Administrative Code § 20-563.3.

⁴² See Kabir Ahuja et al., supra note 16.

Delivery as a Percent of Sales (%)	Distribution of Restaurants (%)
0	8
1 – 10	22
10 – 20	16
20 – 30	18
30 – 40	12
40 – 50	6
50 – 60	6
60 – 70	5
70+	7

Interpretation: Delivery is between 1% and 10% of sales for 22% of restaurants in NYC. Source: Department analysis of data from the NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey.

While most restaurants use apps to fulfill deliveries, the industry has not abandoned dispatching their own employees. Fifty-two percent of restaurants only use workers dispatched by apps to make the delivery, compared to 40% that employ their own delivery workers, which they either rely on exclusively (8%) or more commonly in combination with workers dispatched by the apps (32%).

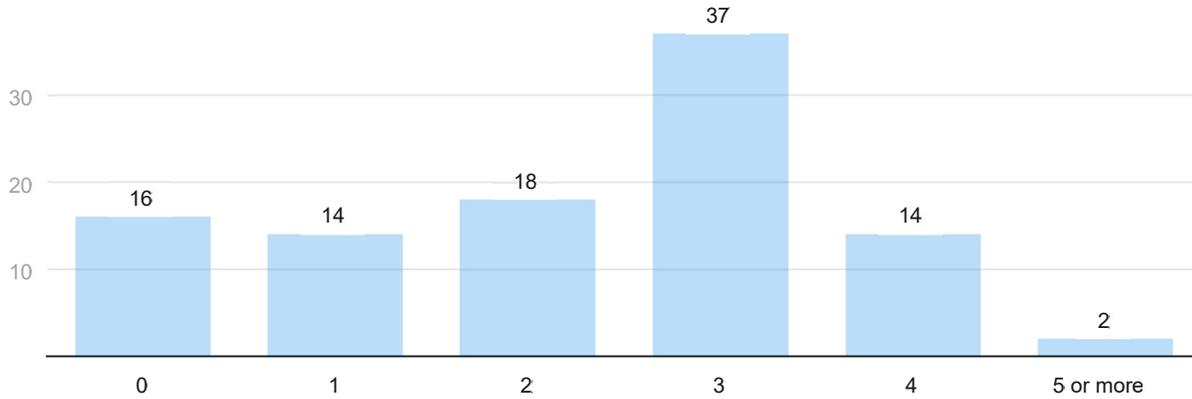

Figure 5. Distribution of Restaurants in NYC, by Delivery Arrangement (%)

Percentages do not sum to due to rounding. Source: Department analysis of data from the NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey.

Restaurants tend to use multiple apps for delivery with 53% using three or more apps and only 14% relying on a single app for deliveries.

Figure 6. Distribution of Restaurants in NYC, by Number of Apps Used for Delivery (%)

Percentages do not sum to 100 due to rounding. "0" includes restaurants that do not prepare orders for delivery and restaurants that only use their own employees for delivery. Source: Department analysis of data from the NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey.

Uber, Grubhub, and DoorDash all deliver for between 61% and 67% of restaurants, while Relay delivers for 23%. No other app was used for deliveries by more than 2% of restaurants.

Figure 7. Distribution of Restaurants in NYC, by App Used for Delivery (%)

Grubhub includes Seamless. DoorDash includes Caviar. Uber Eats includes Postmates. "No app" includes restaurants that do not prepare orders for delivery and restaurants that only use their own employees for delivery. Source: Department analysis of data from the NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey.

Overall, among respondents that prepare orders for delivery, 96% use the apps as part of their operations, whether for online ordering, delivery, or both.⁴³

⁴³ Department analysis of data from the NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey.

4 Delivery Workers' Pay and Working Conditions

In this section, the Department presents its estimates of the number of people who work for the restaurant delivery apps and describes their demographics, modes of transportation, delivery distances, hours of work, pay and tips, expenses, net pay and earnings, earnings and expense risks, and safety conditions.

Workforce Size

The Department estimates that as of the second quarter of 2022, 61,000 delivery workers were working for restaurant apps in NYC in any given week.⁴⁴ However, the total number of people working for the apps over longer time periods may be considerably higher. For instance, at the four largest apps, in the fourth quarter of 2021 there were 219,787 worker accounts associated with at least one delivery in NYC. After adjusting for multi-apping, the Department estimates that these accounts were held by 122,104 individuals, comprising 4% of all New Yorkers who had any paid employment or self-employment during these months.⁴⁵

Though a large workforce, many workers appear to have only limited engagement with the apps. In the fourth quarter of 2021, 39% of the unique worker phone numbers in the Department's data were associated with deliveries in two or fewer weeks.

Demographics

App delivery workers are predominantly aged 18-34 (57%), male (75%), and non-white and/or Hispanic (91%).

Table 2. Demographics of App Delivery Workers in NYC and All Workers in NYC (%)

⁴⁴ Department analysis of weekly aggregate data obtained from apps.

⁴⁵ Department analysis of record-level data obtained from apps and the NYC Delivery Worker Survey, in combination with data from the U.S. Census Bureau Current Population Survey for April to June 2022. See Sarah Flood et al., Integrated Public Use Microdata Series, Current Population Survey: Version 10.0, IPUMS CPS, <https://doi.org/10.18128/D030.V10.0> (last accessed Oct. 25, 2022).

	App Delivery Workers	All Workers
Age
18-34	57	37
35-54	38	41
55-64	4	15
65+	<1	7
Gender
Male	75	52
Female	24	47
Other responses	1	1
Race/Ethnicity
Hispanic, of any race	47	20
Black or African American, non-Hispanic	25	20
Asian or Pacific Islander, non-Hispanic	16	18
White, non-Hispanic	9	41
Other responses	3	1
English Proficiency
Speaks English less than very well	39	19

Source: Demographics for app delivery workers are from the NYC Delivery Worker Survey. Demographics for all workers are from the July 2020 to June 2022 U.S. Census Bureau Current Population Survey (for all except English proficiency) and 2020 American Community Survey (for English proficiency).

Modes of Transportation

Workers perform app deliveries using four main modes of transportation: mopeds, e-bikes, cars, and walking.

Mopeds, also known as limited use motorcycles, are subject to many of the same regulations as ordinary motorcycles. Among other requirements, this means they must have a vehicle identification number (VIN) and can only be driven if they are registered with the New York State Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) and operated by a licensed driver.⁴⁶ Depending on the vehicle's maximum speed, the driver must also carry liability insurance.⁴⁷ Mopeds are generally required to follow the same driving rules as cars and ordinary motorcycles.⁴⁸ By contrast, the regulation of e-bikes, which became legal to operate in NYC in November 2020,⁴⁹ is similar to bicycles. This means that a license, registration, and insurance are not required.⁵⁰ E-bikes are generally required to follow the same driving rules as bicycles.⁵¹

Figure 8. E-bikes and Mopeds

⁴⁶ See Electric Bicycles & More, NYC Department of Transportation, <https://www1.nyc.gov/html/dot/downloads/pdf/ebikes-more-english.pdf>.

⁴⁷ See Register a moped, NYS Department of Motor Vehicles, <https://dmv.ny.gov/registration/register-moped> (last accessed Sept 30, 2022).

⁴⁸ See NYC Department of Transportation, supra note 45.

⁴⁹ See Rules of the NYC Department of Transportation (34 RCNY) § 4-01.

⁵⁰ See NYC Department of Transportation, supra note 45.

⁵¹ See id.

Image of Class 2 E-bike and Class C Moped. Source: NYC Department of Transportation.⁵²

Mopeds do not have functional pedals and are operated from an upright seated position with feet placed on a center platform. They may be gas or electric. E-bikes have functional pedals paired with an electric motor. In some models, the motor is only engaged while pedaling, known as “pedal-assist.” However, delivery workers typically use models where the motor is engaged from the handle, known as “throttle e-bikes.”

Though apps maintain self-reported data concerning workers’ modes of transportation, there is significant uncertainty about the actual modes in use. Some apps offer trips to a worker based on their self-reported mode of transportation, giving workers an incentive to be strategic in the mode that they report. Further, the mopeds typically used by delivery workers are commonly mis-labelled by sellers as “e-bikes.” These mopeds often lack VINs, meaning they cannot be registered or insured and, as a result, are illegal to both drive and sell in New York State.⁵³ Apps are required to ensure their delivery workers do not use illegal mopeds,⁵⁴ though casual inspection on the street suggests workers commonly use these mopeds for app delivery, and NYC DOT reports their use is increasing.⁵⁵

For these reasons, the Department believes that most moped users have misreported their vehicles as e-bikes both to the apps and in the Department’s NYC Delivery Worker Survey. As a result, throughout this report, references to e-bikes in either the data the Department obtained from apps or the NYC Delivery Worker Survey should be assumed to include a significant number of illegal mopeds. Separately, apps did identify a small number of motorcycle users in their data, which the Department believes consist mostly of workers using vehicles properly classed as motorcycles and possibly some users of legal mopeds.

Still, with these caveats, the Department finds that non-car modes of transportation predominate, especially ebikes (including mopeds misreported as e-bikes). Based on the apps’ data, non-car modes of transportation account for 56% of workers but 69% of hours worked and 78% of deliveries. The difference in these distributions is explained by higher hours per week, and deliveries per hour worked for workers using a non-car mode of transportation.

Table 3. App Delivery Workers, Hours, and Deliveries, by Mode of Transportation, NYC, Fourth Quarter 2021

	Workers (%)	Hours (%)	Deliveries (%)	Hours per Week	Deliveries per Hour
Non-Car	56.1	69.4	77.7	22.2	1.869
E-bike	46.1	54.1	65.8	21.3	2.030
Walking	8.7	13.5	10.2	25.7	1.266

⁵² Id.

⁵³ See New York State Vehicle and Traffic Law §§ 401(1) and 2267.

⁵⁴ See NYC Administrative Code § 10-157.

⁵⁵ Hearing Written Testimony at 4 (letter of Benjamin Smith, NYC Department of Transportation).

Motorcycle	1.3	1.8	1.7	25.2	1.530
Other	<0.1	<0.1	<0.1	17.6	1.626
Car	43.9	30.6	22.4	17.5	1.128

Percentages may not sum due to rounding. Hours per week calculation excludes weeks in which a worker did not perform work for any delivery app. Source: Department analysis of record-level data obtained from apps.

Examining trends over time, the Department finds a steady movement away from cars.

Figure 9. Percent of App Deliveries in NYC Performed by Cars (%)

Source: Department analysis of weekly aggregate data obtained from apps.

Delivery Distances

Workers travel 1.77 miles for an average delivery, including travel to the pickup location and between the pickup and drop-off locations. Workers using cars tend to perform longer deliveries.

Table 4. App Delivery Trip Distances in NYC, by Mode of Transportation, Fourth Quarter 2021

	E-bike	Car	All Modes
Miles per trip (mean)	1.45	3.12	1.77
Distribution of trips, by miles travelled (%)
0.00 - 0.49	9	2	15
0.50 - 0.99	26	8	21
1.00 - 1.49	26	12	19
1.50 - 1.99	17	13	14
2.00 - 2.49	11	12	10
2.50 - 2.99	6	10	7
3.00 - 3.49	3	9	4
3.50 - 3.99	1	8	3

4.00+	1	26	7
Total	100	100	100

Distances are as estimated by apps based on offer, pickup, and drop-off locations. "All modes" includes e-bikes, cars, motorcycles, and walkers. Source: Department analysis of record-level data obtained from apps.

Hours of Work

Delivery workers generally can connect to the app when they wish but, depending on demand, apps may block a worker from initiating a status in which they can receive trip offers or may offer trips only infrequently. Some apps permit workers to pre-schedule shifts, guaranteeing them access to the platform during specific hours (but limiting their future earnings opportunities if they miss or cancel their shift).⁵⁶ Some apps also provide incentives to hit production targets over specific periods.⁵⁷ Once connected to the app in an active status, workers receive trip offers, which they may accept or decline, though some apps condition future earnings opportunities on acceptance rates.⁵⁸

Findings from the Department's NYC Delivery Worker Survey indicate that app delivery is the main or only job for most workers, especially among those using e-bikes.

Table 5. Percent of NYC App Delivery Workers who Perform App Delivery as their Only, Main, or Secondary Job, by Mode of Transportation (%)

	E-bike	Car
Main or only job	77	56
Only	70	51
Main	7	5
Secondary	23	44

Source: Department analysis of data from the NYC Delivery Worker Survey.

Responses also indicate that 46.6% of e-bike workers and 34.9% of car drivers perform deliveries on a full-time basis.

Table 6. Percent of NYC App Delivery Workers who Work Full-time and Part-time, by Mode of Transportation (%)

	E-bike	Car
Full-time	46.6	34.9

⁵⁶ See Make money on your schedule, Grubhub, Inc., <https://driver.grubhub.com/scheduling> (last accessed Oct. 5, 2022); see How to schedule and/or edit a Dash, DoorDash, Inc., https://help.doordash.com/dashers/s/article/How-to-schedule-a-dash?language=en_US (last accessed Oct. 5, 2022).

⁵⁷ See How does Quest work?, Uber Technologies, Inc., <https://help.uber.com/driving-and-delivering/article/how-does-questwork?nodeId=3a43fa72-4fc2-42d0-bc1d-63c4c0bddb9d> (last accessed Oct. 5, 2022); see Top Dasher, DoorDash, Inc., https://help.doordash.com/dashers/s/article/Top-Dasher?language=en_US (last accessed Oct. 5, 2022).

⁵⁸ See Grubhub and DoorDash, supra note 55.

Full-time is defined as 30 or more hours per week. Part-time is defined as fewer than 30 hours per week. Source: Department analysis of data from the NYC Delivery Worker Survey.

As shown in Figure 10, more delivery workers connect to the apps during peak dinner hours (left panel), during which they spend more of their time engaged in trips (middle panel) and perform more deliveries per hour (right panel). The right panel also shows that, throughout the day, car drivers perform substantially fewer deliveries per hour than e-bike workers.

Figure 10. Activity on Delivery Apps in NYC by Time of Day, Fourth Quarter 2021

"Workers engaged" is the daily average number of workers connected to an app. "Utilization" is the percent of working time spent engaged in a trip. "Deliveries per hour" is the average per worker for each category. "All workers" includes e-bikes, cars, motorcycles, and walkers. Source: Department analysis of record-level data obtained from apps.

Weekly hours average 21.3 for e-bike workers, 17.5 for car drivers, and 20.7 overall.⁵⁹

Workers spend 61% of their working time engaged in a trip and 39% on-call. During on-call time, they receive a trip offer every 4 minutes and accept an offer every 11 minutes, on average. Time spent waiting at a restaurant for an order to be prepared is included within trip time and not separately identifiable in the data obtained from the apps.

Apps benefit from workers' on-call time in two ways. First, the high availability of workers helps the apps provide short delivery windows to consumers. Second, it helps apps minimize pay per trip because a larger pool of available workers is more likely to contain at least one worker willing to accept a low offer.

⁵⁹ Department analysis of record-level data obtained from apps. For each delivery worker, this analysis excludes weeks in which the worker did not perform any work for delivery apps.

Table 7. Trip Time and On-Call Time of App Delivery Workers in NYC, Fourth Quarter 2021

	Percent of Hours Worked (%)
Trip time	61
On-call time	39
Login to first trip	9
Between trips	6
Last trip to logoff	12
Login to logoff with no trip	12

Analysis performed at the worker account level, without adjustment for multi-apping. Source: Department analysis of record-level data obtained from apps.

To secure better availability of work, workers often maintain active accounts on more than one app and sometimes connect to more than one app concurrently. Analyzing the record-level data obtained from apps, together with the Department’s NYC Delivery Worker Survey, the Department finds that 56.3% of delivery workers work for more than one app and that 17.7% of working time is logged concurrently.⁶⁰ Several worker advocates testified at the Department’s public hearing that maintenance of multiple accounts was common.⁶¹

Pay and Tips

Apps pay workers using a variety of methods. Uber Eats, Grubhub, and DoorDash predominantly pay workers on a per-trip basis with proprietary algorithms determining the payment for each trip. These workers also receive 5.6% of their pay in the form of bonuses or incentives not tied to specific trips.⁶² Relay pays workers a regular rate of $12.50 per hour worked, including on-call time.

Workers at Uber Eats, Grubhub, DoorDash, and Relay earn an average of $14.18 per hour worked, split evenly between pay and tips.⁶³ Hourly pay and tips are higher for e-bike workers due to the higher number of deliveries they perform per hour. Pay per trip is slightly higher for cars than for e-bikes, reflecting longer trip distances.

Table 8. Hourly Pay and Tips of NYC App Delivery Workers, by Mode of Transportation, Fourth Quarter 2021 ($)

⁶⁰ Department analysis of record-level data obtained from apps and the NYC Delivery Worker Survey.

⁶¹ Hearing Transcript at 19 (statement of Ligia Gualpa, Worker's Justice Project); Hearing Written Testimony at 12 (letter of NYC Comptroller Brad Lander), at 16, 21 (letter of Hildalyn Colón Hernández, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker’s Justice Proect).

⁶² Department analysis of weekly aggregate data obtained from apps.

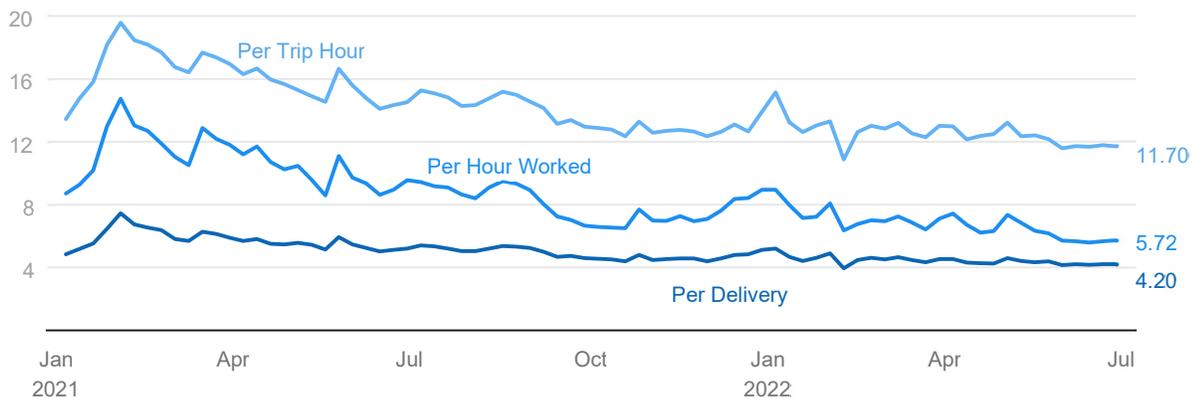

⁶³ As explained in section 2, the term “pay” refers to the compensation paid by the app, excluding tips, and the term “earnings” refers to the sum of pay and tips.

	E-bike	Car	All Modes
Per hour
Earnings	14.69	13.46	14.18
Pay	7.14	7.12	7.09
Tips	7.55	6.34	7.09
Per trip
Earnings	7.86	11.93	8.64
Pay	3.82	6.31	4.32
Tips	4.04	5.62	4.32

Values are earnings, pay, and tips divided by all hours and all trips, respectively, which may differ from the earnings, pay, and tips of the average worker. "All modes" includes e-bikes, cars, motorcycles, and walkers. Source: Department analysis of record-level data obtained from apps.

By several measures, pay is trending down. This may be because apps used higher pay to recruit more workers during the pandemic and then began reducing pay once labor supply expanded.

Figure 11. App Delivery Worker Pay in NYC ($)

Analysis performed at the app level, without adjustment for multi-apping. Source: Department analysis of weekly aggregate data obtained from apps.

Comparing the first quarter of 2021 to the second quarter of 2022, pay per delivery declined from $6.38 to $4.29 (23%).

Expenses

As independent contractors, app delivery workers are responsible for selecting, acquiring, and maintaining the equipment and services needed to connect to the apps and perform deliveries.⁶⁴ Apps do not reimburse or separately compensate delivery workers for these costs.

⁶⁴ An exception exists for delivery bags, which apps must provide to delivery workers, effective April 22, 2022. See NYC Administrative Code § 20-1524.

The Department estimated average hourly expenses overall and for five groups of workers: e-bike users, car drivers, gas moped users, electric moped users, and walkers.

Table 9. Hourly Expenses of App Delivery Workers in NYC, by Mode of Transportation ($)

	E-bike	Car	All Modes
Vehicle	1.64	2.92	1.78
Depreciation	0.32	1.53	0.65
License, registration, and insurance	0.00*	1.03	0.28
Casualty & theft loss	0.05	0.00*	0.03
Batteries/gas	0.86	0.11	0.51
Maintenance	0.15	0.25	0.16
Accessories	0.26	0.00*	0.15
Phone	0.62	0.57	0.58
Phone purchases	0.35	0.28	0.31
Data plan	0.27	0.29	0.27
Vehicle and phone subtotal	2.26	3.49	2.36
Tickets	0.44	1.37	0.70
Total	2.70	4.86	3.06

*"All Modes" includes e-bikes, cars, motorcycles, and walkers. For purposes of calculating expenses for "All Modes," motorcycles were assumed to have the same expenses as mopeds. "$0.00" indicates expense categories treated as $0.00 by assumption. Source:

Department analysis of the NYC Delivery

Worker Survey, record-level data obtained from apps, testimony submitted by Uber Eats and DoorDash to the Department's June 2022 public hearing,⁶⁵ and price quotes from internet research, PriceDigests,⁶⁶ and visits to NYC retailers.

⁶⁵ Hearing Written Testimony at 60, 67-73 (letter of DoorDash, Inc.).

⁶⁶ See Passenger Vehicles Auto Red Book, Price Digests, <https://app.pricedigests.com/?classification=Passenger%20Vehicles> (last accessed Oct. 5, 2022).

For e-bike workers, batteries are the largest expense (32% of total expenses), followed by phone costs (including both the device and data plan) (23%). For car drivers, the largest expense is depreciation (31%), followed by traffic or parking tickets (28%).

The Department estimated the expenses of e-bike workers as follows. For depreciation, the Department obtained the purchase price of a new e-bike through visits to NYC retailers ($1,800), applied five-year straightline depreciation consistent with IRS principles, and then reduced this amount to reflect the probability of loss due to casualty or theft (5.88% annually),⁶⁷ which the Department estimated from its NYC Delivery Worker Survey. For casualty and theft loss, the Department multiplied the probability of a loss incident by the expected depreciated value of the e-bike at the time of incident ($959.13), assuming constant probabilities of loss during the e-bike's useful life. For batteries, the Department obtained the purchase price of a new battery by visiting NYC retailers ($550) and multiplied the cost by workers' average replacement rate (1.74 per year), which the Department measured from its NYC Delivery Worker Survey. For maintenance costs, the Department used the estimate of e-bike maintenance costs per mile provided by Uber Eats and DoorDash ($0.067)⁶⁷ and the average trip distance per hour worked (2.17 miles), which the Department estimated from the record-level data obtained from apps. For accessories, the Department used its NYC Delivery Worker Survey to estimate the annual probabilities of purchasing handlebar gloves (63%), bike racks (37%), baskets (38%), helmets (67%), lights (58%), horns (32%), reflective vests (39%), locks (74%), alarms (32%), anti-theft cameras (13%), antitheft GPS systems (32%), and clothes, shoes or rain gear for work (84%), and quoted prices for each accessory from NYC retailers and internet sellers. For phone purchases, the Department used its NYC Delivery Worker Survey to identify the mix of phone models used by delivery workers and quotes from internet sellers to estimate the average purchase price ($721) as well as the average discounts or proceeds on trade-ins and resales ($597). The Department then obtained the net expense by multiplying these amounts by the frequencies of purchase (1.74 per year) and trade-in or resale (0.45 per year), respectively, from its NYC Delivery Worker Survey. For data plans, the Department used the average cost of a single-line, unlimited data plan as quoted from major carriers ($63.33 per month).⁶⁸ For both phone purchases and data plans, the Department reduced estimated expenses to reflect percent use in app delivery, assuming 145.17 hours of personal phone use per month, which is the mean of four recent studies,⁶⁹ and 21.3 hours of app delivery use per week, consistent with the average for e-bike workers. For tickets, the Department used the frequencies of receiving a ticket and the costs per ticket reported in its NYC Delivery Worker Survey. The Department then converted all expenses into hourly rates based on e-bike workers' average of 21.3 hours per week, except for maintenance, for which an hourly rate was derived as described above (i.e., from data reflecting cost per mile and miles per hour of working time).

To estimate car drivers' expenses, the Department took the same approach as with e-bike workers for phone purchases, data plans, and tickets as described above and accounted for vehicle-related expenses as follows. For depreciation, the Department used its NYC Delivery Worker Survey to identify the model and year of cars used by delivery workers, together with a database on historical fair market values⁷⁰ to determine bases for depreciation. With this information, the Department then calculated depreciation using the five-year straight-line method. For license and registration, the Department obtained fee amounts from the DMV,⁷¹ and for insurance, the Department used a published estimate of average insurance costs.⁷² For depreciation, license, registration, and insurance, the Department reduced estimated expenses by the proportion of time delivery workers use their car for app delivery relative to other uses, which it obtained from its NYC Delivery Worker Survey. The Department then converted the depreciation, license, registration, and insurance expenses into hourly rates based on car drivers' average of 17.5 hours per week. For gas, the Department used a published estimate of average per-gallon costs in the NYC area⁷³ and estimated use based on average trip distance per hour of working time, as measured from the record-level data, and average gas mileage of 25 miles per gallon, which the Department derived from the gas mileages reported from manufacturers and the mix of vehicles identified in its NYC Delivery Worker Survey. For maintenance, the Department used the American Automobile Association's estimate of per-mile maintenance costs⁷⁴ and average trip distances per hour of working time, as measured from the record-level data.

⁶⁷ Casualty or theft losses can be claimed as business expenses under IRS guidelines. A casualty loss is a sudden, unexpected destruction of property. See Topic No. 515 Casualty, Disaster, and Theft Losses, IRS, <https://www.irs.gov/taxtopics/tc515> (last accessed Oct. 28, 2022). ⁶⁷ Hearing Written Testimony at 67, 70-71 (letter of DoorDash, Inc. and Uber Technologies, Inc.).

⁶⁸ See Get Our Best Unlimited Plans Ever, Verizon, <https://www.verizon.com/plans/unlimited/#plans> (last accessed June 23, 2022); Bring Your Own Device, AT&T, <https://www.att.com/buy/wireless/byod/deviceconfig> (last accessed June 23, 2022); Compare Our Best Unlimited Data Cell Phone Plans, T-Mobile USA, Inc., <https://www.t-mobile.com/cell-phone-plans?|NTNAV=tNav:Plans:Magenta> (last accessed June 23, 2022). Department's calculation assumes workers enroll in Autopay to receive discounts of $5-$10 per month, depending on carrier.

⁶⁹ See Trevor Wheelwright, 2022 Cell Phone Usage Statistics: How Obsessed Are We?, Reviews.org (Jan. 2022), <https://www.reviews.org/mobile/cell-phone-addiction/> (last accessed Oct. 30, 2022); Laura Ceci, How Much Time on Average Do You Spend on Your Phone on a Daily Basis?, Statista (Feb. 2021), <https://www.statista.com/statistics/1224510/time-spent-per-day-on-smartphone-us/> (last accessed Oct. 30, 2022); Sam Medley, The Average iPhone User Spends a Full Work Week on Their Phone, a New Report Claims, Notebookcheck (Sept. 2021), <https://www.notebookcheck.net/The-average-iPhone-user-spends-a-full-work-week-on-their-phone-a-newreport-claims.562797.0.html> (last accessed Oct. 30, 2022); Eileen Brown, Americans Spend Far More Time on Their Smartphones than they Think, ZDNET (Apr. 2019), <https://www.zdnet.com/article/americans-spend-far-more-time-on-their-smartphones-than-they-think> (last accessed Oct. 30, 2022).

Though the costs presented in Table 9 account for most delivery worker expenses, the Department omitted some work-related costs. This includes the cost of time spent maintaining equipment and for vehicle storage, for which the Department was unable to obtain reliable estimates, and out-of-pocket medical expenses for work-related injuries.

Because the Department's NYC Delivery Worker Survey includes many responses in which an illegal moped was misreported as an e-bike, the Department performed a supplemental analysis to address the possibility that this might bias its estimates of true e-bike expenses. To assess this possibility, the Department examined differences in responses to its NYC Delivery Worker Survey between the 229 self-identified moped users and the 2,316 self-identified e-bike users and determined that misreporting of illegal mopeds did not have a material impact.

The Department's expense analysis follows standard cost accounting principles, in which the total cost of an input is allocated to a function (in this case, app delivery) based on percent use. However, some workers may base their decision to enter and stay in app delivery on their marginal costs, which for car drivers may be meaningfully lower than their total allocated costs. This is especially true for car drivers who perform deliveries only part-time or intermittently.

Net Pay and Earnings

⁷⁰ See Price Digests, supra note 65.

⁷¹ See Passenger Vehicle Registration Fees, Use Taxes and Supplemental Fees, NYS Department of Motor Vehicles, <https://dmv.ny.gov/registration/registration-fees-use-taxes-and-supplemental-fees-passenger-vehicles> (last accessed Oct. 7, 2022); see Driver License Renewal Fees, NYS Department of Motor Vehicles, <https://dmv.ny.gov/driver-license/driver-license-renewal-fees> (last accessed Oct. 7, 2022).

⁷² See June Sham, Average Cost of Car Insurance in New York for 2022 (Oct. 3, 2022), <https://www.bankrate.com/insurance/car/averagecost-of-car-insurance-in-new-york>.

⁷³ See Average Energy Prices, New York-Newark-Jersey City – August 2022, U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, https://www.bls.gov/regions/new-york-new-jersey/news-release/averageenergyprices_newyork_area.htm (last accessed Oct. 7, 2022).

⁷⁴ See Your Driving Costs 2022, American Automobile Association, <https://newsroom.aaa.com/wp-content/uploads/2022/08/2022YourDrivingCosts-FactSheet-7-1.pdf>.

Table 10 reports hourly and weekly pay, tips, and expenses overall and by mode of transportation. On average, delivery workers' net pay is $4.03 per hour, and net earnings (which includes tips) is $11.12. E-bike workers have higher net earnings than car drivers, resulting from a higher number of deliveries per hour and lower expenses.

Table 10. Hourly and Weekly Pay, Tips, and Expenses of NYC App Delivery Workers, by Mode of Transportation ($)

	E-bike	Car	All Modes
Per hour
Pay	7.14	7.12	7.09
Expenses (-)	2.70	4.86	3.06
Net pay	4.44	2.26	4.03
Tips	7.55	6.34	7.09
Net earnings	11.99	8.60	11.12
Per week
Pay	152.08	124.60	146.76
Expenses (-)	57.51	85.05	63.34
Net pay	94.57	39.55	83.42
Tips	160.82	110.95	146.76
Net earnings	255.39	150.50	230.18

"All Modes" includes e-bikes, cars, motorcycles, and walkers. Per week values reflect average weekly hours of 21.3 for e-bike workers, 17.5 for car drivers, and 20.7 for all modes. Source: Department analysis of record-level data obtained from apps and the NYC Delivery Worker Survey, with other sources (see discussion).

To understand these net pay amounts within the context of the NYC labor market, the Department compared them to two relevant benchmarks: 1) the legal rights to minimum pay and benefits for independent contractors working for Uber and Lyft, who are covered by TLC's minimum payment standard for High-Volume For-Hire Services, and are referenced herein as "app for-hire service drivers"; and 2) the minimum pay and benefits that an app would be legally required to pay to a delivery worker if the app classified that worker as an employee rather than an independent contractor.

TLC's minimum pay standard for app for-hire service drivers, as proposed in its latest rulemaking, is designed to provide for average hourly pay, net of expenses, at or above $19.86 per hour worked.⁷⁵ The app for-hire service driver standard was originally characterized as the independent contractor equivalent of the $15 minimum wage when it was implemented on February 1, 2019.⁷⁶ When first implemented, the standard was $17.22, consisting of $15 per hour, plus $0.90 per hour for paid time off, and an additional $1.32 per hour to account for the 7.65% employer share of federal Medicare and Social Security contributions, which is required of independent contractors but not employees.⁷⁷ It has been updated for inflation several times since February 2, 2019.⁷⁸ As discussed above,

⁷⁵ See Proposed Rule of the NYC Taxi and Limousine Commission (35 RCNY) § 59D-22(a)(2) and (b)(1).

⁷⁶ See James A. Parrott & Michael Reich, An Earnings Standard for New York City's App-based Drivers: Economic Analysis and Policy Assessment, Center for New York City Affairs (July 2018), <http://www.centrernyc.org/s/Parrott-Reich-NYC-App-Drivers-TLC-Jul-2018jul1.pdf> (last accessed Oct. 30, 2022).

⁷⁷ See id. Under the TLC's app for-hire service driver standard, expenses are compensated separately, and were not included in the $17.22 per hour calculation.

⁷⁸ See Rules of the NYC Taxi and Limousine Commission (35 RCNY) § 59D-22(a)(4).

app delivery workers' net pay is far lower than $19.86 per hour. Further, app for-hire service drivers have a right to workers' compensation coverage through the Black Car Fund,⁷⁹ a benefit unavailable to app delivery workers.

The Department obtains a similar result with respect to the minimum pay and benefits that an app would be legally required to pay to a delivery worker if the app classified that worker as an employee rather than an independent contractor. As employees, app delivery workers would be entitled to wages of $15 per hour under the New York State minimum wage,⁸⁰ up to 56 hours of paid leave per year under the NYC Paid Safe and Sick Leave Law, unemployment insurance, workers' compensation insurance, and employer coverage of half the mandatory 15.3% Medicare and Social Security contribution on their pay. The apps would also be liable for a shared responsibility payment to the IRS if they failed to offer health insurance meeting minimum value, affordability, and access standards.⁸¹ Table 11 shows that these wage and benefit requirements result in total compensation to employees, inclusive of wages and benefits, of $21.09 per hour, which far exceeds current net pay for app delivery workers.

Table 11. Value of Wage and Benefit Requirements if NYC App Delivery Workers Were Classified as Employees ($)

Payroll
Base Wage Minimum wage applicable to employers in NYC	15.00
Paid Safe and Sick Leave 1.49% x Base Wage	0.22
Payroll Subtotal	15.22
Benefits
Health Insurance Health insurance cost per hour for private industry workers	3.27
Workers' Compensation Insurance 7.84% x Payroll Subtotal	1.19
Unemployment Insurance 1.61% x Payroll Subtotal	0.25
Medicare and Social Security Contributions 7.65% x Payroll Subtotal	1.16
Benefits Subtotal	5.87
Total	21.09

⁷⁹ See General Inquiries, The Black Car Fund, <https://www.nybcf.org/faqs> (last accessed Oct. 7, 2022).

⁸⁰ See New York State Labor Law § 652(1)(a).

⁸¹ Employer Shared Responsibility Provisions, IRS, <https://www.irs.gov/affordable-care-act/employers/employer-shared-responsibilityprovisions> (last accessed Sept. 30, 2022). In its analysis, the Department assumes the apps would provide health insurance rather than pay the shared responsibility tax penalty.

Paid Safe and Sick Leave reflects average use among full-time workers in the U.S. with access to paid sick leave, which the Department calculated from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention National Health Interview Survey.⁸² Health insurance cost per hour for private industry workers is for the Middle Atlantic Census Region from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics Employer Costs for Employee Compensation.⁸³ Workers' compensation reflects the published loss cost for employed delivery workers in the New York State workers' compensation system.⁸⁴ Unemployment insurance reflects average contributions in the second quarter of 2021 to the first quarter of 2022 for the local messengers and local delivery industry in NYC from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics Quarterly Census of Employment and Wages.⁸⁵

The Department also compared these net pay and earnings amounts to the income required in order to afford basic necessities in NYC. For instance, a delivery worker with average hourly earnings, working hours, and expenses (i.e., $14.18 in hourly earnings, 20.7 hours of working time per week, and expenses of $3.06 per hour), has annual net earnings of $11,970 after 52 weeks of work. For comparison, the NYC poverty threshold for a single adult is $19,088 and the near poverty threshold is $28,632.⁸⁵ NYC poverty and near-poverty thresholds for a two-adult, two-child family are $41,185 and $61,778, respectively.⁸⁶

Earnings and Expense Risk

App delivery workers' net earnings are also unstable with earnings and expenses both subject to considerable risk.

Earnings risk arises from the absence of a set schedule, pay rates that vary according to an app's proprietary algorithms, varying and unpredictable volumes of trip offers, dependence on tips that are determined both by the value of the order and the consumer's tipping behavior, and lost income due to on-the-job injuries and absence of paid leave.

Tip misappropriation, non-payment, and deactivations also contribute to earnings risk, and delivery workers report that these occur frequently. Twenty-six percent of respondents to the Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey reported at least one instance of tip misappropriation, 30% reported at least one instance of non-payment by the apps, and 16% reported having their account deactivated.⁸⁷

Expense risk arises principally from app delivery workers' responsibility for their own equipment. For e-bike workers, the annual risk of vehicle loss due to casualty or theft is 2.6% and 3.3%, respectively.⁸⁸ Short of loss,

⁸² See National Health Interview Survey, 2020, U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, <https://www.cdc.gov/nchs/nhis/2020nhis.htm> (last accessed Oct. 7, 2022).

⁸³ See Employer Costs for Employee Compensation, U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics (Sept. 20, 2022), <https://www.bls.gov/web/ecec/ececprivate-dataset.xlsx> (retrieved from private industry worker dataset for June 2022) (last accessed Oct. 30, 2022).

⁸⁴ See New York State Workers' Compensation Loss Cost Filing and Loss Costs by Classification; Effective October 1, 2022, New York Compensation Insurance Rating Board (July 2022), <https://www.nycirb.org/bulletins/rc2564.pdf> (showing the loss cost for employed delivery workers, who belong to rate class 7380, which includes commercial drivers, chauffeurs, and their helpers). ⁸⁵ See Quarterly Census of Employment and Wages, U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, <https://www.bls.gov/cew/downloadable-data-files.htm> (last accessed Oct. 7, 2022).

⁸⁵ Department analysis of the official NYC poverty measure for 2019, adjusted for inflation to September 2022 using the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the New York-Newark-Jersey City, NY-NJ-PA area. See New York City Government Poverty Measure 2019 Annual Report, NYC Office of the Mayor (2021), https://www1.nyc.gov/assets/opportunity/pdf/21_poverty_measure_report.pdf; see Consumer Price Index (CPI) Databases, U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, <https://www.bls.gov/cpi/data.htm> (last accessed Oct. 25, 2022).

⁸⁶ Id.

⁸⁷ Department analysis of data from the Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey. "Tip misappropriation" refers to an app not paying a worker tips the worker should have received. "Nonpayment" refers to an app not paying a worker for a delivery, paying the wrong amount for a delivery, not paying a worker pay owed for a cancelled delivery, or not paying a worker at all. "Account deactivated" refers to an app closing a worker's account, such that the worker can no longer perform deliveries for the app.

⁸⁸ Department analysis of data from the NYC Delivery Worker Survey.

vehicle damage may also result in unexpected repair costs. Insurance provides a partial solution for car drivers' expense risk. However, few e-bike workers obtain insurance covering their vehicles, and most mopeds used by app delivery workers are uninsurable because the vehicles themselves cannot be legally sold or operated in New York State. Batteries and phones can also be lost, damaged, or fail unexpectedly. Additional unexpected expenses include parking and traffic tickets and medical costs due to work-related injuries.

Safety Conditions

Through a review of news articles, social media, information provided by advocates, a joint report by the Worker's Justice Project and The Worker Institute of Cornell University's Industrial Labor Relations School,⁸⁹ and information provided by the NYC DOT, the Department gathered reports of 33 restaurant delivery worker fatalities in NYC since 2020. This includes 11 workers identified as app delivery workers, five identified as restaurant employees, and 17 for whom the work arrangement was unclear. Because many workers' work arrangement could not be identified, the Department's analysis of fatalities encompasses both app workers and restaurant employees.

Table 12. Delivery Worker Fatalities in NYC

Year	Fatalities
2020	8
2021	16
2022	9
Total	33

Fatalities for 2022 are through October 14. Source: Department analysis.

Thirty of these fatalities were workers who use a non-car mode of transportation and, for three, the mode of transportation was unclear. Five of these fatalities, all of whom were non-car workers, were killed during robberies. For 26, the cause of death was a vehicle crash and, for two, the cause of death was not specified.

To assess delivery workers' fatality risk compared to other occupations, the Department calculated fatalities per 100,000 full-time equivalent workers for the period January 1, 2021 through June 30, 2022. Fatalities per 100,000 full-time equivalent workers is the standard measure of occupational fatality published by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. January 1, 2021 through June 30, 2022 is the period for which the Department had sufficient data to calculate the number of full-time equivalent restaurant delivery workers in NYC, including both app workers and restaurant employees. Over this period, there were 19 fatalities, including 18 workers who used non-car vehicles and one whose mode of transportation was not identified. Over this same period, the Department estimates 64,416 full-time equivalent restaurant delivery workers in NYC, including 49,956 using a non-car vehicle for delivery.⁹⁰ These figures imply a rate of 30 fatalities per 100,000 full-time equivalent restaurant delivery workers overall, and at least 36 per 100,000 among workers using a non-car mode of transportation.⁹¹

⁸⁹ See Maria Figueroa et al., Essential but Unprotected: App-based Food Couriers in New York City, Cornell University Worker Institute (Sept. 2021).

By comparison, in 2020, the most recent year for which data is available, there were 13 construction fatalities in NYC⁹² and seven per 100,000 full-time equivalent construction workers.⁹³ Construction is historically the industry with the highest fatality rates in NYC.⁹⁴

To measure non-fatal occupational injuries, the Department's NYC Delivery Worker Survey asked workers if, while working for a delivery app, they have been injured seriously enough that they missed work, lost consciousness, or received medical care. This approximates the standard for a reportable case for employees under the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's regulations.⁹⁵ The Department finds that 28.7% of e-bike or moped app delivery workers and 10% of car app delivery workers experienced an injury meeting this standard.⁹⁶ Several workers testified at the Department's June 2022 public hearing that they or someone they know was injured while performing deliveries.⁹⁷

Figure 12 compares injury rates for NYC app delivery workers to employee injury rates in the U.S. for select occupations. For comparability with U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics data, in this analysis the Department restricted injuries to cases with days away from work, which represent most, but not all, delivery worker injuries.

Figure 12. Injuries Involving Days Away from Work per 100 Full-Time Equivalent Workers for NYC App Delivery Workers and Selected Occupations in the U.S.

⁹⁰ Department analysis of record-level obtained from apps (for full-time equivalent app delivery workers) and the U.S. Census Bureau 2016-2020 American Community Survey (for full-time equivalent restaurant delivery employees). For purposes of this analysis, Department estimated the number of restaurant delivery full-time equivalent employees based on average annual hours from 2016-2020, multiplied by 1.5, and treated all restaurant employees as using a non-car mode of transportation. On an annualized basis, there were 42,944 full-time equivalent restaurant delivery workers over this period, including both app delivery workers and restaurant employees. Of these, 33,304 used a non-car vehicle for delivery. Following the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, the Department defines a full-time equivalent worker using a 2,000 hours per year standard.

⁹¹ If the one worker with an unidentified mode of transportation did not use a car for delivery, the rate for workers using a non-car mode transportation is 38 per 100,000. The Department calculates the fatality rates as follows: (fatalities between January 1, 2021 and June 30, 2022 divided by hours worked between January 1, 2021 and June 30, 2022 times 100,000 times 2,000).

⁹² See State Occupational Injuries, Illnesses, and Fatalities, U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, <https://www.bls.gov/iif/state-data/fataloccupational-injuries-in-new-york-city-2020.htm> (last accessed Oct. 14, 2022).

⁹³ Id.

⁹⁴ Department analysis of data obtained from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics Census of Fatal Occupational Injuries. Id.

⁹⁵ See Forms for Recording Work-Related Injuries and Illnesses, U.S. Department of Labor, Occupational Safety and Health Administration (April 2004), <https://www.osha.gov/sites/default/files/OSHA-RK-Forms-Package.pdf> (last accessed Oct. 14, 2022).

⁹⁶ Department analysis of data from the NYC Delivery Worker Survey. Excludes workers that started working for delivery apps in 2018 or earlier.

⁹⁷ Hearing Transcript at 36-38 (statement of William Medina), at 41 (statement of Antonio Solis), at 45 (statement of José Ramírez aka Manny Ramírez, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker's Justice Project), at 48 (statement of Kazi Fousia), at 108 (statement of Orlando Bispo); Hearing Written Testimony at 49 (letter of José Ramírez aka Manny Ramírez, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker's Justice Project).

Delivery workers, e-bike and moped	32.0	12.2
Delivery workers, car		10.2
Nursing assistants
Couriers and messengers	2.2
Construction laborers	2.1
Driver/sales workers	2.1
All occupations	1.2

All series except for delivery workers are for private employees in the U.S. in 2020.

Delivery worker injuries are per 200,000 hours worked since a respondent's first day of work on the apps, which the Department derived from workers' self-reported first and most recent months of work, self-reported usual weekly hours, and an assumed 4.35 weeks of work in every month. Workers reporting 40 or more hours of work per week in the NYC Delivery Worker Survey were treated as working 45 hours per week. Workers reporting four or more cases with days away from work were treated as having four cases with days away from work. Analysis excludes workers who started working for delivery apps in 2018 or earlier. Source: Department analysis of data from the NYC Delivery Worker Survey and the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics' Survey of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses.⁹⁸

Figure 12 includes nursing assistants because they have the highest rate of occupational injury in the U.S. of any major occupation,⁹⁹ driver/sales workers because this is the category encompassing delivery workers classified as employees within the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics data,¹⁰⁰ couriers and messengers because they are a related occupational group, and construction laborers as an illustrative occupation involving wellknown physical risks. Since the injury rates for comparison occupations are derived from employer records,¹⁰¹ not worker surveys, these figures are not directly comparable. Prior research suggests that worker-reported rates of injury are 50% to 100% higher than standard measures based on employer records.¹⁰² However, even taking the high end of that range, the Department still obtains an injury rate for e-bike and moped workers more than double that of nursing assistants.

As presented in Figure 13, e-bike and moped workers' injuries often result in significant amounts of missed work. More than a quarter of injuries lead to a loss of 2 weeks of work or more.

Figure 13. E-Bike and Moped App Delivery Worker Injuries in NYC, by Days Away from Work (%)

⁹⁸ See Table R98. Incidence rates for nonfatal occupational injuries and illnesses involving days away from work per 10,000 full-time workers by occupation and selected nature of injury or illness, private industry, 2020, U.S. Bureau of Labor and Statistics, https://www.bls.gov/web/osh/cd_r98.htm (last accessed Oct. 5, 2022).

⁹⁹ Department analysis of data from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics' Survey of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses for 2020. See id.

¹⁰⁰ See Survey of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses: Concepts, U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, <https://www.bls.gov/opub/hom/soii/concepts.htm> (last accessed Oct. 7, 2022); see also Standard Occupational Classification, U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, <https://www.bls.gov/soc> (last accessed Oct. 7, 2022).

¹⁰¹ See Survey of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses: Data Sources, U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, <https://www.bls.gov/opub/hom/soii/data.htm> (last accessed Oct. 7, 2022).

¹⁰² See Jennifer L. Marcum et al., Self-Reported Work-Related Injury or Illness – Washington, 2011-2014, 66(11) MMWR Morb. Mortal Wkly. Rep., 302-306 (2017); see also Naomi J. Anderson et al., Work-related injury burden, workers' compensation claim filing, and barriers: Results from a statewide survey of janitors, 65(3) American Journal of Industrial Medicine, 173-195 (2022).

Due to question wording, the analysis is restricted to respondents reporting only a single injury in which they were injured seriously enough that they missed work, lost consciousness, or received medical care. Excludes workers who were no longer working for delivery apps at the time of the survey or who first worked for delivery apps in 2018 or earlier. Source: Department analysis of data from the NYC Delivery Worker Survey.

Delivery workers working as independent contractors do not receive workers' compensation coverage and often do not have health insurance.¹⁰⁴ As a result, on-the-job injuries often lead to out-of-pocket medical expenses.¹⁰⁵ In the Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey, workers who had experienced an injury related to their work for the apps reported averaging $1,717 in medical care expenses.¹⁰⁶ Some apps voluntarily provide insurance coverage to delivery workers, but workers and the media report that the coverage is limited and that workers have difficulty getting claims paid.¹⁰⁷

The Department also finds high incidences of assault, with 33.2% of e-bike or moped delivery workers having been physically assaulted while working for a delivery app and 14.8% having been injured in an assault.¹⁰⁸ Delivery workers using cars experienced lower rates, with 11.7% having been physically assaulted and 3.6% having been injured in an assault.¹⁰⁹ Several workers and advocates testified that assaults against delivery workers are common.¹¹⁰

¹⁰⁴ Hearing Written Testimony at 9 (letter of AJ Yusuf, Mayor's Office of Immigrant Affairs), at 25 (letter of Hildalyn Colón Hernández, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker's Justice Project); Hearing Transcript at 100 (statement of Juan Restrepo).

¹⁰⁵ Hearing Written Testimony at 86 (letter of Brian Chen and Laura Padin, National Employment Law Project) ("Forty-nine percent [of delivery workers] reported having been in an accident or crash while making a delivery. Of those, 75 percent said they paid for their medical care with their own personal funds because they lack health insurance"), at 26 (letter of Hildalyn Colón Hernández, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker's Justice Project); Hearing Transcript at 45 (statement of José Ramírez aka Manny Ramírez, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker's Justice Project).

¹⁰⁶ Department analysis of data from the Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey.

¹⁰⁷ Hearing Written Testimony at 59 (letter of DoorDash), at 50 (letter of José Ramírez aka Manny Ramírez, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker's Justice Project); see Claudia Aponte, Delivery Cyclists Injured on NYC's Mean Streets Face Uphill Compensation Battle, The City (Sept. 21, 2022), <https://www.thecity.nyc/work/2022/9/21/23364136/delivery-cyclists-injured-door-dash-compensation-insurance> (last accessed Oct. 30, 2022).

¹⁰⁸ Department analysis of data from the NYC Delivery Worker Survey. Excludes workers who were no longer working for delivery apps at the time of the survey or who first worked for delivery apps in 2018 or earlier.

¹⁰⁹ Id. Because the Department's questions about assault do not specify a severity, whereas the questions about injuries from any cause ask only about those resulting in missed work, lost consciousness, or medical care, the assault and all-cause injury rates are not directly comparable.

¹¹⁰ Hearing Written Testimony at 9 (letter of AJ Yusuf, Mayor's Office of Immigrant Affairs), at 12 (letter of NYC Comptroller Brad Lander), at 19, 26, 36, 50 (letter of Hildalyn Colón Hernández, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker's Justice Project), at 86 (letter of Brian Chen and Laura Padin, National Employment Law Project), at 88 (letter of Wilneida Negrón, PhD, Coworker.org); Hearing Transcript at 22 (statement of Hildalyn Colón Hernández, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker’s Justice Project), at 36-38 (statement of William Medina), at 45 (statement of José Ramírez aka Manny Ramírez, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker’s Justice Project), at 95 (statement of AJ Yusuf, Mayor’s Office of Immigrant Affairs), at 121 (statement of Jing Wang, Biking Public Project).

5 Design of the Minimum Payment Standard

This section summarizes the statutory framework for the Department’s proposed rule and outlines key provisions of the proposed minimum pay rate, followed by a discussion of their rationale.

Statutory Framework

Under Section 20-1522 of the Minimum Pay Law, the Department is charged with establishing by rule a method for determining the minimum payments that apps must make to delivery workers whom they classify as independent contractors. The Minimum Pay Law gives the Department broad discretion in designing the method but specifies certain factors that the Department must consider in its deliberations. These factors include “the duration and distance of trips, the expenses of operation associated with the typical modes of transportation such workers use, the types of trips, including the number of deliveries made during a trip, the on-call and work hours of food delivery workers, the adequacy of food delivery worker income considered in relation to trip-related expenses” as well as “any other relevant factors, as determined by the department.”¹⁰³ The Department determined that such “other relevant factors” include the existing pay and benefit standards that apply to other workers in NYC, ease of implementation for apps, workers, and the Department, and the impact of the rule on apps, workers, consumers, and restaurants.

The method for determining minimum payments must be based on the results of the Department’s study of the working conditions of delivery workers.¹⁰⁴ By law, the study must cover certain identified topics, including delivery worker pay, expenses, hours, and safety, as well as “such other topics as the department deems appropriate.”¹⁰⁵ The “other topics” the Department deemed appropriate and covered in its study include the existing pay and benefit standards that apply to other workers in NYC, the practical challenges of minimum pay implementation for apps, workers, and the Department, the prospective impact of the minimum pay rate on apps, workers, consumers, and restaurants, and the income required to afford basic necessities.

Summary of the Proposed Minimum Pay Rate

The proposed rule will establish an average minimum pay rate of at least $23.82 per hour that apps must pay to delivery workers for the sum of their trip and on-call hours each week.¹⁰⁶ The rate will be phased in over two years, from 2023 to 2025, will be adjusted annually for inflation, and represents the sum of three parts:

- 1) A base pay component ($19.86). The base pay component matches the per-minute rate under TLC’s minimum earnings standard for app for-hire service drivers as proposed in its most recent rulemaking;¹⁰⁷
- 2) A workers’ compensation component ($1.70). The workers’ compensation component reflects the actuarial value, as a percentage of payroll, of the workers’ compensation benefits that must be ¹⁰³ NYC Administrative Code § 20-1522(a)(3).

¹⁰⁴ Id.

¹⁰⁵ Id. § 20-1522(a)(1).

¹⁰⁶ See Proposed Rule of the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (6 RCNY) § 7-810.

¹⁰⁷ See Proposed Rule of the NYC Taxi and Limousine Commission (35 RCNY) § 59D-22(a)(2) and (b)(1). provided to comparable delivery workers who—unlike the apps’ delivery workers—are classified as W2 employees; and

-
- 3) An expense component ($2.26). The expense component reflects average expenses that e-bike workers incur.

Table 13 summarizes these components.

Table 13. Components of the Minimum Pay Rate for App Delivery Workers in NYC

Rate Component	Amount ($)
Base pay	19.86
Workers' compensation	1.70
Expenses	2.26
Total	23.82

Amounts shown are for 2025 and subject to inflation adjustment, as described below. Source: Department calculations.

Under the proposed phase-in, the rates in 2023 and 2024 represent 75% and 85% of the full rate, respectively, before reaching the full rate on April 1, 2025. Beginning April 1, 2023, the Department will update the rates for inflation annually using the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the NY-NJPA metro area. Table 14 summarizes the phase-in through 2025.

Table 14. Phase-In of the Minimum Pay Rate for App Delivery Workers in NYC

Effective Date	Minimum Pay Rate ($)
Jan 1, 2023	17.87
Apr 1, 2023	17.87*
Apr 1, 2024	20.25*
Apr 1, 2025	23.82*

*Rates beginning 4/1/2023 will be adjusted for inflation.

The proposed minimum pay rate requires an app to satisfy two requirements each week: an individual pay requirement and an aggregate pay requirement.¹⁰⁸

- 1) Individual Pay Requirement: The app’s required payment to each delivery worker, individually, would have to meet or exceed the minimum pay rate multiplied by the sum of each individual worker’s own trip time during the week; and ¹⁰⁸ See Proposed Rule of the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (6 RCNY) § 7-810.

- 2) Aggregate Pay Requirement: The app’s total required payments to all its delivery workers, together, would have to meet or exceed the minimum pay rate multiplied by the sum of all workers’ total trip time and on-call time during the week.

Under the rule, the definitions of the terms “trip time” and “on-call time” are consistent with their use in this report. As stated in section 2, trip time is the time between acceptance of a trip offer and its completion, and oncall time is the time in which a worker is connected to the app in a status where they can receive or accept trip offers, excluding trip time.

The aggregate pay requirement is not an obligation to pay $23.82 per hour to each individual worker for the hours she works, but rather a requirement that an app’s total payments to all its NYC delivery workers, divided by the total hours worked by all its NYC delivery workers, must meet or exceed $23.82 per hour.

While the aggregate pay requirement will be the main driver of higher pay under the rule, the individual pay requirement will provide a minimum level of protection for each worker’s hourly pay in any given week.

Consistent with the requirements of Section 20-1522(b) of the Minimum Pay Law, apps may not credit tips towards their satisfaction of either requirement.¹⁰⁹

The discussion below covers each component of the minimum pay rate in more detail.

Base Pay Component

The base pay component of $19.86 per hour is similar to the compensation that app delivery workers would receive if they were classified as employees under state and City law (excluding workers’ compensation, which is addressed separately in the minimum pay rate). The Department adopted this amount from the TLC’s minimum payment standard for app for-hire service drivers, as proposed in TLC’s latest rulemaking.¹¹⁰ For purposes of the base pay component of the minimum pay rate, there are no meaningful distinctions between app delivery workers and app for-hire service drivers. Like all low-wage workers in NYC, app delivery workers and app for-hire service drivers must cover the costs of housing, food, and other basic necessities. Adopting the same base pay rate for app delivery workers builds on the City’s existing determination of appropriate compensation for low-wage independent contractors and sets a clear and consistent standard for independent contractors working for apps in related industries in NYC.

The $19.86 base pay rate reflects the $15 per hour minimum wage that has been in effect for most employees in NYC since December 31, 2018¹¹¹ plus adjustments for differences in tax treatment between employees and independent contractors and increases in the cost of living since the TLC minimum payment standard was first implemented in early 2019. Additionally, the $19.86 minimum payment standard for app for-hire service drivers includes compensation in lieu of paid time off derived from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics’ published estimate of average paid leave received by production, transportation and material moving employees.¹¹² This occupational category includes both app delivery workers and app for-hire service drivers.¹¹³ Incorporating an amount in lieu of ¹⁰⁹ See NYC Administrative Code § 20-1522(b) (“Any minimum payment determined by the department pursuant to this section shall not include gratuities. A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service shall not retain any portion of any gratuity or use gratuities to offset or cover any portion of minimum payments required by this section”).

¹¹⁰ See Proposed Rule of the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (6 RCNY) § 7-810.

¹¹¹ See Parrott & Reich, supra note 76; see also New York State Labor Law § 652(1)(a).

¹¹² See Parrott & Reich, supra note 76.

¹¹³ See 2018 Standard Occupational Classification System, U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, https://www.bls.gov/soc/2018/major_groups.htm#53-0000 (last accessed Oct. 25, 2022). Restaurant delivery workers are part of occupation 53-3031 (“Driver/Sales Workers”) and app for-hire service drivers are part of occupation 53-3054 (“Taxi Drivers”).

paid time off within the rate enables app delivery workers to take unpaid time off to rest, recuperate, and address healthcare needs without an undue reduction in annual pay.

The $19.86 base pay rate is also very close to the total compensation that apps would be required to provide if they classified their delivery workers as employees. The Department calculated total compensation using a base wage of $15 per hour plus the value of paid safe and sick leave benefits, unemployment insurance, health insurance, and federal Medicare and Social Security contributions, which sums to $19.90 (see Table 11, excluding workers' compensation).¹¹⁴ Testimony submitted to the Department at its June 2022 public hearing urged consideration of delivery workers' lack of access to benefits in determining the minimum pay rate and the importance of establishing parity with workers who are classified as employees.¹¹⁵

Some apps encouraged the Department to consider delivery workers' tips in setting the minimum pay rate, pointing to the $12.50 tipped minimum wage for delivery workers employed by some types of restaurants as a relevant comparison group (under New York State law, a restaurant may apply up to $2.50 an hour of a delivery worker's tips towards compliance with the minimum wage).¹¹⁶ The Department determined that it is not appropriate to adopt this $12.50 tip credit rate as the base rate, for several reasons. First, Section 20-1522(b) of the Minimum Pay Law states that "any minimum payment rate determined by the department pursuant to this section shall not include gratuities." Adopting the tip credit rate as a base rate would conflict with the letter and spirit of that legal requirement. Second, under New York State law, the tip credit is a special permission afforded to a subset of restaurants, not a general exception for delivery as an occupation.¹¹⁷ Currently, the tip credit under New York State law does not apply to delivery workers employed by fast food restaurants¹¹⁸ or to delivery services in the convenience and grocery sectors that use an employee model, and would not apply if the restaurant apps were to classify their workers as employees.¹¹⁹

Workers' Compensation Component

The purpose of the workers' compensation component is to compensate for expected income loss and medical expenses associated with on-the-job injuries that app delivery workers experience. Unlike workers who are Both are part of occupation 53-0000 ("Transportation and Material Moving Occupations"). The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics does not publish estimates of paid time off that distinguish between restaurant delivery and app for-hire service drivers. See Employer Costs for Employee Compensation, U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics (Sept. 20, 2022), <https://www.bls.gov/ncs/ect/> (last accessed Oct. 28, 2022).

¹¹⁴ As noted in section 4, employers are not required to provide health insurance to employees but may face a tax penalty if they do not. For purposes of this analysis, the Department assumes that if apps classified delivery workers as employees, they would choose to provide compliant health insurance options to their delivery workers rather than incur the tax penalty, and so it treats health insurance as equivalent to a required benefit.

¹¹⁵ Hearing Written Testimony at 2-3 (letter of NYC Department of Health and Mental Hygiene), at 26 (letter of Hildalyn Colón Hernández, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker's Justice Project), at 49-50 (letter of José Ramírez aka Manny Ramírez, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker's Justice Project), at 75 (letter of Eman Faris, CUNY Urban Food Policy Institute), at 78 (letter of Charlene Obernauer, New York Committee for Occupational Safety and Health).

¹¹⁶ See, e.g., Hearing Written Testimony at 62 (letter of Uber Technologies, Inc.).

¹¹⁷ See Hospitality Industry Wage Order, Part 146 of Title 12 of the NYS Codes, Rules, and regulations, 12 NYCRR §§ 146-1.1(a) and 1463.1(a).

¹¹⁸ See Minimum Wage for Fast Food Workers Frequently Asked Questions, NYS Department of Labor, <https://dol.ny.gov/minimum-wage-fastfood-workers-frequently-asked-questions> (last accessed Oct. 25, 2022) (specifying that delivery workers working for fast food restaurants are fast food employees and that no tip credit is available for fast food employees).

¹¹⁹ See Minimum Wage Order for Miscellaneous Industries and Occupations, Part 142 of Title 12 of the NYS Codes, Rules, and regulations, 12 NYCRR §§ 142-1.1(a), 142-2.1(a), and 142-2.5(b)(2)(*). Though the Department is not aware of a restaurant delivery app using an employee model, such services do exist in the grocery and convenience sectors, in which the restaurant apps also compete.

classified as employees in New York City, app delivery workers do not have access to traditional workers' compensation insurance. Unlike app for-hire service drivers in New York City, who have the Black Car Fund, app delivery workers also do not have access to an alternative system for medical care and wage replacement for on-the-job injuries. Therefore, an addition to the base pay component is necessary.

The Department calculated the workers' compensation component of $1.70 to provide for comparability to the actuarial value of the workers' compensation coverage received by employed restaurant delivery workers in New York State (7.84% of payroll).¹²⁰ The $1.70 also includes an adjustment to reflect differences in how federal Medicare and Social Security contributions apply to independent contractor income and employee benefits (i.e., independent contractors pay 15.3% in contributions to Medicare and Social Security on their income, while an employee does not make any contributions to Medicare and Social Security on the value of benefits like workers' compensation). This ensures that app delivery workers receive the same value, despite less advantageous tax treatment.

Table 15 presents the Department's calculation of the workers' compensation component along with the base pay and expense components that comprise the minimum payment rate.

Expense Component

The purpose of the expense component is to compensate app delivery workers for necessary expenses they incur to perform delivery work. The expense component ($2.26) is the Department's estimate of average hourly expenses for e-bike workers, less the cost of traffic or parking tickets, which are not deductible under IRS rules (see Table 9).¹²¹

As discussed in section 4, e-bike worker expenses fall into two main categories: vehicle expenses and phone expenses. Vehicle expenses include the cost of purchasing an e-bike, batteries, safety equipment, and other accessories. Phone expenses include the phone itself and a data plan.

Among other reasons, the Department determined that it is appropriate to base the expense component of the rate on the expenses of e-bike workers because e-bike delivery is the most cost-effective and efficient form of app-based restaurant delivery, and because the proportion of deliveries performed using e-bikes is increasing.

Table 15. Calculation of the Minimum Pay Rate ($)

Base Pay
Pay for Wages and Time Off		18.34
Base Pay Subtotal ($19.86), less Adjustment for Medicare and Social Security Contributions ($1.52)
Adjustment for Medicare and Social Security Contributions		1.52
Base Pay Subtotal ($19.86) x employer share of Medicare and Social Security contributions (7.65%)
Base Pay Subtotal		19.86
Workers' Compensation

¹²⁰ See New York Compensation Insurance Rating Board, supra note 84.

¹²¹ Publication 463 (2021), Travel, Gift, and Car Expenses, IRS (March 24, 2022), <https://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/p463.pdf> ("You can't deduct fines you pay . . . for traffic violations").

Workers' Compensation if App Delivery Workers were Employees Pay for Wages and Time Off ($18.34) x expected costs (7.84%)	1.44
Adjustment for Medicare and Social Security Contributions Workers' Compensation Subtotal ($1.70), less the employer and employee shares of Medicare and Social Security contributions ($1.70 x 15.3%)	0.26
Workers' Compensation Subtotal Pay such that after adjustment for Medicare and Social Security contributions (15.3%), app delivery workers receive the same value as the coverage they would receive if they were employees ($1.44)	1.70
Expense Component
Average Hourly Expenses of E-Bike Workers See discussion	2.26
Total	23.82

"Expected costs" are insurers' costs of covering claims by employed restaurant delivery workers, as published by the New York Compensation Insurance Rating Board.¹²² Source: Department analysis. Base pay per hour worked reflects the TLC minimum payment rate for app for-hire service drivers.¹²³

The Department considered issuing separate rates for different vehicle types but decided against it for the poor incentives it would create. For instance, if cars were compensated at higher rates than e-bikes, reflecting their higher expenses, apps might cease offering trips to car drivers. Further, apps generally do not have sufficiently reliable systems in place for verifying the vehicle in use for any span of trip time or on-call time.¹³²

Basis of Pay

The proposed minimum pay rate's aggregate pay requirement combines two key features: 1) A requirement that apps assume liability for all time that workers spend working, including on-call time and trip time, and 2) Flexibility for apps to determine how they pay each worker.

The Department views this combination as desirable for several reasons. First, the rule will incentivize apps to make operational changes to use workers' time on the apps more efficiently, increasing deliveries per hour. For apps, this will partially offset the increase in unit labor costs associated with higher pay, reducing the costs they pass to consumers (see section 6). For workers, more deliveries per hour will increase opportunities to earn tips per hour worked.

Second, the Department's approach accommodates the variety of pay arrangements already present in the industry, which includes per-trip rates and hourly pay. It will ensure that apps have flexibility in their compensation structures. It will also ensure that apps that use an hourly pay structure, which compensates oncall time, are not at a competitive disadvantage to apps that pay per trip.

¹²² See New York Compensation Insurance Rating Board, supra note 84.

¹²³ See Rules of the NYC Taxi and Limousine Commission (35 RCNY) § 59D-22(a)(4). ¹³² Interviews with apps.

Third, the Department's approach guarantees that each app will pay at or above the intended average hourly pay each week, regardless of what variations occur in the mix of trip time and on-call time. This would not be true of a rate paid only on trip time.

Lastly, it is a relatively simple design, and feasible to implement for both apps and the Department.

Some apps suggested that workers should not be compensated for on-call time that does not result in a trip or that precedes a trip offer that a worker declines or allows to expire. Apps are well positioned to address this concern by making operational changes that limit on-call time. Some apps also suggested that the Department reduce the minimum pay rate to avoid compensating workers for time they spend connected to more than one app. Workers do this to reduce the time between trip offers and to maximize the number of trips.¹²⁴ However, the Department anticipates that the time spent connected to multiple platforms will be sharply reduced when apps respond to the minimum pay rule by minimizing workers' on-call time while connected.

The Department's requirement that apps pay their workforces for on-call time is consistent with other legal frameworks. TLC's minimum pay standard for app for-hire service drivers uses a formula to indirectly compensate drivers for on-call time.¹²⁵ Moreover, under the Fair Labor Standards Act, an employee must be compensated when "engaged to wait."¹²⁶ The proposed minimum pay rule accomplishes the same policy objective.

The rule's provision for averaging payments across a group of workers also has precedent. For example, under New York State Law, construction employers on certain tax-exempt residential projects in NYC must comply with a minimum average hourly wage requirement. Under this requirement, the total compensation (including benefits) provided to all construction workers on a project divided by the total hours they all worked must exceed specific minimums.¹³⁶

Inflation Adjustment

To ensure that the rate keeps pace with the cost of living, under the rule, the Department will adjust the minimum pay rate for inflation on April 1 of every year.¹²⁷ The Department chose the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the New York-New Jersey-Pennsylvania metropolitan area as the most appropriate index to capture changes in NYC delivery workers' cost of living.

Though inflation in delivery workers' expenses and workers' compensation coverage may differ from inflation in workers' general cost of living, the proposed rule does not separately adjust each component but rather applies the chosen index to the entire rate. Since expenses and workers' compensation are a relatively small part of the rate, and inflation in these items is correlated with the general cost of living, a separate treatment is unlikely to make a material difference but could introduce unnecessary complexity and variability into the annual adjustment process.

¹²⁴ Hearing Written Testimony at 12 (letter of NYC Comptroller Brad Lander), at 21 (letter of Hildalyn Colón Hernández, Los Deliveristas Unidos/Worker's Justice Project), at 76 (letter of Eman Faris, CUNY Urban Food Policy Institute); Hearing Transcript at 19 (statement of Ligia Gualpa, Worker's Justice Project).

¹²⁵ See Parrott & Reich, supra note 76.

¹²⁶ See Fact Sheet #22: Hours Worked Under the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), U.S. Department of Labor, <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/whd/fact-sheets/22-flsa-hours-worked> (last accessed Oct. 7, 2022).

¹³⁶ See New York State Real Property Law § 421-a(16)(c); see NYC Wage Standards, NYC Comptroller, <https://comptroller.nyc.gov/services/for-the-public/nyc-wage-standards/wage-schedules> (last accessed Sept. 30, 2022).

¹²⁷ See Proposed Rule of the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (6 RCNY) § 7-810.

Phase-in

The proposed phase-in of the rate over two years, with the rates in 2023 and 2024 representing 75% and 85% of the full rate, respectively, is modelled on the phase-in of the $15 minimum wage in NYC for large employers between 2016 and 2018.¹²⁸ This phase-in will provide apps with more time to improve their productivity before bearing the full cost of the minimum pay rate.

¹²⁸ See New York State Labor Law § 652.

6 Effects of the Minimum Payment Standard

To assess the prospective impacts of the Department's proposed minimum pay rate, the Department developed a structural model of app delivery in NYC that allows the Department to project relevant outcomes for apps, consumers, delivery workers, and restaurants. The model works by identifying the key relationships between these actors and making reasonable assumptions about their reactions both to the new minimum pay rate and to each other.

This section presents a summary of this model and its results, followed by discussion of their implications.

Model

The model starts from the assumption that absent the minimum pay rate, the volume of deliveries in NYC would continue to grow at its current annual pace of 17%, but that all other features of the market would stay the same. This means that average order size, tips per dollar ordered, fees charged to consumers and restaurants, and pay and deliveries per hour worked, along with other parameters, would all remain as at present.

The model then makes reasonable assumptions regarding how the minimum pay rate will lead to deviations from this baseline through 2025 when the phase-in of the minimum pay rate is scheduled to be complete. First, the model assumes that, from 2023 to 2025, apps will respond to the minimum pay rate by increasing deliveries per hour worked from the current 1.63 to 2.50. This assumption is based on the Department's identification, using the record-level data obtained from apps, of large differences between apps in the number of deliveries per hour. The Department expects that, in response to the rule, the less efficient apps will increase their deliveries per hour, but not fully match the highest rate of deliveries per hour the Department has observed for an app in the record-level data. The projected increase in deliveries per hour will partially offset the costs of higher app delivery worker pay but still result in apps paying workers $5.18 more per delivery, on average. Second, the model assumes that the apps will choose to pass this increase on to consumers dollar-for-dollar in the form of higher delivery fees, increasing consumers' costs of delivery by 15.6% after accounting for the order subtotal, taxes, and tips, which are assumed to be unaffected. This is a conservative assumption, as competitive pressures may lead apps to raise fees less. Still, the Department chose to take a cautious approach so that it could assess outcomes even under a relatively pessimistic scenario with respect to consumer impacts. Restaurants will not see a material increase in the fees that apps charge them because most restaurants already pay at or close to the maximum allowed under NYC law. Third, the model assumes that in response to their 15.6% cost increase per delivery, consumers will make 15.6% fewer orders than they otherwise would. If consumers perceive app delivery as a luxury service or one that has close substitutes, demand may decline more. Conversely, consumers may be relatively insensitive to an increase of this size and, if so, their demand for app delivery will be less affected. Absent specific information about consumers' response, the Department follows the standard assumption that demand will decrease proportionally to the increase in price. Fourth, the model assumes that the increased productivity that apps achieve in response to the minimum pay rate will also be associated with a modest reduction in delivery workers' average expenses per hour, from the current $3.06 to $2.82. This is due to a projected shift away from car delivery, which is less efficient and more costly. Together, these dynamics determine the Department's projections for apps, consumers, workers, and restaurants.

Results

The Department projects that between 2022 and 2025 delivery workers' hourly pay will increase by $16.73 (236%) from $7.09 to $23.82 and hourly tips will increase by $3.19 (45%) from $7.09 to $10.28. Since order subtotals and tipping practices are assumed to remain as at present, the increase in tips results solely from the increase in deliveries per hour. After accounting for expenses, the Department expects app delivery workers' net hourly earnings, which includes pay and tips, to increase by $20.16 (181%) from $11.12 to $31.28. For an app delivery worker with average working hours (i.e., 20.7 hours of working time per week) over 52 weeks, the minimum pay rate will increase net earnings from $11,970 to $33,670, on average. As stated in section 4, the NYC poverty threshold and near-poverty thresholds for a single adult are $19,088 and $28,632, respectively,¹²⁹ and for a two-adult, two-child family the thresholds are $41,185 and $61,778, respectively.¹⁴⁰

The Department also projects that delivery workers' total hours will decrease by 12%, and that workers' aggregate net earnings will increase by $1.4 billion (156%) from $0.9 billion in 2022 to $2.3 billion in 2025. This large increase projected for workers' aggregate net earnings results, in part, from the Department's projection of continued strong growth in demand for app delivery. Though higher delivery fees are expected to moderate the pace of growth somewhat, the Department still expects app deliveries to increase from 132 million in 2022 to 178 million in 2025 (35%). Consumer spending on app delivery, in turn, is also projected continue to grow, from $4.369 billion in 2022 to $6.827 billion in 2025 (56%).

With respect to apps' gross margins (i.e., app revenue, less payments to delivery workers), the Department projects that they will remain unchanged per delivery (which reflects the assumed 100% cost pass-through).¹³⁰ This implies growth of aggregate gross margins proportionate to the 35% growth in deliveries, from $553 million in 2022 to $747 million in 2025.

The Department expects restaurant profitability to be mostly unaffected, though to the extent that higher app fees lead consumers to purchase restaurant meals through higher margin channels, such as direct delivery orders, dine-in, or takeout, restaurant profits will increase.

Discussion

The Department's modeling reveals how, under any reasonable set of assumptions, workers' pay rates are only one of several factors driving apps' expenses and consumers' costs. For instance, since delivery fees comprise only 10% of the total cost to consumers on an order (see Figure 2), even if apps opt for a large increase in fees, this produces only a modest percentage change in consumers' total cost. Similarly, the model shows how the number of deliveries workers perform per hour is critical in shaping the industry's unit economics. The Department's projected 51% increase in deliveries per hour translates to a 26% reduction in apps' labor cost per delivery. Together, these dynamics explain how the industry can absorb large increases in delivery worker pay without prohibitive cost increases to consumers.

The projected increase in productivity is large, but based on the Department's review of the apps' data, readily achievable in response to the new incentives the minimum pay rate creates. The increase in deliveries per hour may occur through several channels. First, with more lucrative trip offers, workers may become less selective, reducing on-call time. Second, apps can tighten limits on access to their platforms, better matching supply to demand. Grubhub, DoorDash, and Relay already limit access during certain periods (the industry term is "gating"), and they may make greater use of it in response to the minimum pay rate. Uber does not limit access in this way but may choose to start. Third, apps may directly incentivize productivity. For instance, some apps provide preferential access to their platforms based, in part, on acceptance rates (i.e., how frequently a worker accepts a trip offer), and may make greater use of these practices in response to the rule. Fourth, apps can make more efficient use of workers' time through changes in how they match workers to deliveries. One example is increased use of trips where a worker may pick up two orders from the same restaurant and deliver them sequentially. Apps are already attempting to make efficiency gains on this margin, but the minimum pay rate may encourage more progress. Fifth, apps may choose to increase consumer fees, especially on the orders that require the most labor. These include deliveries that require travel over long distances, or that occur during times of day or areas of the city where long waits between trips are unavoidable due to traffic or other factors. Through its impact on consumer demand, this fee strategy would raise average productivity by disproportionately limiting growth in the orders that require the most working time to fulfill. Similarly, apps may strategically restrict delivery distances or limit service to the times and places where delivery can be provided affordably. Lastly, apps may tighten existing protections against inattentive or unintended use of the apps, such as by automatically disconnecting workers after a span of inactivity.

¹²⁹ See NYC Office of the Mayor, supra note 86.

¹⁴⁰ See NYC Office of the Mayor, supra note 86.

¹³⁰ The Department's model reflects a gross margin of $4.16 per delivery, which it calculated for the fourth quarter of 2021 using the recordlevel data obtained from apps. This differs slightly from the gross margin of $4.22 reported in Figure 2, which the Department calculated for July 2021 – June 2022 from the weekly aggregate data obtained from apps.

Beyond productivity, there also exist several other margins for adjustment to higher delivery worker pay. For instance, apps could choose to reduce consumers' costs through changes to the user interface that discourage or eliminate tipping (or, equivalently, consumers could choose to tip less in light of workers' higher pay, independent of any changes engineered by apps). The Department finds that if tipping were eliminated at all apps, costs to consumers would increase by $1.06 per delivery (3%) with workers still receiving sizable pay increases.

The Department also considered scenarios where consumers are less sensitive to fee increases than assumed above, the apps pass-through less than 100% of their cost increases, and productivity improves more or less than under the Department's main specification. Each set of assumptions presents a different mix of costs and benefits for different actors in the industry, though under no specification did the Department identify a set of outcomes suggesting the market would be unable to support the proposed minimum pay rate.

The Department anticipates that the greatest adverse impacts from the rule for workers are likely to be the actions apps take to reduce platform access for workers whose time generates relatively little revenue or to alter requirements in ways some workers find undesirable. These impacts will be disproportionately felt by workers whose engagement on the apps is the most casual.

7 Conclusion

The Department's proposed minimum pay rate will substantially increase delivery workers' earnings by providing for average hourly net pay comparable to NYC's existing standard for app for-hire service drivers, plus an addition to compensate for the absence of workers' compensation insurance. This rate also approximates the value of the minimum pay and benefits app delivery workers would have a right to receive if classified as employees.

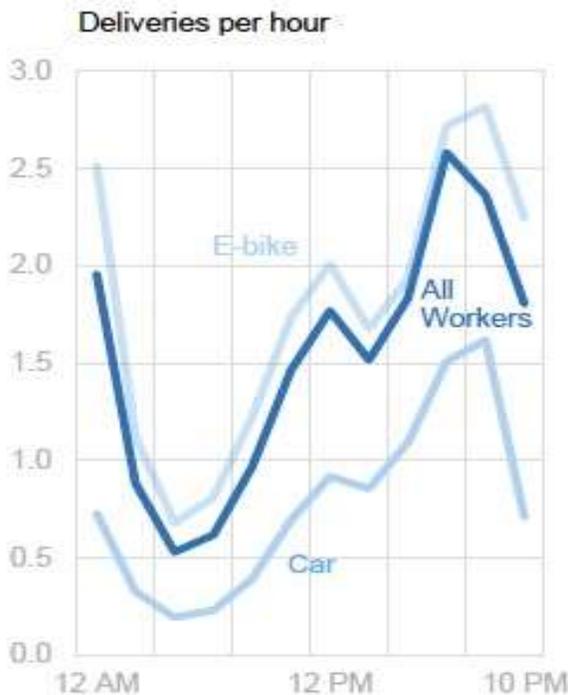

Though the large increase in app delivery worker pay will have indirect effects on apps, consumers, and restaurants, the minimum pay rate has been constructed to minimize any adverse consequences. By providing apps with flexibility in how they meet the required minimum average hourly pay while still assuming responsibility for workers' on-call time, the rule creates both the incentive and opportunity for the apps to achieve substantial productivity improvements, which the Department expects will offset a large portion of cost increases that might otherwise be passed on to consumers. The Department projects that the growth of app delivery will moderate but remain strong.

EXHIBIT 6

To the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection:

In an attempt to comply with the extremely short comment period provided for by the Department on the proposed courier earnings rule, Uber is providing a series of comments on the Department's Proposed Rule. This is the third in a series of submissions Uber is providing to help inform the Department's rulemaking process.

The Department makes certain assumptions about how the market will react to the Proposed Rule. First, the Department assumes that the apps can achieve 2.5 deliveries per hour per courier during the entire day. While the Proposed Rule would force the apps to make changes that would increase deliveries per hour, 2.5 trips per hour is an aggressive assumption – the apps only achieve this level of deliveries per hour for a brief period during peak demand hours. On average, the apps currently only achieve 1.63 deliveries per hour. This is shown in the following graph from the Department's Study (page 16):

Thus, the Department is assuming that the apps can average, over all hours, an amount of trips per hour that they are currently able to achieve only for a brief moment during hours of peak demand, and with all existing productivity strategies in place.

There is a lot riding on this assumption, and there are significant risks if the Department's assumption is too optimistic.

The Department's assessment of the increased costs per delivery is based on the 2.5 trips per hour assumption. The more trips occur in an hour, the hourly amount that must be paid is spread over more trips. Assuming 2.5 trips per hour, the Department calculates delivery fees per trip will increase by $5.18. The Department also assumes reasonably that these increased costs will be passed on to consumers dollar-for-dollar. It predicts this pass-on of costs will cause a 15.6% reduction in orders:

The Department expects that, in response to the rule, the less efficient apps will increase their deliveries per hour, but not fully match the highest rate of deliveries per hour the Department has observed for an app in the record-level data. The projected increase in deliveries per hour will partially offset the costs of higher app delivery worker pay but still result in apps paying workers $5.18 more per delivery, on average. Second, the model assumes that the apps will choose to pass this increase on to consumers dollar-for-dollar in the form of higher delivery fees, increasing consumers' costs of delivery by 15.6% after accounting for the order subtotal, taxes, and tips, which are assumed to be unaffected.

(Report at 34.) As reflected in Uber's prior comments on the Proposed Rule, we submit that now is not the time to impose an increase in delivery fees to consumers of New York that is predicted—according to the Department's own report—to cause a 15.6% reduction in orders.

That is especially so given that things could end up much worse than the report predicts. If the apps are not able to achieve the sustained average of 2.5 trips per hour—for example, if they only achieve 2 deliveries per hour—the Department's Proposed Rule would cause even greater increased costs per trip, and greater reductions in orders placed with restaurants. The following table explains the increased costs per trips at different assumptions for trips per hour, as well as the assumed reduction in consumer orders. All of the information below is based on simple math, showing how delivery cost and the number of orders change as trips per hour change (using the Department's own assumption of elasticity of demand of 1.0). The formula to determine increased costs per delivery is as follows: Increase in Cost Per Delivery = 23.82 / New Deliveries Per Hour - $7.09/1.63.

Sensitivities with productivities and elasticities
Elasticity = 1 (as assumed by the Report)
	Productivity (trips per hour)	Additional cost per delivery	% change in orders
Proposed	2.50	$5.18	-15.6%
	2.35	$5.79	-17.5%
	2.20	$6.48	-19.6%
	2.05	$7.27	-22.0%
	1.90	$8.19	-24.7%
	1.75	$9.26	-28.0%
Current	1.63	$10.26	-31.0%

As can be seen in the table above, restaurants in New York City may face serious consequences if the Department’s assumption of 2.5 trips per hour is not correct – including drastic reductions in orders that exceed 20% and approach 30%.

If the Proposed Rule is enacted, the apps will have to curtail courier flexibility to increase trips per hour, and such changes will yield some increase in trips per hour from the current level. But the Department’s assumption of 2.5 trips per hour is optimistic and untested in the marketplace. It remains unknown and speculative if the apps can achieve 2.5 trips per hour, with many reasons to assume they cannot. The Department is in effect running a marketplace experiment on potential courier productivity, with significant risks with how much consumers will pay, and how many orders restaurants will lose.

Restaurants have gone through a lot in the past few years, as have consumers. We submit this is not the time for this Administration to endorse and conduct such a risky experiment on the consumers and restaurants of New York City. Restaurants cannot withstand a loss of 15.6% of orders, let alone over 22% loss of orders if the apps achieve, for example, two deliveries per hour instead of 2.5.

EXHIBIT 7

Alternative to The Aggregate Requirement

Summary

The Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's ("DCWP") proposed earnings standard in NYC ("Proposed Rule") is designed to require the introduction of restrictions like gating and scheduling that would limit NYC couriers from working when, where, and however they want for all Apps. The Proposed Rule explicitly acknowledges that these types of restrictions on courier flexibility would inexorably result from the Proposed Rule's requirement that delivery platforms compensate couriers for aggregate time spent on-call. The DCWP also predicts that under its rule consumers would place 15.6% fewer orders than they otherwise would. To avoid these impacts to couriers and restaurants, instead of requiring compensation for "on-call time" as proposed via the "Aggregate Requirement", we propose an alternative use of a time factor that is multiplied by "on-trip time" (between offer acceptance and order dropoff) to account for the inevitable waiting time between offers. We recommend considering a multiplier of 1.15, which is supported by data as explained below.

Background

As currently proposed, the Earnings Standard requires each app to compensate for all on-call time accumulated by couriers on the respective app without allowing the apps to correct for simultaneous multi-apping, and also does not account for City-required limitations that a courier may impose on accepting trips. This creates an incentive for couriers to accumulate paid online time across apps, and, as the City has acknowledged, will result in platforms limiting on-call time by resorting to wide-scale adoption of strategies such as gating and scheduling. As DCWP's study suggests, Apps will pit couriers against each other, rewarding the most efficient and productive couriers with working time in the most lucrative areas, while preventing others from working. While some Apps already limit access, they have limited incentives to do so - if the proposed rules goes into effect, they'll have much higher incentives to control access. Moreover, the need for two options -- i.e., an approach in which couriers deliver during scheduled times and one where couriers deliver whenever they prefer -- is critical. A survey last week of couriers using the Uber Eats platform garnered 11,687 responses and showed that 24% of delivery workers use our platform when they are locked out of working by other companies.

Using a multiplier to account for "on-call time"

To continue to provide couriers with the flexibility they need, we propose an alternative option to the aggregate requirement. The City can prescribe a time factor that, when multiplied by couriers' on-trip time and the on-trip minimum earnings requirement, compensates couriers fairly for waiting time. This would eliminate the need for apps to impose restrictions on the amount of on-call time couriers accrue, since excessive on-call time due to declining offers or going online on multiple apps simultaneously would not be compensated.

Applying Cornell’s methodology

To account for simultaneous multi-apping and the possibility that not all online time is spent seeking work on a given platform, researchers at Cornell University developed an approach to approximate the true working time of couriers.¹³¹ This approach is possible to implement using a single app’s data. The approach is based on the fact that couriers often reject trip requests. In fact, the average acceptance rate of trips on Uber is at or below 20%. This hints at the fact that many couriers may be busy on another platform, engaged in some other non-work activity, or that they are simply exercising the freedom and choice the City Council sought to give them with a package of laws that gave couriers more control and information about each delivery they make take. For example, the City Council has given couriers the right to control maximum trip distance; thus entrusting couriers with the flexibility to choose to only be available for a subset of trips, even if that approach results in the necessary consequence of having to wait more time between trips that meet that individual courier’s trip specifications.

Cornell’s approach includes all open time preceding a trip in the denominator of hourly earnings. Instead of heavily overcounting on-call time as seen in Figure 1, Cornell’s approach allows for a much better approximation of deduplicated online time as seen in Figure 2.

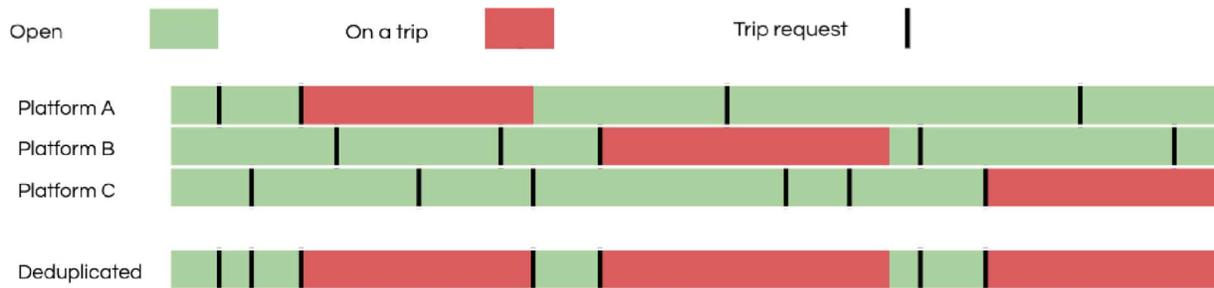

Figure 1: Not accounting for simultaneous multi-apping or other non-work activity leads to overcounting couriers’ actual on-call time.

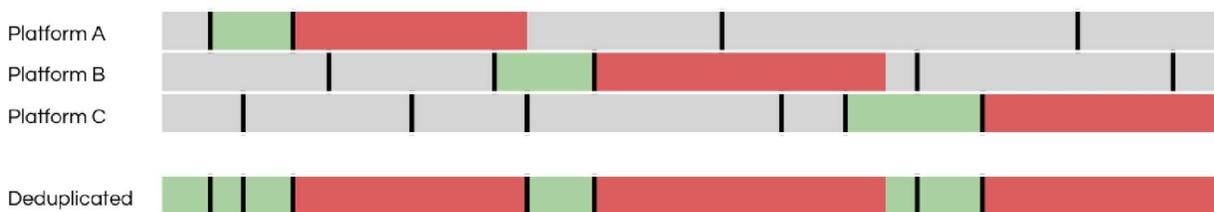

Figure 2: When accounting for simultaneous multi-apping or other non-work activity is not possible, including all open time preceding a trip much better approximates the actual working time.

The result based on Uber’s data provided to DCWP

We use Cornell’s approach and adapt it to the data format that was used to share data with the DCWP in spring and summer 2022, which implies the use of averages instead of individual log-in times. We find that the average waiting time between offers for couriers in NYC between ¹³¹ Louis Hyman et al. (2020) “Platform Driving in Seattle”.

September 5, 2022 and December 4, 2022 was 3 minutes, while the average on-trip time per each Uber Eats delivery in NYC was 20 minutes, hence the resulting multiplier is 1.15.

Average waiting time between offers (A)	Average trip duration (B)	Time factor (1 + A/B)
3.0 minutes	20.2 minutes	1.15

Meaning, a 15% enhancement to payment for On-Trip time would appropriately compensate a courier for the amount of time actually spent waiting between offers, as opposed to simply paying money for time spent logged into an app which might have little bearing on actual time spent waiting for a trip or trips accepted.

If DCWP adopts this methodology, it could tweak the Minimum Earning standard to reflect the Time Factor Multiplier, multiplied by on-trip time, multiplied by the Minimum per-hour payment adopted by the City. So, for example, utilizing the Time Factor described above, a courier's earnings would be the product of On-Trip Time * Minimum Earning Per Hour * 1.15. And by focusing payment on On-Trip Time (even while compensating for On-Call Time) this approach would not lead to significant reductions in courier flexibility as would happen under the current version of the proposed rule.

EXHIBIT 8

BEFORE THE NEW YORK CITY
DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER AND WORKER PROTECTION

Proposed Rule on Minimum Pay for Food
Delivery Workers

Public Hearing: December 16, 2022

COMMENTS OF UBER TECHNOLOGIES, INC.

Hayley Prim

3 World Trade Center
175 Greenwich Street
New York, NY 10001
Email: prim@uber.com

INTRODUCTION

The New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (the “Department”) has proposed a rule establishing minimum payments for food delivery couriers (the “Proposed Rule”). The Proposed Rule is designed to upend the food delivery industry in New York City. It is based on unreliable—and undisclosed—assumptions, models, and surveys and non-analogous legal regimes. The Proposed Rule contradicts the policies animating New York City’s laws regulating the delivery industry. It will lead to negative outcomes, including denying couriers the flexibility they routinely confirm that they value, raising prices on consumers, and reducing orders placed with merchants—by at least 15.6% according to the Department.

This is the fourth in a series of comments that Uber has submitted regarding the Proposed Rule, and the prior submissions, dated December 8, 13, and 15, 2022, raise problems and issues that remain live and must be considered and addressed before the Proposed Rule is finalized or enacted.¹³² Uber also raised numerous issues in its June 15, 2022, submission to the Department which were not adequately considered prior to issuing the Proposed Rule (or after), and which must also be considered and addressed.¹³³ Among the issues:

First, as set forth in Sections I and II, the Proposed Rule requires payment for all “on-call” time—i.e., time during which a courier is merely logged on to platforms but not actually on a delivery trip—and will force changes that run contrary to the remainder of New York law, and couriers’ expressed preferences. The Department’s Report purportedly supporting the Proposed Rule admits that the Proposed Rule will force platforms to implement practices to limit on-call time, meaning couriers’ ability to access the platform.¹³⁴ These limits may take many forms, such as gating (blocking couriers from logging on when demand is not sufficiently high), scheduling (only allowing couriers to go online in pre-selected slots of time), tiering (ranking couriers for purposes of being able to access scheduled time slots), and “offlining” (forcing couriers offline based on trip cancellations, non-acceptance of offers, or expected trips per hour given demand).¹³⁵ These steps will undermine key benefits that couriers enjoy currently—flexibility of where, when, and ¹³² Uber’s December 8, 2022 Comment; Uber’s December 12, 2022 Comment; Uber’s December 15, 2022 Comment.

¹³³ See Uber’s June 15, 2022 Comment.

¹³⁴ N.Y.C. Dep’t of Consumer & Worker Protection, A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC (the “Report”) (Nov. 2022) at 35–36, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/pdf/workers/DeliveryWorker-Study-November-2022.pdf>.

¹³⁵ Report at 35–36.

how to work, and whether to accept or not accept a trip offer—and violate the clear policies that the City has otherwise enacted in this space that support couriers’ control over their own work.

Moreover, this “on-call” time will be paid out in the aggregate, and each platform will likely approach these payments differently, and may change its approach over time, resulting in massive courier uncertainty and confusion. Further, some couriers may receive no compensation for oncall time at all. The only alternative to changing courier access to limit on-call time would be for the apps to pass on the significantly increased and new payment obligations to consumers, causing even greater reductions in orders than the 15.6% reduction predicted by the Department.

Second, as set forth in Section III, the model the Department relied upon is unreliable, not part of the record, and cannot rationally be used to inform the Department’s rulemaking process. The Department fails to explain why the model it says it chose to use made the assumptions it did, including for core model inputs like delivery efficiency and tip elasticity. And those assumptions are vital to the Department’s projections of the Proposed Rule’s effects. Small adjustments to those assumptions make a considerable difference in projected outcomes.

Third, as set forth in Section IV, the Proposed Rule sets courier minimum payments based on inapt comparisons. Couriers are differently situated than for-hire vehicle drivers, so the Department’s choice of using for-hire vehicle drivers as a baseline is unreasonable. And while the Department purports to base its earnings standard off of the generally applicable minimum wage law, the Department inexplicably departs from its baseline, incorporating past and future upward adjustments even though the minimum wage has not changed.

Fourth, as set forth in Section V, the Department has relied on unreliable survey methodologies to gather the data purportedly supporting the Proposed Rule. The survey reflects serious methodological deficiencies, as explained by Dr. Itamar Simonson, Emeritus Professor of Marketing at the Graduate School of Business at Stanford University.

Fifth, as set forth in Section VI, the Proposed Rule imposes new recordkeeping requirements that are wholly unrelated to the Proposed Rule. These recordkeeping requirements will impose significant costs and privacy concerns on the industry, and the Department has failed to offer any possible rationale for imposing them.

Finally, as set forth in Section VII, the Department has impermissibly engaged in rulemaking in the dark, by refusing to turn over requested documents and information that are critical to allowing members of the public to meaningfully comment on the Proposed Rule.

I. The Proposal to Pay Minimum Earnings for “On-Call” Time Is Unreasonable.

The Proposed Rule would require a platform to pay an individual courier for the time he or she spends “on trip” as well as to pay one or more couriers for all of the time all couriers collectively spend logged on to the platform’s app, regardless of trips accepted. As the Department recognizes, this requirement to pay for on-call time will force platforms to limit couriers’ access to apps, including through steps like gating, scheduling, tiering, and offlining.¹³⁶ The Department further recognizes that apps might be forced to bar couriers who decline a certain number or certain types of trips, delaying deliveries so that a single courier can “batch” them (i.e., delivering multiple orders from the same restaurant sequentially), or stopping to operate in certain locations and/or at certain times.¹³⁷ Any platform that does not adopt such strategies to limit its obligations to pay for ¹³⁶ Report at 35 (“[A]pps can tighten limits on access to their platforms, better matching supply to demand. Grubhub, DoorDash, and Relay already limit access during certain periods (the industry term is ‘gating’), and they may make greater use of it in response to the minimum pay rate. Uber does not limit access in this way but may choose to start.”).

¹³⁷ Report at 35–36 (“[A]pps may directly incentivize productivity. For instance, some apps provide preferential access to their platforms based, in part, on acceptance rates (i.e., how frequently a worker accepts a trip offer), and may make greater use of these practices in response to the rule.”); id. at 36 (“[A]pps can make more efficient use of workers’ time through changes in how they match workers to deliveries. One example is increased use of trips where a worker may pick up two orders from the same restaurant and deliver them sequentially. Apps are already attempting to make efficiency gains on this margin, but the minimum pay rate may encourage more progress.”); id. (“[A]pps may

“on-call” time will face a competitive disadvantage in the form of higher consumer fees per delivery.

A. The Proposed Rule Will Limit Courier Choice to Accept or Decline Trips, Stymieing the City Council’s Policy Choices.

Uber Eats generally permits couriers the freedom to decide when and where to log on to its platform, for however long they choose, and to accept or not accept trips as they see fit.¹³⁸ The Department acknowledges that restricting freedom will be the outcome of the Proposed Rule.

These changes will erode the very flexibility that couriers resoundingly confirm they prefer. The Proposed Rule will pit couriers against each other. Couriers will be forced to compete against each other for platform access and earning opportunities. Many couriers will surely lose out. And even couriers who are able to get the best shifts or deliveries will be under the constant stress of losing their plum status if they are unable (or just don’t want to) perform a certain trip.

The Department has failed to explain why it considers these effects to be worth the purported benefits. Further, the Department has not explained how it has addressed this in light of concerns raised by for-hire vehicle drivers when the Taxi and Limousine Commission (“TLC” or “Commission”) imposed similar measures that penalized “on-call” time and thus caused high volume for-hire vehicle platforms to enact limits on platform access, such as gating and scheduling. There is no record of the Department asking couriers if they prefer this trade-off. The Department’s surveys inexplicably fail to solicit feedback from couriers on what the Department recognizes are the “greatest adverse impacts from the rule.”¹³⁹ This can all be avoided by allowing strategically restrict delivery distances or limit service to the times and places where delivery can be provided affordably.”).

¹³⁸ Uber’s December 13, 2022 Comment at 2–3.

¹³⁹ Report at 36.

apps to pay couriers based on the time actually spent delivering food, with a static multiplier to account for “on-call” time.

B. The Department Failed to Account for Multi-Apping.

The Department also failed to account for multi-apping. The Department’s own research confirms that couriers spend 17.7% of working time logged on to multiple delivery apps simultaneously.¹⁴⁰ Under the Proposed Rule, if a courier has multiple apps turned on (even if she only intends to accept orders through one app, or no orders at all), the courier’s time is counted more than once and toward the minimum pay that each of the multiple apps must provide. It is unreasonable for the Department to require multiple apps to pay workers for the same exact time, especially where the courier did no deliveries during that time. A courier logged on to multiple apps simultaneously is not spending more time than a courier logged on to on only a single app. The Proposed Rule, however, double, triple, or quadruple counts time with no explanation or justification. The only way for the platforms to avoid double paying, is to eliminate multi-apping. But that would undermine the goal of improving productivity and hurt couriers, who use multiple apps to increase their earnings. It also would fly in the face of the City Council’s policy choices to increase courier choice, and will rob couriers of the flexibility so many of them value.¹⁴¹ The Department should carefully consider the alternatives it has been presented with that accomplish the Department’s goal of increasing courier pay while still avoiding these significant consequences.¹⁴²

C. The Proposed Rule Will Negate the City Council’s Actions to Increase Courier Choice and Flexibility and Violate the Council’s Directive.

¹⁴⁰ Report at 5, 17; see Uber’s December 8, 2022 Comment at 2.

¹⁴¹ Cf. Jen Chung, Uber and Lyft Drivers Slow Down NYC Traffic to Protest App Changes, Gothamist (Sept. 17, 2019), <https://gothamist.com/news/uber-and-lyft-drivers-slow-down-nyc-traffic-protest-app-changes>.

¹⁴² Uber’s December 8, 2022 Comment at 1–3.

The Department’s restriction of courier choice conflicts with City laws designed to give couriers more control over where and when they work, and which trips they accept. For example, New York City recently enacted an ordinance that enables each courier to set a personalized maximum trip distance, and to restrict the bridges or tunnels that courier is willing to traverse.¹⁴³ These City Council-passed laws represent a deliberate policy choice to give couriers information and flexibility to control aspects of their deliveries. This policy choice comes with a clear, and understandable trade-off—that if couriers control a variety of parameters around the trips they choose to accept, that will result in fewer trip offers and fewer trips per hour. For example, a given courier might—as New York law allows—limit herself to trips under one mile. Such a courier could, under New York law and current platform practice, either set a definitive distance limit on offers or simply reject trips that do not sufficiently interest the courier. Self-evidently, this kind of limitation would result in greater time not executing deliveries (i.e., more “on-call” time) because that would be the courier’s choice. New York law encourages each courier to balance these trade-offs per that courier’s individualized preferences.

The Proposed Rule, by contrast, would force platforms to ban or otherwise limit access to those couriers who exercised those choices and thus experienced more “on-call” time because the courier wanted to only consider a select subset of trips. As noted, the Department, in proposing the Proposed Rule, has admitted that delivery platforms will take the steps that counteract the policy behind New York City law: “[S]ome apps provide preferential access to their platforms based, in part, on acceptance rates (i.e., how frequently a worker accepts a trip offer), and may make greater use of these practices in response to the rule.”¹⁴⁴ Imposing significant restrictions on if and when couriers can work, based on what trips they accept, counters the intent behind New York law. Likewise, the City Council enacted rules requiring heightened offer disclosures to couriers, and courier control over trip parameters. According to the Council’s press release, one of the accompanying laws that passed at the same time as the earnings standard law, Int 2289-A, aimed to offer “protections designed to ensure that delivery workers have the option to take only those delivery trips they deem safe and worthwhile, without being unduly pressured by the withholding of trip offers by the app, lower wages or negative performance reviews affecting their ability to receive future delivery opportunities.”¹⁴⁵ Councilmember Brannan, the sponsor of Int 2289-A, went further, saying that “many workers are penalized . . . for attempting to exercise basic control over their work day. So Intro [] 2289 aims to provide workers with a very crucial protection.”¹⁴⁶ This shows that the City Council clearly intended to allow couriers to exercise basic control over their work day.

¹⁴³ See, e.g., N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 20-1521(a)(1).

Uber fully supports giving couriers access to this type of information so they can determine which deliveries make sense to them. The Proposed Rule, however and for example, will either dramatically increase the costs per delivery that consumers must pay beyond the Department’s predictions, or it will force the apps to allow couriers online only during pre-arranged time slots, with access to the best time slots determined based on factors like acceptance rate and trips per hour. In other words, couriers’ decisions “to take only those delivery trips they deem safe and worthwhile” may “affect[] their ability to receive future delivery opportunities,” if they cannot access the most preferential schedule slots.¹⁴⁷ Thus, a requirement to pay for all “on-call” time is inconsistent with the purpose of these disclosure requirements. The purpose of the disclosures is to increase a courier’s choice and therefore enable couriers to choose to decline trips even while on-call and thus increasing on-call time. This increases on-call time as couriers reject trips (with no penalty to them) they do not like, while remaining online to be able to accept trips to their liking. The Proposed Rule’s strong incentives to reduce on-call time will inhibit these efforts.

¹⁴⁴ Report at 35–36.

¹⁴⁵ N.Y.C. City Council, Council Votes on Bill to Protect Delivery Workers (Sept. 23, 2021), <https://council.nyc.gov/press/2021/09/23/2106/>.

¹⁴⁶ N.Y.C. City Council, Transcript of the Minutes of the Committee on Consumer Affairs and Business Licensing at 10:17–25 (June 8, 2021).

The Proposed Rule also runs afoul of the instructions that the City Council provided the Department for setting minimum courier pay. The City Council instructed the Department to consider a list of factors, including “the number of deliveries made during a trip” and “the on-call and work hours of food delivery workers” when formulating the minimum pay standard.¹⁴⁸ That reflects the law’s intent that the minimum pay standard be based on working time on trips, not simply based on when a courier has an app open and their mobile device can receive trip requests which they then might accept, reject, or ignore. The bill summary is clear that the Department was instructed to set trip payments for engaged time and not direct payments specifically for all on-call time.

These problems can all be avoided by a requirement to pay couriers for their delivery time and then apply a multiplier to account for the time it generally takes couriers to receive orders.¹⁴⁹

That is consistent with the TLC’s approach to minimum pay and achieves the Department’s goals of compensating for on-call time without the negative consequences of the Proposed Rule.

¹⁴⁷ N.Y.C. City Council, Council Votes on Bill to Protect Delivery Workers (Sept. 23, 2021), <https://council.nyc.gov/press/2021/09/23/2106/>.

¹⁴⁸ N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 20-1522(a)(3).

¹⁴⁹ Uber’s December 8, 2022 Comment.

D. The Proposed Rule Will Force All Apps to Adopt the Most Restrictive Business Model, Depriving Couriers of the Choice to Work for Apps with Models that Work Best for Them.

Currently, couriers who prefer pre-scheduling their working time have an option to work with an app that does that, while couriers who prefer total flexibility have the option to do that, and couriers whose preferences vary have the option to switch back and forth. Under the model presented by the Department, apps will face competitive pressure to reduce their cost per delivery and thus adopt the business practices that involve the lowest amount of on-call time (both in terms of total logged-on time and the percentage of time spent available to receive trip requests compared to total time logged on), which means the model with the least courier flexibility. Couriers' platform choices will diminish, likely forcing all couriers industry-wide to be forced into rigidly scheduled shifts, likely with access to the best time slots based on tiers determined by acceptance rates and trips per hour. This fear is not theoretical; about 24% of couriers who work with Uber Eats choose to work with Uber Eats when they are locked out of other platforms.¹⁵⁰ Without the flexibility—which workers consistently tell Uber they value—some workers risk being locked out of multiple apps at the same time and may be locked out of all apps entirely.

There is only one platform that the Department studied (the smallest in terms of category position) that currently applies a sophisticated gating, scheduling, and blocking function.¹⁵¹ Forcing the three largest platforms to similarly restrict courier access to such a high degree will require them to make substantial changes to their approach, leading to foreseeable harm to couriers, consumers, and merchants.¹⁵² Currently, each courier has the choice to work with the platform(s) whose ¹⁵⁰ Uber's December 13, 2022 Comment at 2.

¹⁵¹ Uber's December 13, 2022 Comment at 3–4.

¹⁵² Uber's December 13, 2022 Comment at 2–3; Report at 35.

business model works best for them. Given the consequences that the Department foresees if the Proposed Rule is implemented, apps would be forced to implement gating and scheduling restrictions. This would eliminate courier choice, preventing couriers from choosing between platforms with a highly scheduled approach and those that offer the ability to work when and how they wish (or using a combination of the two).¹⁵³

E. The Proposed Rule Will Reduce Service and Hurt Underserved Communities and Local Restaurants.

The Proposed Rule’s strong financial and competitive incentives to reduce “on-call” time would adversely impact restaurants and the communities they serve.¹⁵⁴ In particular, Uber expects that the predictable effects of the Proposed Rule—i.e., the gating and inflexibility that the Proposed Rule explicitly encourages—would most dramatically lead to underserved communities seeing reduced levels of service, and lower demand for merchants in traditionally disadvantaged areas. While not explaining why it thought such a trade-off was acceptable, the Department recognizes that, if the Proposed Rule is enacted, “apps may strategically restrict . . . the times and places where delivery can be provided affordably.”¹⁵⁵

F. The Department Has Ignored Viable Alternatives

Sensible alternatives have been presented to the Department but they have been inexplicably ignored, so far. For example, the Department has been urged to determine an appropriate hourly rate of pay, and then mandate payment of that rate multiplied by 1.15 for all on-trip time.¹⁵⁶ This approach would indirectly compensate couriers for time spent on-call but avoid forcing the wide ¹⁵³ See Uber’s December 8, 2022 Comment; see also Uber’s December 12, 2022 Comment at 5–6.

¹⁵⁴ Uber’s December 13, 2022 Comment at 2, 5.

¹⁵⁵ Report at 36.

¹⁵⁶ See Uber’s December 8, 2022 Comment; see also Uber’s December 12, 2022 Comment at 5–6.

scale adoption of strategies like gating and scheduling, and reduce the negative impact on restaurant orders.¹⁵⁷ It would also retain courier choice among different platforms.¹⁵⁸ It is the same approach that is used by the Commission. The Department has given no indication that it considered this proposal or explained the reasons why it rejected it (if there are any).

II. The “Aggregate Payment Requirement” Is Arbitrary, Misguided, and Exceeds the Department’s Authority.

The Proposed Rule requires each individual courier to be paid for his or her on-trip time (“Individual Pay Requirement”), and then requires that all “on-call” time be aggregated and paid out to one or more couriers, however platforms choose (“Aggregate Pay Requirement”). This Aggregate Payment Requirement is an unprecedented approach and represents an ill-conceived marketplace experiment that is bound to have dramatic negative effects, with no countervailing benefit.

The Proposed Rule would allow companies to adopt a variety of approaches in paying out aggregate time to meet the Aggregate Pay Requirement. For example, some companies may pay the total amount evenly across all couriers, or proportionately to earnings for “on-trip” time. Other platforms may pay the entire amounts out to a small set of couriers based on other (or no) factors. Some companies may use the “aggregate” payment to pay extra amounts to the couriers that have the highest trips per hour or acceptance rates to encourage couriers to have higher utilization, and thus reduce the total amount of “on-call” time. Giving extra earnings to highly efficient couriers could, in theory, help achieve the Proposed Rule’s stated aim of forcing entities to increase trips per hour and would serve the economic interests of the platforms. But under such an approach and many other potential approaches, many couriers may receive nothing for their “on-call” time, and they will have earnings well below the intended target.

¹⁵⁷ See Uber’s December 8, 2022 Comment; see also Uber’s December 12, 2022 Comment at 5–6.

¹⁵⁸ See Uber’s December 8, 2022 Comment at 2; see also Uber’s December 12, 2022 Comment at 2–3.

Further, each company may change its approach over time. Couriers will not be able to predict or understand how much they will earn each week, or why. This will not only be frustrating for couriers but will be an administrative nightmare for the Department to explain and manage on an ongoing basis.¹⁵⁹

The approach also exceeds the bounds of what the City Council’s implementing legislation has authorized. The City Council tasked the Department with crafting a payment standard for “a food delivery worker”—in the singular.¹⁶⁰ So while the Department can propose rules about how to compensate each individual courier, the aggregate payment aspect of the standard exceeds the Department’s delegated authority. This ultra vires aspect of the Proposed Rule also leads to an incoherence in the payment structure for individual couriers because the requirement to compensate couriers as a collective for all aggregate on-call time does not necessarily mean that any individual courier will receive compensation based on on-call time. Uber’s counterproposal to use a multiplier for on-trip time solves this problem, by tying compensation to each courier’s actual activities, while appreciating the time typically spent on-call waiting for a new offer.

III. The Department Relied on an Unreliable and Secret Model.

The Department purportedly developed “a structural model” to “estimate the prospective effects of the proposed minimum pay rate.”¹⁶¹ The Department has not released its model. While the Department explains that its model is built on various assumptions, the Department has failed to ¹⁵⁹ Uber’s December 13, 2022 Comment at 2, 5.

¹⁶⁰ N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 20-1522(a)(3) (emphasis added).

¹⁶¹ Report at 4.

justify why those assumptions are correct, or assess how its modeling results could change drastically with just minor and realistic adjustments to those assumptions. As a few examples show:

First, the model that underlies the Proposed Rule assumes that “apps will respond to the minimum pay rate by increasing deliveries per hour worked from the current 1.63 to 2.50.”¹⁶² As the Department recognizes, this assumption is “critical” for how the Department predicts courier take-home earnings, and yet is unexplained and importantly, untested in the real world.¹⁶³ Under the Proposed Rule, any individual courier is guaranteed payment only for trips actually completed, under the Individual Pay Requirement. Whether any individual courier receives payment under the Aggregate Pay Requirement is not guaranteed, and not known to any courier and subject to change every week. Infra 12–13. Thus, if a courier’s trips per hour are lower than assumed by the Department, a courier’s guaranteed earnings will be less than the earnings predicted by the Department.

Second, in projecting courier earnings following implementation of the Proposed Rule, the Department’s model assumes that customers’ tipping behavior will not change.¹⁶⁴ Rather, the model assumes an increase in aggregate tipping to coincide with assumed per-hour delivery increases.¹⁶⁵ This likely overstates tipping revenues, and thus total courier earnings. Given that the Department expects a customer’s delivery costs to increase by 15.6%, or $5.18 per delivery,¹⁶⁶ it is likely that consumers’ ability and willingness to tip will be diminished. Further, because the ¹⁶² Report at 34.

¹⁶³ Report at 35.

¹⁶⁴ Report at 35 (“tipping practices are assumed to remain as at present”).

¹⁶⁵ Report at 35 (“the increase in tips results solely from the increase in deliveries per hour”).

¹⁶⁶ Report at ii, 34.

assumed per-hour delivery increases are themselves likely overstated, supra, so too is the assumed commensurate growth in tipping.

Third, the Proposed Rule will, per the Department’s predictions, significantly cut the number of delivery orders, harming both couriers and restaurants. Even if couriers on average reach the ambitious 2.5 trips per hour standard, the Proposed Rule would “still result in apps paying workers $5.18 more per delivery, on average.”¹⁶⁷ The Department likewise predicts that “the apps will choose to pass this increase on to consumers dollar-for-dollar in the form of higher delivery fees.”¹⁶⁸ Off the bat, this involves a massive economic imposition on New York City consumers, which the Department predicts will cause “consumers [to] make 15.6% fewer orders than they otherwise would”¹⁶⁹—a fact apparently not mentioned in the Department’s surveys. The Department simply fails to mention the devastating effect that a 15% decrease in delivery orders would have on the City’s restaurant industry, delivery workers, or customers.

As set forth in Uber’s December 15, 2022 Comment, a 15.6% decrease in demand would be bad enough, but it will likely be worse because 2.5 deliveries per hour is too optimistic. Based upon data reflected in the Department’s Report, deliveries peak at just over 2.5 per hour only once a day, at dinner time, when demand is at its highest.¹⁷⁰ At their lowest, in the early morning, deliveries are just over 0.5 per hour.¹⁷¹ In order to achieve an average efficiency of 2.5 deliveries per hour, apps would either need to eliminate broad swaths of available time (e.g., lunch time) and/or achieve significantly higher efficiency during peak times.

¹⁶⁷ Report at 34.

¹⁶⁸ Report at 34.

¹⁶⁹ Report at 34.

¹⁷⁰ Report at 16; Uber’s December 15, 2022 Comment.

¹⁷¹ Report at 16.

For example, Uber analyzed data on the number of orders and the number of couriers active during peak hours (11 A.M. to 2 P.M. and 6 to 9 P.M.). Based on order volume over the past eight weeks, Uber would need to limit over 15% of its current courier workforce (more than 1,000 couriers in a given hour) from accessing the app during an average peak hour in order to meet the Department’s proposed delivery rate of 2.5 trips per hour. The Department has failed to adequately explain why it believes productivity could rise to such high levels under the Proposed Rule on a sustained basis, and its assumption is untested in the real world, but carries significant risks for New York restaurants.

If the Department’s assumptions are even slightly overly optimistic, there will be significant increases to the costs to the apps, which again, the Department reasonably predicts will be passed on “dollar-for-dollar” to consumers resulting in sharp reductions in demand for deliveries. Uber has attached to this comment an expert analysis by Dr. Oliver Latham of Charles Rivers Associates.¹⁷² Dr. Latham’s analysis, summarized in the following table, shows price changes under various reasonable assumptions of how trips per hour may change under the Proposed Rule. In addition to setting forth calculated increased costs per trip to be passed on, Dr. Latham also applies the Department’s own elasticity assumptions about the interaction, to show the impact on demand of the price hikes. Dr. Latham also shows how price increases will impact consumer demand, based on the Department’s own assumptions of price elasticity of demand.

Sensitivities with productivities and elasticities
		Elasticity = 1	Elasticity = 1.5	Elasticity = 2
Productivity (Trips Per Hour)	Additional cost per delivery	% change in orders	% change in orders	% change in orders

¹⁷² Expert Report of Dr. Oliver Latham (December 16, 2022) (the “Latham Report”) is included in this comment as Exhibit A.

Department Hypothesis	2.50	$5.18	-15.6%	-23.5%	-31.3%
	2.35	$5.79	-17.5%	-26.2%	-35.0%
	2.20	$6.48	-19.6%	-29.4%	-39.2%
	2.05	$7.27	-22.0%	-33.0%	-43.9%
	1.90	$8.19	-24.7%	-37.1%	-49.5%
	1.75	$9.26	-28.0%	-42.0%	-56.0%
Current	1.63	$10.26	-31.0%	-46.5%	-62.0%

This analysis shows that reductions in consumer demand will be much higher than projected if couriers are unable to achieve the Department’s assumed trips per hour—an assumption the Department made without adequate study, justification, or explanation. The Department should not force a marketplace experiment on New York merchants, based on speculative assumptions, that risks a reduction in demand so much.

IV. The Department’s Determination of Courier Payments Per Hour Is Flawed

A. The Proposed Rule’s “Base Pay Component” Is Based on Inapt Comparisons

The Department explains that the Proposed Rule’s $19.86 base pay for couriers “approximates the total compensation app-based restaurant delivery workers would receive if classified as employees” under City and State law, and “provide[s] for parity with workers covered by NYC’s existing minimum earnings standard for app for-hire service drivers.”¹⁷³ The Proposed Rule is based on a false equivalency, because couriers are not properly compared to “employees” under City or State law, or for-hire vehicle drivers.

First, couriers are not like most employees because couriers have total flexibility and earn tips as a substantial portion of their earnings. Even the Department acknowledges as much, calculating in its report that couriers currently “earn an average of $14.18 per hour worked, split evenly between pay and tips.”¹⁷⁴ Thus, in setting the base pay component, the Department should be ¹⁷³ Report at ii; see Proposed Rule at 3–4.

¹⁷⁴ Report at 17 (emphasis added).

looking to the hourly pay of similarly situated workers who do earn tips. As Uber previously explained, the Department should “study . . . how much the restaurant industry (which food delivery platforms support) pay their delivery drivers” and other tipped personnel, “and use that data to help inform the forthcoming earnings standard.”¹⁷⁵

Second, couriers are also dissimilar to high-volume for-hire vehicle service drivers regulated by the Commission, yet the Department assumed they are alike by using a base pay component of $19.86 derived from the base pay calculated for for-hire vehicle drivers under other sets of rules. The assumption that couriers’ base pay component should be $19.86, rather than the $15.00 minimum wage (which covers many New York employees), is unjustified. Unlike couriers, drivers are subject to extensive licensing requirements; require a different skill set; face different expenses to maintain a vehicle that can provide clean, safe, and reliable passenger transportation; must comply with unique regulatory requirements; and earn a much lower percentage of their income from tips.¹⁷⁶ The roles are different, too. Drivers transport humans (and sometimes pets) in automobiles, while couriers transport products either without a vehicle or in a range of different types of vehicles (primarily e-bikes).¹⁷⁷ As a result, being a driver involves different risks and expertise than is necessary for work as a courier. Given all of these differences, it makes sense that Commission-regulated drivers would be paid differently than couriers. The Department, therefore, should not look to Commission-regulated drivers in setting the base pay for couriers.

The Department has failed to explain why it did so.

¹⁷⁵ Uber’s June 15, 2022 Comment at 2.

¹⁷⁶ See, e.g., Report at 13 (describing various regulations governing couriers depending on their means of transportation).

¹⁷⁷ See Report at 13.

B. The Department Should Match the Inflation Index for this Earning Standard to Changes in the City’s Minimum Wage

The Proposed Rule inexplicably departs from the generally applicable minimum wage that purportedly serves as the foundation for this rule by imposing an inflation adjustment to this standard that has no analog in the minimum wage regime. The Department also proposes to automatically adjust courier minimum earnings, on an annual basis, based on the percentage change in the All Items Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the NY-NJ-PA metro area (“CPI-W”).¹⁷⁸

Uber does not object to adjustments to courier earnings over time for inflation, but the Department’s approach does not flow from its own assumptions. The Department is explicitly premising the calculation of courier earnings on “the $15.00 per hour minimum wage applicable to most employees in NYC since December 31, 2018.”¹⁷⁹ And the Proposed Rule’s “phase in” of courier minimum payments is “modelled on the phase-in of the $15.00 minimum wage in NYC for large employers between 2016 and 2018.”¹⁸⁰ But the Department only selectively borrows from the minimum wage logic—creating a cost-of-living adjustment that has no companion in the minimum wage law.

Since December 31, 2018, the minimum wage for employers in New York City has been $15 per hour. Despite the ability to increase it, New York’s legislators have chosen not to, notwithstanding intervening inflation. With no reasoned explanation, the Department overruled that policy choice while explicitly citing the broader minimum wage structure as a basis for the Proposed Rule. It did so based on the TLC's figures and calculations of minimum payments for ride-share drivers, which began with an attempt to ensure a $15.00 hourly wage (after accounting for expenses and other upward adjustments, such as compensation for paid time off) but then saw that base amount adjusted upward for inflation multiple times, upward to $19.86.¹⁸¹ By referring to the current minimum pay standard for ride-share drivers, not only has the Department automatically tied future changes to the minimum earnings standard on CPI-W, it has back-dated an inflation adjustment back to 2018. Indeed, the Department simply borrowed the TLC's current standard of $19.86 without performing its own analysis or explaining its own reasoning. In other words, while the broadly applicable minimum wage is $15 per hour (and will remain there until further action from the City Council or State legislature), the Department's proposed pay standard has already adjusted that $15 figure for the four years since the 2018 minimum wage has been in effect. The Department's choice to ensure an hourly pay rate well above the City's minimum wage is unexplained and unjustified, and in conflict with the policy decisions of the officials who set the minimum wage the Department purports to be emulating.

¹⁷⁸ Proposed Rule at 11.

¹⁷⁹ Proposed Rule at 4.

¹⁸⁰ Proposed Rule at 5; see also Report at 22 (“As employees, app delivery workers would be entitled to wages of $15 per hour under the New York State minimum wage”); Report at 29 (“The $19.86 base pay rate reflects the $15 per hour minimum wage that has been in effect for most employees in NYC since December 31, 2018”); Report at 33 (“The proposed phase-in of the rate over two years . . . is modelled on the phase-in of the $15 minimum wage in NYC for large employers between 2016 and 2018.”).

If the minimum wage law provides the basis for the Proposed Rule, then subsequent adjustments to courier minimum earnings should also track changes to the New York City minimum wage, rendering the use of a CPI-W adjustment unnecessary. The Department has offered no explanation for setting initial minimum earnings higher than the generally applicable minimum wage and has offered no explanation for why future adjustments should be tied to CPIW and not further legislative action.

¹⁸¹ Report at 21–23.

C. The Proposed Rule Requires Platforms to Pay for Retail Fraud without Addressing Fraud Risks.

The Proposed Rule requires apps to compensate food delivery workers based on their “trip time,” whether or not the worker successfully completes the delivery or cancels the trip.¹⁸² By including in the earnings standard time spent on courier-canceled and other non-completed trips, the Proposed Rule encourages food delivery workers to: (i) needlessly extend the time necessary to complete an accepted trip, a common practice known as “long-hauling;” and (ii) accept trips with no intention of completing them (by either canceling the trip themselves or waiting for long enough until a consumer cancels it).

Moreover, the Proposed Rule does not empower third-party food delivery services to refuse to compensate couriers for fraudulent “trip time,” including when couriers engage in “longhauling.” This is unfair to third-party food delivery services and consumers. Ultimately, consumers will bear the brunt of this activity as they will see order completions decrease, and possibly increased delivery fees to cover the cost of fraud. Harm to consumers will make future orders less likely, and will result in fewer orders to merchants on third-party platforms, and thus harm to couriers and restaurants.

V. The Department Relied on Unreliable Surveys

In crafting the Proposed Rule, the Department purported to rely on multiple surveys, including (i) the “NYC Delivery Worker Survey,” (ii) the “Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey,” and (iii) the “NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey.” These surveys were flawed, and thus the data from them are unreliable.

Uber has attached to this comment an expert report by Professor Itamar Simonson, ¹⁸² Proposed Rule at 5.

Emeritus Professor of Marketing at the Graduate School of Business at Stanford University.¹⁸³ Professor Simonson’s report explains numerous fundamental principles of survey methodology. It also identifies flaws in the methodologies used by the Department in conducting the surveys on which the Proposed Rule is purportedly based. Professor Simonson concluded: “[T]he surveys were systematically biased and violated fundamental principles of survey science. Consequently, the surveys’ results are unreliable, and it would not be consistent with accepted survey science to rely upon their results for use in justifying the Proposed Rule.”¹⁸⁴

The surveys are mentioned some 98 times in the Department’s Report. The Proposed Rule states that it is based, at least in part, on the Department’s analysis of “survey responses from over 8,000 food delivery workers and over 350 restaurant operators.”¹⁸⁵ The Proposed Rule does not state how those survey responses were analyzed or how they supposedly support the rule, though it appears they were used (among other things) to:

- justify various calculations of assumed expenses that couriers incur, including for the purchase of cell phones and batteries;
- determine the frequency at which couriers use multiple apps at one time;
- determine courier demographics, their mix of vehicles, and hours of work; and
- estimate time that couriers are unable to work due to medical issues, as well as associated medical costs.

Without an appropriate and rigorous disclosure of the survey methodology that was implemented, it is impossible to pinpoint exactly which of these applications of the survey data (if not all of them) are problematic. But at a minimum, the survey flaws appear to have led to overstatement of courier expenses.¹⁸⁶

¹⁸³ Expert Report of Dr. Itamar Simonson (December 16, 2022) (the “Simonson Report”) is included in this comment as Exhibit B.

¹⁸⁴ Simonson Report ¶ 4.

¹⁸⁵ Proposed Rule at 3.

Given the substantial flaws in the survey methodology identified by Professor Simonson, the surveys cannot be credibly relied upon as support for the rulemaking. The Proposed Rule should be revised after the Department conducts appropriate surveys and/or applies other methodologies that do not rely on flawed surveys.¹⁸⁷

VI. The Proposed Rule’s Recordkeeping Requirements Are Intrusive, Unnecessary, and Inefficient

The Proposed Rule would require delivery platforms to keep and report information about the fees collected from consumers and merchants (in addition to information about courier trips and courier pay).¹⁸⁸ The Department has failed to articulate how this new recordkeeping provision serves, or is consistent with, the Proposed Rule’s calculation of minimum courier payments. The Department should dispense with this requirement as unnecessary, wasteful, very costly to platforms, and inappropriately invasive into highly confidential business information.

The Proposed Rule expands the requirements around preserving and reporting delivery addresses, and a few other data points. But these new requirements sweep well past the data necessary to monitor application of the minimum earnings rule. The Department’s Proposed Rule turns ¹⁸⁶ There also seem to be arithmetic errors in implementing the survey results. The Report assumes couriers purchase phones at a rate of 1.74 devices per year. See Report at 19. But the survey results for Module 2, Question 15 indicate a frequency of 1.49 devices per year, if respondents who said they purchased “6 or more” devices in one year are assumed to have purchased six devices. This apparent arithmetic error leads to an overstatement of the cell phone expense component.

¹⁸⁷ Uber also notes several other issues with the surveys on which the Department relied. The Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey is unlikely to have reached a random sample of delivery drivers, as even the Report recognizes. See Report at 10 (“The Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey was drawn from a convenience sample.” (emphasis added)). Further, upon reviewing the survey response data, Uber identified a material number of duplicate responses, which strongly implies that the Department did not effectively filter out such responses.

¹⁸⁸ See Proposed Rule at 6–9.

exclusively on time spent engaging with a food delivery platform (whether merely online or executing trips). Distance traveled has no role in calculating minimum earnings, neither does the number of orders, the number of merchants involved, or the amount or cost of food ordered by consumers. The Department therefore has no reasonable basis to increase burdensome recordkeeping/reporting demands around these data types as part of this minimum earnings rule. And yet, the Proposed Rule requires a slew of information unrelated to courier time, including the following:

- the number of trip miles with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
- the amount of gratuities paid to food delivery workers for trips with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
- the number of consumers who received at least one delivery with a pickup or dropoff location in New York City;
- the number of completed deliveries with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
- the number of canceled deliveries with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
- the amount charged to consumers for delivery of food, beverage, or other goods with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;
- the fees charged to consumers on orders for delivery with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City, itemized by type;
- the number of merchants in New York City who prepared at least one order for delivery; and
- the delivery fees, payment processing fees, and other fees charged to merchants in New York City, itemized by type.¹⁸⁹

These new regulatory requirements are both ultra vires and come with a heavy cost. They are burdensome. The sheer volume of data creates privacy and confidentiality risks. And they require the platforms to produce highly confidential business data.

¹⁸⁹ Proposed Rule at 9.

VII. The Department Should Not Enact Rules Based on Hidden Analyses

A. Uber's FOIL Requests Have Gone Largely Unfulfilled

Under the City Administrative Procedure Act, agencies are required to “provide the public an opportunity to comment on . . . proposed rules.” N.Y.C. Charter § 1043(e). Notice and comment serves important policy goals, including providing maximum public participation to affected parties, and ensuring agencies have full information before making decisions. See City of Idaho Falls v. F.E.R.C., 629 F.3d 222, 228–29 (D.C. Cir. 2011); see also ZEH-NY LLC v. N.Y.C.

Taxi & Limousine Comm'n, No. 159195/2019, 2019 WL 7067072, at *1–2 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Dec. 23, 2019). The Department has undermined those goals by not providing the information and materials critical for those affected to comment on the Proposed Rule.

As early as July 2022, Uber's counsel made a request under the New York Freedom of Information Law for documents and information underlying the NYC Delivery Worker Survey on which the Department was purportedly relying in promulgated rules.¹⁹⁰ But it was not until November 17, 2022, that the Department began to partially comply by producing a few documents in response to Uber's request. Then on December 5, 2022, the Department turned over redacted survey data which it purportedly used to craft the Proposed Rule. But the Department has still yet to turn over documents about, among other things, how the NYC Delivery Worker Survey was actually conducted or the actual model the Department used—information that is critical to permit commenters to meaningfully comment on the efficacy and reliability of the Survey.¹⁹¹ When Uber requested that the notice and comment period be extended to permit timely production and review of this information, the Department refused.¹⁹²

¹⁹⁰ FOIL-2022-866-00337 (submitted to DCWP July 14, 2022).

¹⁹¹ See Simonson Report ¶¶ 7–11; Report at 2–5.

Uber's counsel made several other requests in late November, including for documents and information underlying the Department's decision to propose critical components of the Proposed Rule.¹⁹³ To date, the Department has yet to produce a single responsive document, and plans not to do so until April 2023—months after the Proposed Rule is scheduled to be approved. The Department's refusal to timely share relevant information has impeded the public's ability to meaningfully comment on the surveys which purportedly support the Proposed Rule. Given the methodological infirmities Uber has discovered with the limited data that was released,¹⁹⁴ it is critically important for the Department to release its survey methodology to ensure that the data on which the Department purports to rely is reliable and unbiased. The public should be allowed to review and analyze the survey's methodology, instead of being forced to accept the Department's bald assertions that the results are reliable. The above is doubly true for the model that the Department states it heavily relied on.

B. The Department Has Failed to Provide Adequate Explanations for Its Rulemaking.

In addition to withholding documents, the Department has failed to adequately describe the considerations on which the Proposed Rule is based. At every turn, the Department has used vague and ambiguous language that prevents commenters from meaningfully responding to the Department's rulemaking efforts.

¹⁹² Email from Charlie Driver, N.Y.C. Dep't of Consumer & Worker Protection, to Armikka Bryant, Sr. Counsel, Delivery, Regulatory, Emerging Technologies, Uber (Dec. 9, 2022).

¹⁹³ E.g., FOIL-2022-866-00509 (submitted to DCWP November 29, 2022).

¹⁹⁴ Simonson Report ¶¶ 7–11; supra 21–23.

First, the Department has prevented the public from responding to its model, by refusing to explain its (i) “assumptions about how apps, consumers, workers, and restaurants will respond to the minimum pay rate”; (ii) “assumptions about how the delivery industry in NYC would evolve in the absence of a minimum pay rate”; or (iii) “alternative assumptions for key parameters [that the Department] considered [] in its deliberations.”¹⁹⁵ Among those critical assumptions that drive its model but that have been made without any apparent support in the record or justification is an assumption of perfect 1:1 elasticity of demand with respect to price for consumers in New York City.¹⁹⁶ As shown in the Latham Report and Section III, supra, the assumption of perfect 1:1 elasticity of demand with respect to price has a significant impact on the model’s outputs, and even relatively small adjustments to that assumption can cause the Department’s explanations of anticipated economic outcomes to fall apart, as a 1.5 or 2.0 elasticity of demand assumption and/or slightly different trip per hour productivity levels than assumed would yield substantial decreases in the number of orders and thus the amount of work available for couriers to earn money performing.¹⁹⁷ The Department never explains why its assumption of elasticity is justified, or how it accounted (if at all) for the possibility that its unjustified assumption may be wrong, and the negative consequences that would result.

Second, the Department has made numerous factual assertions, but failed to provide bases for those assertions, including that:

¹⁹⁵ Report at 5.

¹⁹⁶ Report at 34 (“[T]he model assumes that in response to their 15.6% cost increase per delivery, consumers will make 15.6% fewer orders than they otherwise would.”).

¹⁹⁷ See Exhibit A.

- “Tip misappropriation, non-payment, and deactivations also contribute to earnings risk, and delivery workers report that these occur frequently.”¹⁹⁸
- “For purposes of the base pay component of the minimum pay rate, there are no meaningful distinctions between app delivery workers and app for-hire service drivers.”¹⁹⁹
- Platforms have the ability to “make operational changes to use workers’ time on the apps more efficiently, increasing deliveries per hour.”²⁰⁰

Third, the Department states that the Proposed Rule is based on a number of factors, but does not explain how those factors were actually considered. For example, the Department recognizes that couriers have “an incentive to be strategic in the mode [of transportation] that they report.”²⁰¹ But the Department does not explain how it accounted for this “incentive” or whether the Department’s concern about accurate reporting extended to other data points.

C. The Department’s Approach Does Not Allow for Meaningful Incorporation of Public Feedback.

At its heart, the City’s Administrative Procedure Act requires City agencies to invite and consider public feedback. But the Department has structured an approach that is plainly designed to charge ahead toward a final rule with no meaningful opportunity to process public comments. The Proposed Rule was first proposed in mid-November, with comments due in mid-December (and the Department refused Uber’s request to extend this comment period in light of data it produced only at the beginning of December). If the Department finalizes the Proposed Rule within the next ¹⁹⁸ Report at 23.

¹⁹⁹ Report at 29; supra 18–19.

²⁰⁰ Report at 31; see also Report at 32 (“Apps are well positioned to address this concern by making operational changes that limit on-call time.”).

²⁰¹ Report at 13.

two weeks, the reality will be apparent: that the Department will have ignored the flood of comments related to the Proposed Rule, and not genuinely allowed for public comment.

The Department's refusal to produce or provide information on which the Proposed Rule is based has undercut the ability of Uber and others to meaningfully comment on the Proposed Rule. To rectify this error, the Department most promptly (i) produce documents responsive to Uber's requests and (ii) adequately describe any other information or considerations on which the Proposed Rule is purportedly based. The Department should, in the meantime, adjourn any action on the Proposed Rule, including implementation, for an amount of time commensurate with the range of views offered by the public through this comment process. Among other things, there needs to be adequate time for commenters to review and respond to this information, and to allow enough time for the Department to meaningfully assess that feedback. At a minimum, to properly assess public feedback, the Department must delay implementation of the Proposed Rule.

VIII. Uber Reiterates and Incorporates By Reference the Comments It Has Already Submitted for the Department's Consideration.

To facilitate the Department's rulemaking process, Uber has submitted comments on the Proposed Rule seriatim. Uber reiterates those comments, and incorporates them by reference.

Among other things, those comments explained that:

- The Proposed Rule should recognize that gratuities are and will continue to be substantial, as it has been culturally adopted in New York City's food and service industries, including in traditional food delivery.²⁰²
- The Proposed Rule should consider the time and distance a courier spends delivering food over the course of a two-week period and apply the earnings standard over that period.²⁰³

²⁰² Uber's June 15, 2022 Comment at 2.

²⁰³ Uber's June 15, 2022 Comment at 3.

- The Proposed Rule’s requirement that couriers be paid in lieu of workers’ compensation, without mandating that couriers spend those payments on a workers’ compensation policy, will create a windfall for couriers.²⁰⁴
- The Department should consider information gathered from third party delivery services, third-party courier services, and delivery workers directly employed by restaurants, recognizing that each is a part of the food-delivery industry.²⁰⁵
- The Department should encourage batched orders which increase utilization and trips by not double counting time and distance on delivery trips that include batched orders.²⁰⁶
- The Department should permit restaurants to absorb the costs of compliance with Department regulations, instead of forcing restaurants to pass those costs on to customers.²⁰⁷
- The Department should allow 120 days to pass following the Proposed Rule’s enactment (or at least until May 1, 2023) before the Proposed Rule’s requirements become active.²⁰⁸

Uber also underscores and amplifies the comments of the more than 650 couriers who have asked the Department not to force Uber to take away their freedom and flexibility, as the Proposed Rule would do.

CONCLUSION

Uber supports the protection of courier payments. Nevertheless, based on the serious concerns detailed above and in Uber’s prior comments, it is imperative that the Department fully consider the impact of the Proposed Rule, and the issues raised herein, before taking any further action. Uber thanks the Department for the opportunity to submit these comments and looks forward to continuing to engage in productive dialogue toward an appropriate solution.

Dated this 16th day of December, 2022.

²⁰⁴ Uber’s December 12, 2022 Comment at 6.

²⁰⁵ Uber’s June 15, 2022 Comment at 2.

²⁰⁶ Uber’s June 15, 2022 Comment at 3.

²⁰⁷ Uber’s June 15, 2022 Comment at 3.

²⁰⁸ Uber’s December 12, 2022 Comment at 6.

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Hayley Prim

Hayley Prim

Exhibit A

(Latham Report)

CRA Charles River Associates

Date: December 16, 2022

Subject: Sensitivity analysis on the Department's model

We are a team of economists at Charles River Associates and have been asked by Uber to review and provide a targeted economic analysis of the possible consequences of the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's (the "Department") proposed minimum pay standard for delivery workers (the "Proposed Rule") on the costs of deliveries borne by consumers, and the possible reduction in demand that could follow from this price increase.

Specifically, we have been asked to assess the sensitivity of the economic model developed in the Department's November 2022 Report (the "Report") to two of its main assumptions about how the market will react to the Proposed Rule.

First, the Report assumes that delivery apps will achieve an average of 2.5 deliveries per hour per courier throughout the entire day after the pay standard is implemented. Currently apps achieve 1.63 deliveries per hour. The Department's assessment of the increased costs per delivery is based on this 2.5 trips per hour assumption. The more trips that can be completed per hour, the more the hourly wage of a delivery worker can be spread over many trips, and so the lower the increase in delivery costs due to the proposed minimum pay standard. Assuming 2.5 trips per hour, the Department finds that delivery fees per trip will increase by $5.18. These increased costs are assumed to be passed on to consumers dollar-for-dollar, with the effect that average price of orders faced by consumers will increase by 15.6%.

Second, the Report assumes, without any supporting analysis, that this 15.6% price increase will result in a 15.6% reduction in orders i.e., it assumes an "elasticity of demand" of 1.¹ Specifically, the Report states as follows:

The Department expects that, in response to the rule, the less efficient apps will increase their deliveries per hour, but not fully match the highest rate of deliveries per hour the Department has observed for an app in the record-level data. The projected increase in deliveries per hour will partially offset the costs of higher app delivery worker pay but still result in apps paying workers $5.18 more per delivery, on average. Second, the model assumes that the apps will choose to pass this increase on to consumers dollar-for-dollar in the form of higher delivery fees, increasing consumers' costs of delivery by 15.6% after accounting for the order subtotal, taxes, and tips, which are assumed to be unaffected. (Report at 34.)

We conducted an economic analysis of the sensitivity of the calculations of the Department to its assumptions on productivity and elasticity of demand. The following table replicates the economic model developed in the Department's Report and illustrates the additional costs that would be borne by customers under the minimum pay rule as well as the reduction in demand for delivery platforms' services that would ¹ The price elasticity of demand is defined as the % reduction in quantity resulting from a % increase in price. Because it can generally be assumed that a price increase will cause demand to fall elasticities are generally reported in absolute value so a price elasticity of 1 means that a 1% price increase will cause a 1% reduction in demand.

Proposed Rule on Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers
 December 16, 2022
 Charles River Associates

result from this price hike. In doing so, the table considers a wider range of values for the average number of trips per hour achieved by the apps, and for the elasticity of demand.

Table 1: Sensitivity of the economic model developed in the Department's Report to assumptions

			Elasticity = 1 (Department hypothesis)	Elasticity = 1.5	Elasticity = 2
	Productivity (Trips Per Hour)	Additional cost per delivery	% change in orders	% change in orders	% change in orders
Department hypothesis	2.50	$5.18	-15.6%	-23.5%	-31.3%
	2.35	$5.79	-17.5%	-26.2%	-35.0%
	2.20	$6.48	-19.6%	-29.4%	-39.2%
	2.05	$7.27	-22.0%	-33.0%	-43.9%
	1.90	$8.19	-24.7%	-37.1%	-49.5%
	1.75	$9.26	-28.0%	-42.0%	-56.0%
Current	1.63	$10.26	-31.0%	-46.5%	-62.0%

Source: CRA calculations based on Department's Report.

This table implements the model used in the Department's Report to predict the additional costs per delivery and resulting reduction in demand following the increase in delivery worker minimum wages.

Under this model, the cost per delivery can be obtained by dividing the hourly pay to riders by the number of deliveries per hour expected after the proposed rule is implemented. Formally, we have:

Hourly pay to riders

$$\text{Cost per delivery} = \frac{\text{Hourly pay to riders}}{\text{Deliveries per hour worked}}$$

The increase in cost per delivery resulting from the increase in hourly wage can be derived as follows, considering the increase in average number of deliveries per hour from 1.63 to 2.5 hypothesised in the Department's Report:²

$$\text{Initial cost per delivery} = \frac{$7.09}{1.63} = $4.35$$

$$\text{Proposed cost per delivery} = \frac{$23.82}{2.50} = $9.53$$

$$\text{Increase in cost per delivery} = $9.53 - $4.35 = $5.18$$

² This calculation considers the assumptions on hourly pay described in the Report, i.e. a current average hourly pay of $7.09, a proposed new minimum hourly pay of $23.82, a current number of deliveries per hour of 1.63, and a targeted number of deliveries post implementation of the minimum pay of 2.50.

Proposed Rule on Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers
December 16, 2022
Charles River Associates

The relative increase in cost per delivery is then obtained by comparing the increase in cost per delivery to the average total order price to consumers of $33.09. Based on the assumptions of the Department's Report, the increase in cost ($5.18) represents a 15.6% increase in costs,³ which is in line with the calculations presented in the Department's Report.

Next, the Department's model estimates the increase in prices for consumers assuming that this increase in cost would be fully passed-on to consumers, and that the price elasticity of consumer demand is 1. Formally, we have:

$$\% \text{ reduction in number of orders} = - \text{Price elasticity of demand} * \% \text{ change in cost per delivery}$$

As the Department's Report assumes a price elasticity of 1, a 15.6% increase in costs per delivery results in a 15.6% reduction in total orders.

Table 1 shows that the drop in demand resulting from the proposed minimum pay rule could be more pronounced than anticipated if the delivery platforms were to fail to reach the level of trips per hour hypothesised in the Department's Report, or if customers were in fact more elastic to price changes.

First, the Department's Report assumes that deliveries per hour would increase to 2.5. This proposed productivity increase appears ambitious considering the productivity figures presented in the Department's Report itself, as 2.5 deliveries per hour corresponds to the highest level of efficiency achieved by platforms on average during peak evening periods. One would expect deliveries to be lower outside of periods of peak demand. For this reason, Table 1 considers a range of other productivity values to gauge the impact of more limited efficiency gains on the increase in costs borne by consumers and its effect on the total number of orders. To illustrate, if platforms were to only improve average productivity to 2.05 deliveries per hour, the increase in delivery prices borne by consumers would increase from $5.18 to $7.27, and the reduction in demand for the platforms' services would be - 22% instead of - 15.6%.

Second, the Department's Report assumes a price elasticity of 1. No evidence is presented for this assumption, and it is plausible that consumer demand could be more "elastic" (i.e. more likely to respond to price changes) than hypothesised in the Department's Report. For this reason, Table 1 also considers how the results of the Department's model would vary under a range of elasticities. With a price elasticity of 1.5 and if delivery platforms were to only increase their number of trips per hour from 1.63 to 2.05, the Department's economic model predicts a decline in the number of orders of - 33% instead of - 15.6%.

Oliver Latham

Vice President, Charles River Associates

16 December 2022

³ 5.18 / 33.09 = 0.156.

Exhibit B

(Simonson Report)

BEFORE THE NEW YORK CITY
DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER AND WORKER PROTECTION

Proposed Rule on Minimum Pay for Food
Delivery Workers

Public Hearing: December 16, 2022

EXPERT REPORT OF DR. ITAMAR SIMONSON

SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS

1. The surveys which the Department²⁰⁹ purportedly relied upon in formulating the Proposed Rule²¹⁰ were biased and were bound to produce unreliable results. The surveys violated fundamental principles of survey design, which calls into question the ability of the Department to reasonably rely on their results.
2. Given the weight that the Department said it gave to the survey results in creating its model and formulating its Proposed Rule, I examined whether the surveys complied with the basic principles guiding the design of reliable surveys and avoiding serious biases and flaws. In particular, I analyzed whether the surveys complied with the following basic principles of survey design:

²⁰⁹ Department of Consumer and Worker Protection.

²¹⁰ N.Y.C. Dep't of Consumer and Worker Protection, A Rule Establishing Minimum Payments for Food Delivery Couriers (Nov. 2022) rules.cityofnewyork.us/wp-content/uploads/2022/11/DCWP-NOHMinimum-Pay-for-Food-Delivery-Service-Workers.pdf.

- a. Avoiding “demand effects” (that is, a survey should not reveal to respondents the purpose, the expected answers and results, and whether providing certain answers is in respondents’ self-interest; the reason for this rule is straightforward because such knowledge usually generates bias and encourages respondents to provide the answers that will help the survey designers achieve their stated objectives).
 - b. Avoiding leading questions.
 - c. Including a proper “control” to account for “noise,” guessing, and spurious responses.
 - d. Avoiding “focalism bias” whereby the questions single out and suggest items that respondents might not have attributed to the subject at issue.
 - e. Whenever possible, relying on open-ended questions rather than closed-ended (multiple choice) questions that provide “appropriate” or expected answers, because such provided response options often influence the answers.
 - f. Ensuring that the phrasing of questions (and any closed-ended answers) is unbiased.
3. All of these basic survey principles were violated in the surveys relied upon by the Department. For example, the surveys’ introductions stated the purpose of the surveys, and that the respondents’ answers would be used to promote the respondents’ economic self-interest. Furthermore, the questions were leading and suggestive: Instead of allowing respondents to identify expenses that are linked specifically to their food delivery app work, the surveys suggested categories of expenses and the provided answers promoted high estimates (e.g., buying multiple smartphones per year). The surveys also did not include any control questions or other controls.

4. Overall, the documents provided by the Department reflect that the surveys were systematically biased and violated fundamental principles of survey science. Consequently, the surveys' results are unreliable, and it would not be consistent with accepted survey science to rely upon their results for use in justifying the Proposed Rule at issue here.

INTRODUCTION

5. I have been a professor at the Graduate School of Business, Stanford University since 1993, specializing in consumer behavior and decision making, marketing management, survey methods, the impact of price, brand, and product features on consumer behavior, and judgment and choice. I hold a Ph.D. in Marketing from the Duke University Fuqua School of Business, and a Master's degree in Business Administration (MBA) from the UCLA Graduate School of Management.²¹¹ I have been asked by counsel for Uber to evaluate the surveys relied upon by the NYC Department for Consumer and Worker Protection (the "Department") in connection with the proposed courier earnings rule to implement Local Law 115 (the "Proposed Rule").

6. In its report issued in support of the Proposed Rule, the Department states:

The Department's analysis is based principally on data obtained from apps and an online survey distributed to 123,000 workers who performed deliveries in NYC in the fourth quarter of 2021. The Department supplemented these sources with an online survey distributed to all restaurants in NYC, an in-person field survey of more than 400 delivery workers, testimony from a public hearing, interviews with stakeholders and other experts, and analysis of publicly available data on pay, benefits, and safety conditions.²¹²

²¹¹ More information about my background and qualifications is located in the Appendix. My CV is attached as Exhibit A.

7. My understanding is that on or about December 5, 2022 the Department posted on its website a series of files related to the surveys upon which it relied. Those documents consisted of the questionnaires and limited responses for three different surveys upon which the Department relied: (1) a NYC Delivery Worker Survey, (2) a Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey, and (3) a NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey. The NYC Delivery Worker Survey consisted of three different modules; the Department says that each recipient of the NYC Delivery Survey received one of the three modules. While much of the methodology for the methodologies was not disclosed, I was asked to evaluate the surveys based on the limited information that the Department has decided to make available as of the date of this Report.

8. As to the NYC Delivery Worker Survey, while the Department says that it “distributed an online survey form by text message and email to all workers who accepted an offer to perform a delivery in NYC between October 1 and December 31, 2021,”²¹³ there is much information that the Department did not disclose. To my knowledge, the Department has not indicated how many times each phone number or email address was contacted, how the language(s) of the message and survey was chosen, when each recipient responded, how the Department confirmed the identity of the survey recipients, or how the Department estimated the number of unique individuals receiving surveys.

²¹² N.Y.C. Dep’t of Consumer & Worker Protection, A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC (the “Report”) (Nov. 2022) at ii, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/pdf/workers/Delivery-Worker-Study-November-2022.pdf>.

²¹³ Report at 2.

9. As to the Columbia-Sam Schwartz Deliveristas Survey, the Department indicated that “Respondents were recruited from delivery workers visiting Worker’s Justice Project offices, at Los Deliveristas Unidos events held throughout the city, and through street canvassing at locations where delivery workers are known to congregate.”²¹⁴ To my knowledge, the Department has not indicated how respondents were selected from that location, how they were approached, or what information they were told about the survey or its purpose. While the Department disclosed that “Respondents completed the survey using an online form, mostly onsite at these locations,”²¹⁵ it has not indicated where the others completed the survey or how many respondents completed their survey onsite. The Department has also not indicated how the language(s) of the survey was chosen, how the surveyors accounted for the possibility of surveying the same individual multiple times, or when each survey was completed.
10. As to the NYC Restaurant Delivery Survey, the Department says that it “The survey was distributed by the NYC Department of Small Business Services’ (SBS) Food and Beverage Industry Partnership, the NYC Hospitality Alliance, and the New York State Restaurant Association to their respective contact lists of restaurant owners and managers.”²¹⁶ The Department has not indicated the method of contacting each restaurant, how many times each restaurant was contacted, what was communicated to the restaurant about the survey or its purpose, whether each respondent was an owner or a manager, how the language(s) of the survey was chosen, how the surveyors accounted for the possibility of surveying the same individual or restaurant multiple times, or when each survey was completed.

²¹⁴ Report at 3.

²¹⁵ Report at 3.

²¹⁶ Report at 3.

11. Before presenting my assessment of the surveys and my opinion on whether they can be reliably relied upon to reach any conclusions, it is important to present basic survey principles. I next provide an overview of these principles, and I will then examine whether the surveys complied with or violated these principles.

PRINCIPLES OF SURVEY DESIGN

A. Avoiding Demand Effects

12. As I teach my students, when designing a survey, the researcher must avoid “demand effects.” Demand effects relate to the phenomenon whereby survey respondents use cues (or, in rare cases, explicit information) provided by the survey introduction and questions to figure out the purpose of the survey and what they imagine to be the “correct” answers to the questions they are asked.²¹⁷²¹⁸ The respondents then tend to provide what they perceive as the “correct” answers, to make sure that the results “come out right.” Demand and order effects can pollute the results of a survey dramatically. Courts have recognized the significance of demand effects and have rejected surveys that used a methodology that created demand effects.²¹⁹

²¹⁷ See, e.g., Martin Orne, On the Social Psychology of the Psychological Experiment, 17 AM. PSYCHOL.

²¹⁸ –83 (1962). For a review of the impact of demand effects in likelihood of confusion surveys, see Itamar Simonson & Ran Kivetz, Demand Effects in Likelihood of Confusion Surveys: The Importance of Marketplace Conditions in TRADEMARK & FALSE ADVERTISING SURVS. (American Bar Association 2012).

²¹⁹ See, e.g., Simon Property Group L.P. v. MySimon, Inc., 104 F. Supp. 2d 1033 (S.D. Ind. 2000) (Dr. Simonson evaluated the surveys characterized by the court as suffering from demand effects).

13. It is undisputed among professional surveyors that a survey should avoid revealing the sponsor of the survey and its purpose. In summary,

One way to protect the objectivity of survey administration is to avoid telling interviewers who is sponsoring the survey. Interviewers who know the identity of the survey's sponsor may affect results inadvertently by communicating to respondents their expectations or what they believe are the preferred responses of the survey's sponsor. To ensure objectivity in the administration of the survey, it is standard interview practice to conduct double-blind research whenever possible: both the interviewer and the respondent are blind to the sponsor of the survey and its purpose. Thus, the survey instrument should provide no explicit clues (e.g., a sponsor's letterhead appearing on the survey) and no implicit clues ... about the sponsorship of the survey or the expected responses.²²⁰

14. On a related note, a particular bias, known as “demand effects,” occurs when the survey instructions and/or the questions reveal to respondents the expected or “right” answers. Demand effects represent a particular type of leading questions/procedures.²²¹ A leading question (or a leading study procedure) suggests to the respondents that particular answers are expected, thus creating a bias and often producing invalid results. In some cases, the leading nature of a question is transparent, whereas in other cases the effect is more subtle though it may not be less potent. For example, respondents in one study²²² were asked, “Do you think the United States should forbid public speeches against democracy?” and 54% of them said “yes.” A second group of respondents were asked, “Do you think the

²²⁰ Shari Seidman Diamond, Reference Guide on Survey Research in REFERENCE MANUAL SCI. EVID (Federal Judicial Center 3d ed. 2011).

²²¹ For a discussion of demand effects as they apply to likelihood of confusion and other types of surveys, see, e.g., Allan Sawyer, Demand Artifacts in Laboratory Experiments in Consumer Research, 1 J.O. CONSUMER RES. 20–30 (1975); Itamar Simonson & Ran Kivetz, Demand Effects in Likelihood of Confusion Surveys: The Importance of Marketplace Conditions in Trademark & False Advertising Surveys (American Bar Association 2012).

²²² Itamar Simonson, The Effect of Survey Method on Likelihood of Confusion Estimates: Conceptual Analysis and Empirical Test, 83 TRADEMARK REP. 364 (1993).

United States should allow public speeches against democracy?” and 75% of them said “no.” In this case, the question wording affects the answers because it assumes a different default or status quo. But as explained below, the demand effects generated in the surveys relied upon in this case were much less subtle.

15. In addition to the cognitive and social factors that generate demand effects, revealing the purpose of the survey can further bias survey results by motivating the respondents’ selfinterest.²²³ A great deal of research has shown that surveys that trigger self-interest motives, like demand effects, motivate respondents to provide the answers that will promote their self-interest.²²⁴
16. For all of these reasons, revealing the purpose of a survey and the identity and agenda of its sponsor is a critical, even fatal, survey mistake. In other words, such an error, by itself, makes a survey unreliable.

B. Avoiding Leading Questions

17. Another fundamental survey principle is that surveys should avoid relying on leading questions. For example, one authoritative source stated that “[w]hen questions lead the respondents to a particular answer, they create a very strong bias and often result in data that are completely invalid.”²²⁵

²²³ Dale Miller, The Norm of Self-Interest, 54 AM. PSYCHOLOGIST 1053–60 (1999).

²²⁴ See, e.g., Stanley Feldman, Economic Self-Interest and Political Behavior, 26 AM. J. POL. SCI. 446–66 (1982); William Franko, Caroline J. Tolbert, & Christopher Witko, Inequality, Self-Interest, and Public Support for “Robin Hood” Tax Policies, 66 POL. RES. Q. 923–37 (2013).

²²⁵ Pamela L. Alreck and Robert B. Settle, The Survey Research Handbook at 198 (1995); see also Roger Tourangeau, Lance J. Rips, and Kenneth Rasinski, PSYCHOL. SURVEY RESP. at 42–43 (2009).

18. The biasing effect of leading questions is particularly strong when the questions pertain to a person's "self-reporting" of their behaviors or experiences. Indeed, there is a great deal of evidence that a person's recollection and reporting of experiences and behaviors is often unreliable and susceptible to influence by irrelevant factors.²²⁶
19. While both can bias survey results, researchers have distinguished between motivated and unmotivated misreporting of experiences:

Another form of error would be the deliberate or motivated nonreporting of income that the respondent wishes to conceal – for example, illegal income or income not reported to the IRS. Another source of error arises from the deliberate overstating or understating of income in order to make an impression on the interviewer. Generally this type of error shows in income inflation, but some respondents, particularly in the upper income ranges, may deflate their reported incomes. Yet another source of error stems from the respondent's failure to understand the question in the way the researcher intended. For example, the respondent may fail to report gift income, even though this type of income was intended by the researcher to be included. Finally, respondents may simply be ignorant of some income (perhaps income received by family members) about which they are asked to report.²²⁷

20. Given the limitations of a person's ability to accurately report on their own past behaviors and experiences, leading questions are particularly "effective" in influencing survey responses. Accordingly, when surveying people's behavior and experiences, it is essential that survey questions adhere to these standards and avoid suggesting answers, presenting the options in a balanced, non-suggestive manner, and including control questions and response items to account for “noise” and the tendency to agree with offered options (i.e., the Acquiescence Bias²²⁸), and other influences.

²²⁶ See, e.g., Norbert Schwarz, Self-Reports: How the Questions Shape the Answers, 54(2) AM. PSYCHOLOGIST 93–105 (1999); Jean Converse and Stanley Presser, Survey Questions: Handcrafting the Standardized Questionnaire (1986); Robert Rosenman, Vidhura Tennekoon, and Laura G. Hill, Measuring Bias in Self-Reported Data, 2 INT'L J. BEHAVIOURAL HEALTHCARE RES. 320–32 (2011).

²²⁷ Norman M. Bradburn, Seymour Sudman, and Brian Wansink, Asking Questions: The Definitive Guide to Questionnaire Design at 30 (2015).

C. Including Control Questions

21. A control is designed to estimate the degree of “noise” or “error” in the survey to enable estimating the impact of errors, guessing, misreporting, acquiescence bias, and other biases. Indeed, without proper controls, there is no benchmark for determining whether a claim or a self-report is accurate or merely reflects the flaws of the questions (e.g., of leading questions), the misimpressions of the responder, or some other factor. As one leading reference manual notes:

The ability to evaluate the effect of the wording of a particular question makes the control group design particularly useful in assessing responses to closed-ended questions, which are often leading and encourage guessing. Thus, the focus on the response level in a control group design is not on the absolute response level, but on the difference between the response level of the experimental group and that of the control group. In designing a survey experiment, the expert should select a stimulus for the control group that shares as many characteristics with the experimental stimulus as possible, with the key exception of the characteristic whose influence is being assessed.²²⁹

22. Thus, a study that lacks a proper control cannot be relied upon to test whether a claim is material. Control questions (sometimes referred to as “phantom questions”) can ask respondents questions whose answers are already known to the surveyor. This allows for the surveyor to analyze whether a respondent’s responses are consistent with what is already known.

²²⁸ See, e.g., Jon Krosnick, Survey Research, ANNUAL R. PSYCH. (1999).

²²⁹ Shari Seidman Diamond, Reference Guide on Survey Research in REFERENCE MANUAL SCI. EVID. at 397–99 (Federal Judicial Center 3d ed. 2011).

D. Avoiding Focalism Bias

23. Focalism bias exists when a survey singles out and suggests items that the respondent would not otherwise consider. Focalism bias has been discussed as representing a significant concern in survey design in marketing journals and in the broader literature regarding judgment and decision making.²³⁰
24. Consider the following example: Although restaurant lighting is unlikely to be among the most important considerations for diners when choosing a restaurant, a survey question that focuses on a restaurant's lighting will likely produce results suggesting that lighting is a very important consideration when choosing a restaurant. By contrast, had the same respondents been asked about a restaurant's key features (e.g., food quality, food type, service, prices, or location), lighting would likely be rated as a much less significant factor (if it were even mentioned).
25. Focalism leads to an overestimation of the frequency, impact (if any), and value (if any) of the focal term/phrase/feature, because it focuses on the (inflated) phrase/feature while misrepresenting reality where respondents tend to form evaluations based on multiple other important considerations.

²³⁰ See, e.g., Gerald Häubl, Benedict G. C. Dellaert, and Bas Donkers, Tunnel Vision: Local Behavioral Influences on Consumer Decisions in Product Search, 29 MARKETING SCI., 438–55 (2010); David Gal and Itamar Simonson, Predicting Consumers' Choices in the Age of the Internet, AI, and Almost Perfect Tracking: Some Things Change, the Key Challenges Do Not, 4(1) CONSUMER PSYCHOL.R. 135–52 (2021); David A. Schkade and Daniel Kahneman, Does Living in California Make People Happy? A Focusing Illusion in Judgments of Life Satisfaction, 9 PSYCHOL. SCI., 340–46 (1998). For a psychological analysis of factors leading to the focalism bias, see, e.g., Edward Tory Higgins, Knowledge Activation: Accessibility, Applicability, and Salience in SOCIAL PSYCHOL.: HANDBOOK BASIC PRINCIPLES at 133–68 (1996); S. Ratneshwar, Luk Warlop, David Glen Mick, and Gail Seeger, Benefit Salience and Consumers' Selective Attention to Product Features, 14 INT'L J. RES. MARKETING, 245–59 (1997).

E. Limitations of Closed-Ended (Multiple Choice) Questions

26. As noted above, and as numerous courts and experts, have noted,²³¹ survey questions (and other information presented to respondents) must not be slanted or leading. In this vein, closed-ended (i.e., multiple-choice) questions, especially those that single out a few responses and ignore others, are susceptible to being suggestive and leading compared with open-ended (free response) questions. As a leading article explained:

Recent research has shown that there are distinct disadvantages to closed-ended questions, and open-ended questions are not as problematic as they seemed. For example, respondents tend to confine their answers to the choices offered, even if the researcher does not wish them to do so (Bishop et al 1988, Presser 1990). That is, people generally ignore the opportunity to volunteer a response and simply select among those listed, even if the best answer is not included. Therefore, a closed-ended question can only be used effectively if its answer choices are comprehensive, and this is difficult to assure.

Some people feared that open-ended questions would not work well for respondents who are not especially articulate, because they might have difficulty explaining their feelings. However, this seems not to be a problem (Geer 1988). Some people feared that respondents would be likely to answer open-ended questions by mentioning the most salient possible responses, not those that are truly most appropriate. But this, too, turns out not to be the case (Schuman et al 1986). Finally, a number of recently rediscovered studies found that the reliability and validity of open-ended questions exceeded that of closed-ended questions (e.g. Hurd 1932, Remmers et al 1923). Thus, open-ended questions seem to be more viable research tools than had seemed to be the case.²³²

27. Questions that allow respondents to provide their own answers should be used, whenever possible so as not to provide a list of expected responses. This is because the offered options have been shown to significantly affect the answers. For example, respondents in one study were asked about products in one of two wordings:

(1) In terms of the total number of products, how many other products have you tried? 1? 2? 3?

²³¹ See J. Thomas McCarthy, McCarthy on Trademarks and Unfair Competition § 32:172 (4th ed. 2017).

²³² Jon Krosnick, Survey Research, 50 ANN. REV. PSYCHOL. 537-67 (1999).

(2) In terms of the total number of products, how many other products have you tried? 1? 5? 10?

The average response to the first question was 2.3, while the average response to the second was 5.2.²³³ The range of offered responses tends to have a large effect on the obtained results.

F. Avoiding Biased Question Phrasing

28. It is well established that the phrasing of questions largely shapes the answers. As a recent article explains:

From a cognitive perspective, answering a survey question requires that respondents perform several tasks (Strack & Martin, 1987; Tourangeau, 1984). They first need to interpret the question to understand what is asked for. Next, they need to recall relevant information from memory. If the question is an opinion question, they may sometimes be able to retrieve a previously formed opinion. In most cases, however, a previously formed opinion may not be accessible or may not match the specific aspects addressed in the question. Hence, respondents' third task is to form a judgment. To do so, they need to form a mental representation of the target and of some standard against which the target is evaluated. If the question is a behavioral question, respondents need to recall or reconstruct relevant instances of this behavior from memory. If the question specifies a reference period (such as "last week" or "last month"), they must also determine if these instances occurred during this reference period or not. Similarly, if the question refers to their "usual" behavior, respondents need to determine whether the reconstructed instances are reasonably representative or if they reflect a deviation from their usual behavior. If they cannot recall or reconstruct specific instances or are not sufficiently motivated to engage in this effort, respondents may rely on their general knowledge or other salient information that may bear on their task to compute an estimate.²³⁴

29. As this discussion shows, answering questions, especially those that require retrieving frequencies of events, experiences, and behaviors over an extended period, is a challenging task, often generating inaccurate and unreliable answers.²³⁵ Consequently, any instructions and question phrasing that have the potential to suggest desirable, expected answers is likely to be particularly impactful in biasing survey results. Accordingly, questions should not be phrased in a one-sided way that promotes one answer over another.

²³³ Elizabeth Loftus, Leading Questions and the Eyewitness Report, 7 COGNITIVE PSYCHOL. 550 (1975).

²³⁴ Norbert Schwarz, Surveys, Experiments, and the Psychology of Self-Report in HANDBOOK RES. METHODS CONSUMER PSYCHOL. at 21 (2019).

EVALUATING THE DEPARTMENT'S SURVEYS

A. Explaining the Surveys' Purpose Biased the Results

30. I have reviewed thousands of surveys conducted by students, experts, authors, and companies, and I cannot recall any other surveys in which the purpose of the surveys and the desirable responses were so clearly revealed in a way that was sure to bias the results.

This fatal flaw, by itself, makes the surveys' results unreliable.

31. Specifically, each module of the NYC Delivery Worker Survey was prefaced with the following introduction:

NYC is surveying New Yorkers about their work for delivery apps. This is part of a new law to raise pay for app delivery workers. Your answers will help NYC set a minimum pay rate that reflects your expenses and needs.

The survey should take less than 5 minutes. It is being conducted by the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection. Your answers are confidential and will not be shared with your apps.

For more information, visit nyc.gov/Delivery Apps or call 311 and say "Delivery Worker."²³⁶

²³⁵ See, e.g., Edward Blair and Scot Burton, Cognitive Processes Used by Survey Respondents to Answer Behavioral Frequency Questions, 14 J. CONSUMER RES. 280–88 (1987); Scot Burton and Edward Blair, Task Conditions, Response Formulation Processes, and Response Accuracy for Behavioral Frequency Questions in Surveys, 55 PUB. OPINION Q. 50–79 (1991).

²³⁶ See, e.g., Module 1 Questionnaire, NYC Delivery Worker Survey at 1, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/datasets/Delivery-Worker-Study-Survey-Data.zip>. The Columbia-Sam Schwartz Deliveristas Survey was prefaced with similar language: "Hello. This survey is being conducted by Sam Schwartz Engineering for the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP). This survey asks about your experience as a delivery worker, but does not ask for your name or any other identifying information. Your responses are anonymous and will be shared with Columbia University to help DCWP set a minimum pay rate for delivery workers. Staff from the Worker's

32. The introduction to the NYC Delivery Worker Survey states that the purpose of the survey is to support a new law that would “help NYC set a minimum pay rate that reflects your expenses and needs” and would “raise pay for app delivery workers.” The clear message to the respondents is to provide answers that will help NYC raise the respondents’ pay and reflect the expenses. Considering that, as explained above, answering the surveys’ questions is inherently inaccurate and challenging, the clear message is to provide answers that help achieve the surveys’ objectives.
33. Consistent with the principles discussed above (e.g., demand effects, self-interest), this is a clear invitation for upwardly biased answers regarding expenses. As explained above, this bias is likely to apply to respondents even if they have no intention to misrepresent the truth. Instead, such blatantly leading survey invitations undoubtedly affected the provided answers, whether the bias was conscious or not, rendering results from the surveys unreliable.

B. The Survey Questions Were Prone to Bias

34. The Department’s biasing of the surveys did not end in the introduction. The questions the survey designers drafted also likely biased the results. Consider, for example, the following

Module 1 question:

38. [Show if 24 = car or 16 = yes] How many hours per week is your car in use for something other than app delivery? *

- a. Fewer than 10 hours
- b. 10 - 19 hours

Justice Project/Los Deliveristas Unidos are assisting with outreach for this survey. They may be available to help you complete this survey or answer questions.” Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey Questionnaire at 1, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/datasets/Delivery-Worker-Study-SurveyData.zip>

- c. 20 - 29 hours
- d. 30 - 39 hours
- e. 40 or more hours

According to the tabulated results, just over half the respondents said that they used their car for non-app delivery reasons fewer than 10 hours per week and over 70% of the respondents report that they use their car between 0 and 19 hours per week for non-app delivery reasons. I cannot know how accurate or inaccurate this estimate is, nor do I know if the Department took any steps to validate these responses. But what is clear is that the survey's introduction encouraged respondents to indicate that their car and associated expenses are almost entirely attributed to their food delivery work because it was implied that the higher an individual's expenses related to app delivery, the more the respondents' earnings were likely to increase. The same conclusion applies to other similar questions.²³⁷

²³⁷ Other flawed questions include those asking respondents for “how much money” or “how many hours” the respondent “spend[s] in maintaining or repairing” various equipment and how many tickets the respondent received. E.g., Questions 34–40, Module 2 Questionnaire, NYC Delivery Worker Survey at 1, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/datasets/Delivery-Worker-Study-Survey-Data.zip>; see also Questions 13–38, Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey Questionnaire, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/datasets/Delivery-Worker-Study-Survey-Data.zip>.

35. Similarly, the surveys focused on and suggested categories of expenses that might not have applied to respondents or that were purchased for additional reasons. For example:

22. When you started the job, how much did you spend buying on delivery accessories like: GPS tracker, handle bar gloves, winter gear, rain gear, rack, food bag, basket, bungee cords, helmet, lights, horn, reflective vest, water bottle, lock, phone holster, etc.?²³⁸

In contrast, a neutral surveyor would have asked the respondents to estimate the total startup expenses, without priming the respondent to add additional categories of expenses.

36. Respondents were invited to provide various estimates, without suggesting to them any calculation methodology or any proof (e.g., receipts). For example:

30. In one year, how much MONEY do you spend on moped repair (including parts and tools)?

0. <Enter dollar amount>²³⁹

29. [Show if 14 = electric] During the past 12 months, how many batteries have you bought for your moped?

a. 0

b. 1

c. 2

d. 3

e. 4

f. 5 or more²⁴⁰

30. [Show if 9 = I use a car] How much do you spend per month to store or park your car?

²³⁸ Question 22, Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey Questionnaire, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/datasets/Delivery-Worker-Study-Survey-Data.zip>.

²³⁹ Question 30, Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey Questionnaire, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/datasets/Delivery-Worker-Study-Survey-Data.zip>.

²⁴⁰ Question 29, Module 2 Questionnaire, NYC Delivery Worker Survey,

- a. $0
- b. $1 - $99
- c. $100 - $199
- d. $200 - $299
- e. $300 - $399
- f. $400 - $499
- g. $500 or more ²⁴¹

It is unclear why these and similar survey questions relied on provided response options, which suggested the expected response range. As illustrated above, such suggested response options tend to affect the answers. The simplest alternative, which would not have suffered from this bias, would be to use an open-ended, free response format, such as

“What is your best estimate of what you spend per month to store or park your car?”

C. The Department Failed to Validate Survey Responses

37. Much of the key data about work hours and income on which the Department apparently relied, emanate from questions which were apparently not verified or validated in any scientific way. Specifically, respondents were asked:

10. [Show if 6 is completed] How many hours per week do you usually work for delivery apps?

- a. Fewer than 10 hours
- b. 10 - 19 hours
- c. 20 - 29 hours
- d. 30 - 39 hours

²⁴¹ Question 30, Module 2 Questionnaire, NYC Delivery Worker Survey, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/datasets/Delivery-Worker-Study-Survey-Data.zip>.

e. 40 or more hours²⁴²

13. [Show if 11 is completed] How much money do you usually earn per week from delivery apps, including tips?

a. Less than $200

b. $200 - $399

c. $400 - $599

d. $600 - $799

e. $800 - $999

f. $1,000 - $1,199

g. $1,200 or more²⁴³

38. The Sam Schwartz Survey included reminders, during the survey, regarding the big-picture goal of the survey that respondents should keep in mind:

Insert this text prior to Q9: In order to determine a proper wage standard we need to understand the time and money you need to spend in order to do your job safely and efficiently. Please keep this in mind to answer the following questions.

9. Do you use more than one cell phone to do your job?

0. Yes

1. No

10. For the most recent cell phone you purchased for your work, how much did you spend?

0. <Enter dollar amount>²⁴⁴

²⁴² Question 10, Module 3 Questionnaire, NYC Delivery Worker Survey,

²⁴³ Question 13, Module 3 Questionnaire, NYC Delivery Worker Survey, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/datasets/Delivery-Worker-Study-Survey-Data.zip>.

²⁴⁴ Questions 9–10, Columbia-Sam Schwartz-Deliveristas Survey Questionnaire at 2,

Again, the introduction and reminders made the results unreliable. As explained above, such questions suffered from demand effects, biases associated with leading questions, focalism bias (on various provided expense categories), and capitalizing on self-interest.

39. Moreover, the surveys failed to include any “controls” to account for guessing and the respondents’ desire to help and please as well as misremembering. For example, the surveys could have asked respondents about expense categories that are known to not apply or be related to food delivery work (sometimes referred to as “phantom questions”). The percentage of respondents who claim to have such expenses could then be subtracted from the answers to the pertinent survey questions.
40. Finally, the phrasing of the questions and the provided response options were likely to bias the results. Consider, for example, the following question (Module 2):

28. [Show if 9 = e-bike] During the past 12 months, how many batteries have you bought for your e-bike?

- a. 0
- b. 1
- c. 2
- d. 3
- e. 4
- f. 5 or more ²⁴⁵

As explained above, the range of response options (from 0 to “5 or more” batteries) was likely to generate upward-biased estimates of the number of batteries bought during a 12month period. To avoid this problem, the survey designer could simply use an open-ended question format without offering response options and without suggesting an expected range of answers.

²⁴⁵ Question 28, Module 2 Questionnaire, NYC Delivery Worker Survey,

41. My analysis above provided illustrative examples. The same biases apply to most of the questions included in the surveys relied upon by the Department, making the surveys entirely unreliable.
42. Indeed, each one of the survey principles outlined above was violated in the Department's Surveys, including:
- a. The surveys suffered from severe demand effects due in large part to the exceptionally unusual decision to disclose the purpose of the surveys and how the answers would be used.
 - b. Many of the surveys' questions were suggestive and led respondents to generate high expense numbers (e.g., multiple smartphones, multiple batteries per year).
 - c. The surveys lack any form of control—neither control groups nor control questions.
 - d. The surveys suffered from a focalism bias, by focusing attention on expense items as if they were exclusively due to the food delivery work (e.g., a car, a smartphone).
 - e. There was no attempt to verify reported numbers, such as the number of hours worked and the income.
 - f. The survey questions were prone to bias, were one-sided, were closed-ended, and used response scales that were likely to generate inflated expense numbers.

CONCLUSION

43. In this report I reviewed basic survey principles. Based on my analysis of the documents provided by the Department, the surveys were systematically biased and violated fundamental principles of survey science. Consequently, the surveys' results are unreliable, and it would not be consistent with accepted survey science to rely upon their results for use in justifying the rules at issue here.

APPENDIX: BACKGROUND AND QUALIFICATIONS

44. I have served as the Sebastian S. Kresge Professor of Marketing at the Graduate School of Business, Stanford University, from 1993 through 2020. Since the beginning of 2021, I am the Sebastian S. Kresge Emeritus Professor of Marketing (while continuing to teach and advise doctoral students at the Stanford Business School). A copy of my curriculum vitae, which includes a complete list of my publications, is attached as Exhibit A.
45. I hold a Ph.D. in Marketing from the Duke University Fuqua School of Business, a Master's degree in Business Administration (MBA) from the UCLA Graduate School of Management, and a Bachelor's degree with majors in Economics and Political Science from The Hebrew University.
46. My field of expertise is consumer behavior and decision making, marketing management, survey methods, the impact of price, brand, and product features on consumer behavior, and judgment and choice. Most of my research has focused on buyers' purchasing behavior, survey methods, and the effects of product characteristics (such as brand name, price, and features), the competitive context, and marketing activities (such as promotions and advertising) on buying decisions. I have published numerous articles in leading scientific journals (see Exhibit A).
47. I have received many awards, including (a) the 2007 Society for Consumer Psychology

Distinguished Scientific Achievement Award; (b) an Honorary Doctorate from the University of Paris – Sorbonne Universities; (c) the award for the Best Article published in the Journal of Consumer Research (the major journal on consumer behavior) between 1987 and 1989; (d) the 1997 O’Dell Award, given for the Journal of Marketing Research (the major journal on marketing research issues) article that has had the greatest impact on the marketing field in the previous five years; (e) the 2001 O’Dell award (and a finalist for the O’Dell Award in 1995, 2002, 2004, 2005, 2007, 2008, and 2012); (f) the award for the Best Article published in the Journal of Public Policy & Marketing (the main journal on public policy and legal aspects of marketing) between 1993 and 1995; (g) the Ferber Award from the Association for Consumer Research, the largest association of consumer researchers in the world; (h) Elected Fellow of the Association for Consumer Research; (i) the 2016 American Marketing Association Award for the Best Book in Marketing, which examines consumer decision making on the Internet; (j) the 2002 American Marketing Association award for the Best Article in the area of services marketing; and (k) the 2016 Association for Consumer Research Conference Best Paper Award. In addition to these awards, my research has been widely cited by other researchers in the marketing, consumer behavior, and other fields, and my publication record has been ranked as one of the most prolific and influential. My articles and opinions have also been relied upon by various courts.²⁴⁶

²⁴⁶ See, e.g., Sazerac Co. v. Fetzer Vineyards, Inc., 265 F. Supp. 3d 1013, 1016 (N.D. Cal. 2017) (relying on Dr. Simonson’s survey: “Fetzer’s expert’s analysis using a modified Eveready survey was far superior to the two room survey employed by Sazerac’s expert”); Kargo Global, Inc. v. Advance Magazine Publishers, Inc., No. 06 Cv. 550(JFK), 2007 WL 2258688, at *9–10, 15–16 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 6, 2007) (embracing Dr. Simonson’s report as stating “unassailable commonsense” and denying motion to exclude his testimony); Schechner. v. Whirlpool Corp., No. 2:16-cv-12409, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 221847, at *27 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 30, 2018) (“Simonson’s credentials are impressive, and his qualifications related to consumer research cannot be reasonably challenged.”); Gutierrez v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., No. C-

48. At Stanford University, I have taught MBA and executive courses on Marketing Management, covering such topics as buyer behavior, branding and other aspects of marketing strategies, pricing, building brand equity, advertising, sales promotions, and retailing. I have also taught courses dealing with the Marketing of High Technology Products, Business-to-Business Marketing, Behavioral Economics, and Critical-Analytical Thinking. Over the past several years, I have taught an MBA course regarding “Applied Behavioral Economics,” which examines the judgment and decision-making behavior and common errors/tendencies of managers, organizations, and consumers. In addition to teaching MBA courses, I have guided and supervised numerous MBA student teams in their work on company and industry projects dealing with a variety of markets.
49. All doctoral courses that I have taught for 34 years have involved educating students regarding proper and improper ways to conduct and evaluate consumer and managerial decision-making studies. For example, in addition to general principles of decisionmaking, the courses examine the various stages involved in a consumer survey, including defining the problem to be investigated, selecting and developing the research approach, collecting

0705923-WHA, Dkt. No. 477 at 51 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 10, 2010) (“This remarkably candid opinion was echoed throughout Expert Simonson’s direct testimony”) (emphasis in original); VIP Prods., Inc. v. Jack Daniel’s Prods., Inc., 291 F. Supp. 3d 891, 902 (D. Ariz. 2018) (“Dr. Simonson has served as an expert witness on numerous occasions, providing testimony on issues related to marketing, consumer behavior, trademarkrelated matters, false advertising, and branding.”); Gucci Am., Inc. v. Guess?, Inc., 831 F. Supp. 2d 723, 745 (S.D.N.Y. 2011) (agreeing with Dr. Simonson’s survey analysis); THOIP v. Walt Disney Co., 690 F. Supp. 2d 218, 232–42 (S.D.N.Y. 2010) (relying on Dr. Simonson’s opinions to exclude opposing expert’s survey); Malletier v. Dooney & Bourke, Inc., 525 F. Supp. 2d 558, 626 n.210 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) (noting that Dr. “Simonson is eminently qualified to analyze survey techniques”); Simon Prop. Grp. L.P. v. mySimon, Inc., 104 F. Supp. 2d 1033, 1043–44, 1048, 1050 (S.D. Ind. 2000) (repeatedly citing Dr. Simonson’s expert report as support for excluding opposing expert’s survey); TCL Commc’n Tech. Holdings, Ltd. v. Telefonaktiebolaget LM Ericsson, No. 15-cv-2370, 2017 WL 6611635, at *29 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 21, 2017)

and analyzing data, and deriving conclusions. In each class meeting, we carefully investigate the key errors and limitations (if any) in the research and surveys we discuss, and I teach the doctoral students what key aspects they should focus on when designing and evaluating studies. One doctoral course I have taught over the past 25 years has focused on studies of psychological and behavioral aspects of consumer decision-making and judgment and decision-making more generally. Another doctoral course that I have taught deals with consumer behavior. Prior to joining Stanford University, during the six years that I was on the faculty of the University of California at Berkeley (1987-93), I taught an MBA Marketing Management course, a Ph.D. course on buyer behavior, and a Ph.D. course on buyer decision-making. I also taught in various executive-education programs, including a program for marketing managers in high-technology companies.

(“Dr. Simonson is exceptionally well credentialed in survey work.”); People v. Macy’s, Inc., No. BC 643037, 2021 WL 3469996, at *5 (Cal. Super. July 13, 2021) (“The Court finds that the survey performed by Dr. Simonson was exemplary and a model of how litigation surveys should be conducted. The Court, accordingly, affords the survey’s results and conclusions based thereon a high degree of credibility and weight.”).

50. After completing my MBA studies and before starting my Ph.D. program, I worked for five years in a marketing capacity at a subsidiary of Motorola Inc., serving in the last two years as the product-marketing manager for various communications products. My work included: (a) defining new products and designing marketing plans for new product introductions, (b) customer and competitor surveys and analysis, (c) pricing and advertising, and (d) sales forecasting.

51. I have conducted, supervised, or evaluated well over 2,000 marketing research studies dealing with various aspects of consumer decision-making, covering topics such as branding, pricing, product configurations, marketing strategies, and advertising-related issues. Based on this experience, as well as my education, teaching, participation in consumer-research conferences, and numerous projects with companies and students, I have developed expertise in how to design consumer surveys, how to conduct consumer surveys, problems and pitfalls that are common in consumer surveys, how to analyze the data from consumer surveys, and what the results of consumer surveys can—and cannot—show.

52. I serve on editorial boards of marketing consumer behavior, and other journals, such as and including for the Journal of Consumer Research, the Journal of Marketing Research, the Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, and the Journal of Consumer Psychology. I am the in-coming co-editor of the Consumer Psychology Review journal. I also frequently review articles submitted to journals in other fields, such as psychology, decision-making, and economics. Almost all the articles I review include surveys that I carefully examine, often identifying issues that need to be addressed and suggesting to the authors how to conduct new studies. I received (twice) the Outstanding Reviewer Award from the Journal of Consumer Research. As a reviewer, I am asked to evaluate the research of scholars wishing to publish their articles in leading scholarly journals. In addition, I have worked as a consultant for companies and organizations on a variety of marketing and buyer behavior topics, the design of consumer surveys, and the measurement of consumer preferences.

53. I have also served as an expert in over 200 prior litigations involving various marketing and buyer behavior issues (including consumer surveys), technology marketing, the impact of product features, class actions, trademark-related matters, false advertising, branding, and other issues. I am being compensated at my standard rate of $850 an hour. My compensation is not dependent in any way on the outcome of this proceeding.

I. Simonson

Date : 12/16/2022

Itamar Simonson, Ph.D.

Exhibit A to Simonson Report

(Simonson CV)

Itamar Simonson

August 2022

ADDRESSES

Home Office:

1561 Newlands Ave.

Burlingame, CA 94010

655 Knight Center, Stanford University Cell: (650) 387-7677 Stanford,
CA 94305-5015 itamar.simonson@gmail.com itamars@stanford.edu

(University) Office:

Graduate School of Business

EDUCATION

Ph.D.

Duke University, Fuqua School of Business

Major: Marketing; May 1987

M.B.A.

UCLA, Graduate School of Management

Major: Marketing; March 1978

B.A.

Hebrew University, Jerusalem, Israel

Major: Economics, Political Science; August 1976

ACADEMIC POSITIONS

July 1987 - June 1993	University of California, Berkeley Haas School of Business Assistant Professor
July 1993 – Aug. 1996	Stanford Graduate School of Business Associate Professor of Marketing
Sept. 1996 – Aug. 1999	Stanford Graduate School of Business Professor of Marketing
Sept. 1999 – Dec. 2020	Stanford Graduate School of Business Sebastian S. Kresge Professor of Marketing
Jan. 2021 – Present	Stanford Graduate School of Business Sebastian S. Kresge Emeritus Professor of Marketing
1994 – 2000	Stanford Graduate School of Business Marketing Group Head
2000, 2004, 2012	Visiting Professor of Marketing: MIT; NYU; Columbia

AWARDS

- Best Article in the Journal of Consumer Research during the period 1987-1989.
- The 1997 O'Dell Award (for the Journal of Marketing Research article that has had the greatest impact on the marketing field in the previous five years).
- The 2001 O'Dell Award.
- Honorary Doctorate: University of Paris II – Sorbonne Universities.
- The American Marketing Association Best Book in Marketing Award.
- Elected Fellow of the Association for Consumer Research.
- The 2007 Society for Consumer Psychology Distinguished Scientific Achievement Award.
- Finalist for the O'Dell Award: 1995; 2002; 2004; 2005; 2007; 2008; 2012.
- Best Article in the Journal of Public Policy & Marketing during the period 1993-1995.
- The 2016 Association for Consumer Research Conference Best Paper Award.
- The 2002 American Marketing Association Award for the Best Article on Services Marketing.
- The Association for Consumer Research 1990 "Ferber Award."
- Finalist for the 2003 Paul Green Award (for the Journal of Marketing Research article with the greatest potential to contribute to the practice of marketing research).
- Runner-up for the 2005 Journal of Consumer Research Best Article Award.
- Winner in the Marketing Science Institute and Direct Marketing Association competition on "Understanding and Measuring the Effect of Direct Marketing."

- Runner-up for the 1993 California Management Review Best Article Award.
- National Science Foundation Grant (for 1996-8).
- Outstanding Reviewer Award, Journal of Consumer Research, 2005, 2009.
- Honorable Mention for the Sloan Executive Program Teaching Award.

TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Stanford University:

Marketing Management (for MBAs and the Sloan Executive Program)

Marketing to Businesses (for MBAs); Technology Marketing (for MBAs)

Critical Analytical Thinking (for MBAs)

Research Methods for Studying Consumer Behavior (a Ph.D. Course)

Applied Behavioral Economics (at the MBA and Ph.D. levels) Buyer

Behavior (a Ph.D. course)

University Of California, Berkeley:

MBA, Ph.D. and Executive Education Classes on Marketing Management and Consumer Behavior.

BUSINESS EXPERIENCE

October 1978-August 1983 Motorola, Inc.

Worked in an international subsidiary; responsibilities included marketing research and customer analysis, customer surveys, definition of new products, pricing, analysis of sales force performance, competitive intelligence, and forecasting. Conducted studies of consumers and markets for various communications products. Last two years served as Product Marketing Manager for communications products.

Consulting:

Consulted for clients from a wide range of industries such as technology, communications, services, and manufacturing sectors.

Expert witness assignments: trademark infringement, deceptive advertising, surveys, consumer behavior, marketing management, branding, retailing, distribution, assessment of demand drivers and feature value, and other marketing issues.

PUBLICATIONS

Ioannis Evangelidis, Jonathan Levav, and Itamar Simonson, "The Upscaling Effect," Journal of Consumer Research, Forthcoming.

Ioannis Evangelidis, Jonathan Levav, and Itamar Simonson (2022), "A Reexamination of the Impact of Decision Conflict on Choice Deferral," Management Science, Forthcoming.

Itamar Simonson (2022), "Experimentation, Serendipity, and Strategy in Research Discovery," Review of Marketing Research.

David Gal and Itamar Simonson (2021), "Predicting Consumers' Choices in the Age of the Internet, AI, and Almost Perfect Tracking: Some Things Change, the Key Challenges Do Not," Consumer Psychology Review, 4 (1), 135-152.

Itamar Simonson (2020), "The Real Time Cognitive Value of Eating Kale, Helping, and Doing Something Special: "Concurrent Experience Evaluation" (CEE), Its Drivers and Moderators, and Research Directions," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 30, 688-711.

Franklin Shaddy, Ayelet Fishbach, and Itamar Simonson (2021), "Tradeoffs in Choice," Annual Review in Psychology, 72, 181-206.

Haiyang Yang, Ziv Carmon, and Itamar Simonson (2020), "Preference for Practical versus Theoretical Knowledge: Conceptualization and Consumer Behavior Predictions," Review of Marketing Research, Vol. 17, Dawn Iaccabucci Editor.

Louise Twito, Salomon Israel, Itamar Simonson, and Ariel Knafo-Noam (2019), "The Motivational Aspect of Children's Delayed Gratification: Values and Decision Making in Middle Childhood," Frontiers in Psychology.

Itamar Simonson (2018), "Understanding Consumer Choices Involving Environmental and Utilitarian Attributes: The Role of Dimensional Comparability and Compromisibility," Journal of Environmental Analysis & Ecology Studies, Vol. 3.

Itamar Simonson and Ran Kivetz (2018), "Bringing (Contingent) Loss Aversion Down to Earth – A Comment," Journal of Consumer Psychology, Journal of Consumer Psychology, 28, 517-522.

Ioannis Evangelidis, Jonathan Levav, and Itamar Simonson (2018), "The Asymmetric Impact of Context Effects on Advantaged versus Disadvantaged Options," Journal of Marketing Research, 55, 239-253.

Itamar Simonson, Aner Sela, and Sanjay Sood (2017), "Preference-Construction Habits: The Case of Extremeness Aversion," Journal of the Association for Consumer Research, 2, 3, 322332.

Itamar Simonson (2016), "Imperfect Progress: An Objective, Quality Assessment of the Role of User Reviews in Consumer Decision Making," Journal of Consumer Research, 42, 840-845.

Itamar Simonson (2016), "The Construction of the Consumer Decision Making Field by Jim Bettman – The Case of Preference Construction," in Legends in Consumer Behavior, I. Simonson, editor.

Leilei Gao and Itamar Simonson (2016), "The positive effect of assortment size on purchase likelihood: The moderating influence of decision order," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 26, 542-549.

Itamar Simonson (2015), "Mission (Largely) Accomplished: What's Next for Consumer BDT-JDM Researchers?" Journal of Marketing Behavior, 1, 9-35.

Itamar Simonson (2015), "The BDT Effect and Future: A Reply to John Lynch and Norbert Schwarz" Journal of Marketing Behavior, 1, 59-73.

Itamar Simonson (2014), "Vices and Virtues of Misguided Replications: The Case of Asymmetric Dominance," Journal of Marketing Research; 51 (4), 514-9.

Itamar Simonson and Emanuel Rosen (2014), Absolute Value: What Really Influences Customers in the Age of (Nearly) Perfect Information, HarperCollins Publishers.

Itamar Simonson and Emanuel Rosen (2014), "What Marketers Misunderstand About Online Reviews," Harvard Business Review, January, 23-25.

(HBR Blog: "Three Long-Held Concepts Every Marketer Should Rethink," January 22, 2014)

Leilei Gao, YanLiu Huang, and Itamar Simonson (2014), "The Influence of Initial Possession Level on Consumers' Adoption of A Collection Goal: A Tipping Point Effect," Journal of Marketing, 78, 143-156.

Aner Sela, Itamar Simonson, and Ran Kivetz (2013), "Beating the Market: The Allure of Unintended Value," Journal of Marketing Research, Vol. L (December), 691-705.

Itamar Simonson, James Bettman, Thomas Kramer, and John Payne (2013), "Comparison Selection: An Approach to the Study of Consumer Judgment and Choice," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 23(1), 137-149.

Itamar Simonson, James Bettman, Thomas Kramer, and John Payne (2013), "Directions for Judgment and Decision Making Research Based on Comparison Selection: Reply to Arkes, Johnson, and Kardes," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 23(1), 161-3.

Itamar Simonson and Ran Kivetz (2012), "Demand Effects in Likelihood of Confusion Surveys: The Importance of Marketplace Conditions," Ch. 11 in Trademark and False Advertising Surveys, Edited by Shari Diamond and Jerre Swann, American Bar Association.

Thomas Kramer, Michal Maimaran, and Itamar Simonson (2012), "Asymmetric Option Effects on Ease of Choice Criticism and Defense," OBHDP, 117, 179-91.

Michal Maimaran and Itamar Simonson (2011), "Multiple Routes to Self Versus Other Expression in Consumer Choice," Journal of Marketing Research, August, 755-66.

Itamar Simonson and Aner Sela (2011), "On the Heritability of Consumer Decision Making: An Exploratory Approach for Studying Genetic Effects on Judgment and Choice," Journal of Consumer Research, 37, 951-66.

Stephen Nowlis, Ravi Dhar, and Itamar Simonson (2010), "The Effect of Decision Order on Purchase Quantity Decisions," Journal of Marketing Research, 40 (4), 725-737.

Chezy Ofir, Itamar Simonson, and Song-Oh Yoon (2009), "The Robustness of the Effects of Consumers' Participation in Market Research: The Case of Service Quality Evaluations," Journal of Marketing, 73 (November), 105-14.

Aimee Drolet, Mary Frances Luce, and Itamar Simonson (2009), "When Does Choice Reveal Preference? Moderators of Heuristic vs. Goal Based Choice," Journal of Consumer Research, 36 (1).

Itamar Simonson (2008), "Regarding Inherent Preferences," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 18, 191-196.

Itamar Simonson (2008), "Will I Like a 'Medium' Pillow? Another Look at Constructed and Inherent Preferences," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 18, 155-169.

Song-Oh Yoon and Itamar Simonson (2008), "The Context of Construction as a Determinant of the Strength and Stability of Consumer Preferences," Journal of Consumer Research, 35, September, 324-336.

Itamar Simonson (2007), "Decision Making," Encyclopedia of Social Psychology; Sage.

Jonah Berger, Michaela Draganska, and Itamar Simonson (2007), "The Influence of Product Variety on Brand Perceptions, Choice, and Experience," Marketing Science, 26, July-August, 460-72.

Nathan Novemsky, Ravi Dhar, Norbert Schwarz, and Itamar Simonson (2007), "Preference Fluency in Choice," Journal of Marketing Research, XLIV, 347-356.

Chezy Ofir and Itamar Simonson (2007), "The Effect of Stating Expectations on Customer Satisfaction and Shopping Experience," Journal of Marketing Research, February, 164-174.

Ray Fisman, Sheena Iyengar, Emir Kamenica, and Itamar Simonson (2007), "Racial Preferences in Dating," Review of Economic Studies, 75, 1, 117-132.

Raymond Fisman, Sheena Iyengar, Emir Kamenica, and Itamar Simonson (2006), "Gender Differences in Mate Selection: Evidence from a Speed Dating Experiment," Quarterly Journal of Economics, 121 (2), 673-697.

Itamar Simonson (2005), "Determinants of Customers' Responses to Customized Offers: Conceptual Framework and Research Propositions," Journal of Marketing, 69 (January), 3245.

Itamar Simonson (2005), "In Defense of Consciousness: The Role of Conscious and Unconscious Inputs in Consumer Choice," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 15(3), 211-217.

Donnel Briley, Michael Morris, and Itamar Simonson (2005), "Cultural Chameleons: Biculturals, Conformity Motives, and Decision Making," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 15 (4), 351-362.

Uptal Dholakia and Itamar Simonson (2005), "The Effect of Explicit Reference Points on Consumer Choice and Online Bidding Behavior," Marketing Science, 24, 206-17.

Itamar Simonson, Thomas Kramer, and Maia Young (2004), "Effect Propensity," Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes, 95 (November), 156-74.

Itamar Simonson and Aimee Drolet (2004), "Anchoring Effects on Consumers' Willingness-to-Pay and Willingness-to-Accept," Journal of Consumer Research, 31 (December), 681-90.

Ran Kivetz and Itamar Simonson (2003) "The Idiosyncratic Fit Heuristic: The Role of Effort Advantage in Consumer Response to Loyalty Programs," Journal of Marketing Research, 40 (November), 454-67.

Dan Ariely and Itamar Simonson (2003), "Buying, Bidding, Playing, or Competing? Value Assessment and Decision Dynamics in Online Auctions," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 13(1&2), 113-123.

Ravi Dhar and Itamar Simonson (2003), "The Effect of Forced Choice on Choice," Journal of Marketing Research, 40 (May), 146-60.

Ran Kivetz and Itamar Simonson (2002), "Self Control for the Righteous: Toward a Theory of Luxury Pre-Commitment," Journal of Consumer Research, 29 (September), 199-217.

Ran Kivetz and Itamar Simonson (2002), "Earning the Right to Indulge: Effort as a Determinant of Customer Preferences Toward Frequency Program Rewards," Journal of Marketing Research, 39 (May), 155-70.

Chezy Ofir and Itamar Simonson (2001), "In Search of Negative Customer Feedback: The Effect of Expecting to Evaluate on Satisfaction Evaluations," Journal of Marketing Research, 38 (May), 170-82.

Itamar Simonson, Ziv Carmon, Ravi Dhar, Aimee Drolet, and Stephen Nowlis (2001), "Consumer Research: In Search of Identity," Annual Review of Psychology, 52, 249-275.

Donnel Briley, Michael Morris, and Itamar Simonson (2000), "Reasons as Carriers of Culture: Dynamic Vs. Dispositional Models of Cultural Influence on Decision Making," Journal of Consumer Research, 27 (September), 157-178.

Aimee Drolet, Itamar Simonson, and Amos Tversky (2000), "Indifference Curves that Travel with the Choice Set," Marketing Letters, 11(3), 199-209.

Stephen Nowlis and Itamar Simonson (2000), "Sales promotions and the Choice Context as Competing Influences on Consumer Decision Making," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 9(1), 1-17.

Ran Kivetz and Itamar Simonson (2000), "The Effect of Incomplete Information on Consumer Choice," Journal of Marketing Research, 37(4), 427-48.

Itamar Simonson and Stephen Nowlis (2000), "The Effect of Explaining and Need for Uniqueness on Consumer Decision Making: Unconventional Consumer Choices Based on Reasons," Journal of Consumer Research, 27 (June), 49-68.

Itamar Simonson (1999), "The Effect of Product Assortment on Consumer Preferences," Journal of Retailing, 75(3), 347-70.

Ravi Dhar and Itamar Simonson (1999), "Making Complementary Choices in Consumption Episodes: Highlighting Versus Balancing" Journal of Marketing Research, 36 (February), 294-4.

Houghton, David, ..., and Itamar Simonson (1999), "Correction Processes in Consumer Choice," Marketing Letters, 10(2),107-112.

Ziv Carmon and Itamar Simonson (1998), "Price-Quality Tradeoffs in Choice Versus Matching: New Insights into the Prominence Effect," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 7(4), 323-343.

Stephen Nowlis and Itamar Simonson (1997), "Attribute–Task Compatibility as a Determinant of Consumer Preference Reversals," Journal of Marketing Research, 34 (May), 205-218.

Joel Huber, ..., and Itamar Simonson (1997), "Thinking About Values in Prospect and Retrospect: Maximizing Experienced Utility," Marketing Letters, 7, 324-334.

Stephen Nowlis and Itamar Simonson (1996), "The Impact of New Product Features on Brand Choice," Journal of Marketing Research, 33 (February), 36-46.

Itamar Simonson (1994), "Trademark Infringement from the Buyer Perspective: Conceptual Analysis and Measurement Implications," Journal of Public Policy and Marketing, 13(2), 181-199.

Itamar Simonson, "Shoppers' Easily Influenced Choices," NY Times, 11/6/1994.

Itamar Simonson (1994), "An Empirical Investigation of the Meaning and Measurement of Genericness," Trademark Reporter, 84 (2), 199-223.

Itamar Simonson, Ziv Carmon, and Suzanne O'Curry (1994), "Experimental Evidence on the Negative Effect of Product Features and Sales Promotions on Brand Choice," Marketing Science, 13 (1), 23-40.

Itamar Simonson (1993), "Get Closer to Your Customers by Understanding How They Make Choices," California Management Review, 35 (4), 68-84.

Itamar Simonson (1993), "The Effect of Survey Method on Likelihood of Confusion Estimates: Conceptual Analysis and Empirical Test," Trademark Reporter, 83 (3), 364-393.

Itamar Simonson, Stephen Nowlis, and Katherine Lemon (1993), "The Effect of Local Consideration Sets on Global Choice Between Lower Price and Higher Quality," Marketing Science, 12 (4), 357-377.

Itamar Simonson, Stephen Nowlis, and Yael Simonson (1993), "The Effect of Irrelevant Preference Arguments on Consumer Choice," Journal of Consumer Psychology, 2 (3), 287-306.

Eldar Shafir, Itamar Simonson, and Amos Tversky (1993), "Reasons-Based Choice," Cognition, 49, 11-36.

Amos Tversky and Itamar Simonson (1993), "Context-Dependent Preferences," Management Science, 39 (10), 1179-1189.

Itamar Simonson (1992), "Influences of Anticipating Regret and Responsibility on Purchase Decisions," Journal of Consumer Research, 19 (June), 105-118.

Itamar Simonson and Peter Nye (1992), "The Effect of Accountability on Susceptibility to Decision Errors", Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes, 51 (3), 416-446.

Itamar Simonson and Amos Tversky (1992), "Choice in Context: Tradeoff Contrast and Extremeness Aversion," Journal of Marketing Research, 29 (August), 281-295.

Itamar Simonson and Barry Staw (1992), "De-Escalation Strategies: A Comparison of Techniques for Reducing Commitment to Losing Courses of Action," Journal of Applied Psychology, 77 (4), 419-426.

Itamar Simonson and Russell S. Winer (1992), "The Influence of Purchase Quantity and Display Format on Consumer Preference for Variety," Journal of Consumer Research, 19 (June), 133-138.

Ravi Dhar and Itamar Simonson (1992), "The Effect of the Focus of Comparison on Consumer Preferences," Journal of Marketing Research, 29 (November), 430-440.

William T. Ross and Itamar Simonson (1991), "Evaluations of Pairs of Experiences: A Preference for Happy Endings," Journal of Behavioral Decision Making, 4(4), 273-282.

Itamar Simonson (1991), "The Effect of Buying Decisions on Consumers' Assessments of Their Tastes", Marketing Letters, 2, 1, 5-14.

Itamar Simonson (1990), "The Effect of Purchase Quantity and Timing on Variety Seeking Behavior," Journal of Marketing Research, 27 (May), 150-162.

Itamar Simonson (1989), "Choice Based on Reasons: The Case of Attraction and Compromise Effects," Journal of Consumer Research, 16 (September), 158-174.

Itamar Simonson, Joel Huber, and John Payne (1988), "The Relationship Between Prior Brand Knowledge and Information Acquisition Order", Journal of Consumer Research, (March), 14, 566-78.

ARTICLES UNDER REVIEW/REVISION

Franklin Shaddy, Ayelet Fishbach, and Itamar Simonson, "Why Invoking the Self Attenuates Variety Seeking, the Compromise Effect, and Balancing." (Revised for resubmission)

Wendy Liu and Itamar Simonson, "Shortlisting – Not Overwhelmed But Biased." (Revised for resubmission)

Aner Sela and Itamar Simonson, "The Feeling of Preference: Preference Expression in the Absence of Preferences." (Revised for resubmission)

Ioannis Evangelidis, Jonathan Levav, and Itamar Simonson, "The Upscaling Effect."

Jen Park and Itamar Simonson, "Rejection and Closure: Why Options that Survive Rejection Are More Attractive."

Doctoral Dissertations Chaired:

Ravi Dhar (Chaired Professor, Yale U.)

Aimee Drolet (Chaired Professor, UCLA)

Stephen Nowlis (Chaired Professor, Washington U., St. Louis)

Ziv Carmon (Chaired Professor, INSEAD)

Ran Kivetz (Chaired Professor, Columbia U.)

Donnel Briley (Professor, U.O. Sydney)

Thomas Kramer (Professor, U.O. California, Riverside)

Wendy Liu (Professor, U.O. California, San Diego)

Sanjay Sood (Professor, UCLA)

Song-Oh Yoon (Professor, Korea University)

Michal Maimaran (Clinical Professor, Kellogg School)

Leilei Gao (Professor, Chinese University, Hong Kong)

Wendy De La Rosa (Assistant Professor, Wharton School, U.O. Penn.)

Aner Sela (Professor, U. O. Florida)

Jonah Berger (Associate Professor, Wharton School, U.O. Penn.)

Jen Park (Assistant Professor, University of British Columbia)

EDITORIAL ACTIVITIES

(In-coming) Co-Editor of Consumer Psychology Review

Editorial Boards: Journal of Marketing Research, Journal of Consumer Psychology, Journal of Consumer Research, International Journal of Research in Marketing, Journal of Marketing in Emerging Economies, Marketing Letters, Journal of Academy of Marketing Science, Review of Marketing Research.

Reviewer for Marketing Science, Journal of Behavioral Decision Making, Science, Management Science, Journal of Retailing and Consumer Services, Journal of Marketing, Journal of Retailing, Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes, Journal of Experimental Psychology, Psychological Review, Psychological Bulletin, Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, Psychological Science, California Management Review, Journal of Economic Psychology, European Journal of Social Psychology, Journal of Judgment and Decision Making, Medical Decision Making, and National Science Foundation.

PROFESSIONAL AFFILIATIONS

Association for Consumer Research
Judgment and Decision Making Society

EXHIBIT 9

To the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection,

Uber Eats provides couriers the freedom and flexibility to choose when and where to work—essential components for individuals who opt to find work through the gig economy. The proposed rule, entitled Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers (the “Proposed Rule”), threatens to greatly undermine or eliminate this valued flexibility. The Proposed Rule should be revised to account for the various operating models in the industry, including those which currently give full autonomy to the courier to choose when, where and how long they want to work. Couriers tell us that they choose this work because they can deliver around full time jobs, a spouse's schedule, or caring for their children, among other priorities. Maintaining an option that preserves couriers' choice can be accomplished while also ensuring fair pay for all couriers.

The Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (the “Department”) decided not to release data relating to the Proposed Rule until December 5. In response, Uber Eats requested a short extension of time to prepare responsive comments. The Department, however, has refused to amend the comment submission date. In an attempt to provide ongoing comment on a complex and novel issue within this unreasonably short timeline, Uber is providing this as one of a series of comments to inform the Department's rulemaking process.

While Uber Eats welcomes a continued conversation with the Department on the topic of minimum pay rates for third party delivery workers in New York City, it is imperative that the Department engage in a continued dialogue with all affected stakeholders and all couriers—not just a small subset who do not and cannot represent the interests of everyone. This is critically important because the Proposed Rule, as currently drafted, would force a sea change in couriers' working styles, and because the Department does not regulate all facets of the industry, nor does it license or regulate couriers or their vehicles.

Problems with the Requirement that All Online Time Be Subject to the Pay Standard

There are numerous problems with the Proposed Rule's requirement that all online time be credited for purposes of calculating minimum payments for couriers:

- First, the Department has explained that it wants to “accommodate the variety of pay arrangements” that already exist in the industry, and does not want to create a “competitive disadvantage.”²⁴⁷ The Proposed Rule, however, mandates that platforms employ the operating model currently utilized by Relay, the smallest of the four platforms operating in New York City. The Proposed Rule, therefore, would require the three larger platforms to completely change how their businesses operate and would overhaul how couriers choose to earn.

²⁴⁷ N.Y.C. Dep't of Consumer & Worker Protection, A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC (“Department Report”) (Nov. 2022) at 35, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/pdf/workers/Delivery-Worker-Study-November-2022.pdf>.

- Second, the Department inexplicably failed to account for the unintended negative consequences of similar rulemaking in the context of the high volume for-hire service industry in New York City. Enforcement of the TLC’s minimum pay rule and its dynamic utilization rate formula was paused after only one year so that issues could be addressed, and the rule was further altered earlier this year. As Uber has already shared with the Department, an industry-wide static per trip minimum earnings standard should account for online waiting time without forcing platforms to push workers to increase productivity, limit access, and pit workers against each other to obtain the most lucrative working hours and locations.
- Third, the Department’s report does not analyze what impact or unintended consequences it would have on workers or other industry participants—including restaurants in communities with lower order density. Surprisingly, the Department’s surveys failed to even ask restaurants and couriers about the likely impacts of the Proposed Rule, including fewer orders and less courier flexibility, despite the Department’s recognition that apps would be forced to take steps to increase courier orders per hour, limit access and exert more control over couriers.
- Fourth, the aggregate payment rule will insert total uncertainty to courier earnings. The Proposed Rule allows companies to pay out aggregate time however they choose. Each company may do so differently, or change its approach each week. No courier will know what he or she will earn in any given week.

We will continue to address these issues in additional submissions, as well as identify further issues that the Department must consider and address before enacting the Proposed Rule.

The Proposed Rule Will Force Just One Operating Model and Eliminate Courier Choice Uber Eats is an open access food delivery platform. An individual can be logged into the app at any time of day, for any amount of time and receive offers for dispatches, while maintaining the ability to reject any and all trips with absolutely no penalty. There is currently no requirement within the app for a courier to apply for a specific shift or area of the City within which they want to work. Simply put, every courier has the option to work when, where, and for however long they choose and they can make that decision up until the moment they decide to accept a delivery trip.

The report issued by the Department in November 2022 says, “[s]ome apps permit workers to pre-schedule shifts, guaranteeing them access to the platform during specific hours (but limiting their future earnings opportunities if they miss or cancel their shift).”²⁴⁸ However, of the apps the Department studied, only Relay, a third party courier service in New York City, is known to have a sophisticated gating, scheduling and blocking function which significantly limits online time, repositions couriers to match demand, and almost completely limits couriers choice - while offering hourly pay for online time. The other three large companies—all third party delivery services—which provide the majority of food deliveries in the City have minimal, if any, limitations to access the app.

²⁴⁸ Department Report at 15.

The report suggests that in order to comply with this new standard, companies may limit access to their platform by making use of “gating”—a feature where couriers are not able to log on to a platform or accept trips unless the platform allows them to do so. Gating may increase trips per hour, but at a cost. While, in theory, this may sound like a good thing, what we know in practice is that if every company is forced to reduce wait time, and create rigid scheduling, gating, and blocking tools so that workers can only go online during the busiest hours, it will do exactly what the City Council’s protections for couriers are designed to avoid and what will be terrible for couriers and their families: foster fierce competition among couriers, create tiers of couriers who have different abilities to access different shifts of work based on performance and productivity, and leave thousands of couriers without the ability to earn at all. In fact, after the Department’s Proposed Rule was issued, Uber Eats conducted a survey of couriers using its platform which garnered 11,687 responses and showed that 24% of delivery workers currently use our platform when they are locked out of working by other companies. As the report predicts, their ability to do that would likely be eliminated if companies like Uber Eats are forced to schedule workers or otherwise restrict when and where they can work in order to reduce aggregate on line time. And, at the same time, this structure would punish couriers—for no discernible reasons—who simply prefer to deliver on occasion, and are actively less interested in rigid shifts where they need to deliver with peak efficiency.

The Department Failed to Learn from the TLC’s Experience

In 2019, the TLC adopted a minimum earnings standard for For-Hire Vehicle drivers, which included a dynamic utilization rate rather than a static multiplier, thereby incentivizing app companies like Uber, Lyft, Via, and Juno to reduce the amount of time drivers spent without a passenger in the car (wait time). In order to maintain high utilization and to keep costs down, companies created gating tools and different tiers of drivers who could schedule time when they would have access to log onto for-hire vehicle platforms based on the driver’s performance and acceptance rate. The pay rule ultimately led Juno to file for bankruptcy, blaming the minimum earnings rule.²⁴⁹ The majority of drivers also hated this system—as they no longer had the flexibility to choose when, where, and for how long they wanted to work; only the highest rated drivers had early access to choose the most lucrative times to earn, and thousands of drivers who had invested in cars, licenses, and insurance, among other costs, were left with very limited options of when they could work, reducing earnings and creating anxiety among drivers and protests against the rule. Even drivers who could choose the most lucrative trips felt intense pressure to maintain that status, or get replaced with other drivers.

Notably, last month, the day before the Department released its Proposed Rule, the TLC passed a modification of its earnings standard, removing the dynamic utilization component that had created competition among companies. No longer will the TLC’s rule be designed to promote companies competing for every point of utilization, which means there will likely be few, if any restrictions, on how For-Hire Vehicle drivers can access opportunities to earn in New York. The Department's Proposed Rule moves in the exact opposite direction, creating fierce competition between companies to lower costs by decreasing wait time.

²⁴⁹ Alexander Gladstone, Ride-Hailing App June Enters Bankruptcy, Blaming Wage Law, Wall Street J. (Nov. 20, 2019), <https://www.wsj.com/articles/ride-hailing-app-juno-enters-bankruptcy-blaming-wage-law-11574270292>.

Adverse Impact on local Communities and Restaurants

The Department also briefly acknowledges that the Proposed Rule may have an adverse impact on restaurants, stating that “apps may strategically restrict delivery distances or limit service to the times and places where delivery can be provided affordably.”²⁵⁰ However, the Department fails to acknowledge that certain communities may see less service because of the inclusion of on call time. An analysis of Uber's internal data shows that communities like Sunset Park and Washington Heights have underutilized couriers, which may require limiting or curtailing service all together in order to limit on-call waiting time.

Uncertainty in Courier Earnings

The Proposed Rule as written currently allows companies to pay out the aggregate requirement to couriers however they choose. Some may choose to split the money equally among all couriers that did a trip. Some may choose to pay it out as bonuses to the couriers that were the most efficient in terms of trips per hour. Others may choose to pay the entire amount out to a small subset of couriers. Each company may adopt a different approach, and change its approach week to week. The result will be that couriers will have no way of predicting how much they may earn through the aggregate requirement in any given week, and many couriers would receive nothing. Likewise, the Department will face an administrative nightmare in attempting to respond to complaints from confused couriers.

Alternative to the Aggregate Requirement

As laid out in detail in our public comment delivered on December 8, 2022 and in prior correspondence with the Department (such as our June 15, 2022 written submission), the Department should adopt a rule that allows aggregate P1 time as one of two options to comply. Companies that already schedule and shift workers, and workers who prefer a routine and ability to sign up in advance, would likely adopt that approach. However, the agency should also adopt an option that allows for the services to operate while preserving the flexibility and open access to the app that workers tell us they want. These two models work together, as couriers may use one gated or scheduled platform when they can obtain a block of time, and then use another ungated platform as a supplement and backup. By paying more for time when couriers are active on trips, but removing the time when workers have the app open but are not working, the Department would create a more healthy delivery industry in New York City, which does not unfairly favor any companies or force a segment of workers into a business model in which they don't want to participate. Such an approach would not remove an earnings opportunity for thousands of workers who choose to deliver as a side gig, on their own schedule, at different times of day, or days of week—and who do so not by planning ahead, but by logging into the app where and when they have free time to earn.

²⁵⁰ Department Report at 36.

Workers Compensation Allowance

The Proposed Rule includes $1.70 per hour to compensate couriers for the absence of workers' compensation coverage, but contains no requirement for couriers to actually use those funds to purchase this insurance coverage.

Despite conducting numerous surveys, the Department never asked couriers about their wishes or intentions with respect to acquiring workers' compensation coverage. Many workers will undoubtedly keep this amount as earnings, and will not use it to purchase this insurance and get the protections the City is intending. We support safer working conditions for delivery workers, and believe there should be a better structure in place to ensure that couriers have appropriate injury coverage. There are multiple avenues that could be explored as a better way to achieve this objective, rather than simply adding $1.70 per hour to the pay standard based on an assumption that every courier will affirmatively acquire a workers' compensation insurance plan.

For instance, the City could require all third party delivery and third party courier services in the City to provide occupational accident insurance for workers that provide deliveries on their apps—a solution that could be quickly implemented and an effective coverage for injuries that occur while on the job. Second, the City could work with partners at the State level to pass a law that would create a Workers' Compensation Fund for couriers, similar to what already exists for rideshare drivers in New York State via the Black Car Fund.

There surely are many other sensible ways to address the workers' compensation issue. But just adding a uniform per-hour dollar amount to the pay standard is not one of them and will not address the issue the Proposed Rule claims to be addressing.

Implementation Timing

The effective date of the Proposed Rule, January 1, 2023, is far too soon and unrealistic; it should be pushed back to allow for an appropriate dialogue with the public via notice-and-comment and to allow for sensible implementation. The Proposed Rule will have only been public for six weeks by the time it is required to be finalized, 30 days of which is a public hearing period—which leaves the Department with mere days to review, analyze, digest, and amend the Proposed Rule to account for public input, an insufficient period of time to properly respond to the many stakeholders who chose to participate in the public comment process. A rule of this magnitude should not be rushed and merits a much longer runway of review before being finalized. The Council's ordinance called for the establishment of an earnings rule by January 1, 2023; it does not provide that a rule should be implemented by then.

Additionally, while we are more than willing to work closely with the Department during and after the public comment period, it is unrealistic and simply not feasible for our company to implement changes to an earnings standard that would affect tens of thousands of workers by January 1.

This rule is a first of its kind and includes many practical challenges, such as calculated aggregated waiting time and calculating payments across a changing field of drivers to allocate that aggregated waiting time, every single week. It is unlikely that we will even understand the final details until days before the New Year. It is important that companies impacted by this earnings standard can create the proper systems to ensure compliance. Not only will we need to make critical technological changes within the app, but these changes will need to be tested for a period of time to ensure the changes work properly before full deployment, in order to avoid any penalties or fines that could come with errors, as outlined in the Department's penalty schedule that was finalized earlier this year and could result in tens of millions of dollars even for small mistakes.

We respectfully request that whenever the Department establishes a final rule, the Department allows companies a period of 120 days (or at least until May 1, 2023) before the rule's requirements become effective.

EXHIBIT 10

New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection

Notice of Public Hearing and Opportunity to Comment on Proposed Rules

What are we proposing? The Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (“DCWP” or “Department”) is proposing to add rules establishing a method for determining the minimum payments that must be made to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service, as required by New York City Administrative Code § 201522.

When and where is the hearing? DCWP will hold a public hearing on the proposed rule. The public hearing will take place at 11:00am on Friday, December 16. The public hearing will be accessible by phone and videoconference.

- To participate in the public hearing via phone, please dial 646-893-7101 ○ Meeting ID: 257 490 864 03
 - Passcode: Zkw9TY
- To participate in the public hearing via videoconference, please follow the online link:
https://teams.microsoft.com/registration/x2_1MoFflk6pWxXaZIE77w,PgVNkwMwUkqnyO28hSWZzg,UWNLEqQRkkmQAhvngWBSKA,vkv_etaPGkGhR3RuyrCABg.l2D3pBkHsUe9xIW4YB2Bjw,tD0qNaBm_UefIz1J7hVktQ?mode=read&tenantId=32f56fc7-5f81-4e22-a95b-15da66513bef&webinarRing=gcc ○ Meeting ID: 257 490 864 03
 - Passcode: Zkw9TY

How do I comment on the proposed rules? Anyone can comment on the proposed rules by:

- Website. You can submit comments to DCWP through the NYC rules website at <http://rules.cityofnewyork.us>.
- Email. You can email comments to Rulecomments@dcwp.nyc.gov.
- By speaking at the hearing. Anyone who wants to comment on the proposed rule at the public hearing must sign up to speak. You can sign up before the hearing by calling (212) 436-0396. You can also sign up on the phone or videoconference before the hearing begins at 11:00am on Friday, December 16. You can speak for up to three minutes.

Is there a deadline to submit comments? Yes. You must submit any comments to the proposed rule on or before Friday, December 16.

What if I need assistance to participate in the hearing? You must tell DCWP’s External Affairs division if you need a reasonable accommodation of a disability at the hearing. You must tell us if you need a sign language interpreter. You may tell us by telephone at (212) 436-0396 or by email at Rulecomments@dcwp.nyc.gov. Advance notice is requested to allow sufficient time to arrange the accommodation. Please tell us by Wednesday, December 7.

Can I review the comments made on the proposed rules? You can review the comments made online on the proposed rules by going to the website at <http://rules.cityofnewyork.us/>. A few days after the hearing, all comments received by DCWP on the proposed rule will be made available to the public online at <http://www1.nyc.gov/site/dca/about/publichearings-comments.page>.

What authorizes DCWP to make this rule? Sections 1043 and 2203(f) of the New York City Charter and Sections 201506(a), 20-1507(c), and 20-1522(a)(3) and (d) of the New York City Administrative Code authorize the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection to make these proposed rules. The proposed rule was included in the agency's regulatory agenda.

Where can I find DCWP's rules? The Department's rules are in Title 6 of the Rules of the City of New York.

What laws govern the rulemaking process? DCWP must meet the requirements of Section 1043 of the City Charter when creating or changing rules. This notice is made according to the requirements of Section 1043 of the City Charter.

Statement of Basis and Purpose of Proposed Rule

The Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (“DCWP” or “Department”) is proposing a rule to implement Local Law 115 of 2021, which requires DCWP to study the pay and working conditions of food delivery workers and, based on the results of its study, to establish a method for determining the minimum payments that third-party food delivery services and third-party courier services (“apps”) must pay to food delivery workers. See NYC Admin. Code § 20-1501 (defining “food delivery worker,” “third-party food delivery service,” and “third-party courier service”).

DCWP is also proposing rule amendments pursuant to Local Law 114 of 2021, adding recordkeeping and reporting requirements that will allow DCWP to assess apps’ compliance with the minimum pay rate.

The proposed amendments are as follows:

- Section 7-801 to add definitions of “on-call time”, “pay period”, and “trip time;
- Section 7-805 to add the recordkeeping and reporting obligations for a third-party food delivery service or thirdparty courier service;
- Section 7-806 to clarify what constitutes “required” travel across a bridge or through a tunnel;
- Section 7-807 to establish that compensation must be calculated for each pay period; and
- Section 7-810 to set the minimum pay rates, the time periods for which such pay rates apply, the inflation adjustments required for such pay rates, and to provide clarity and examples of how to calculate such pay rates.

Background. The app-based food delivery industry in New York City is dominated by four companies, Uber Eats, DoorDash, Grubhub, and Relay, which account for 99% of all app-based food deliveries within the five boroughs. Despite explosive growth of app delivery in recent years, prior to the passage of Local Law 115 there were no minimum earnings protections for food delivery workers, and the legislative record indicated that these workers faced low pay and high expenses. DCWP was charged by Local Law 115 of 2021 with studying this workforce and developing an appropriate minimum pay rate to ensure adequate compensation for New York City food delivery workers.

Worker Earnings and Expenses. To identify food delivery worker earnings and expenses and establish minimum pay, DCWP economists and data scientists analyzed record-level and aggregate data obtained from apps, received survey responses from over 8,000 food delivery workers and over 350 restaurant operators, conducted interviews with worker advocates, app representatives, and industry experts, and obtained public testimony at a hearing in June 2022. DCWP then developed this minimum pay rule for food delivery workers based on the results of the study. DCWP is publishing a report summarizing the results of the study on its website at nyc.gov/deliveryapps concurrently with this proposed rule, which is incorporated herein by reference.

Summary of Minimum Pay Rule. The proposed rule would establish a minimum pay rate of $23.82 per hour, phased in over two years and subject to inflation adjustments. The rate is applicable to a food delivery worker’s own trip hours and all food delivery workers’ trip hours and on-call hours, in aggregate. This rate represents the sum of a base pay component ($19.86), a workers’ compensation component ($1.70), and an expense component ($2.26).

Base Pay Component. The base pay component of $19.86 per hour is similar to the compensation food delivery workers would receive if they were classified as employees under state and City law. DCWP adopted this amount from the TLC’s minimum payment standard for high-volume for hire vehicle service drivers (“high-volume drivers”), as reflected in TLC’s recent proposed rule. Proposed R.C.N.Y § 59D-22(a). For purposes of the base pay component of the minimum pay rate, there are no meaningful distinctions between food delivery workers and high-volume drivers. Like all low-wage workers in NYC, food delivery workers and high-volume drivers must cover the costs of housing, food and other basic necessities. Adopting the same base pay amount for food delivery workers builds on the City’s existing determination of appropriate compensation for low-wage independent contractors and sets a clear and consistent standard for independent contractors working for apps in related industries in NYC.

The $19.86 base pay component reflects the $15.00 per hour minimum wage applicable to most employees in NYC since December 31, 2018, N.Y. Lab. L. § 652(1)(a), plus adjustments for differences in tax treatment between employees and independent contractors and increases in the cost of living since the TLC minimum payment standard was first implemented in early 2019. Additionally, the $19.86 minimum payment standard for high-volume drivers includes compensation in lieu of paid time off, derived from the Bureau of Labor Statistics' published estimate of average paid time off received by production, transportation and material moving employees, an occupational category which includes both food delivery workers and high-volume drivers. Incorporating an amount in lieu of paid time off within the base pay amount enables food delivery workers to take unpaid time off to rest, recuperate, and address healthcare needs without an undue reduction in annual pay.

The $19.86 base pay component is also very close to the total compensation that apps would be required to provide if they classified their delivery workers as employees. This consists of a base wage of $15.00 per hour, plus the value of paid safe and sick leave benefits, unemployment insurance, health insurance, and federal Medicare and Social Security contributions. This sums to $19.90, and excludes workers' compensation, which is addressed separately in the minimum pay rate.

Workers' Compensation Component. The purpose of the workers' compensation component is to compensate for expected income loss and medical expense associated with on-the-job injuries that food delivery workers experience. Although food delivery workers experience high rates of injury on the job, they do not have access to traditional workers' compensation, as workers classified as employees in New York State do. Unlike high-volume drivers, who have the Black Car Fund, food delivery workers also do not have access to an alternative system for medical care and wage replacement for on-the-job injuries. DCWP calculated the workers' compensation component of $1.70 to provide for comparability to the actuarial value of the workers' compensation coverage received by employed restaurant delivery workers in New York State (7.84% of payroll). The workers' compensation component also includes an adjustment to reflect differences in how federal Medicare and Social Security contributions apply to independent contractor income and employee benefits, to ensure that food delivery workers receive the same value, despite less advantageous tax treatment.

Expense Component. The purpose of the expense component is to compensate food delivery workers for necessary expenses they incur to perform delivery work. The expense component of $2.26 is DCWP's estimate of average hourly expenses for workers who perform deliveries using an electric bicycle ("e-bike"), less the cost of traffic or parking tickets, which are not deductible under IRS rules. E-bike worker expenses fall into two main categories: vehicle expenses and phone expenses. Vehicle expenses include the cost of purchasing an e-bike, batteries, safety equipment and other accessories. Phone expenses include the phone itself and a data plan. Among other reasons, DCWP determined that it is appropriate to base the expense component of the rate on the expenses of e-bike workers because e-bike delivery is the most cost-effective and efficient form of app-based restaurant delivery, and because the proportion of deliveries performed using e-bikes is increasing.

Basis of Pay. To comply with the proposed minimum pay rule, each week an app would have to satisfy two requirements:

- Individual Requirement. Each app's payment to each delivery worker, individually, must meet or exceed the minimum pay rate multiplied by the sum of that worker's own "trip time" during the week.
- Aggregate Requirement. Each app's total payments to its delivery workers, in aggregate, would have to meet or exceed the minimum pay rate multiplied by the sum of these workers' total "trip time" and "on-call time" during the week.

"Trip time" and "on-call time" are defined terms in the rule. This dual approach provides protection to each worker individually, ensures appropriate average pay among the workforce as a whole, and affords each app flexibility to make aggregate payments using a methodology of its choosing while minimizing disruption to current business models. The rule will also incentivize apps to increase the amount of time workers spend engaged in trips and reduce the amount of time workers spend waiting for trip offers.

Inflation Adjustment: To ensure that the rate keeps pace with the cost of living, the proposed rule provides for inflation adjustments to the minimum pay rate on April 1 of every year. DCWP chose the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the New York-New Jersey-Pennsylvania metropolitan area as the most appropriate index to capture changes in NYC delivery workers' cost of living. Though inflation in delivery workers' expenses and workers' compensation coverage may differ from inflation in workers' general cost of living, the proposed rule does not separately adjust each component, but rather applies the chosen index to the entire rate.

Phase-in. The proposed rule provides that the minimum pay rate will phase in over two years, with the rates in 2023 and 2024 representing 75% and 85% of the full rate, respectively. This is modelled on the phase-in of the $15.00 minimum wage in NYC for large employers between 2016 and 2018. This phase-in will provide apps with more time to improve their productivity before bearing the full cost of the minimum pay rate.

Recordkeeping and Reporting Obligations. The proposed rule would require apps to maintain records regarding the compensation paid and time worked by food delivery workers both on an individual and aggregate level. The proposed rules also create reporting requirements for apps to share certain aggregated statistical data with DCWP. These requirements will help DCWP effectively investigate violations of the minimum pay rule, analyze the effect of the minimum payment method and determine whether updates to the minimum payment obligations are warranted.

Sections 1043 and 2203(f) of the New York City Charter and Sections 20-1506(a), 20-1507(c), and 20-1522(a)(3) and (d) of the New York City Administrative Code authorize the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection to make these proposed rules.

New material is underlined.

[Deleted material is in brackets.]

“Shall” and “must” denote mandatory requirements and may be used interchangeably in the rules of this Department, unless otherwise specified or unless the context clearly indicates otherwise.

Proposed Rule Amendments

Subchapter H of Chapter 7 of Title 6 of the Rules of the City of New York is amended to read as follows:

Subchapter H: Third-Party Service Workers § 7-801 Definitions.

(a) As used in this subchapter, the following terms have the following meanings:

- (1) “Deactivation” means a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service ceases to offer shifts or trips to a food delivery worker on a temporary or permanent basis.
- (2) “On-call time” means the time a food delivery worker is connected to a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service’s electronic system for arranging or monitoring trips in a status where the food delivery worker is available to receive or accept trip offers or assignments with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City, and excludes all trip time.
- (3) “Pay period” means a fixed and regularly recurring period of 168 hours or seven consecutive 24-hour periods.

([2]4) “Trip” has the same meaning as set forth in Section 20-1501 of the Administrative Code, provided that a single trip may encompass multiple deliveries.

(5) “Trip time” means the span of time between the moment a food delivery worker accepts an offer from a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service to perform a trip or receives an assignment to perform a trip with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City through the moment a trip is completed or cancelled.

(b) As used in this subchapter, the following terms have the same meanings as set forth in Section 20-1501 of the Administrative Code: “Food delivery worker,” “food service establishment,” “third-party courier service,” and “thirdparty food delivery service.”

§ 7-805 Recordkeeping.

(a) (1) A request or subpoena for information or records from the Department must be served on a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service in writing in person, via mail, or via email. When the Department issues a written request or subpoena for data, information or documents under Section 20-1506(a) of the Administrative Code, a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must provide all responsive data, information, or documents to the Department within thirty (30) days of receiving such request or subpoena.

(2) A deadline of more than 30 days may be agreed to on consent by the Department and the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service.

(3) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must provide data, information or documents to the Department in their original format or, if so requested, in the comma-delimited formats and layouts prescribed by the Department in such written request or subpoena.

(4) The Department may issue a notice of violation to a third-party food delivery service or third party courier service who fails to provide true and accurate electronic records or information by the deadline provided in the written request or subpoena or the deadline agreed to by the parties, provided that any monetary penalties authorized by law for a violation of section 20-1506 of the Administrative Code shall not apply [while]if such written request or subpoena is the subject of a [pending]timely-filed pre-compliance review proceeding.

(b) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must create and maintain contemporaneous, true, and accurate records documenting compliance with the requirements of Chapter 15 of Title 20 of the Administrative Code for a period of three years. If, in the ordinary course of business, any record required to be maintained under this subdivision is created by a person other than such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service, it is the responsibility of such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service to obtain a copy of such record.

(c) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must maintain the data specified in this subdivision, or a copy of such data, according to record layouts prescribed by the Department, provided that such record layouts have been published and made available on the Department’s website. Such data shall include:

(1) With respect to all food delivery workers, first name, last name, phone number, email address, a unique identifier for the worker, preferred language, first date hired, retained or engaged, and last date hired, retained or engaged.

(2) With respect to the notice of rights, data sufficient to show each email or text message containing the notice of rights that was sent to a food delivery worker, the date and time such email or text message was sent, the first name, last name, and a unique identifier of the recipient, and, as applicable, the phone number or email address of the recipient.

(3) With respect to the maximum distance, bridge, or tunnel parameters set or updated under Sections 20-1521(a)-(b) of the Administrative Code, the date, time, and content of every selection of or update to such parameters and the first name, last name, and a unique identifier of the food delivery worker who selected or updated such parameters.

(4) With respect to each trip offered to a food delivery worker:

(i) All information disclosed to a food delivery worker before such worker accepts a trip under Section 20-1521(d) of the Administrative Code, including:

- a. The address(es) where the food, beverage or other goods must be picked up;
 - b. The estimated distance for the trip;
 - c. The estimated time for the trip or, if disclosed in lieu of estimated time for the trip pursuant to 6 RCNY § 7-8067 of this subchapter, the expected or required time of the last drop-off on the trip;
 - d. The amount of any gratuity(ies) specified by the consumer(s); and
 - e. The amount of compensation excluding gratuity to be paid to the food delivery worker for the trip or, if disclosed in lieu of compensation excluding gratuity pursuant to 6 RCNY § 7-8067, the hourly pay rate applicable to the trip;
- (ii) The date and time that the trip offer was made to the food delivery worker;
 - (iii) If different from the date and time that the trip offer was made to the food delivery worker, the date(s) and time(s) that the information required to be disclosed by Section 20-1521(d) of the Administrative Code was first disclosed to a food delivery worker;
 - (iv) Whether the offer was accepted, declined, or expired, and the date and time at which this status was recorded;
 - (v) The route used to generate the estimated trip distance disclosed to a food delivery worker pursuant to Section 201521(d)(2) of the Administrative Code and the date and time it was generated. Such route must include a sequence of latitude and longitude coordinates;
 - (vi) The route distance between the first food service establishment from which the food, beverage or other goods must be picked up on the trip and the last delivery address on the trip;
 - (vii) The address(es) of where the food, beverage or other goods must be picked-up and, for the location(s) to which the food, beverage, or other goods must be delivered, the zip code and the latitude and longitude of the location(s) to which the food, beverage, or other goods must be delivered], accurate to a precision of three decimal places;
 - (viii) The gratuity the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service charged to the consumer(s) for the order(s) on the trip;
 - (ix) The gratuity the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service paid to the food delivery worker for the trip;
 - (x) The compensation, excluding gratuity, paid to the food delivery worker for the trip. If a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service compensates a food delivery worker on an hourly basis, the amount of compensation for a trip is the time between the acceptance of an offered trip and its completion or cancellation, multiplied by the hourly payment rate for that trip;
 - (xi) Whether the trip was completed or cancelled, and the date and time of completion or cancellation; and if cancelled, whether the cancellation was initiated by the food delivery worker, the customer, the business from which the food, beverage, or other good was to be picked-up, or the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service;
 - (xii) The first name, last name, and a unique identifier of the food delivery worker to whom the offer was made; and
 - (xiii) Whether each business from which the food, beverage or other goods must be picked up was a food service establishment.

(5) With respect to each pay[ment to a] period during which a food delivery worker had any trip time:

- (i) The first name, last name, and unique identifier of the food delivery worker receiving payment; [and]
- (ii) The date, [and]time, and amount of any payment[,the start and end date of the pay period, the amount of compensation, and all fees or deductions from compensation, itemized by type.] made to the food delivery worker;
- (iii) The start date and time and end date and time of the pay period;
- (iv) The minutes of trip time worked by the food delivery worker;
- (v) The minutes of on-call time worked by the food delivery worker;
- (vi) The compensation paid to the food delivery worker and the basis for such compensation, including rates of pay and units of pay. Such records must distinguish between (a) compensation creditable towards a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service's obligation under Section 7-810(b) and (c) and any other compensation the food delivery worker may have received;
- (vii) The gratuities paid to the food delivery worker for trips with a pickup or drop off location in New York City;
- (viii) All deductions from, additions to, or adjustments of compensation owed or paid to the food delivery worker, itemized by type.

(6) With respect to each pay period:

- (i) The start date and time and end date and time of the pay period;
- (ii) The total minutes of trip time for all food delivery workers;
- (iii) The total minutes of on-call time for all food delivery workers;
- (iv) The total compensation paid to all food delivery workers. Such records must distinguish between (a) compensation creditable towards a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service's obligation under Section 7-810(b) and (c) any other compensation the food delivery worker may have received.

([6]7) With respect to each insulated food delivery bag provided to a food delivery worker:

- (i) The first name, last name, and a unique identifier of the worker to whom the delivery bag was provided; and
- (ii) The date of provision, and whether provision was by pickup or whether the third-party food delivery service or thirdparty courier service sent the insulated delivery bag to the food delivery worker.

([7]8) With respect to each deactivation of a food delivery worker:

- (i) The first name, last name, and a unique identifier of the worker who was deactivated;
- (ii) The date and time of deactivation;
- (iii) The date and time of reactivation, if applicable;

(iv) The reason for the deactivation; and

(v) Whether the deactivation was effected through an automatic or a manual process.

(9) With respect to each instance in which a food delivery worker is connected to a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service's electronic system for arranging, monitoring, and performing trips:

(i) The first name, last name, and a unique identifier of the food delivery worker;

(ii) The start date and time and end date and time of each span of on-call time;

(iii) The start date and time and end date and time of each span of trip time; and

(iv) The start date and time and end date and time of each span of time that the food delivery worker is connected to such system in any other status, other than on-call time or trip time, itemized by status.

(d) For pay periods that include time before and after the minimum pay rate under Section 7-810 takes effect or changes, the records required to be maintained under Section 7-805(c)(5) or Section 7-805(c)(6) must be maintained separately for the part of the pay period preceding the effective date of the rate or rate change and the part of the pay period covered by the new or changed rate.

(e) In accordance with applicable law and upon receipt of appropriate notice, a third-party food delivery service or thirdparty courier service must produce reports to the Department concerning such third-party food delivery service or thirdparty courier service's operations in New York City for periods beginning on or after January 1, 2022. Such reports may be required by the Department no more frequently than monthly and must be produced in accordance with record layouts prescribed by the Department, provided such record layouts have been published and made available on the Department's website. A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must maintain all records necessary to produce such reports. Such reports must include the following information aggregated at a citywide level and by zip code of the pickup location in New York City, mode of transportation, and merchant line of business:

(i) The number of food delivery workers who engaged in any trip time or on-call time;

(ii) The number of trips with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;

(iii) The minutes of trip time;

(iv) The minutes of on-call time;

(v) The number of trip miles with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;

(vi) The amount paid to food delivery workers, excluding gratuities, creditable towards a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service's obligation under Section 7-810(c);

(vii) The amount of gratuities paid to food delivery workers for trips with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;

(viii) The number of consumers who received at least one delivery with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;

(ix) The number of completed deliveries with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;

(x) The number of cancelled deliveries with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;

(xi) The amount charged to consumers for delivery of food, beverage, or other goods with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City;

(xii) The fees charged to consumers on orders for delivery with a pickup or drop-off location in New York City, itemized by type;

(xiii) The number of merchants in New York City who prepared at least one order for delivery;

(xiv) The delivery fees, payment processing fees, and other fees charged to merchants in New York City, itemized by type.

§ 7-806 Delivery Distance and Route.

(j) For purposes of Section 20-1521(a)(1) - (3) of the Administrative Code and this section, a trip offered to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service requires travel across a bridge or through a tunnel if the shortest route generated by a routing engine selected by the Department for such trip involves passage over such bridge or through such tunnel, unless such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service produces contemporaneous records showing that it provided an alternative route not requiring passage over such bridge or through such tunnel to such food delivery worker and that such route was consistent with the time and distance disclosed under Section 20-1521(d)(2) of the Administrative Code.

§ 7-807 Payments to Workers.

(a) For purposes of Section 20-1523(a) of the Administrative Code, a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service shall be considered to have charged or imposed a fee on a food delivery worker for the use of a form of payment selected by such service if (1) the service does not offer a form of payment to a food delivery worker free from any fees charged or imposed by a financial intermediary or other person or (2) a fee for payment is charged or imposed on a food delivery worker by any parent, affiliate, or subsidiary entity of the third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service.

(b) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must calculate compensation owed to each food delivery worker, and to all food delivery workers, for each pay period. The pay period need not coincide with the calendar week but may begin on any day and at any hour of the day. A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must establish a single pay period for all food delivery workers it engages. Once the beginning time of the pay period is established, it must remain fixed, and may be changed only if the change is intended to be permanent.

(c) [Pursuant to Section 20-1523(b) of the Administrative Code, [A] a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must pay [a food delivery worker for work performed weekly] all compensation owed to each food delivery worker, and to all food delivery workers,[and] no later than seven (7) calendar days after the end of the [week in which the work was performed] relevant pay period.

§ 7-810 Minimum Pay.

(a) When the [d]Department issues a subpoena for data, information or documents under Section [§] 20-1522(a)(2) of the Administrative Code, a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must provide all responsive data, information or documents to the [d]Department within 30 days of receiving such subpoena and, if so requested, in the comma-delimited formats and layouts prescribed by the [d]Department in such subpoena.

(b) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must pay to a food delivery worker who engages in trip time in a pay period no less than the sum of such food delivery worker's trip time in that pay period multiplied by the following minimum pay rates:

(i) $17.87 per hour, on or after January 1, 2023;

(ii) $17.87 per hour, adjusted for inflation, on or after April 1, 2023;

(iii) $20.25 per hour, adjusted for inflation, on or after April 1, 2024, and (iv) $23.82 per hour, adjusted for inflation, on or after April 1, 2025.

(c) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must pay, in aggregate, to the food delivery workers who engaged in trip time or on-call time in a pay period no less than the sum of all such food delivery workers' trip time and on-call time in that pay period multiplied by the following minimum pay rates:

(i) $17.87 per hour, on or after January 1, 2023;

(ii) $17.87 per hour, adjusted for inflation, on or after April 1, 2023; (iii) $20.25 per hour, adjusted for inflation, on or after April 1, 2024, and (iv) $23.82 per hour, adjusted for inflation, on and after April 1, 2025.

(d) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service may fulfill its obligation under subdivision (b) and subdivision (c) of this section using any method it chooses, including paying an hourly rate, a per-trip rate or other piece rate, a bonus or other lump-sum payment, or by any other method.

Example: In a pay period that ends on October 25, 2023, 10,000 food delivery workers, in aggregate, engage in 200,000 hours of trip time and 50,000 hours of on-call time. Worker A, individually, engages in 30 hours of trip time and 5 hours of on-call time.

Payment Method 1: The third-party food delivery service pays its food delivery workers a combination of per-trip payments and end-of-week bonuses. The third-party food delivery service meets the requirements of both subdivision (b) and subdivision (c) of this section if it pays its food delivery workers as follows:

1. Each food delivery worker is paid at least an amount equal to their trip time multiplied by $17.87. For instance, worker A receives at least $536.10, which is $17.87 multiplied by 30 hours; and
2. The total per-trip payments and bonuses the third-party food delivery service pays in the pay period meets or exceeds the aggregate amount of trip time and on-call time (250,000 hours) multiplied by $17.87, which equals $4,445,000. Worker A's payment of at least $536.10 for trip time is credited towards the obligation and Worker A may, or may not, receive an additional payment.

Payment Method 2: The third-party food delivery service pays a fixed hourly rate of $17.87 per hour to each of the 10,000 food delivery workers for trip time and on-call time. The third-party food delivery service meets the requirements of both subdivision (b) and subdivision (c) of this section if it pays its food delivery workers as follows:

1. Worker A receives $625.45, which is $17.87 multiplied by 35 hours; and
2. The total hourly pay issued to all 10,000 food delivery workers for 250,000 hours of trip time and on-call time is $4,467,500.

(e) For purposes of subdivisions (b) and (c) of this section, a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service must calculate time to the nearest whole minute worked.

(f) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service may not use gratuities paid to a food delivery worker to offset such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service's obligation to pay food delivery workers the full amounts required by subdivisions (b) and (c) of this section.

(g) A third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service may not use amounts paid to a food delivery worker for trips with a pickup and drop-off location outside of New York City or performed prior to January 1, 2023 to offset such third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service's obligation to pay the full amounts required by subdivisions (b) and (c) of this section.

(h) The Department shall perform the inflation adjustments required by §7-810(b)(ii) and §7-810(c)(ii) by multiplying $17.87 by the percent change in the All Items Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the NY-NJ-PA metro area between June 2022 and December 2022, provided that if the percentage change is zero or negative, the adjustment shall be zero. The Department shall post the Consumer Price Index adjusted minimum payment rates on its website on or before the first day of February 2023.

(i) The Department shall perform the inflation adjustments required by §7-810(b)(iii) and §7-810(c)(iii) by multiplying $20.25 by the percent change in the All Items Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the NY-NJ-PA metro area between June 2022 and December 2023, provided that if the percentage change is zero or negative, the adjustment shall be zero. The Department shall post the Consumer Price Index adjusted minimum payment rates on its website on or before the first day of February 2024.

(j) The Department shall perform the inflation adjustments required for April 1, 2025 by §7-810(b)(iv) and §7-810(c)(iv) by multiplying $23.82 by the percent change in the All Items Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the NY-NJ-PA metro area between June 2022 and December 2024, provided that if the percentage change is zero or negative, the adjustment shall be zero. The Department shall post the Consumer Price Index adjusted minimum payment rates on its website on or before the first day of February 2025.

(k) Beginning with the minimum payment rate effective April 1, 2026, and continuing each calendar year thereafter, the Department shall post the inflation-adjusted minimum payment rates required by §7-810(b)(iv) and §7-810(c)(iv) on its website on or before the first day of February of the calendar year in which the rate will take effect. Such inflation adjustments will be performed by multiplying the current minimum payment rate by the most recent December to December percent change in the All Items Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers for the NY-NJ-PA metro area, provided that if the percentage change is zero or negative, the adjustment shall be zero.

(l) If the minimum pay rate under Section 7-810 takes effect or changes during a pay period, the prior rate, if any, shall apply to a food delivery worker's trip time or on-call time that occurred before the new rate took effect and the new rate shall apply to a food delivery worker's trip time or on-call time that occurred after the new rate took effect.

(m) For purposes of the timely minimum pay requirement of Section 20-1208(a)(3)(c) of the Administrative Code, payments required under this section shall be made as set forth in section 7-807.

NEW YORK CITY LAW DEPARTMENT
DIVISION OF LEGAL COUNSEL
100 CHURCH STREET
NEW YORK, NY 10007
212-356-4028

CERTIFICATION PURSUANT TO CHARTER §1043(d)

RULE TITLE: Calculation of Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Service Workers

REFERENCE NUMBER: 2022 RG 076

RULEMAKING AGENCY: Department of Consumer and Worker Protection

I certify that this office has reviewed the above-referenced proposed rule as required by section 1043(d) of the New York City Charter, and that the above-referenced proposed rule:

- (i) is drafted so as to accomplish the purpose of the authorizing provisions of law;
- (ii) is not in conflict with other applicable rules;
- (iii) to the extent practicable and appropriate, is narrowly drawn to achieve its stated purpose;
and
- (iv) to the extent practicable and appropriate, contains a statement of basis and purpose that provides a clear explanation of the rule and the requirements imposed by the rule.

/s/ STEVEN GOULDEN
Acting Corporation Counsel

Date: November 2, 2022

NEW YORK CITY MAYOR'S OFFICE OF OPERATIONS

253 BROADWAY, 10th FLOOR

NEW YORK, NY 10007

212-788-1400

CERTIFICATION / ANALYSIS

PURSUANT TO CHARTER SECTION 1043(d)

RULE TITLE: Calculation of Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Service Workers

REFERENCE NUMBER: DCWP-26

RULEMAKING AGENCY: Department of Consumer and Worker Protection

I certify that this office has analyzed the proposed rule referenced above as required by Section 1043(d) of the New York City Charter, and that the proposed rule referenced above:

- (i) Is understandable and written in plain language for the discrete regulated community or communities;
- (ii) Minimizes compliance costs for the discrete regulated community or communities consistent with achieving the stated purpose of the rule; and
- (iii) Does not provide a cure period because it does not establish a violation, modification of a violation, or modification of the penalties associated with a violation.

/s/ Francisco X. Navarro

Mayor's Office of Operations

November 3, 2022

Date

EXHIBIT 11

BEFORE THE NEW YORK CITY DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER AND WORKER PROTECTION

Public hearing to examine the working
Public Hearing: June 15, 2022 conditions of app-based food delivery workers.

COMMENTS OF UBER TECHNOLOGIES, INC.

Hayley Prim 175 Greenwich St.
New York, NY 10001
Email: prim@uber.com

Uber Eats welcomes a continued conversation with the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) on the topic of minimum pay rates for third party delivery workers in New York City. Over the past several years, the process of food delivery has evolved significantly. What used to be a simple relationship between a consumer, food establishment, and delivery person now also includes app-based technology and major national corporations.

The COVID-19 pandemic had a major impact on the food delivery industry in New York. Uber Eats, which prior to 2019, was largely centered around Manhattan and Western Brooklyn, saw a shift both in the customer and worker base to the outer boroughs. And in the first few months after COVID-19 hit New York City, we saw tens of thousands of New Yorkers sign up to deliver using our platform, with the largest increases coming from those who live in the outer rings of the outer boroughs. Additionally, in the same time period it became clear that New Yorkers in traditionally low-income neighborhoods also relied on Uber Eats more than anyone else. Those residents who did not have the flexibility to leave the City, and were forced to stay home due to social distancing concerns turned to Uber Eats to get basic necessities for their families. For example, in the early months of the pandemic we saw a 61% increase in orders in Southeast Queens, a 35% increase in the South Bronx, and an 88% increase in outer Queens. This is compared to the West Village and Upper East Side, where we saw food delivery orders decline.

Restaurants also benefit from Uber Eats. While some third party services simply offer listing or marketing to local merchants, a restaurant can sign on to list their menu on Uber Eats and also have Uber Eats aid in the fulfillment of the orders for the restaurants, including handling all the logistics and facilitating payments to the delivery people for the cost of their delivery services. New York City currently has a commission cap in place, which limits how much we can charge a restaurant, but it's important to recognize that commissions go towards many things, including:

background checks, maintaining safety on the platform, insurance costs, technology services, customer support, and importantly, a portion of the commission goes toward paying the delivery worker who is transporting the food from the merchant to the consumer.

As DCWP conducts its study in order to create a minimum earnings standard for delivery workers, we hope you will consider many key factors as it relates to the current landscape of food delivery in New York City. Uber offers the following testimony for DCWP's consideration:

DCWP Study: As the DCWP continues to collect information to analyze the delivery industry in New York, we believe that any compensation study should consider the food delivery industry as a whole. Third Party Delivery Service (TPDS) and Third Party Courier Service (TPCS) workers provide the same services for consumers as delivery workers that are employed directly by restaurants. Accordingly, the study should include how much the restaurant industry (which food delivery platforms support) pay their delivery drivers, and use that data to help inform the forthcoming earnings standard.

Utilization as a factor: We understand that "utilization" was critical in developing an earnings standard for the High Volume For-Hire Vehicle industry in New York City. However, when the Taxi and Limousine Commission developed the earnings standard for drivers, it was already regulating the for-hire industry and had access to driver's vehicle registrations, drivers licenses, base affiliations and other important information to determine the scale and scope of the industry. Currently, DCWP only requires licenses for TPDS - not TPCS, nor restaurants that employ delivery workers directly, and not the delivery workers themselves. By only requiring licenses of a small segment of the industry, the City is unable to capture the level of detail of data necessary in order to create a minimum earnings standard that would be based around a utilization rate. We believe that a utilization-based standard will not serve the same purposes or address the same needs for the food delivery industry as it did with the transportation industry. Instead of measuring utilization, DCWP should include a factor based on all open time between trips for those couriers it is able to match across platforms or those who rely on one app and maintain high acceptance rates. This factor can be applied to the time when a courier picks up an order at a restaurant to when the job is complete as well as the distance a courier travels from the restaurant to the drop off location.

Gratuities as a factor: While we understand that a minimum payment standard cannot include gratuities as per Local Law 115, the same local law also says that "such study shall include, at minimum, consideration of the pay food delivery workers receive and the methods by which such pay is determined." We know that tips make up a considerable portion of compensation for third party delivery workers similar to other food and other services industry workers in New York City. Accordingly, food service workers in the City are subject to a $10/hr minimum wage and a $5 tip credit, and service workers in the City are subject to a $12.50/hr minimum wage and a $2.50 tip credit. As DCWP continues to analyze this industry, we urge you to create a standard that recognizes that tips are, and will continue to be substantial, as it has been culturally adopted in NYC's food and service industries, including in traditional food delivery.

New Rules Create More Autonomy for Workers: Any earnings standard must take into consideration legislation recently enacted by the City of New York that grants delivery workers increased autonomy. By law, food delivery workers have the ability to:

- See complete information about each trip, including actual earnings and expected tip
- Set parameters determining the distance they are willing to travel
- Accept or reject any trip without negative consequences

These laws were designed to give couriers more choice over the jobs they wish to accept and any future earnings standard must be designed to interact smoothly. For example, setting an artificially high per order minimum may lead to couriers setting low parameters around travel distance. Most importantly, since TPDS are required to show actual earnings on a per trip basis prior to the trip and the time and distance a delivery worker travels will not be known until the trip is complete, an earning standard cannot be implemented on a per trip basis. Instead, the standard should look at all the time and distance a food delivery worker spent delivering food over the course of two weeks and apply the earnings standard over that period.

Fraud: Earnings standards have the potential to increase fraud on platforms. Any earnings standard must therefore limit opportunities for bad actors to commit fraud, and fraud may come in many forms. For example, an earnings standard that fails to address fraud incentivizes bad actors to unreasonably delay deliveries in order to exact illegitimate earnings. Unreasonably delayed deliveries may come in the form of workers unnecessarily prolonging the time spent traveling to a restaurant to pick up an order, and/or prolonging the time it takes to deliver the order to the waiting customer. As another example of fraud, a fraudulent courier may travel to a restaurant, collect the order, and then cancel the delivery. It should go without saying that such couriers should not be mandated payment for a delivery that doesn't occur. As can be seen from these examples and others, an earnings standard silent on fraud, in effect, encourages fraud. Such fraud is not only costly, but it negatively impacts restaurants, customers, and other couriers in NYC. In order to reduce the avenues for fraud, an earnings standard should permit app-based companies to take reasonable measures to address fraud in its many forms, including providing app-based companies with the ability to withhold driver payments and suspend couriers while suspected fraud is investigated, and to deactivate couriers who are found to have acted fraudulently.

Batched Orders: DCWP should encourage batched orders which increase utilization and trips by not double counting time and distance on delivery trips that include batched orders. By doing this, companies will be incentivized to bundle deliveries together that are going from one restaurant to destinations in the same areas of the City. This would improve operations for restaurants as restaurants would be able to interact with fewer individual delivery workers to move meals to multiple consumers, and create a smoother operation for workers, who will be able to stop at fewer restaurants and complete more deliveries. As order density increases, batching makes the marketplace more efficient by keeping delivery partner ETAs lower and freeing up more capacity.

Uber

Commission Caps for Restaurants: Last fall, the New York City Council passed a permanent commission cap on TPDS regulating the fees they are able to charge to restaurants who list their menus on their apps. Once the DCWP finalizes an earnings standard for delivery workers, TPDS will have set prices on two of the three sides of the marketplace, thereby forcing additional costs onto consumers. We believe restaurants should have the option to absorb additional costs instead of forcing them on their customer base as this allows them to preserve consumer demand and opt into additional services that could be beneficial to them and their operations.

BEFORE THE NEW YORK CITY DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER AND WORKER PROTECTION

Second Proposed Rule on Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers

Public Hearing: April 7, 2023

ADDITIONAL SUPPLEMENTAL COMMENTS OF UBER TECHNOLOGIES, INC.

Josh Gold
3 World Trade Center
175 Greenwich Street
New York, NY 10001
Email: jgold@uber.com

April 7, 2023

INTRODUCTION

The New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (the “Department”) has published an amended rule to establish minimum payments for food delivery couriers (the “Second Proposed Rule”), revising a prior iteration proposed in November 2022 (the “First Proposed Rule”). Just a few days before the public hearing on the Second Proposed Rule was set and comments on the Rule were due to be submitted, the Department produced 34 PDF files containing at least part of the Department’s modeling, written in the coding language “R,” underlying the First Proposed Rule (the “Model”), nearly four months after Uber’s November 29, 2022 request. Uber’s request for the modeling underlying the Second Proposed Rule remains outstanding, notwithstanding that a hearing on the Second Proposed Rule occurred earlier today.²⁵¹ As Uber previously commented, this Department's failure to produce the modeling underlying the Second Proposed Rule and the Department's decision-making deprives commenters of the opportunity to verify and meaningfully comment on the Department's expectations of the impact of the Second Proposed Rule on the industry.

Even the limited analysis of the Model underlying the First Proposed Rule that Uber had a couple days to do, based on the opaque computer code that requires experts to understand, confirms that the Department has not adequately considered the impact of its rule and has arbitrarily selected favorable assumptions that minimize the estimated adverse consequences. In fact, while the Model incorporated a number of different assumptions, there were no tests disclosed of assumptions that would have portrayed worse outcomes for New Yorkers. For instance, had the Department tested a price elasticity equal to the USDA's estimate of the price elasticity of in-person dining, the estimated reduction in demand would have been more than double the Department's estimated impact.

The Department's Utilization Assumptions Fail to Account for the Interconnection Between Trips Per Hour and Wait Time

The Second Proposed Rule includes strong incentives for apps to achieve high trips per hour and also to achieve high levels of utilization, including levels above 60%. Both have real world impacts the Department did not seem to consider and did not discuss. For example, achieving high trips per hour, such as the 1.93 per hour the Department assumes, likely requires shrinking the radius around restaurants where delivery is available. This in turn means that ²⁵¹ As Uber previously commented, this Department's failure to produce the modeling underlying the Second Proposed Rule and the Department's decision-making deprives commenters of the opportunity to verify and meaningfully comment on the Department's expectations of the impact of the Second Proposed Rule on the industry. Uber's April 5, 2023 Comment § I.

restaurants will likely lose a good part of their customer base. The Department did not consider this in making its overall assumptions about reduced demand and total growth of the industry over the course of the next three years. Couriers will also have to perform the steps associated with pick up and drop off more frequently—steps like locating a restaurant, locking up their bikes, and locating drop off points and consumers. Couriers may prefer reducing the number of trips they must perform, but will be forced into only accepting short trips, taking away their flexibility.

Furthermore the Department has not adequately considered the practical ability to achieve utilization rates above 60%, and the impact that doing so may have. Achieving a high utilization rate inevitably requires fewer couriers, which in turn means couriers are spread further apart, necessarily increasing wait times and harming customer demand and experience. In short, the fewer “on call” couriers there are in a particular area, the longer the expected distance to the restaurant pick up location, and longer the time required. In lower demand periods such as the lunch hour, delivering orders quickly and within wait times acceptable to consumers is even more challenging. This is especially so if, as assumed by the Department, utilization is to be kept at high levels at all times.

This risk is of particular concern in “less-dense areas, which may not consistently have high delivery volume.”²⁵² For instance, Cindy Estrada, the Executive Director at the New York City Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, noted: “If, as expected, these rules force platforms to adjust their operations, it’s likely they would need to restrict opportunities for delivery workers in certain areas to help cut down on costs, making it even harder for many restaurants to fulfill the orders they need to stay open. For many of our member restaurants located in Harlem, the Upper West Side, Washington Heights and the Bronx, this proposed rule could significantly impair their ability to offer delivery services at all.”²⁵³ The Department’s failure to fully consider, disclose and explain its analysis of such unintended consequences related to shrinking delivery radius and increasing wait times in its modeling or otherwise reflects the arbitrary decision-making process it is following. The Department should instead look to alternatives, ensuring that restaurants, couriers, and apps do not suffer harm as a result of a rule intended to protect couriers.

²⁵² Cindy Estrada, “NYC must brace for impacts of new minimum pay rate for food deliverers,” AMNY (Apr. 6, 2023), <https://www.amny.com/opinion/new-york-city-irreversible-impacts-minimum-wage-delivery-workers/>.

The Department’s Elasticity Assumptions Likely Understate the Impact of the Second Proposed Rule

The Model assumes an elasticity of demand of 1.0.²⁵⁴ Yet, as commenters have already explained to the Department, “the assumption of perfect 1:1 elasticity of demand with respect to price has a significant impact on the Model’s outputs, and even relatively small adjustments to that assumption can cause the Department’s explanations of anticipated economic outcomes to fall apart.”²⁵⁵ For example, “if all of the Department’s assumptions are correct except that elasticity is in fact 1.5, demand would drop by 26.9% based on the 2025 rates, 9 percentage points greater than under the Department’s assumptions.”²⁵⁶ Moreover, as the Model reveals, there is no indication that it accounted for any instance in which there is a higher elasticity. The Department’s low estimate of elasticity, as well as their failure to increase any range of possibilities, reflects an arbitrary and unreasonable rulemaking process.

²⁵³ Id.

²⁵⁴ Uber’s April 5, 2023 Comment, Ex. 5, “A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC” at 5.

²⁵⁵ Uber’s December 16, 2022 Comment at 27.

²⁵⁶ Uber’s April 5, 2023 Comment at 14.

Moreover, this assumed elasticity is unlikely to be accurate. For example, the USDA estimates the price elasticity of restaurant meals to be 2.3, highly elastic compared to grocery shopping.²⁵⁷ There is no reason to think that price elasticity of demand for food delivery services would be low. Indeed, food delivery services probably have a higher elasticity of demand than staple goods.²⁵⁸

Incidence Model	Productivity (deliveries per hour)	Elasticity = 1.0	Elasticity = 1.5	Elasticity = 2.0	Elasticity = 3.0
		% change in orders
Model A	2.50	-15.6%	-23.5%	-31.3%	-46.9%
Model C	1.63	-31.0%	-46.5%	-62.0%	-93.0%
Lower productivity assumption	1.50	-34.8%	-52.3%	-69.7%	-104.5%

If the Department’s assumption is wrong, and the elasticity of demand is in fact higher, then the Department is significantly understating—and therefore failing to account for—the negative impacts of the Second Proposed Rule. For example, if elasticity is 1.5 or 2, demand would drop by 23.5% or 31.3% under a scenario in which couriers can achieve 2.50 deliveries per hour. The impact on demand is even greater if the actual elasticity of demand is closer to the USDA’s estimate of 2.3 for restaurant meals. And, as previously explained, the impacts become significantly more severe if productivity does not increase as the Department predicts. For instance, if productivity remains flat and there is an elasticity of 2.0, there would be a 62.0% decrease in orders according to the Department’s own Model.

²⁵⁷ See FoodServiceIP, “Responding to Higher Food, Labor Costs in 2021” (Apr. 15, 2021), <https://foodserviceip.com/responding-to-higher-food-labor-costs-in-2021/#:~:text=Restaurant%20Dining%20is%20Highly%20Price%20Elastic&text=In%20economics%20terms%2C%20this%20means,elasticity%20of%20demand%20is%20one.>

²⁵⁸ Gregory Mankiw, Principles of Economics 90 (7th ed. 2014).

The Department Relies on Arbitrary and Unrealistic Assumptions In Its Model

In part because the Department has now produced part of the Model underlying the First Proposed Rule, Uber has learned that the Department has made unrealistic assumptions that downplay (to zero) how much restaurants currently benefit from food delivery services, and that industry growth will continue at the same rate as previous years. Both assumptions are unfounded and warp the outcomes predicted by the Model.

First, the Department wrongly assumes that apps will charge restaurants the maximum allowed commission rate of 23% and that restaurants earn a margin of 0% on delivery sales. The upshot is that the Department's assumptions would mean that, if delivery orders were to decrease significantly (as even the Department expects they will), restaurants would be ambivalent or might even see an increase in profits. That is false and defies logic. Fewer deliveries means less revenue and lower profits for small businesses. Restaurants would not bother to accept delivery orders if their margins were 0%. And according to a recent nationwide survey, single, local, independent businesses responded that Uber Eats increased their revenue (by an average of 15%), and 86% responded that Uber Eats has been helpful to their bottom line.²⁵⁹ By using clearly false assumptions, the Department ignores what would be a seriously negative impact on the restaurant industry and warps the model's outcomes.

Second, the Model assumes that the industry growth rate will be 17%, based on historical trends during the COVID-19 pandemic. Making such an assumption allows the Department to brush off some of the large negative effects under even their own modeling, such as an approximately 30% reduction in order volumes (and which may be even greater under more realistic assumptions of productivity and elasticity, as discussed above). The Department is banking heavily on such assumptions, and if it is wrong, it will be more difficult for couriers, restaurants, and apps to absorb the decrease in demand that would accompany the minimum pay rate. The Department's failure to address this and other realities in its Model again reflects the arbitrary and unreasoned decision-making process it has engaged in.

²⁵⁹ Uber Eats, "Supporting merchants in business growth and in times of need" (Jan. 10, 2022), available at <https://www.uber.com/newsroom/supporting-merchants-in-business-growth-and-in-times-of-need/>.

CONCLUSION

The Department has rushed ahead to establish a minimum pay rate without adequately considering the likely impact of such a rule or how it will impact the industry. Moreover, the Department withheld the modeling underlying its analysis for months, releasing it just days before the public hearing on the Second Proposed Rule. The opaque and incomplete modeling that was released mere days ago has revealed serious issues with the assumptions underlying the Model and the Department's failure to consider unfavorable assumptions. Based on the serious concerns detailed above and in Uber's prior comments, it is imperative that the Department fully consider the impact of the Second Proposed Rule, and the issues raised herein, before taking further action.

To the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection,

The New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (the “Department”) has published an amended rule to establish minimum payments for food delivery couriers (the “Second Proposed Rule”), updating a methodology originally set forth in, and responding to public comments on, a rule proposed in November 2022 (the “First Proposed Rule”). Uber requested all documents and modeling underlying the rule very soon after the Proposed Rule was issued, via Freedom of Information Law request FOIL-2022-86600509, dated November 29, 2022. On April 3, 2023, just a few days before the public hearing on the Second Proposed Rule was set and comments on the Rule were due to be submitted, the Department produced to Uber only 34 PDF files containing part of the Department’s modeling, written in the coding language “R,” and apparently underlying the First Proposed Rule.

Not only was the code produced at the last minute—more than four months after it was first requested pursuant to the Freedom of Information Law—but it was produced to Uber only and without annotation, explanation, or documentation of how (if at all) the files relate to the Department’s Report or the Proposed Rule. The Department produced its model in a non-editable PDF form (not a form in which Uber understands such documents are normally stored or maintained), with computer code requiring specialized economic expertise and computing skills to interpret how it works and on what assumptions it relies.

The Department’s decision to withhold this cache of information about its model until mere days before the hearing has prevented members of the public who wish to comment on the Proposed Rule from reviewing critical materials, understanding what assumptions the Department made or did not make and tested or did not test, and providing comments based on that review. Nor has the Department provided the modeling underlying the Second Proposed Rule. The Department should therefore immediately produce the modeling underlying the Second Proposed Rule, and all of the documentation for the modeling it has produced so far, and delay any adoption of the Proposed Rule for at least 60 days after it produces such documents, and in any event at least 60 days after the April 7 public hearing (i.e., the Department should adopt the rule no earlier than June 6, 2023). Only then will the Department provide the public meaningful opportunity to review this previously-secret tranche of data that should have been disclosed at the outset of the rulemaking process.

We urge the Department to postpone any adoption of the Proposed Rule until at least June 6, 2023. We request that the Department please provide us, and the public, with its position on the matters raised in this letter as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

/s/ Joshua Gold

Joshua Gold
Uber Technologies, Inc.
April 7, 2023

Commissioner Vilda Vera Mayuga
NYC Department of Consumer & Worker Protection (DCWP)
42 Broadway #5
New York, NY 10004
Via email: Rulecomments@dcwp.nyc.gov

April 7, 2023

Grubhub Holdings Inc. (“Grubhub”) is pleased to submit the following comments to the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection concerning the revised proposed rules establishing a method for determining the minimum payments that must be made to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service, as required by New York City Administrative Code § 20-1522.

Grubhub strongly supports higher wages for workers as part of its longstanding commitment to our delivery partners. We submit these comments to offer a substitute recommendation to DCWP’s “Alternative Method” and to highlight portions of the proposed rules that are beyond the scope of the legislation, have serious unintended consequences, or are unnecessarily burdensome — presenting significant operational difficulties. If you have any questions or would like to discuss these comments further, please contact Joshua Bocian, Senior Government Affairs Manager, at jbocian@grubhub.com.

A Holistic Approach to Supporting & Protecting Delivery Partners

Grubhub has always been on the side of workers; our delivery partners are essential to New York City’s businesses and communities. We were proud to be the only delivery company that supported the initial package of bills designed to protect the rights of workers for any app, and we support higher wages for workers. These measures included important new policies to protect drivers, including mandating paying delivery partners once a week and providing disclosures to driver partners about route, pay and gratuities. The legislation we supported also charged DCWP with creating a minimum pay model for our city’s delivery couriers.

Independent of regulatory requirements, Grubhub has taken additional steps to protect our delivery partners. Through our Driver Safety Council, our team holds regular discussions with active Grubhub delivery partners regarding how we can ensure each feels safe while delivering orders. Direct input helps us continuously improve our current policies and procedures, which include but are not limited to the following:

- Leveraging our in-app messaging system, we inform delivery partners of any weather conditions, safety alerts or large scale events that might impact their ability to navigate the city and safely perform their work.
- In extreme weather events, we evaluate possible market closures on a case-by-base basis in partnership with local officials, restaurants and delivery partners themselves.
- We have a special Care team dedicated to addressing the specific needs of Deliveristas in NYC; i.e. onboarding, care, safety, fraud, tax, or other issues.
- In all events, if a delivery partner feels they cannot safely complete a delivery, they always have the option to decline or reject an order without any penalty.
- In collaboration with RapidSOS, the Grubhub for Drivers App will now digitally route critical data to the nearest 911 center. It does so via three new features that are accessible to delivery partners when they hit the SOS Button in the Safety Services section: 911 Slider, Safety Agent Call, and Safety Agent Text.

App-based delivery is different from conventional work. Attempts to compare the entrepreneurs who earn their wages as delivery partners to workers in conventional work environments are typically inaccurate. The choice, flexibility and control our delivery partners have over how, where and when they work is unparalleled. Delivery partners can work one hour or 100 hours or 1000 hours with Grubhub. They can set their own schedule and stop whenever they want, wherever they want. Driver partners can return to deliveries the next day, the next week or the next month, or not at all. Additionally, unlike conventional jobs, they don't have to wait weeks to get paid, if they choose to, they can use our same day payout feature and get paid within 24 hours, eliminating any long waits for paychecks.

Exceeding the DCWP Mandate and Imposing Unintended Consequences

Unfortunately, the DCWP proposed rules continue to exceed the mandate laid out for the agency, which was to study the pay and working conditions of food delivery workers. Based on the results of its study, DCWP was to establish a method for determining the minimum payments that third-party food delivery services and third-party courier services (“apps”) must pay to food delivery workers. Below, we outline the ways in which we believe that that DCWP has gone beyond the scope of its mandate by proposing rules that 1) treat delivery workers and third-party delivery companies unequally; 2) limit flexibility and impose other negative ramifications for workers; 3) encourage driver fraud; and 4) create burdensome conditions on restaurant owners in New York as well as unfairly harm the industry.

In addition to these far-reaching impacts that are outside the scope of DCWP's mandate, we detail below our concerns with flaws both in the Standard Method and Alternative Method as proposed by the new draft rules, prompting us to develop a substitute recommendation for the Alternative Method.

New Rules Should Apply to All Delivery Workers

The rules as written only apply to certain third-party delivery companies, and not to others, including Instacart, Shipt, or GoPuff. If the DCWP intends to create fair wages among delivery drivers then the wage and pay scheme should apply across all 35 registered delivery platforms that work within NYC. The DCWP's current proposal unfairly targets one group of third-party delivery companies without justification.

Negative Impact on Drivers

At a time when businesses that provide conventional earning opportunities are struggling to find workers, people are flocking to become Grubhub delivery partners. Currently, Grubhub has a 14,000 person waiting list of interested people across the five boroughs who want to carry out deliveries. This is because Grubhub's delivery partners value the strong wages, flexibility, choice and ease to work when, how and where they want. The DCWP proposed rules meddle with an earning structure that is working and can suit nearly every individual. As stated above, the rules would force impacted companies to implement policies that would virtually eliminate the very flexibility driver partners are drawn to. More specifically, we believe that implementation of these rules would diminish work opportunities for more than 40 percent of delivery partners, thereby slashing earning opportunities for thousands of New Yorkers.

It is also worth noting that well over half of our delivery partners already make at least $24 an hour (including tips). The rules, including the on-call time requirement, would result in increased costs that would necessarily be passed on to consumers, resulting in lower tips to drivers and less business for local merchants because orders would go down. This is because when consumer fees go up they tip less, resulting in less income for drivers. Customers also end up ordering less resulting in lower order volumes and less work for driver partners.

Finally, we are concerned that the forced collection and reporting of drivers' sensitive personal information coupled with trip data will adversely impact the safety and privacy of driver partners, especially our immigrant delivery partners.

Potential for Driver Fraud

As currently drafted, the rules encourage common fraud tactics. As one example, in the case of canceled orders, companies are required to pay delivery partners for all trip time up to the point of order cancellation, including scenarios such as when drivers accept a delivery and then sit for long lengths of time only to “cancel” or reassign the order. Grubhub urges DCWP to exclude from trip time any time during which an app-based driver abandons performance of the service prior to completion. In addition, apps should be permitted to exclude trip time if doing so is reasonably necessary to remedy or prevent fraudulent use of the app platform. Absent these protections, any delivery partner may accept an order, do nothing and collect payment under trip time. Grubhub would be happy to work with the DCWP to create an amenable framework to combat fraud in platform workers.

Onerous Burden on Restaurants and the Industry

While the DCWP is seeking to advance this proposal, operating costs are soaring for everyone – customers, businesses and drivers. The DCWP rules will further lower order volumes as we have already seen following the adoption of Prop 22 in California and would thus drive fewer sales for restaurants.

New York City has already capped the service fees companies can charge by instituting a permanent price control on the fees Grubhub and other third-party delivery apps can charge restaurants for a range of marketing and promotional services. Because of this arbitrary and unconstitutional service fee cap, Grubhub has been forced to increase prices to consumers and still operates at a loss. The DCWP’s latest proposal would add yet another massive expense on an ecosystem of consumers, restaurants, and related businesses that are still recovering from the impact of the COVID crisis, ongoing inflation, rising costs, unpredictable consumer demand and the inability to adjust to market demand due to the city-implemented service fee caps.

Flaws in Both the Standard and Alternative Methods

The revised draft rule offers two methods for calculating worker pay — the Standard and Alternative methods. We have concerns with both methods:

Standard Method

The most concerning requirement in the Standard Method is the aggregated pay requirement for “On-call Time” in the Standard Method (which was the only option in the original draft rule). Requiring delivery apps to pay delivery partners for “On-call Time” is impractical. This is because the entrepreneurs that are drawn to independent work are often actively toggled on to multiple apps at once. This practice, known as “multi-apping,” is how app-based earners maximize their time and their earnings. “Multi-apping” allows a driver to sit idle on several apps while they wait for an order to come through, compare orders from multiple apps at once and/or leave multiple apps open while they carry out a delivery or multiple deliveries for the same or different platforms simultaneously.

The requirement that apps include "On-call Time" in aggregated pay would make multiple companies pay a delivery partner for the same time, whether or not there is work being done. This would force companies to take drastic action to reduce multi-apping, dramatically harming delivery drivers by restricting choice, earning opportunities and flexibility.

The DCWP released driver surveys and the proposed rules reflect a desire to reduce the time a driver must wait for a delivery assignment through the app. Grubhub's pay structure for delivery partners already takes this into account and is clearly successful based on the demand by individuals seeking to deliver on our platform and the strong retention rates we have with our delivery partners. In addition, Grubhub already takes a number of steps through in-app features that allow the driver to see in real time a heat map of order volume. Grubhub would be happy to work with DCWP to find additional avenues for addressing this concern without compromising the choice and flexibility our driver partners value.

Alternative Method

Based on the irresolvable issues with the Standard Method, Grubhub would be forced to select the Alternative Method as outlined in the revised draft rule — which even DCWP acknowledges in the revised draft that it expects us to choose.

The Alternative Method was added to address concerns raised by delivery workers and platforms that the Standard Method – which was the only pay option under the initial draft rule – required platforms to pay for time that isn't synonymous with working time and incentivized platforms to restrict valued delivery worker flexibility.

Unfortunately, the addition of the Alternative Method of payment does not solve these issues because the pay rate required under the method is so far out of line with standard pay practices. Specifically, requiring platforms to pay $29.93 per hour (increasing to $33.27 per hour in 2025) makes this option unsustainable in the long term because of the negative impacts of high costs on consumers, restaurants, and local businesses. Already operating at a loss in NYC due to illegal fee caps, Grubhub will be forced to make decisions to offset some of those losses. These decisions would negatively impact a driver's flexibility or even access to our platform altogether.

Underlying the required pay rate in the Alternative Method is the use of a multiplier that is based on current engaged time on the app. This is a flawed calculation because Grubhub’s current model allows for as many delivery partners to be on the platform as possible at the same time — empowering them to choose the deliveries that best work for them and their schedules. Under the Alternative Method, we would be forced to fully manage their engaged time on the app. This would result in fewer delivery partners on the platform at any given time, eliminating the very flexibility they seek in choosing to work with us.

With this in mind, we developed a recommended multiplier rate, detailed below, that would maintain delivery partner flexibility and be sustainable.

Recommended Revision to Alternative Method

Due to our concerns with both the Standard and Alternative Method, we propose a substitute recommendation that can be derived from the DCWP study, and addresses some of our concerns with online time.

1.15 MULTIPLIER + REDUCED PAY RATE

- Final Engaged Time Pay Rate:
 - 2023: $20.76 per hour, approximately $0.34 per minute
 - 2024: $21.92 per hour, approximately $0.37 per minute
 - 2025: $23.07 per hour, approximately $0.38 per minute
- Underlying 2025 Pay Rate: $19.96 per hour
 - Same underlying pay rate as aggregate pay model under revised draft rule
- Multiplier: 1.156
 - Average 4 minutes between offers
 - 2.03 trips per hour
 - Average trip duration excluding wait time: 29.6 minutes - 4 minutes = 25.6 minutes
 - $29.6 \text{ minutes} / 25.6 \text{ minutes} = 1.156$

Conclusion: We Are Committed to Working with DCWP to Get This Right

Grubhub has faith in the process of good governance, which is why we met with the DCWP to provide input on the rules language when it was being drafted. During that meeting, we were told that the agency interpreted its directive, as laid out in the legislation, as crafting a pay model that would include a minimum earning amount and a per mile amount to offset “wear and tear costs.” We were shocked to see this rule land so far beyond the directive of the original legislation and the agency goals as stated in that meeting.

Grubhub cannot support this revised draft proposal as written.

We ask the DCWP to take very seriously the unintended impact that “On-call Time” could have on New York’s delivery drivers and not upend independent work for thousands by moving forward a rule that includes “On-call Time” as part of the pay model. Delivery partners are essential to Grubhub and our communities. We take pride in their work and want to maximize their earnings opportunities.

We hope that you consider the suggestions outlined above to: 1. Include our suggestions in expanding the rules to cover all app-based delivery earners; 2. To delete “On-call Time” as compensable; 3. Address potential fraud; and 4. Eliminate any language regarding disclosure of personal information that would impact driver privacy and safety. And that you consider amending the areas that comprise driver safety and privacy by forcing the collection and mandating the release of driver partners’ personal information and travel data.

Grubhub looks forward to continuing working with DCWP to make sure the City is a safe and equitable place for all workers.

###

April 7, 2023

Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
City of New York
42 Broadway
New York, NY 10004

RE: Summary of Comments on Revised Proposed Rule to Implement Local Law 115 of 2021

Dear Commissioner Mayuga:

On behalf of DoorDash, I am writing to provide this summary outlining our primary concern with the revised proposed rules issued by the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (“the Agency”) to implement Local Law 115 of 2021 and establish minimum pay requirements for food delivery workers. We will be submitting an additional, comprehensive comment on the revised proposed rule as part of the hearing.

Requirements of Revised Proposed Rule

Under the revised proposed rule, platforms are provided with two options for satisfying minimum pay obligations for delivery workers:

- Standard Method: Platforms are required to ensure that delivery workers across the platform earn at least $19.96 per hour for all time the app is open, including online time (the app is open but not working on a delivery) and trip time (time spent actively on delivery).
- Alternative Method: Platforms are required to ensure that a delivery worker earns at least $33.27 per hour²⁶⁰ for trip time only.

The pay rates for these methods phase in fully in 2025, and start at $17.96 and $29.93, respectively, in 2023.

Primary Concerns with Revised Proposed Rule:

- Both options require platforms to pay for non-work time: One of our biggest concerns with the initial proposed rule was that it requires platforms to pay for all time that workers are online. Under the existing flexible work model, there is no requirement to work while online and delivery workers are free to accept or decline any delivery offer provided. Indeed, the Agency’s study found that workers are far more likely to reject, rather than accept, offers for work. Despite online time being dissimilar from working time, both the pay options under revised proposed rule requires platforms to compensate for this time, just in different ways:

²⁶⁰ Under the revised proposed rule, the alternative minimum pay rate is calculated by dividing the standard pay rate ($19.96) by 0.6, which reflects the average purported utilization rate of DoorDash, Grubhub, and Uber Eats. $$19.96 / 0.6 = \33.27 per hour.

the Standard Method requires platforms to pay for online time directly and the Alternative Methods increases the pay applicable to trip time to compensate a worker for historic, estimated online time.

- The impacts of a $33-per-hour alternative minimum pay rate on consumers, restaurants, and local businesses are unsustainable in the long term. Under the revised proposed rule, a platform that wants to choose the pay option that is meant to preserve delivery worker flexibility is required to ensure that workers earn at least $33.27 per hour for time spent on delivery. This extreme pay rate – more than double NYC’s $15.00 per hour minimum wage – will likely necessitate significant cost increases for consumers. Even the Agency’s delivery worker study acknowledges that platforms may need to raise consumer fees by more than $5 per delivery to offset costs from the proposed rule. In turn, many NYC families won’t be able to afford delivery services, leading to a drastic decline in orders. If DoorDash needs to pass along the full cost of these new pay requirements under existing operations, we estimate as much as $233 million per year in lost revenue for NYC restaurants and other local businesses based on historical data.
- Impacts of $33-per-hour alternative minimum pay rate will force platforms to move to the Standard Method, harming valued delivery worker flexibility. The significant costs for consumers and lost revenue for restaurants stemming from the extreme pay rate under the Alternative Method is unsustainable long-term. As a result, platforms will be forced to move to the Standard Method – the pay option from the initial proposed rule. Under this option, platforms are forced to reduce the amount of time that delivery workers spend online. In practice, this means severe restrictions on valued delivery worker flexibility, and many workers may no longer be able to access earnings opportunities through the platform at all.

Recommended Policy to Make Alternative Method Sustainable:

- The final rule should adopt a different alternative minimum pay rate that compensates for necessary wait time. Under the Alternative Method, the standard pay rate ($19.96) should be increased to reflect necessary waiting time rather than all online time where a worker may be working another job, rejecting offers in hopes of a superior offer in the future, or not interested in performing services altogether. Using data from platforms, the Agency could identify a static, industry-wide multiplier to determine a different alternative minimum pay rate.
- Using data from the Agency’s study, the final rule could adopt an alternative minimum pay rate of $23.07 per hour. The data and assumptions in the Agency’s study allow us to calculate a multiplier of 1.156. Specifically, the Agency’s study determined that workers receive offers every 4 minutes on average and that delivery workers on e-bikes do 2.03 deliveries per hour. This means the average trip duration is 29.6 minutes² including waiting time and 25.6 minutes excluding waiting time.³ Based on these findings, increasing pay applicable to trip time by a multiple of 1.156 would compensate for workers’ estimated waiting time. Applying this multiplier to the standard pay rate ($$19.96 \times 1.156$) results in an alternative minimum pay rate of $23.07.

² 60 minutes / 2.03 deliveries per hour = 29.6 minutes per trip including wait times.

³ 29.6 minutes of total trip duration - 4 minutes of waiting time = 25.6 minutes of trip duration excluding waiting time.

- Using data from the Agency’s study and allowing for some rejected offers, the final rule could adopt an alternative minimum pay rate of $25.03 per hour. If the Agency believes that the estimated necessary wait time multiplier based on the 4-minute average wait time between offers is too strict, the Agency could instead define necessary wait time to include time to reject some reasonable amount of offers. For example, the Agency could define necessary wait time to include time rejecting one in three offers. Under this approach, the Agency would follow the same process to calculate the multiplier as outlined above, but use 6 minutes instead of 4 minutes.⁴ This would result in a multiplier of 1.254⁵, and an alternative minimum pay rate of $25.03 per hour ($19.96 x 1.254).
- This approach makes the alternative method a sustainable option long-term and mitigates adverse impacts. This formula for the alternative minimum pay rate guarantees that food delivery workers have robust minimum pay protections – at least 54% higher than NYC’s minimum wage for employees – for time most synonymous with working time. It also helps preserve valued flexibility for delivery workers by establishing a more sustainable alternative pay rate rather than forcing platforms into the Standard Method.

* * *

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments as the Agency undertakes this rulemaking and for your consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

Sascha Owen
Senior Manager of Government Relations for New York

⁴ 60 minutes / 4 minutes between offers on average = 15 offers per hour; 15 offers per hour / 3 = 5 rejected offers per hour; 60 minutes / 10 offers per hour = 6 minutes. ⁵

60 minutes / 2.03 deliveries per hour = 29.6 minutes per trip including wait times; 29.6 minutes of total trip duration - 6 minutes of waiting time = 23.6 minutes of trip duration excluding waiting time; 29.6 minutes in total trip duration / 23.6 minutes in trip duration excluding wait time = 1.254.

April 7, 2023

Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
City of New York
42 Broadway
New York, NY 10004

RE: Comments on Revised Proposed Rule to Implement Local Law 115 of 2021

Dear Commissioner Mayuga:

On behalf of DoorDash, I am writing to provide comments on the revised proposed rule issued by the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (“the Agency”) to implement Local Law 115 of 2021 and establish minimum pay requirements for food delivery workers.

DoorDash is a technology company whose mission is to grow and empower local economies, including in New York City. We do that by partnering with thousands of local merchants throughout the City and connecting New Yorkers with their favorite local businesses. We also empower New Yorkers from all walks of life to earn money when, where, and how they choose by delivering meals and other essentials to their communities.

We appreciate the Agency’s attention to these important issues and are thankful for this opportunity to provide feedback²⁶¹ on the revised proposed rule in order to ensure that any final regulations do not result in substantial adverse impacts to New York City’s food delivery workers, consumers, restaurants, and other local businesses.

In sum, the revised proposed rule fails to address key concerns stemming from the initial proposed rule. Namely, the extreme pay rate – $33.27 per hour – for platforms selecting the trip time pay option will result in unsustainable new costs for New York City consumers and hundreds of millions in lost revenue for local restaurants and businesses. The significant impacts will eventually force platforms to move to the pay model outlined in the initial proposed rule, which will, in turn, necessitate severe and unpopular restrictions on valued delivery worker flexibility.

Please find our full comments below.

²⁶¹ DoorDash has not received all documents responsive to a Freedom of Information Law request that it submitted to the Agency on November 23, 2022. The Agency’s original response date was April 3, 2023, but the Agency has further delayed its response to June 30, 2023. DoorDash’s ability to comment on the revised proposed rule is thus limited without these critical documents and information on which the revised proposed rule is based. DoorDash thus submits these comments based on the information and analysis reasonably available.

I. The final rule should revise the alternative minimum pay rate under the Alternative Method to mitigate adverse impacts and make the method a sustainable option for platforms.

The revised proposed rule creates a new pay option – the “Alternative Method” – under Section 7-810(c) that allows third-party food delivery services and third-party courier services (collectively referred to herein as “platforms”) to base food delivery worker pay on trip time. We appreciate the Agency establishing a trip time-only option. However, the proposed design of the Alternative Method and accompanying pay rate – $33.27 per hour in 2025 – make the option unsustainable, forcing platforms to adopt the Standard Method in the long run. We outline these concerns in greater detail and offer recommended policy solutions in the subsections below.

a. The alternative minimum pay rate under the revised proposed rule would still result in platforms paying for all time delivery workers are online but not working.

i. Online time is not comparable to working time.

There are generally two different periods of time when app-based food delivery workers interact with the platform. First, there is the period when a worker is online on the app and available to view offers to complete delivery requests (“delivery offers”) but is not engaged in fulfilling a delivery offer. This period is referred to as “on-call time” under the proposed rule and commonly referred to as “online time.” Second, there is a period once a worker has accepted a delivery offer and is actively working to fulfill a delivery. This period is referred to as “trip time” under the proposed rule.

Section 1.a of our comment letter on the initial proposed rule describes the unique nature of online time on DoorDash and similar platforms.²⁶² Specifically, delivery workers can generally access the platform, view available delivery offers, and accept or decline (either through active rejection or passively ignoring the offer) those offers as they see fit. There is no minimum acceptance requirement to maintain access to the platform. There is also no requirement to be on the platform for a certain amount of time or any requisite work schedule a Dasher must adhere to. This means that a delivery worker is often getting online and indicating availability to work, but, in practice, is choosing not to do so. Indeed, the Agency’s study found that workers are far more likely to reject, rather than accept, offers for work.²⁶³

“Online” time also differs considerably from compensable idle or “on-call” time in employment for a number of reasons. On-call time – which must be compensated by an employer – is typically defined as time that a worker must be on premises or awaiting a mandate to work such that the worker does not have the freedom to choose what they do during this time.²⁶⁴ In contrast, a food delivery worker makes no commitment to perform any services through the platform while online because they can ignore or reject any delivery offer they are provided. Workers frequently exercise this flexibility as demonstrated by both DoorDash data and findings in the Agency’s study.²⁶⁵

²⁶² Comments on Proposed Rule to Implement Local Law 115 of 2021, DoorDash, pg 2 (December 2022) (“DoorDash Comments on Initial Proposed Rule”). We are attaching a full copy of our comments on the initial proposed rule to this submission as Exhibit A.

²⁶³ The Agency’s study found that workers receive a delivery offer every 4 minutes on average but only accept a delivery offer every 11 minutes on average. A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/pdf/workers/Delivery-Worker-Study-November-2022.pdf> (pg. 16) (“DCWP Study”).

²⁶⁴ DOL Fact Sheet, <https://www.dol.gov/sites/dolgov/files/WHD/legacy/files/whdfs22.pdf>. See also Yucesoy v. Uber Techs., Inc., No. 15–cv–00262–EMC, 2016 WL 493189, at *5–6 (N.D.Cal. Feb. 9, 2016); Nicolas v. Uber Techs., Inc., 2021 WL 2016161, at *5 (N.D. Cal. May 20, 2021).

Unlike an employee who is “on-call,” delivery workers may be online while actively working other jobs or performing personal activities. For example, in a recent survey of Dashers, 31% of respondents said that they combine dashing with picking up groceries or doing other errands.²⁶⁶ And, 27% of respondents combine dashing with commuting from another job or with other travel.²⁶⁷

ii. Paying for all online time means that platforms are paying for time delivery workers choose not to work.

Under the initial proposed rule, overall pay to food delivery workers had to be based in part on the amount of time that food delivery workers in NYC are online rather than the amount of time that they are actively providing services (i.e., trip time).²⁶⁸ The Agency states that requiring overall food delivery worker pay to factor in total online time is meant to ensure that workers are compensated when “engaged to wait.”

In our comment letter on the initial proposed rule, we explained that this approach failed to appreciate the unique nature of online time for DoorDash and similar platforms because this time is undisputedly different from working time or true “on-call” time.²⁶⁹ In sum, platforms should not be required to pay for time that delivery workers spend exercising their flexibility and rejecting work. The revised proposed rule fails to adequately address this concern and the Agency otherwise failed to address the same within its rationale.

Instead of requiring platforms to base worker pay on time spent online, including time spent rejecting work, we recommended that the City increase the pay rate applicable to trip time to ensure workers are compensated for estimated, unavoidable wait time between delivery offers.²⁷⁰

iii. Both the Standard and Alternative Method still require platforms to pay for all online time – just in different ways.

The revised proposed rule provides app-based delivery platforms with two methods for meeting their pay obligations. First, this revised proposed rule retains the model that was introduced in the initial proposed rule and requires overall pay to food delivery workers to be $19.96 per hour for both online trip and trip time. This model is referred to as the “Standard Method” in the revised proposed rule.

²⁶⁵ DCWP Study at 16.

²⁶⁶ DoorDash Economic Impact Research, Dasher Survey Findings (March 2023).

²⁶⁷ Id.

²⁶⁸ The initial proposed rule promulgated by the Agency in November 2022 had two distinct pay requirements. First, platforms were required to ensure that an individual delivery worker’s pay be no less than the minimum hourly pay rate multiplied by their time engaged on delivery (“trip time”) during a pay period. Second, platforms were required to ensure that aggregate pay from a platform to food delivery workers during a pay period be no less than the sum of the minimum hourly pay rate multiplied by both trip time and time a worker is online and can receive delivery requests but not actively engaged in a delivery (referred to as “on-call time”) under the proposed rule and commonly referred to as “online time”).

²⁶⁹ DoorDash Comments on Initial Proposed Rule at 2-4.

²⁷⁰ Id. at 9-10.

Second, the revised proposed rule creates a new option that requires platforms to pay $33.27 per hour for trip time. This significantly increased hourly rate – the “alternative minimum pay rate” – reflects the pay rate applied to the Standard Method ($19.96 per hour) divided by 0.6, which represents the purported utilization rate derived from DoorDash, Grubhub, and Uber Eats in the Agency’s study. In other words, the Agency’s study found that across these three platforms 60% of delivery workers’ time is spent in trip time and 40% is spent in online time, and platforms must pay each delivery worker an additional $13.31 per hour for time on trip to compensate the delivery worker for estimated online time.²⁷¹ This model is referred to as the “Alternative Model” in the revised proposed rule.

We appreciate the Agency establishing a pay option that applies only to trip time. However, requiring the increase in pay under the Alternative Method to be based on the utilization rate without regard to time spent rejecting offers to work or time spent on non-work activities means that platforms still pay for all online time – the only difference is that pay under the Alternative Method is based on an estimate of all online time and pay under the Standard Method is based on all actual online time. As a result, our concerns with a minimum pay rule that requires platforms to pay for all online time continue to persist under the revised proposed rule and the new Alternative Model.

iv. Exclusion of Relay’s utilization rate arbitrarily increases the alternative minimum pay rate

The alternative minimum pay rate is calculated based on the Agency’s finding of a purported average utilization rate of 60% for DoorDash, Grubhub, and Uber Eats. This average utilization rate excludes Relay because the Agency says the platform historically compensates workers for online time.²⁷² Since Relay can also choose to take advantage of the Alternative Method, we see no reason why its utilization rate should be excluded from industry average merely because their current model incentivizes them to maintain a high utilization rate. Indeed, Local Law 114 – which was adopted by the NYC Council at the same time as Local Law 115 authorizing these minimum pay regulations – required platforms to adopt protections and policies that were designed to do the opposite: decrease utilization among the other platforms. For example, Local Law 114 required platforms to provide food delivery workers with more information, including estimated time and distance of delivery, amount of gratuity, and total compensation, about each delivery offer so delivery workers were more empowered to reject offers that they had no interest in fulfilling.

Furthermore, the Agency appears to have incorporated Relay data into the multi-apping average that was used to calculate the revised standard pay rate.²⁷³ This likely lowers the multi-apping average – and increases the pay rate – since it is widely recognized that food delivery workers on the Relay platform cannot reject offers without facing severe restrictions in platform access and, therefore, are more likely to have a lower rate of multi-apping as compared to workers using other major platforms.²⁷⁴

²⁷¹ $$19.96 / 0.6 = \33.27 ; $$33.27 - $19.96 = $13.31$.

²⁷² Second Proposed Rule, Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Service Workers, <https://rules.cityofnewyork.us/wp-content/uploads/2023/03/DCWP-NOH-Minimum-Pay-for-Food-Delivery-Service-Workers.pdf> (pg 12) (“Revised Proposed Rule”).

²⁷³ Id at 10.

²⁷⁴ See e.g., Public Comments on the Initial Proposed Rule, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/pdf/about/PublicComments-Proposed-Rule-Minimum-Pay-for-Food-Delivery-Workers-2022.pdf> (2022) (“as soon as minimum pay becomes law, Uber eats, Grubhub and Doordash will turn into another

Taken together, these decisions to include Relay data in some calculations and exclude it from others appear to be arbitrarily selected for the sole purpose of maximizing the alternative minimum pay rate.

b. The impacts of a $33-per-hour pay rate on consumers, restaurants, and local businesses are unsustainable in the long term

Under the revised proposed rule, the pay rate for trip time for platforms selecting the Alternative Method is $33.27 per hour. This rate – more than double NYC’s $15.00 per hour minimum wage – will necessitate significant increases in cost for NYC consumers. Indeed, the Agency’s study acknowledges that platforms may need to raise consumer fees by more than $5 per delivery on average in response to the proposed rule.¹⁵ For many NYC families, especially those with a low income, these new costs may mean that they can no longer access delivery services. In NYC, more than 40% of deliveries facilitated by DoorDash in Q3 2022 went to low-income communities.²⁷⁵

Substantially increased consumer fees mean a drastic decline in delivery orders from NYC restaurants and other local businesses. If DoorDash needs to pass along the full cost of these new pay requirements under existing operations, we estimate as much as $233 million per year in lost revenue for NYC restaurants and other local businesses based on historical data.²⁷⁶ This would also result in more than $10 million in lost NYC sales tax. These numbers represent the impact from just the DoorDash platform – not even the full NYC market – for just one year. Although the Agency’s study expects restaurant profitability to be mostly unaffected, our consumer survey data suggests that nearly two-thirds of meal deliveries through DoorDash might not have existed if not for third-party delivery, as 42% of consumer survey respondents say if they could not order delivery, they would instead cook at home, and a further 21% said they just would eat leftovers.²⁷⁷ The revised proposed rule fails to adequately address this concern and the Agency otherwise failed to address the same within its rationale.

In turn, this decline in orders from NYC restaurants and other businesses will likely lead to a drop in delivery worker earnings because there will be fewer overall delivery opportunities. We estimate that the intended Dasher earnings under the regulation will be reduced by as much as $73 million. That is just delivery worker earnings lost through DoorDash for one year – it does not represent lost earnings in the remaining estimated three quarters of the market represented by competing platforms.²⁷⁸

While these estimated losses in restaurant and business revenue and Dasher earnings are slightly reduced from those anticipated under the initial proposed rule,²⁷⁹ the impact is still dire for these Relay and we would have to deliver every order that the app sends us which means even orders that are more than 5 or even 7 miles away from the starting point.”) ¹⁵ DCWP Study at ii.

²⁷⁵ A low-income community is a ZIP code where any of these three criteria are met: a) the ZIP code’s poverty rate is 20% or greater; b) the ZIP code’s median family income is less than or equal to 80% of the statewide median family income; or c) the ZIP code is in a metropolitan area and has a median family income less than or equal to 80% of the metropolitan area’s median family income.

²⁷⁶ Based on analysis of historic data tracking consumer response to fee increases.

²⁷⁷ DoorDash 2021 Economic Impact Report, <https://doordashimpact.com/media/2022-DoorDash-EIR-Report.pdf> (pg 7).

²⁷⁸ DCWP Study at 7.

²⁷⁹ In our comment letter on the initial proposed rule, we estimated $87 million in lost restaurant and local business revenue and $29 million in lost Dasher earnings in 2023 as a result of the initial proposed rule. Please note that these numbers actually reflected estimated quarterly – not annual – losses for these parties.

members of the community, especially low-income families and the restaurants and businesses that serve them.

c. Adverse impacts under the Alternative Method as currently proposed will require platforms to move to Standard Method, harming food delivery worker flexibility.

i. High costs and adverse impacts under the Alternative Method force platforms to increase utilization and move to the Standard Method.

As discussed in greater detail above, the Alternative Method as currently proposed still requires platforms to pay for all estimated online time, and the associated impacts on NYC consumers and restaurants are not sustainable long-term. As a result, platforms are encouraged to move to the Standard Method.

Specifically, because the pay rate under the Alternative Method is based on average historic utilization (or estimated total online time), the costs between these two models are virtually identical if the actual amount of online time under the Standard Method is the same as estimated online time under the Alternative Method. As a result, the high costs of the Alternative Method encourage platforms to increase utilization and eventually adopt the Standard Method. In other words, the Alternative Method is not a true alternative option except in the immediate term.

ii. The Standard Method forces platforms to reduce online time, necessitating restrictions on worker flexibility and imposing more traditional job requirements for app-based work.

The extreme pay rate under the Alternative Method means that platforms will be forced to choose the Standard Method in the long term. As highlighted in our comment letter on the initial proposed rule, the Standard Method – which requires overall food delivery worker pay to be based on the amount of time food delivery workers are online – encourages platforms to mitigate impacts to consumers and local businesses by decreasing the amount of online time and therefore increasing utilization.²⁸⁰

Current levels of online time are not due to inadequate amounts of work opportunities – again, according to the Agency’s study, workers receive a delivery offer every 4 minutes but only accept a delivery offer every 11 minutes on average²⁸¹ – but rather due to food delivery workers exercising flexibility and choosing which work opportunities to accept under the current model. Therefore, under the Standard Method, platforms would need to make operational changes that significantly reduce food delivery worker choice and flexibility in order to limit the amount of time workers are allowed online.

This means that the revised proposed rule – as with the initial proposed rule – likely would result in platforms imposing any or all of the following:

- Severely limiting access to immediate earning opportunities;
- Significantly increasing requirements to schedule shifts;

²⁸⁰ DoorDash Comments on Initial Proposed Rule at 5-7.

²⁸¹ DCWP Study at 16.

- Restricting the ability for workers to reject offers once online;
- Automatically disconnecting a worker’s access during any period of inactivity or travel outside of busy areas;
- Restricting a worker's ability to access the platform when online or providing services through another app; and
- Eliminating platform access altogether for workers who frequently reject too many offers.

These restrictions on flexibility are not purely hypothetical – the Agency’s study acknowledges that these operational changes will likely be necessary under the Standard Method.²⁸²

iii. Restrictions on worker flexibility and platform access will be strongly opposed by food delivery workers.

In a recent Dasher survey, 88% of respondents said that flexibility is what made them choose dashing over other income opportunities.²⁸³ Additionally, 80% of surveyed Dashers would not continue dashing if they were not free to turn down orders they did not want to take, 83% would not continue if they could not choose how much or how little to work, and 87% would not continue if they could not choose the days or times they worked.²⁸⁴

By selecting an extreme pay rate under the Alternative Method and forcing platforms to choose the Standard Method, the Agency apparently does not appreciate the extent to which these changes are detrimental to the food delivery workers given the value they place on flexibility.²⁸⁵

The Agency’s study says that these adverse impacts of the Standard Method will be disproportionately felt by food delivery workers whose engagement is the most “casual,” a term that describes the vast majority of delivery workers.²⁸⁶ Casual does not mean unimportant. Even relatively few hours — Dashers in NYC markets average 3.18 hours per week while on delivery²⁸⁷— can mean the difference between making ends meet or not. For example, our 2022 Dasher survey found that 28% dashed to earn supplemental income to avoid payday loans and 30% to avoid government benefits.²⁸⁸

In practice, this means that workers who take advantage of flexible work opportunities the most – a single mom who does deliveries between childcare responsibilities, a student who does deliveries between classes, an individual with a health condition or disability who may need to start or stop work suddenly – will likely no longer be able to access them because of the limitations on flexibility

²⁸² Id. at 35-38.

²⁸³ DoorDash Economic Impact Research, Dasher Survey Findings (June 2022).

²⁸⁴ DoorDash Economic Impact Research, Dasher Survey Findings (March 2023).

²⁸⁵ The concern over the impact to delivery worker’s flexibility was raised in our comment letter on the initial proposed rule and the Agency failed to address it in its rationale for the revised proposed rule.

²⁸⁶ DoorDash’s 2021 Economic Impact Report found that 88% of Dashers had other income or responsibilities. <https://doordashimpact.com/media/2022-DoorDash-EIR-Report.pdf> (p16).

²⁸⁷ Based on data from Q3 2022.

²⁸⁸ DoorDash’s 2021 Economic Impact Report. <https://doordashimpact.com/media/2022-DoorDash-EIR-Report.pdf> (p17). ³⁰ DoorDash Multi-City City-Level Research, NYC Survey Findings (Nov 2021).

necessitated by the revised proposed rule. Our 2021 NYC survey backs this up: women dash 23% less than men and students dash 20% less than non-students.³⁰

In our comment letter on the initial proposed rule, we shared the experience of Dwanét Perry, a Dasher in NYC who takes advantage of flexible earning opportunities to focus on growing her candle business – Flame N Mama – and take care of her son. Because the revised proposed rule will eventually have the same adverse impacts on flexibility as a result of platforms being forced in the Standard Method, we want to share another example of a NYC Dasher – Dionne Sutherland – who could be affected by the revised proposed rule.

Dionne immigrated to the U.S. from Jamaica when she was 14 years old. She is now a mother of 8 children and has 4 grandchildren. Her husband faces multiple health issues, leaving her as the sole provider for her household. Dionne started dashing 4 years ago, and it has allowed her to supplement her income from working full-time in real estate, while still maintaining a flexible schedule to be there for her family when she is needed. Even though app-based delivery is not her primary job, it’s still an important earning opportunity for Dionne and her family. Unfortunately, Dionne and many other delivery workers who require flexibility may find these earnings opportunities more challenging and even impossible to access if the final rule is not reasonably revised.

Finally, the Agency assumes that food delivery workers who are working through delivery platforms the most will be least impacted by these operational changes, but that assumption is misguided. These workers are currently operating under the same flexible model, and transitioning to a model that is more rigid, restrictive, and feels like a traditional job may be unwelcome. Indeed, ample opportunities exist for traditional, scheduled W-2 jobs, but food delivery workers actively chose app-based work because they have a strong preference for the existing, flexible model.²⁸⁹

d. Recommended revisions to mitigate adverse impacts and ensure the Alternative Method is a true alternative option for platforms long-term.

Recommendation: The Agency should revise its calculation of the alternative minimum pay rate under proposed Section 7-810(c) to be based on estimated necessary wait time rather than total estimated online time.

The alternative minimum pay rate under the Alternative Method is derived from dividing the standard pay rate by 0.6, the purported utilization rate for DoorDash, Grubhub, and Uber Eats. As outlined in the sections above, this formula means platforms are paying for all estimated online time, including time ignoring or rejecting work opportunities, and results in an extreme rate of $33.27 per hour. The impacts of this rate force platforms to move to the Standard Method in the long-term and take actions to limit delivery worker flexibility to control high costs.

There is a better approach for calculating the alternative minimum pay rate that compensates food delivery workers for estimated necessary wait time and makes the Alternative Method a sustainable option for platforms. Specifically, instead of dividing the standard pay rate by the utilization rate of platforms, the Agency should identify a static, industry-wide multiplier that would apply to the standard pay rate and reflect estimated necessary waiting time rather than online time where a worker may be working another job, rejecting offers in hopes of a superior offer in the future, or not interested in performing services altogether.

²⁸⁹ The October 2022 unemployment rate in the New York-Newark-Jersey City, NY-NJ-PA MSA was 3.7%, a historically low rate. With such economic conditions, jobseekers can easily find employment. See Unemployment Rate in New York-Newark-Jersey City, NY-NJ-PA (MSA), Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, <https://fred.stlouisfed.org/series/NEWY636URN>.

i. A 1.156 multiplier based on the Agency's study.

The data and assumptions in the Agency's study allow us to calculate a multiplier of 1.156. Specifically, the Agency's study determined that workers receive offers every 4 minutes²⁹⁰ and that delivery workers on e-bikes do 2.03 deliveries per hour.²⁹¹ This means the average trip duration is 29.6 minutes³⁴ including waiting time and 25.6 minutes excluding waiting time.²⁹³ Based on these findings, increasing pay applicable to trip time by a multiple of 1.156 would compensate for workers' estimated waiting time.²⁹⁴

Accordingly, the multiplier would be 1.156, and the formula for determining the alternative minimum pay rate for trip time would be [standard rate] x 1.156 = alternative minimum pay rate. This results in an alternative minimum pay rate of $23.07 per hour under the Alternative Method for 2025.

This formula for the alternative minimum pay rate guarantees that food delivery workers have robust minimum pay protections – 54% higher than NYC's minimum wage for employees – for time most synonymous with working time. It also helps preserve valued flexibility for food delivery workers by establishing a more sustainable pay rate under the Alternative Method rather than forcing platforms into the Standard Method.

ii. An alternative 1.254 multiplier if the Agency allows for some rejected offers.

If the Agency believes that the estimated necessary wait time multiplier based on the 4-minute average wait time between offers is too strict, the Agency could instead define necessary wait time to include time to reject some reasonable amount of offers. For example, the Agency could define necessary wait time to include time rejecting one in three offers. Under this approach, the Agency would follow the same process to calculate the multiplier as in the subsection above, but use 6 minutes instead of 4 minutes.³⁷ This would result in a multiplier of 1.254³⁸, and an alternative minimum pay rate of $25.03 per hour under the Alternative Method in 2025.³⁹

Even this approach of providing for some reasonable amount of offer rejection time as part of necessary wait time results in a higher, but still much more sustainable, pay rate than use of the utilization rate under the revised proposed rule.

II. The final rule should revise the utilization maintenance incentive under the Alternative Method to limit burdens on platforms and food delivery workers.

²⁹⁰ DCWP Study at 16.

²⁹¹ Id. at 14.

²⁹² minutes / 2.03 deliveries per hour = 29.6 minutes per trip including wait times.

²⁹³ 29.6 minutes of total trip duration - 4 minutes of waiting time = 25.6 minutes of trip duration excluding waiting time.

²⁹⁴ 29.6 minutes in total trip duration / 25.6 minutes in trip duration excluding wait time = 1.156.

The revised proposed rule incentivizes platforms selecting the Alternative Method to continue maintaining historical levels of utilization. Specifically, under proposed Section 7-810(c)(1), platforms that fail to maintain utilization levels at 53% are not allowed to use the Alternative Method and must pay workers using the Standard Method.

Although the alternative minimum pay rate should not be determined using utilization for the reasons outlined in Section I, we understand why the Agency has an interest in platforms maintaining historic levels of utilization to ensure that the minimum pay standard is not devalued. Further, we believe a 53% utilization threshold is reasonable based on the Agency's findings that all platforms should generally be able to achieve that level of utilization under existing operations. We strongly oppose any revisions under the final rule that makes the utilization threshold challenging to achieve under existing operations, essentially making the Alternative Method a false option for platforms.

While we do not oppose a utilization maintenance incentive, the current design of the incentive could be operationally burdensome and create uncertainty for existing workers. For example, under the current design, if a platform experiencing a temporary service error has a utilization rate that drops to 52% during a week, the platform must use the Standard Method to determine pay for that specific week – this can be jarring for platforms, which will immediately need to find a new way to pay workers and implement operational changes in response. This can also be disruptive to existing workers who might find themselves suddenly subject to different work requirements or lacking access to the platform altogether as the platform responds to the transition to the Standard Method, even if temporary.

³⁷ 60 minutes / 4 minutes between offers on average = 15 offers per hour; 15 offers per hour / 3 = 5 rejected offers per hour; 60 minutes / 10 offers per hour = 6 minutes.

³⁸ 60 minutes / 2.03 deliveries per hour = 29.6 minutes per trip including wait times; 29.6 minutes of total trip duration - 6 minutes of waiting time = 23.6 minutes of trip duration excluding waiting time; 29.6 minutes in total trip duration / 23.6 minutes in trip duration excluding wait time = 1.254.

³⁹ $19.96 x 1.254 = $25.03 per hour.

Recommendation: The Agency should maintain the utilization maintenance incentive under the Alternative Method, but revise the incentive to allow platforms to either (1) halt onboarding new workers in NYC in subsequent weeks until the utilization target is satisfied or (2) pay using the Standard Method as required in the revised proposed rule. This approach will still penalize platforms for missing the 53% utilization target, but provides an option that limits impacts on existing workers, is designed to automatically improve utilization, and is easier for platforms to implement than a wholesale transition to the Standard Method.

Alternatively, the Agency should provide a safe harbor whereby a platform using the Alternative Method is not required to switch to the Standard Method until the platform experiences four weeks below the 53% utilization target during a calendar year. If a platform fails to achieve the utilization target for a fourth week during a calendar year, it must both switch to the Standard Method for the fourth week and any future week the utilization target is missed. Further, the platform must retroactively compensate workers pursuant to the Standard Method for the three preceding weeks when utilization was below the target. This approach maintains the incentives and pay protections that the Agency is looking to achieve, but helps protect against drastic impacts on platforms and workers as a result of atypical drops in utilization. Finally, when a systemic drop in utilization occurs (i.e., four consecutive weeks below the utilization target), this approach provides platforms with a reasonable amount of transition time to prepare for pay under a new model, including providing workers with notice of any changes in operations that may impact their platform access or flexibility.

III. A phase-in of the minimum pay rate is necessary to mitigate adverse impacts.

The revised proposed rule phases in the standard pay rate at 90%, 95%, and 100% in 2023, 2024, and 2025, respectively. This phase-in rate is accelerated from the 75%, 85%, 100% rate under the initial proposed rule, and the Agency notes that some stakeholders are calling for elimination of the phase-in altogether.

A reasonable pay rate phase-in is critical given the magnitude of this policy. As outlined in Section I.b., we already anticipate significant adverse impacts for consumers, restaurants, and Dashers as a result of a phased-in minimum pay rule – those impacts will be even more extreme if imposed immediately. The market needs time to adjust to these new costs. A phase-in would also be consistent with New York’s recent implementation of minimum wage increases, which was gradually phased-in at $11.00, $13.00, and $15.00 in 2016, 2017, and 2018, respectively.²⁹⁵ This represents a phase-in rate of 73%, 86%, and 100% – far slower than the accelerated rate under the revised proposed rule.

Recommendation: The final rule must phase-in the minimum pay rate at a reasonable rate in order to provide the market with time to adjust to extreme new costs and prevent additional adverse impacts on consumers, local businesses, and delivery workers.

IV. The final rule should not apply the minimum pay requirements in unequal ways to similar businesses

In our comments on the initial proposed rule, we raised that the Agency’s regulations under Section 7-802(a) are arbitrary and unconstitutional because they subject all trips offered to a food delivery worker to the requirements of Title 20, Chapter 15 of the Administrative Code, including the minimum pay rules, regardless of whether the trip is from a food service establishment.²⁹⁶

Specifically, Section 7-802(a) extended nearly all of Chapter 15’s requirements to deliveries not only from restaurants, but also from every other type of business, such as grocery and convenience stores. The regulations did not, however, expand the definition of which companies are subject to the law. Accordingly, a company that facilitates delivery from restaurants and other businesses is required to comply with the law with respect to all deliveries. But a company that facilitates deliveries only from non-restaurants is never required to comply with the delivery platform laws at all. Thus, two identical orders from the same local business, fulfilled using similar app-based technology, and delivered by the exact same person, are not regulated the same way under the Agency’s regulations. In addition to placing one company at a competitive disadvantage, this approach creates confusion for delivery workers – they’ll receive minimum pay protections for a delivery from a local business using the one platform but not receive any protections for a delivery of the exact same item from the exact same store using another platform.

²⁹⁵ New York State’s Minimum Wage, NY.gov, <https://www.ny.gov/new-york-states-minimum-wage/new-york-states-minimum-wage>.

²⁹⁶ DoorDash Comments on Initial Proposed Rule at 15.

We recommended that the Agency strike Section 7-802(a) to address these concerns. In the preamble of the revised proposed rule, the Agency states that it is declining this recommendation because food delivery workers require pay protections for these trips as well and that the other protections of Title 20, Chapter 15 generally apply to these trips. We do not disagree that workers deserve pay protections for these trips, but instead take issue with the unequal, irrational application of these protections to trips made on some platforms but not others. Additionally, while true that other protections under Chapter 15 apply to these trips, this is a result of the Agency's regulations expanding coverage of trips under Section 7-802(a) rather than anything expressed in Chapter 15 itself.

Recommendation: The final rule should omit Section 7-802(a) to avoid arbitrarily treating deliveries by similarly-situated businesses unequally and impermissibly expanding the scope of Chapter 15.

V. The final rule should revise the definition of “cancelled” to prevent fraud.

Section 7-801(a)(7) of the revised proposed rule provides that compensable “trip time” lasts until the delivery is completed or “cancelled.” Newly added Section 7-801(a)(1) defines cancelled as any cancellation initiated by the consumer, platform, or food delivery worker.

While we do not oppose a requirement that platforms pay for time a delivery worker is on trip before a cancellation by the consumer or platform, which are out of the worker's control, the inclusion of cancellations initiated by a delivery worker is problematic because it incentivizes fraud. For example, under this policy a delivery worker can accept a delivery offer with no intention of completing the trip and must be paid the equivalent of $33 per hour for time until they subsequently cancel. Similarly, a delivery worker could accept an offer intending to complete it but cancel when they receive a higher paying offer from another platform while fulfilling the delivery – even though the delivery is unfulfilled and the platform will now need pay another delivery worker for the full amount of time to fulfill the delivery, the platform must still pay the canceling delivery worker for their time before cancellation.

Recommendation: The final rule should omit or otherwise narrow coverage of cancellations initiated by food delivery workers from the definition of “cancelled” under proposed Section 7-801(a)(1).

VI. The expense component of the final rule should be reduced to account for biases and flaws in the Agency's study.

As described in detail in our comment letter on the initial proposed rule,²⁹⁷ the expense component of the standard pay rate is based on a fundamentally biased and flawed study. These flaws include, but are not limited to:

- Reliance on a biased and unrepresentative sample;²⁹⁸

²⁹⁷ DoorDash Comments on Initial Proposed Rule at 12-14.

²⁹⁸ In soliciting responses from workers, the Agency's NYC Delivery Worker Survey states that it “is part of a new law to raise pay for app delivery workers” and that “answers will help NYC set a minimum pay rate that reflects your expenses and needs.” Providing this information about how the Agency intended to use the results of the survey biases the responses – survey

- Flawed calculations regarding the replacement rate of cell phones;²⁹⁹ and
- Flawed conclusions regarding delivery worker costs.³⁰⁰

Our concerns remain since the Agency did not reduce the expense component as part of the revised proposed rule in response to our recommendations.

Recommendation: The final rule should reduce the expense component of the standard pay rate to reflect consideration of the biased survey and flawed calculations.

* * *

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments as the Agency undertakes this rulemaking and for your consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

Sascha Owen
Senior Manager of Government Relations for New York

participants may be incentivized to provide answers which suggest the most unfavorable expenses and earnings environment. See A Catalog of Biases in Questionnaires, <https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC1323316>.

²⁹⁹ The Agency's study claims that workers replace their phones at a rate of 1.74 per year. DCWP Study at 19. This is inconsistent with the rate at which new phone models are released by manufacturers and data showing that fewer than one in two Americans purchases a new smartphone each year. Also, remarkably, 1.74 is the purported replacement rate of e-bike batteries. It seems likely that at least one of these numbers is in error. In fact, attempted replication of the 1.74 figure using the public survey data yields a smaller average of 1.49, and a median of 1.

³⁰⁰ A recent study of costs for DoorDash and Uber Eats food delivery workers in NYC found e-bike costs to be $0.241 per mile, or $1.07 per hour based on the Agency's assumptions of 1.77 miles per trip and 2.5 trips per hour, significantly different from the Study's findings of $2.26 an hour. Public Hearing Written Testimony, NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (June 15, 2022), at 67, 70-71 (letter of DoorDash, Inc. and Uber Technologies, Inc.).

EXHIBIT A

December 16, 2022

Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
City of New York
42 Broadway
New York, NY 10004

RE: Comments on Proposed Rule to Implement Local Law 115 of 2021

Dear Commissioner Mayuga:

On behalf of DoorDash, I am writing to provide comments on the proposed rules issued by the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (“the Agency”) to implement Local Law 115 of 2021 and establish minimum pay requirements for food delivery workers.

DoorDash is a technology company whose mission is to grow and empower local economies, including in New York City. We do that by partnering with thousands of local merchants throughout the City and connecting New Yorkers with their favorite local businesses for online ordering, takeout, delivery, and marketing services. We also empower New Yorkers from all walks of life to earn money when, where, and how they choose by delivering meals and other essentials to their communities.

We appreciate the Agency’s attention to these important issues and are thankful for this opportunity to provide feedback³⁰¹ on the proposed rules in order to ensure that any final regulations do not result in substantial adverse impacts to New York City’s food delivery workers, consumers, restaurants, and other local businesses. Please find our comments below.

I. The final rule should omit proposed Section 7-810(c) in order to preserve food delivery worker flexibility and limit adverse impacts on NYC families and restaurants

Section 7-810(c) of the proposed rule requires overall food delivery worker pay to be based on the amount of time that workers are online rather than time spent providing delivery services. This policy approach is ill-advised because (a) online time is a unique feature of app-based work that is not synonymous with working time; (b) requiring pay to be based on online time leads to absurd results; (c) this approach incentivizes platforms to eliminate valued flexibility for workers, and (d) this approach will make delivery unaffordable for many families and result in a drastic decline in orders for NYC restaurants.

³⁰¹ On November 22, 2022, DoorDash requested a 30-day extension of the comment period given the complexity of the proposed rule. The Agency denied the request for extension on December 9, 2022. Moreover, DoorDash has not received all documents responsive to a Freedom of Information Law request that it submitted to the Agency on November 23, 2022. DoorDash thus submits these comments based on the information and analysis reasonably available to it in these 30 days despite requiring additional time and relevant documents to fully develop its comments.

a. Online time is a unique feature to app-based work and is not synonymous with working time

The work model for app-based food delivery workers, who generally are categorized as independent contractors (as is the case with DoorDash), differs notably from employment models typically subject to minimum wage requirements. While models differ across platforms operating in NYC, Dashers can generally access the platform, view available offers to complete delivery requests (“delivery offers”), and accept or reject those offers as they see fit. There is no minimum acceptance requirement to maintain access to the platform. There is also no requirement to be on the platform for a certain amount of time or any requisite work schedule a Dasher must adhere to.

This model provides Dashers and other food delivery workers in NYC with unparalleled amounts of flexibility and independence over their work. For example, a Dasher may decide to access the platform for one hour before going to a college class and, during that time, accept and complete one delivery offer and reject the remaining delivery offers that they receive. A Dasher may also access the platform for several consecutive days in order to earn extra cash to pay for her child’s school supplies or holiday presents, and then take a break from working on the platform for months at a time before returning. The model also allows Dashers and other food delivery workers to “multi-app,” where they receive delivery offers from multiple platforms at the same time and may accept and complete a delivery offer for one platform before subsequently accepting and completing a delivery offer with that platform’s competitor. Multi-apping is not limited to delivery, but also includes rideshare or other platform-based services.³⁰² This means that a delivery worker is often getting online and indicating availability to work, but, in practice, is choosing not to do so. No employer provides the flexibility for employees to operate this way.

The flexibility and choice that workers value in this model creates a unique challenge for accurately evaluating working time for delivery workers. The overall time that a delivery worker interacts with a platform consists of two distinct periods: engaged time and online time. Online time – which the proposed rule refers to as “on-call time” – consists of the time where a worker is on the app and available to receive delivery offers in NYC from a platform but is not actively providing delivery services. Engaged time – which the proposed rule refers to as “trip time” – consists of the period of time from when a delivery worker (1) accepts a delivery offer and travels to the business to pick up the goods and (2) travels from the business to the consumer and completes the delivery.

“Online” time differs considerably from compensable idle or “on-call” time in employment for a number of reasons. On-call time – which must be compensated by an employer – is typically defined as time that a worker must be on premises or awaiting a mandate to work such that the worker does not have the freedom to choose what they do during this time.³⁰³ In contrast, a food delivery worker makes no commitment to perform any services through the platform while online because they can ignore or reject any delivery offer they are provided. Workers frequently exercise this flexibility. Additionally, as discussed above, food delivery workers may be online with one platform while engaged in an active delivery with another because the model permits multi-apping. Surveys of app-based workers in other jurisdictions have also shown that it is common for workers to stay online even when taking breaks or mainly doing personal tasks, such as eating, running errands, or commuting between their home and the areas where they may prefer to provide services.⁴

³⁰² The Agency’s own study calculates that “workers spend 17.7% of working time connected to more than one app.” A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC, <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/pdf/workers/Delivery-Worker-Study-November-2022.pdf> (pg. 5) (“DCWP Study”). The actual figure is likely to be substantially higher, as the study did not include data from Instacart, Shipt, smaller delivery companies such as Chowbus, or any rideshare companies.

³⁰³ DOL Fact Sheet, <https://www.dol.gov/sites/dolgov/files/WHD/legacy/files/whdfs22.pdf>. See also Yucesoy v. Uber Techs., Inc., No. 15–cv–00262–EMC, 2016 WL 493189, at *5–6 (N.D.Cal. Feb. 9, 2016); Nicolas v. Uber Techs., Inc., 2021 WL 2016161, at *5 (N.D. Cal. May 20, 2021). ⁴ Self-Reported Findings on Driver Experiences, Beacon Research, <https://yesformassdrivers.org/wp-content/uploads/2022/03/Drivers-Experience-Memo-3.4.22.pdf> (March 4, 2022).

b. By requiring pay to be based on online time, the proposed rule fails to acknowledge the unique nature of this period

The proposed rule includes two distinct pay requirements. First, proposed Section 7-810(b) requires that an individual delivery worker's pay be no less than the minimum hourly pay rate ($23.82/hour in 2025) multiplied by their engaged time ("trip time") during a pay period. This requirement makes sense as engaged time is most synonymous with working time since the worker has accepted a delivery offer and is actively providing services. Second, proposed Section 7-810(c) requires that aggregate pay from a platform to food delivery workers during a pay period be no less than the sum of the minimum hourly pay rate multiplied by all of the time that workers are both online ("on-call time") and engaged. Although this "aggregate pay requirement" is separate from the proposed rule's requirements regarding an individual delivery worker's pay, the inclusion of Section 7-810(c) means that overall pay to food delivery workers must be based in part on the amount of time that food delivery workers in NYC are online rather than the amount of time that they are actively providing services. The Agency states that requiring overall food delivery worker pay to factor in total online time is meant to ensure that workers are compensated when "engaged to wait," but, as outlined in Section I.a, that is not the case with the app-based model.³⁰⁴ This requirement to base pay on a period of time that is not comparable to working time is problematic and leads to some absurd results based on real Dasher behavior:

Example 1: Dasher A is online with the DoorDash platform for an hour. During this time, Dasher A receives 10 delivery offers³⁰⁵ from DoorDash and ignores or rejects each one. The proposed rule does not require DoorDash to pay Dasher A anything since they did not engage in any trip time. But, DoorDash must ensure that the total amount of pay for NYC Dashers includes an additional $23.82³⁰⁶ in order to satisfy the aggregate pay requirement with respect to Dasher A's online time even though they only used this time to exercise their flexibility to ignore or reject delivery offers.

Example 2: Dasher B is online with both DoorDash and its competitor, Uber Eats. Dasher B accepts a delivery offer from Uber Eats, which takes 30 minutes to complete. During this time, Dasher B continues to be online with DoorDash and rejects several delivery offers since they are already actively engaged in a delivery with Uber Eats. Although DoorDash does not have to pay Dasher B anything since they did not engage in any trip time, DoorDash must ensure that ³⁰⁴ The time most synonymous with being "engaged to wait" is when a delivery worker is waiting at a restaurant or business to pick up an item for delivery. Platforms are required to directly compensate an individual food delivery worker for this time under proposed Section 7-810(b).

³⁰⁵ According to DCWP's study, a delivery worker receives a delivery request every 4 minutes on average. DCWP Study at 16.

³⁰⁶ $23.82/hr (the pay rate starting April 1, 2025) x 1.0.

the total amount of pay for NYC Dashers includes an additional $11.91³⁰⁷ for the time that Dasher B was being compensated by DoorDash’s competitor, i.e., for the exact same time period by Uber Eats because they were on an active delivery with that platform.

The above examples are based on known, current Dasher behavior in NYC. The proposed rule’s failure to recognize the unique nature of online time also means food delivery workers, NYC consumers, and restaurants will all experience significant adverse impacts as discussed below.

c. By requiring pay to be based on online time, the proposed rule not only fails to acknowledge that flexibility is paramount to Dashers and other food delivery workers but specifically incentivizes platforms to eliminate it

As described in greater detail above, the proposed rule would require that total food delivery worker pay be based on the total amount of time that workers are online rather than the time they are engaged on a delivery following acceptance of a delivery offer. According to the Agency, one goal of this approach is to incentivize platforms to increase productivity among workers – essentially, if platforms have to pay for online time, they will take steps to increase the amount of time a food delivery worker is engaged in trip time and decrease the amount of time they are online.³⁰⁸ This policy goal inherently misunderstands the importance of flexibility to Dashers and other food delivery workers.

i. Dashers highly value the flexibility of the existing model and it is one of the main reasons workers choose app-based work

As described in Section I.a, the current app-based work model provides Dashers and other food delivery workers with the ability to accept or reject the deliveries they want, work as long or as little as they choose, and use multiple apps at the same time.

This independence and flexibility is highly valued by Dashers and other food delivery workers. For example, in a 2021 survey of Dashers working in NYC, 70% of respondents identified “provides flexibility in my schedule” as being an extremely important work quality.³⁰⁹ Sixty-four percent (64%) of respondents said the same about work that “allows me to schedule my work around family needs, health, other work, or education.” These responses jumped to 79% and 74%, respectively, among Dashers who identified as women.

The appreciation for this flexibility is not only borne out in survey data, but also in food delivery worker behavior identified by the Agency’s study. For example, the Agency’s study found that workers receive a delivery offer every 4 minutes on average but only accept a delivery offer every 11 minutes on average.³¹⁰ Similarly, the Agency’s study found that 39% of delivery worker accounts were associated with deliveries in only two or fewer weeks during the last quarter of ³⁰⁷ $23.82/hr (the pay rate starting April 1, 2025) x 0.5.

³⁰⁸ DCWP Study at 31.

³⁰⁹ DoorDash Multi-City City-Level Research, NYC Survey Findings (Nov 2021).

³¹⁰ DCWP Study at 16.

2021.³¹¹

ii. The proposed rule would force platforms to restrict worker flexibility and impose more traditional job requirements on app-based work – changes strongly opposed by food delivery workers

Requiring overall pay to be based on the amount food delivery workers are online under proposed Section 7-810(c) is meant to incentivize platforms to increase worker productivity.³¹²

However, as demonstrated by the sections above, current levels of worker productivity and the amount of online time is not due to inadequate amounts of work opportunities – again, according to the Agency’s study, workers receive a delivery offer every 4 minutes but only accept a delivery offer every 11 minutes on average – but rather due to food delivery workers exercising flexibility and choosing which work opportunities to accept under the current model.

Under the proposed rule, platforms would need to make operational changes that significantly reduce food delivery worker choice and flexibility in order to limit the amount of time workers are allowed online. This means that the proposed rule could result in platforms immediately imposing any or all of the following:

- Severely limiting access to immediate earning opportunities;
- Significantly increasing requirements to schedule shifts;
- Restricting the ability for workers to reject offers once online;
- Automatically disconnecting a worker’s access during any period of inactivity or travel outside of busy area;

- Restricting a worker's ability to access the platform when online or providing services through another app; and

- Eliminating platform access altogether for workers who frequently reject too many offers.

The Agency’s study acknowledges that these operational changes will likely be necessary,³¹³ but, by proposing this rule, apparently does not appreciate the extent to which these changes are detrimental to the food delivery workers given the value they place on flexibility.

The Agency’s study says that these adverse impacts of the proposed rule will be disproportionately felt by food delivery workers whose engagement is the most “casual”, a term that describes the vast majority of delivery workers.³¹⁴ Casual does not mean unimportant. Even relatively few hours — Dashers in NYC markets average 3.18 hours per week while on delivery³¹⁵ — can mean the difference

³¹¹ Id. at 12.

³¹² Id. at 31.

³¹³ Id. at 35-38.

³¹⁴ DoorDash’s 2021 Economic Impact Report found that 88% of Dashers had other income or responsibilities. <https://doordashimpact.com/media/2022-DoorDash-EIR-Report.pdf> (p16).

³¹⁵ Based on data from Q3 2022.

between making ends meet or not. For example, our 2022 Dasher survey found that 28% dashed to earn supplemental income to avoid payday loans and 30% to avoid government benefits.³¹⁶

In practice, this means that workers who take advantage of flexible work opportunities the most – a single mom who does deliveries between childcare responsibilities, a student who does deliveries between classes, an individual with a health condition or disability who may need to start or stop work suddenly – will likely no longer be able to access them because of the limitations on flexibility the Agency admits it hopes to achieve. Our 2021 NYC survey backs this up: women dash 23% less than men and students dash 20% less than non-students.³¹⁷

Consider, for example, the experience of Dwanét Perry, an actual Dasher in NYC. Dwanét was six months pregnant when she lost her job in Queens in 2020. To support herself and her baby and move toward her dream of doing something more creative, she learned candle making and founded her own candle business – Flame N Mama. To supplement income from her candle business, Dwanét delivers through the DoorDash three to four hours each day and works other jobs. App-based delivery provides critical flexibility that allows her to focus on her growing business and take care of her son. But, if the proposed rule is adopted, these flexible earning opportunities may no longer be available to Dwanét and food delivery workers in similar circumstances.

The Agency assumes that food delivery workers who are working through delivery platforms the most will be least impacted by these operational changes, but that assumption is misguided. These workers are currently operating under the same flexible model, and transitioning to a model that is more rigid, restrictive, and feels like a traditional job may be unwelcomed.

DoorDash’s own experience providing choice in work opportunities in NYC is instructive. Specifically, in December 2021, DoorDash launched grocery and convenience item deliveries from DashMart locations in NYC. These deliveries are powered by local DashCorps employees who are seeking work in a traditional employment structure, including set shifts at specific locations. After launching this opportunity, we notified hundreds of thousands of Dashers and people interested in dashing via email about NYC courier roles through DashMart, and less than 1% expressed interest. This very low level of interest helps demonstrate that food delivery workers actively chose app-based work despite the availability of similar, traditionally-structured jobs because they have a strong preference for the existing flexible model.³¹⁸

Finally, reactions from for-hire-vehicle (“rideshare”) drivers in NYC to the loss of flexibility as a result of minimum pay regulations issued by the Taxi and Limousine Commission (“TLC”) foreshadow food delivery worker response to loss of flexibility under the proposed rule. Specifically, the TLC’s minimum pay regulations for rideshare drivers include a utilization rate that determines the amount of pay required while transporting a passenger based in part on the amount³¹⁹ of online time.²⁰ Initially, the ³¹⁶ DoorDash’s 2021 Economic Impact Report found that 88% of Dashers had other income or responsibilities. <https://doordashimpact.com/media/2022-DoorDash-EIR-Report.pdf> (p17).

³¹⁷ DoorDash Multi-City City-Level Research, NYC Survey Findings (Nov 2021).

³¹⁸ Ample opportunities also exist for traditional, scheduled W-2 jobs. The October 2022 unemployment rate in the New York-Newark-Jersey City, NY-NJ-PA MSA was 3.7%, a historically low rate. With such economic conditions, jobseekers can easily find employment. See Unemployment Rate in New York-Newark-Jersey City, NY-NJ-PA (MSA), Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, <https://fred.stlouisfed.org/series/NEWY636URN>.

³¹⁹ NYC Rules § 59D-22. Note that the TLC had an explicit mandate to consider utilization by the City

TLC proposed an industry-wide utilization rate which would eventually be replaced by platform-specific utilization rates. As a result, rideshare platforms began taking aggressive actions to limit drivers' online time, which meant curbing flexibility – platforms imposed lockouts during periods of low demand and rigorous acceptance and productivity requirements in order to access the platforms.³²⁰ These changes were widely opposed by workers²² and, in November of this year, the TLC amended its pay regulations in order to preclude platform-specific utilization rates except in extreme circumstances.³²¹

Similar actions to curb flexibility in response to the Agency's proposed rule will not only be opposed by food delivery workers but much more intensely opposed than in the case of rideshare.³²² Rideshare drivers were already working significantly more hours than food delivery workers do on average when the TLC's minimum pay regulations went into effect, meaning the impact of this proposed rule will be even more drastic.²⁵

iii. The proposed rule's goal of increasing productivity at the expense of flexibility conflicts with NYC food delivery worker policy to date

Local Law 115, which instructed the Agency to establish a minimum pay requirement for food delivery workers, was adopted by the New York City Council at the same time as Local Law 114, which required platforms to institute a number of protections for food delivery workers they engaged.³²³ These protections included requiring platforms to provide food delivery workers with more information – address of pickup, estimated time and distance of delivery, amount of gratuity, and total compensation – about each delivery offer so delivery workers were better informed when deciding to accept or reject an offer. Similarly, Local Law 114 required platforms to allow food delivery workers to set preferences regarding the distance they were willing to travel on a delivery and select bridges and tunnels they preferred to not to cross on deliveries. Once a food delivery worker sets distance or bridge and tunnel preferences, a platform is prohibited from sending the worker a delivery offer that is inconsistent with that preference.

The underlying policy goal of the City Council in adopting Local Law 114 was to provide food delivery workers with more tools and information by which they could exercise flexibility in their work. Now, by Council where no such mandate or policy preference was expressed for food delivery workers under Local Law 115 of 2021. See Local Law 150 of 2018 (providing that “any applicable vehicle utilization standard” was to be considered in establishing a method of determining minimum pay for rideshare drivers).

³²⁰ See What the New TLC Rules Mean for You, Lyft,

<https://www.lyft.com/hub/posts/what-the-new-tlc-rules-mean-for-you> (June 19, 2019). ²² See The

Lockout: Why Uber Drivers in NYC Are Sleeping in Their Cars, Vice,

<https://www.vice.com/en/article/pkewqb/the-lockout-why-uber-drivers-in-nyc-are-sleeping-in-their-cars>

³²¹ FHV Driver Pay Rules, TLC,

https://www.nyc.gov/assets/tlc/downloads/pdf/FHV_Driver_Pay_Adopted_Rule_11_15_22.pdf (Nov 15, 2022).

³²² We would note that the proposed rule essentially creates a platform-specific utilization rate similar to the one initially proposed by the TLC. Specifically, by requiring pay to be based on the amount of online time for all delivery workers on a specific platform during a pay period, overall pay is higher on a platform when the amount of online time experienced by delivery workers increases and lower when online time decreases. This incentivizes platforms to reduce online time vis-à-vis other platforms. The same dynamics existed under the TLC's initial proposal where each rideshare platform would have its own unique utilization rate based in part by the amount of time workers were online rather than providing services. ²⁵ According to the Agency's study, food delivery workers are working 20.7 hours/week on average. DCWP Study at 16. According to a similar study conducted by the TLC, rideshare drivers work 33.3 hours/week on average. An Earnings Standard for New York City's App-based Drivers, <https://static1.squarespace.com/static/53ee4f0be4b015b9c3690d84/t/5b3a3a946d2a73a677f855b9/1530542742060/Parrott-Reich+NYC+App+Drivers+TLC+Jul+2018jul1.pdf> (p 21).

³²³ NYC Local Law 114 of 2021.

requiring pay to be based on online time, the Agency’s proposed rule incentivizes platforms to eliminate the very flexibility that the City Council sought to enhance with Local Law 114, which just went into effect earlier this year.

- d. The proposed rule will make delivery unaffordable for many families, will result in a drastic decline in orders for NYC restaurants, and likely leave some underserved communities without access to food delivery services at all

Requiring platforms to base food delivery workers' pay on the amount of online time will result in substantial new costs. These new costs will need to be passed along to consumers because existing NYC law caps the amount of fees that can be charged to restaurants.³²⁴ Indeed, the Agency’s study acknowledges that platforms may need to raise customer fees by more than $5 per delivery on average in response to the proposed rule.³²⁵ For many NYC families, especially those with a low income, these new costs may mean that they can no longer access delivery services. In NYC, more than 40% of deliveries facilitated by DoorDash in Q3 2022 went to low-income communities.³²⁶

Substantially increased consumer fees mean a drastic decline in delivery orders from NYC restaurants and other local businesses. If DoorDash needs to pass along the full cost of these new pay requirements under existing operations, we estimate as much as $87 million in lost revenue for restaurants and other local businesses in 2023 alone based on historical data.³²⁷ This would also result in almost $4 million in lost NYC sales tax. These numbers represent the impact from just the DoorDash platform – not even the full NYC market – for just one year. Although the Agency’s study expects restaurant profitability to be mostly unaffected, our consumer survey data suggests that nearly two-thirds of meal deliveries through DoorDash might not otherwise have existed, as 42% of consumer survey respondents say if they could not order delivery, they would instead cook at home, and a further 21% said they just would eat leftovers.³²⁸

In turn, this decline in orders from NYC restaurants and other businesses will likely lead to a drop in delivery worker earnings – despite the increased pay requirements – because there will be fewer overall delivery opportunities. We estimate as much as $29 million in lost Dasher earnings. That’s just delivery worker earnings lost through DoorDash for one year – it doesn't represent lost earnings in the remaining three quarters of the market represented by competing platforms.³²⁹

In addition to these previously-described impacts, the Agency’s study also says that the platforms may need to “strategically restrict delivery distances or limit service to the times and places where delivery can be provided affordably” in response to the costs imposed by the proposed rule.³³⁰ In practice, this means that platforms may need to reduce or eliminate service altogether in areas of NYC with the

³²⁴ NYC Admin. Code § 20-563.3.

³²⁵ DCWP Study at ii.

³²⁶ A low-income community is a ZIP code where any of these three criteria are met: a) the ZIP code’s poverty rate is 20% or greater; b) the ZIP code’s median family income is less than or equal to 80% of the statewide median family income; or c) the ZIP code is in a metropolitan area and has a median family income less than or equal to 80% of the metropolitan area’s median family income.

³²⁷ Based on analysis of historic data tracking consumer response to fee increases.

³²⁸ DoorDash 2021 Economic Impact Report, <https://doordashimpact.com/media/2022-DoorDash-EIR-Report.pdf> (pg 7).

³²⁹ DCWP Study at 7.

³³⁰ Id. at 36.

lowest density of restaurants and other businesses where delivery is the least efficient. Unfortunately, this means that the communities – especially those in boroughs outside of Manhattan and in outlying areas of the city – that are already the most underserved will likely feel the greatest adverse impacts.

e. Recommended Revisions to Mitigate Adverse Impacts

Recommendation: The Agency should omit proposed Section 7-810(c) from the final rule and adjust the pay rate directly applicable to “trip time” under Section 7-810(b) to reflect appropriate compensation. Under the proposed rule, platforms are required to pay $23.82 per hour during engaged or “trip time” starting in 2025. Using data from platforms, the Agency could identify a static, industry-wide multiplier that would apply to this rate and reflect non-trip time on the platform that the City deems “necessary” rather than all online time. We would recommend that this time deemed necessary be calculated as the time preceding an accepted offer. This is consistent with how other studies of independent, app-based work have evaluated this period of time.³³¹ This approach will ensure that delivery worker pay accurately reflects engaged time and additional time the City deems necessary rather than periods where a worker is actually fulfilling offers on another platform or working another job, rejecting offers in hopes of a superior offer in the future, or not interested in performing services altogether.

After the total non-trip time deemed necessary for the industry is calculated using the approach above, it can be divided by total trip time for the industry during that period in order to determine the appropriate static multiplier for purposes of pay under proposed 7-810(b). The data and assumptions in the Agency’s study allow us to estimate this multiplier. Specifically, the study determined that workers receive offers every 4 minutes³³² and that 2.5 deliveries per hour is feasible.³³³³³⁴³³⁵ Together, this implies an average delivery time of 20 minutes³³⁷ and therefore a multiplier of 1.20.³³⁸ With this multiplier, platforms would be required to pay a food delivery worker $28.58 per hour – roughly $5.00 more per hour than under the proposed rule – during trip time starting in 2025 ($$23.82 \times 1.20 = \28.58). Using a trip time multiplier of 1.20 to reflect this non-trip time would also be consistent with Seattle’s recently-adopted minimum pay law for app-based delivery workers which adopted a 1.17 trip time multiplier (“associated cost factor”) that is meant to “reasonably compensate[s] app-based workers for the time that app-based workers spend working or engaged to wait for work without compensation.”³³⁶

Eliminating the requirement to base delivery worker pay on the total amount of time that workers are online would address many of the concerns identified in the sections above. This approach would:

³³¹ Hourly Earnings for App-Based Drivers and Food Delivery Workers in MA, BW Research Partnership, <https://independentmass.org/wp-content/uploads/2022/07/MA-App-Driver-Earnings-Report-FINAL.pdf> (March 2021); Platform Driving in Seattle, Cornell, https://ecommons.cornell.edu/bitstream/handle/1813/74305/Cornell_Seattle_Uber_Lyft_Project_Report_Final_Version_JDD_accessibility_edits_7_14_2020 (July 2020).

³³² DCWP study at 16.

³³³ Id. at ii.

³³⁴ minutes / 2.5 – 4 minutes.

³³⁵ minutes / 20 minutes.

³³⁶ Seattle Code § 8.37.020.

- guarantee that food delivery workers earn the minimum pay rate under the proposed rule for all of the “trip time” that they are engaged with a delivery;
- guarantee that food delivery workers are compensated for a reasonable amount of online time deemed necessary between accepted delivery offers;
- allow platforms to maintain the flexibility that is highly valued by food delivery workers and the main reason that they chose app-based work; and
- limit adverse impacts in cost and service to NYC families and local restaurants and businesses.

In several respects, the Agency has also looked to the TLC’s regulations governing minimum pay for rideshare drivers in developing these proposed regulations applicable to food delivery workers. The recommended approach outlined above is also more consistent with the TLC’s most recent regulations responding to driver concerns related to flexibility which create a static utilization rate (except in extreme circumstances)³³⁷ applicable to trip time for rideshare drivers and is consistent across all platforms in the industry.

If the Agency declines to omit proposed Section 7-810(c) and implement the recommendations above, it should – at a minimum – limit the scope of “on-call time” under the proposed rule in order to moderate adverse impacts. Specifically, the Agency should revise the definition of “on-call time” to include only online time during shifts where a food delivery worker also has trip time. This approach will still result in significant adverse impacts for NYC families and restaurants, but those impacts will be reduced compared to the current proposed text. Similarly, platforms will still be incentivized to reduce flexibility in order to reduce the amount of online time that needs to be factored into aggregate pay, but, with this change, that incentive will be tempered to some extent and the impacts to flexibility somewhat reduced.

II. The final rule should provide platforms with necessary time to implement regulations of this complexity

The proposed rule adopts novel requirements related to food delivery worker pay. Implementing these minimum pay regulations will be a major undertaking for covered platforms, necessitating hundreds of hours of engineering work, expansive new record collection and storage processes, and comprehensive assessments of the delivery services currently being provided throughout the city. Thirty days’ notice following promulgation of the final rule is grossly inadequate implementation time for a policy of this magnitude and complexity.

Recommendation: DCWP should provide at least 120 days following adoption of the final rule before the regulations are effective. Other recent local laws imposing new obligations on delivery platforms have provided up to 180 days for compliance even though many of these obligations entailed less onerous operational changes than are required here.³³⁸ Ensuring that the effective date reflects the ³³⁷ Recently-adopted TLC regulations establish a single utilization rate for rideshare platforms unless their platform-specific utilization rates go above or below a range. Note that trip time under TLC regulations is limited to time transporting a passenger. 35 NYC Rules § 59D-22.

³³⁸ See NYC Local Laws 113, 114, 116 of 2021. We also note that the recently-adopted minimum pay law for app-based workers in Seattle provided platforms with approximately 18 months to implement the requirements. Seattle Code § 6.208.020.

implementation challenges inherent in minimum pay regulations will help protect against unintended errors, minimize compliance costs, and limit potential adverse service impacts for food delivery workers, local businesses, and consumers who rely on delivery platforms.

III. The final rule should allow platforms to choose to either pay the workers' compensation component or provide occupational accident insurance to workers

According to the Agency, the $23.82-per-hour pay rate required under proposed Section 7-810 includes $1.70 per hour “to compensate for expected income loss and medical expenses associated with on-the-job injuries that app delivery workers experience.”³³⁹ But, under the proposed rule, this “workers' compensation component” of the pay rate is required irrespective of whether a platform is already providing injury insurance.

DoorDash, for example, maintains occupational accident insurance to protect NYC Dashers who suffer an injury while making a delivery on the platform. The policy covers medical expenses up to $1,000,000, and provides disability payments equal to 50% of a Dasher's average weekly earnings up to a maximum allowance of $500.00 per week minus other income. It also includes survivor benefits of up to $200,000 for eligible dependents. This coverage is available automatically to Dashers with no deductibles, co-pays, or premium payments required.

Requiring platforms to pay the workers' compensation component even though they already provide injury insurance is detrimental to workers since many platforms will rationally choose to drop their injury insurance coverage to offset the cost. At the same time, it is implausible that food delivery workers will use the additional $1.70 per hour to purchase their own injury insurance for a variety of reasons—they may not know how, they may not think they need it, etc. As a result, this will leave workers with a small amount of additional cash but generally uninsured if an accident does occur, a far worse outcome than the status quo.

Consider, for example, that a food delivery worker would need to work around 300 hours in order to accumulate the same amount of money as the weekly income replacement benefit under DoorDash's existing occupational accident policy. Similarly, consider a food delivery worker who is injured during their tenth delivery – the proposed rule encourages platforms to eliminate injury insurance that would have made $1,000,000 in medical coverage available irrespective of how long they have worked and, instead, the worker will receive an additional $10–20 for several hours on the job.

Recommendation: The final rule should require platforms to pay the workers' compensation component of the pay rate only if they do not provide occupational accident insurance to food delivery workers on their platform at no cost. This policy will actually incentivize platforms to provide insurance that compensates for income loss and medical expenses associated with on-the-job injuries rather than the reverse.

California is the only jurisdiction that currently requires platforms to maintain occupational accident insurance for workers,³⁴⁰ and the Agency should mirror those standards in determining whether an accident insurance policy is sufficient to preclude providing the workers' compensation component of the pay rate. Specifically, California requires platforms to provide coverage of medical expenses up to $1,000,000, disability payments equal to 2/3 of the app-based worker's average weekly earnings (up to state maximum under workers' comp) from all platforms for up to 104 weeks following the injury, death benefits for the benefit of spouses, children, or other dependents of the worker, and burial expenses.

³³⁹ DCWP Study at 30.

³⁴⁰ Cal. Business and Professions Code, Section 7455.

IV. The final rule should incorporate a more realistic accounting of expenses

a. Given the high rate of ownership, smartphones should not be a factor in calculating the expense component of the minimum pay rate

According to the Agency's study, the $2.26-per-hour expense component of the minimum pay rate under the proposed rule includes $0.62 per hour in smartphone expenses. It is illogical to presume that delivery workers are purchasing smartphones, even in part, in order to participate in app-based delivery work. For example, studies show that, in 2021, 95% of Americans aged 18–49 owned smartphones.³⁴¹ The Department's study shows that the vast majority of delivery workers fall into this age group.

In addition to making platforms responsible for smartphone expenses, the Agency made aggressive assumptions about the level of those expenses. For example, the Agency's study claims that workers replace their phones at a rate of 1.74 per year.⁴⁵ This is inconsistent with the rate at which new phone models are released by manufacturers and data showing that fewer than one in two Americans purchases a new smartphone each year.³⁴² Also, remarkably, 1.74 is the purported replacement rate of e-bike batteries.⁴⁷ It seems likely that at least one of these numbers is in error. In fact, attempted replication of the 1.74 figure using the public survey data yields a smaller average of 1.49, and a median of 1. These odd results may also be caused by biased responses to the Agency's delivery worker survey.³⁴³

Recommendation: The Agency should exclude smartphone expenses in determining the expense component of the minimum pay rate under the final rule.

b. The Agency determination of expenses relies on incorrect assumptions regarding hours of work

Even after excluding smartphone expenses, the remaining estimated expenses are far higher than calculated by other studies. For example, a recent study of costs for DoorDash and Uber Eats food ³⁴¹ Share of adults in the United States who owned a smartphone from 2015 to 2021 by age group, Statista, <https://www.statista.com/statistics/489255/percentage-of-us-smartphone-owners-by-age-group/> ⁴⁵ DCWP Study at 19.

³⁴² Number of smartphone unit shipments in the United States from 2013 to 2025, Statista, <https://www.statista.com/statistics/619811/smartphone-unit-shipments-in-the-us/> ⁴⁷ DCWP Study at 19.

³⁴³ In soliciting responses from workers, the Agency's NYC Delivery Worker Survey states that it "is part of a new law to raise pay for app delivery workers" and that "answers will help NYC set a minimum pay rate that reflects your expenses and needs." Providing this information about how the Agency intended to use the results of the survey biases the responses – survey participants may be incentivized to provide answers which suggest the most unfavorable expenses and earnings environment. See A Catalog of Biases in Questionnaires, <https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC1323316>. The survey is not only biased but also unrepresentative. For example, it finds that 77% of e-bike delivery workers report that delivery work is delivery workers in NYC found e-bike costs to be $0.241 per mile,⁴⁹ or $1.07 per hour based on the Agency's assumptions of 1.77 miles per trip and 2.5 trips per hour. While this study did not include the replacement cost of batteries or the cost of accessories, the main discrepancy between the Agency's findings and the findings of the study is driven by an incorrect assumption around the number of hours workers work.

The Agency assumes food delivery workers work 21.3 hours per week and uses "standard cost accounting principles, in which the total cost of an input is allocated to a function (in this case, app delivery) based on percent use."⁵⁰ However, as the Agency points out in a footnote, "this analysis excludes weeks in which the worker did not perform any work for delivery apps."⁵¹ The Agency also acknowledges that "[i]n the fourth quarter of 2021, 39% of the unique worker phone numbers in the Agency's data were associated with deliveries in two or fewer weeks",⁵² and only half the delivery workers (61,000 / 122,104) were working in any given week.⁵³ Finally, 39% of this 21.3 hour figure is not spent on delivery and therefore not incurring costs.⁵⁴

These figures also overestimate hours worked because they do not account for multi-apping. The Agency's own study calculates that "workers spend 17.7% of working time connected to more than one app."⁵⁵ The actual figure is likely to be substantially higher, as the study did not include data from app-based delivery platforms like Instacart and Shipt, smaller delivery platforms such as Chowbus, or any rideshare companies. This means that the actual time spent working for any individual platform is lower still.

In other words, workers are not averaging anywhere close to 21.3 hours per week. Rather, our data show that Dashers in New York City markets averaged 3.18 hours per week on delivery in Q3 2022. This erroneous overestimation of hours worked, combined with the use of "standard cost accounting principles," leads the Agency to allocate more expenses to delivery work than other their main or only job (pg. 15) while simultaneously reporting that "39% of the unique worker phone numbers in the Department's data were associated with deliveries in two or fewer weeks." These two numbers cannot both be true at the same time; the likeliest explanation is simply that the survey is not representative.

⁴⁹ Public Hearing Written Testimony, NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (June 15, 2022), at 67, 70-71 (letter of DoorDash, Inc. and Uber Technologies, Inc.).

⁵⁰ DCWP Study at 20.

⁵¹ Id. at 30.

⁵² Id. at 12.

⁵³ Id. ⁵⁴ Id. at 17.

⁵⁵ Id. at 5.

uses and therefore inflate hourly expenses that platforms must compensate for through the expense component of the minimum pay rate.

Recommendation: The expense component of the minimum pay rate should be reduced to $1.07 per hour to better align the cost of the component with actual expenses incurred by food delivery workers. This amount is similar to the result obtained by scaling the 21.3 hours per week figure by the amount of time spent on delivery (61%), before even taking into account zero-hour weeks. This approach yields hourly expenses of $1.00.

c. The Department fails to consider the tax deductibility of expenses for independent contractors

According to the Agency, the $2.26-per-hour expense component of the minimum pay rate under the proposed rule is meant to compensate food delivery workers for necessary expenses they incur to perform delivery work.³⁴⁴ However, as independent contractors, food delivery workers are also able to deduct business expenses on their taxes.³⁴⁵ For example, they can reduce taxable income by the cost of expenses such as e-bike batteries, charging, and depreciation. By failing to factor in tax deductibility of expenses for food delivery workers, the proposed rule creates a double benefit: the minimum pay rate compensates workers for expenses they are likely to incur but, because it's not a direct reimbursement, the worker can still deduct those same expenses from their taxable income.

Recommendation: The expense component of the minimum pay rate should be discounted to reflect tax deductibility. We recommend this discount be 28%, based on the 22% marginal federal tax rate for households earning $41,776 to $89,075³⁴⁶ plus the 5.97% marginal state tax rate for households earning $21,401 to $80,650.³⁴⁷ Although the Agency's study failed to ask about delivery worker's total household income, these tax rates were selected because one goal of the Agency's proposed rule was to ensure that food delivery workers who work ~20 hours per week make $33,670 annually on average from just that part-time work, and we expect their income to considerably more if working full-time across several jobs.³⁴⁸

V. The proposed inflation adjustment is inconsistent with minimum wage laws and is unduly burdensome

The proposed rule incorporates an annual inflation adjustment. Although we recognize the importance for pay to reflect the increasing costs of living, the magnitudes and frequencies of the adjustments are not only wildly out of step with minimum wage laws, but also operationally burdensome to implement on such a frequent basis.

First, the suggested inflation adjustment is inconsistent with changes in the minimum wage in New York. For example, the minimum wage of $15 an hour for large employers in NYC has not increased since 2018 and is not slated for increases in the immediate future.³⁴⁹ The proposed food delivery worker pay rate of $23.82 is more than 50% higher, and that gap will only grow if it is adjusted for ³⁴⁴ Id. at 30.

³⁴⁵ Platform Driving in Seattle, Institute for Workplace Studies, Cornell University, https://ecommons.cornell.edu/bitstream/handle/1813/74305/Cornell_Seattle_Uber_Lyft_Project_Report_Final_Version_JDD_accessibility_edits_7_14_2020.pdf?sequence=1&isAllowed=y (July 2020).

³⁴⁶ IRS provides tax inflation adjustments for tax year 2022, Internal Revenue Service, <https://www.irs.gov/newsroom/irs-provides-tax-inflation-adjustments-for-tax-year-2022>.

³⁴⁷ New York State Income Tax: Rates and Who Pays in 2022, Nerdwallet, <https://www.nerdwallet.com/article/taxes/new-york-state-tax> (Sept 2022).

³⁴⁸ DCWP Study at 35.

³⁴⁹ New York State's Minimum Wage, NY.GOV, <https://www.ny.gov/new-york-states-minimum-wage/new-york-states-minimum-wage>.⁶² Shaw, Kathryn. 2022. "Economics of Flexible Work Schedules in the App-Based Economy." <https://independentmass.org/wp-content/uploads/2022/07/Shaw-Report-FINAL.pdf>.

inflation, while the minimum wage remains capped at $15 an hour. Moreover, the $15 minimum wage applies to work that is, in general, much less flexible than app-based delivery work: retail work, for example, or other jobs that require working during designated shifts with little control or predictability. A study by Stanford economist Kathryn Shaw reports that “the ability to set one’s own schedule is the equivalent of an approximately 9% increase in wages.”⁶²

The inflation adjustments threaten to further exacerbate this discrepancy. In particular, the proposed rule sets rates of $17.87 in April 2023, $20.25 in April 2024, and $23.82 in April 2025. Annual inflation for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers in the NYC MSA as of November 2022 was 5.7%;³⁵⁰ if this rate persists, that implies inflation-adjusted rates of $18.89 in 2023, $22.62 in 2024, and $28.13—nearly $30 an hour, or twice the minimum wage—in 2025.³⁵¹

Aside from the actual pay levels resulting from inflation adjustments, annual pay adjustments impose undue burdens on platform companies. When high inflation necessitates large increases in delivery worker pay, companies will need to re-evaluate their business priorities, offerings, pricing, services, and more. Re-optimizing each of these parameters every year is costly, burdensome, and unnecessary. This approach also creates an unreliable environment for delivery workers. Predictable increases—for example, the gradual ramp-up to $15/hour in minimum wage published years in advance—are much more tenable for businesses. Alternatively, inflation adjustments could be limited to a more manageable frequency, such as once every five years, in order to minimize undue burden while still allowing for cost-of-living adjustments.

Recommendation: If the final rule includes adjustments for inflation, those adjustments should occur no more often than once every five years once the initial pay rate of $23.82 is reached in April 2025.

VI. The final rule should not apply the minimum pay requirements in unequal ways to similar businesses

In June, DCWP issued final regulations implementing a package of local laws related to third-party delivery service workers. Those regulations included a provision – Section 7-802(a) – establishing that all trips offered to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service are covered by the requirements of Title 20, Chapter 15 of the Administrative Code, regardless of whether the trip is from a food service establishment.

The provision treats similar businesses in unequal ways based on arbitrary characteristics, a treatment that will be worsened once the minimum pay regulations are effective. Specifically, Section 7-802(a) extended nearly all of Chapter 15’s requirements to deliveries not only from restaurants, but also from every other type of business, such as grocery and convenience stores. The regulations did not, however, expand the definition of which companies are subject to the law. Accordingly, a company that facilitates delivery from restaurants and other businesses is required to comply with the law with respect to all of its deliveries. But a company that facilitates deliveries only from non-restaurants is never required to comply with the delivery platform laws at all.

³⁵⁰ Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers – New York-Newark-Jersey City, NY-NJ-PA – November 2022, Bureau of Labor Statistics, <https://www.bls.gov/regions/new-york-new-jersey/data/xg-tables/ro2xgcpiny1967.htm>.

³⁵¹ Calculated as $17.87 x 1.057; $20.25 x 1.057 x 1.057; and $23.82 x 1.057 x 1.057 x 1.057, respectively.

The provision is problematic – from constitutional, administrative law, and practical standpoints – because both sets of companies offer overlapping competing services. For example, some companies that facilitate restaurant delivery also facilitate delivery from grocery and convenience stores. And other companies facilitate delivery from grocery and convenience stores only. If the provision remains, the new minimum pay regulation would apply to non-restaurant deliveries facilitated by the first company, but not to those facilitated by the second company. Thus, two identical orders from the same local business, fulfilled using similar app-based technology, and delivered by the exact same person, are not regulated the same way under DCWP regulations. In addition to placing one company at a competitive disadvantage, this approach creates confusion for delivery workers – they’ll receive minimum pay protections for a delivery from a local business using the one platform but not receive any protections for a delivery of the exact same item from the exact same store using another platform.

Treating these two sets of companies differently is arbitrary and irrational. The classification is drawn based on whether the company facilitates deliveries from restaurants in addition to facilitating delivery from other types of retail establishments. But whether a company also facilitates deliveries from restaurants as part of separate transactions has nothing to do with regulating delivery from non-restaurants. The relevant service is still facilitating the delivery of the same item from the same local business—something Section 7-802(a) regulates differently based on which platform facilitates that delivery.

Recommendation: The final rule should omit Section 7-802(a) to avoid arbitrarily treating deliveries by similarly-situated businesses unequally and impermissibly expanding the scope of Chapter 15.

VII. Recordkeeping and reporting requirements under the final rule should be limited to those necessary to demonstrate compliance

The proposed rule adds extensive new recordkeeping and reporting requirements to existing Section 7-805. While some of these requirements make sense – for example, the requirement to record a food delivery worker's trip time and amount of compensation – others are completely unnecessary to demonstrate compliance with the minimum pay requirements or other provisions of Subchapter H.

For example, proposed Section 7-805(c)(9)(iv) requires platforms to maintain records of each instance that a food delivery worker is connected with the app, even if not in “on-call” or “on-trip” time. No obligations under the proposed rule relate to this period of time, during which a worker may be updating their account information, checking notifications from the platform, or reviewing pay statements.

Similarly, proposed Section 7-805(e) requires platforms to produce extensive reports to the Agency concerning essentially all matters of platform operation. Among other information, these reports would need to include: (1) number of customers who received deliveries; (2) number of completed and canceled deliveries; (3) total amount charged to customers; (4) fees charged to customers, itemized by type; (5) number of merchants; and, (6) fees charged to merchants, itemized by type. Again, none of this arbitrarily required information is rationally related to compliance with the proposed rule or any other provision of Subchapter H.

Recordkeeping requirements that are arguably necessary are already extensive and complex. The Agency should not significantly increase the administrative burden on platforms by requiring maintenance and reporting of information that is both sensitive and unnecessary.

Recommendation: The final rule should omit any recordkeeping or reporting requirements that are not necessary to demonstrate compliance with the proposed rule, including proposed Section 7-805(c)(9)(iv) and the information required under proposed Section 7-805(e) enumerated above.

* * *

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments as the Agency undertakes this rulemaking and for your consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

Sascha Owen
Senior Manager of Government Relations for New York

Comment: Second Proposed Rule for Minimum Pay Rate for Food Delivery Workers

Stephen G. Bronars, Ph.D.

Background

1. I am an economist specializing in economic and statistical analysis of labor and employment issues. I am currently a Partner at Edgeworth Economics, L.L.C., a consulting firm that provides clients with objective expert economic and financial analysis for complex litigation and public policy debates. I worked previously at Welch Consulting for more than eight years and prior to that I was the Leroy Denman Jr. Regents Professor of Economics at the University of Texas at Austin.

2. I earned a PhD in Economics from the University of Chicago. I have published numerous peer reviewed papers on labor economics, econometrics, and applied statistics in academic journals. I have also written articles for trade publications on topics related to the statistical analysis of human resource data. I have submitted expert reports and testified on statistics and analysis of class certification and collective action topics in labor and employment matters, on damages and liability in discrimination cases, and on sampling and statistical analysis in other labor and employment matters.

Assignment

3. I have been hired by DoorDash, Inc. (DoorDash) to review and comment on the Second Proposed Rule by the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) that establishes minimum pay requirements for food delivery workers in NYC. In December 2022 I presented comments on the expected economic impact of the DCWP's First Proposed Rule. This report represents my preliminary comments on the Second Proposed Rule. I have been unable to provide a detailed and comprehensive assessment of the impact of the regulations because of the limited available time.

Introduction

4. This report explains why the changes and revisions incorporated in the Second Proposed Rule, based on comments received by the DCWP, are inadequate to address the fundamental problems in the DCWP's First Proposed Rule. The minimum pay rate proposed by the DCWP is still excessively high and will still have a negative effect on the NYC economy and adversely impact restaurants, delivery workers, customers and other merchants. Just like the First Proposed Rule, the Second Proposed Rule’s minimum pay rate will substantially increase the cost of each food delivery, resulting in fewer food delivery orders, fewer delivery workers, fewer jobs in restaurants and stores (merchants), higher delivery fees for merchants and consumers, and less economic output in NYC.³⁵²

5. The proposed minimum pay rate will harm the earnings opportunities for delivery workers by substantially increasing the cost of their services. The policy requires apps to either effectively pay delivery workers for all time “logged in” to an app even when not making (or even considering making) deliveries, or pay a substantial surcharge to be able to compensate only for delivery time.³⁵³ The DCWP and the apps do not know what activities delivery workers are engaged in while “logged in” to an app but not making deliveries. Despite this lack of information, the DCWP erroneously refers to time on the app, but not making deliveries, as “oncall” time. The proposed policy mandates that apps pay workers about $18 per hour (increasing to about $20 per hour in 2025, not accounting for inflation) for time “logged in” to the app but not making deliveries.

6. The Second Proposed Rule gives apps an option to pay delivery workers only for their delivery time if they pay an additional 66.7% surcharge above the minimum pay rate. This effectively increases the minimum pay rate from about $18 per hour to nearly $30 per hour of delivery time. As I explain in this comment, the DCWP’s alternative method for meeting the minimum pay requirement is not a viable method for apps because of the excessive implied surcharge. Some apps may initially choose this option, despite the high surcharge, until they can fully respond to the new regulations.

7. Eventually, most apps are likely to use the standard method for meeting the minimum pay requirement because of the excessive implicit surcharge in the alternative method. The standard method is flawed because workers will effectively receive the same hourly pay rate (excluding tips) whether they are making food deliveries or are merely “logged in” to the app

³⁵² The DCWP continues to incorrectly assume that apps which provide restaurant deliveries do deliver food for other merchants. Throughout this report I will refer to the restaurants and other businesses who use apps to aid with their food deliveries as merchants.

³⁵³ The standard method requires apps to pay delivery workers for “logged in” time in the aggregate, but not at an individual worker level. The higher an app’s “logged in” time is relative to delivery time, the higher the cost per delivery.

and free to engage in any activity. During “logged in” time delivery workers may be focused on other activities and passively rejecting offers. As noted in my initial comment, requiring apps to pay for all “logged in” time will incentivize apps to contract with delivery workers who are more likely to accept delivery offers.

8. The time that delivery workers spend evaluating and often declining delivery offers provides economic value to delivery workers, merchants, and consumers. Delivery workers have the freedom to choose which delivery offers to accept and when to log in, providing them with more work schedule flexibility than workers in nearly all other jobs. The DCWP’s study – A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC – found that delivery workers decline more delivery offers than they accept. Workers receive offers every 4 minutes on average, but only accept offers every 11 minutes on average. The proposed minimum pay rate will decrease work schedule flexibility and be particularly harmful to the delivery workers who place the highest value on this flexibility. The DCWP did not attempt to quantify the harm to workers from a decline in schedule flexibility.

9. When delivery workers are free to decline inconvenient and less desirable delivery offers, it results in greater delivery efficiency. The Second Proposed Rule continues to erroneously assume that declined delivery offers contribute to inefficiencies. This is incorrect because the process of finding the best match between a delivery route and an available delivery worker involves a sequential process in which some workers “logged in” to the app will decline offers until the most efficient match is reached. Moreover, the Rule assumes that workers would like to complete more deliveries per hour -- but, based on the rate at which offers are accepted and declined (cited above) that is not true. Delivery workers clearly have the opportunity to accept many more offers than they do, which indicates that they would not prefer to complete more deliveries per hour. A stated goal of the proposed policy is to reduce the share of offers declined by delivery workers and increase delivery time per hour of “logged in” time. This will reduce the flexibility of delivery workers’ schedules, increase costs, and cause greater inefficiency.

10. The minimum pay requirement is excessively high because it includes $1.68 per hour as compensation for accident-related expenses and income loss, even for apps that offer accident insurance to their delivery workers. The DCWP did not propose a lower minimum pay rate for apps that offer accident insurance to their delivery workers even though insurance is a more effective and efficient method for mitigating accident risk than receiving slightly more compensation per hour. Although accidents are rare, when they occur the costs to the delivery worker can be substantial if the app does not provide accident insurance. The DCWP proposal is counterproductive because it will likely deter apps from offering accident insurance.

11. The minimum pay rate is further flawed because it includes $2.26 per hour to compensate food delivery workers for the costs of cell phones and e-bikes. The calculations justifying this level of work-related expenses appear to assume that food delivery workers are full-time and full-year workers. This assumption is clearly incorrect. In my previous comment, I used bureau of Labor Statistics data to show that app-based food delivery workers in NYC spend less time making deliveries each week than the average part-time worker and do not make any deliveries in many weeks each year. A more sensible expense reimbursement calculation would recognize that food delivery workers use their cell phones and e-bikes primarily for personal use and not their delivery work.

App-Based Delivery Workers Benefit from Flexible Work Schedules

12. The First Proposed Rule cited data showing that in a given week less than half of individuals with accounts for one or more apps accepted any food delivery offers, and when they worked they spent less than 13 hours per week, on average, making deliveries. The data cited by the DCWP also showed that delivery workers decline more delivery offers than they accept; during “logged in” time they receive a delivery offer every 4 minutes but accept an offer only once every 11 minutes. Finally, the DCWP acknowledges that delivery workers maintain active accounts on multiple apps and are sometimes connected to more than one app concurrently.

13. Taken together, the data show that work opportunities available to app-based food delivery workers are relatively unique. App-based food delivery workers can choose to work fewer hours per week and weeks per year than many part-time workers. The autonomy and work schedule flexibility enjoyed by food delivery workers is unavailable for most workers in most businesses.

14. The DCWP has not acknowledged that app-based food delivery workers' uniquely flexible schedules provide value to workers. The DCWP has not studied how much their proposal would harm food delivery workers by limiting their work flexibility. My initial comment cited a Harvard Business School study estimating that the loss of work schedule flexibility is equivalent to a 5.3% pay reduction in weekly earnings for the average food delivery worker and could be equivalent to a 15% earnings reduction for some delivery workers. The Second Proposed Rule does not consider the loss to delivery workers from a pay policy that gives apps an incentive to reduce schedule flexibility by limiting the rate at which delivery offers are declined.

The Alternative Method for Meeting the Minimum Pay Requirement is Not Viable

15. In the Second Proposed Rule, the DCWP introduced an alternative method for meeting the minimum pay requirement. The alternative method implicitly assumes that 60% of "logged in" time is spent making deliveries and no delivery work occurs during 40% of "logged in" time. The alternative method adjusts the minimum pay rate for delivery time to account for these assumptions by dividing the mandated minimum pay rate by 0.60 if apps were to pay only for delivery time. The higher the share of delivery time as a fraction of total "logged in" time, the lower is the cost of the alternative method. The DCWP's assumption of a 60% delivery time share is based on calculations that seem to arbitrarily exclude the app with the highest delivery time share.

16. The alternative method allows apps to pay food delivery workers only for their delivery time if a 66.67% surcharge is added to the mandated minimum pay rate. Assuming the 90% phase-in of the mandated minimum pay rate in 2023 as described in the Second Proposed Rule, apps can pay delivery workers $17.96 per hour for all "logged in" time or $29.93 per hour only for delivery time. While the alternative method allows platforms to only directly pay for delivery time, any benefits of the alternative method are offset by the high surcharge required for apps to pay workers using this model.

17. The Second Proposed Rule indicates that it expects DoorDash and other apps to choose the alternative method. The alternative method offers a more predictable pay rate per hour of delivery time for apps, but it may not be viable once apps have adjusted to the regulation because of the high implicit surcharge. The alternative and standard methods have the same effective hourly pay rate if delivery time is 60% of the total time a worker is logged in, on average. As apps find ways to decrease the rate at which delivery offers are declined and increase delivery time as a share of total time “logged in,” the standard method will have a cost advantage over the alternative method despite requiring apps to pay delivery workers for time that they are not making deliveries.

18. When apps select the standard method, the Second Proposed Rule gives apps an incentive to restrict flexible work options for existing delivery workers and to contract with delivery workers who are less likely to reject delivery offers because they increase an app’s ratio of delivery time to total “logged in” time. Delivery workers who place a high value on work flexibility are more likely to reject delivery offers and will decrease an app’s ratio of delivery time to total “logged in” time. Apps that contract with delivery workers who place a lower value on work flexibility, and reject a smaller percentage of delivery offers, have a cost advantage over other apps.

19. For example, wage costs per hour of delivery time will be 8.33% higher for apps using the alternative method compared to an app using the standard method where delivery time is 65% of “logged in” time. Similarly, the alternative method will cost 16.67% more per hour than the standard method if the app has delivery time equal to 70% of total “logged in” time.

20. The alternative method introduced in the Second Proposed Rule is not a realistic choice because the 66.7% surcharge means it may not be viable months after the minimum pay rate is adopted. The minimum pay requirement and competition between apps will cause an increase in delivery time as a share of total “logged in” time as apps try to obtain a cost advantage under the standard method and competition causes apps to move from the alternative method to the standard method. If the alternative method had a substantially lower effective surcharge, it would be much more attractive to apps and apps would have less incentive to choose the standard method, and less incentive to stop contracting with workers who value schedule flexibility.

The DCWP's Second Proposed Rule Discourages Apps From Providing Accident Insurance

21. The Second Proposed Rule states that a higher minimum pay rate for food delivery workers is needed to “compensate food delivery workers for their exclusion from the workers’ compensation benefits available to most workers.” The proposed minimum pay rate includes an additional $1.68 per hour as an apparent substitute for accident insurance benefits. The Second Proposed Rule states that the additional $1.68 per hour “is not to enable workers to purchase their own insurance” but instead “to compensate workers for lost income and out-of-pocket medical expenses associated with job-related injuries.” This argument makes little economic sense; an additional $1.68 per hour is a very poor substitute for occupational accident insurance. A sensible policy, that was not considered by the DCWP, is to allow an app to pay a lower minimum pay rate per hour if it provides accident insurance to its delivery workers. This would give apps an incentive to offer insurance, which is a more effective and efficient way to mitigate the effects of accident risk than slightly higher pay per hour.

22. An additional $1.68 per hour can help a worker cover lost income and out-of-pocket expenses from an accident only if enough hours are worked to accumulate sufficient savings before an accident occurs. Insurance is preferred to slightly higher pay and savings because accidents are unpredictable. If an unfortunate delivery worker suffers an accident it probably will occur before they accumulated enough savings from the $1.68 in extra pay per hour to cover even modest expenses and lost income.

23. Although accidents are rare, it would require substantial savings to cover all accident-related costs if the delivery worker is not covered by accident insurance. According to the CDC in 2020 the average medical cost of a bicycle accident that resulted in a visit to an emergency department was $7,382, with an average work loss cost was $1,352. It would require 4,394 work hours, for an additional $1.68 per hour to cover the expected medical costs of one bicycle accident that resulted in an emergency department visit. The average medical cost of a bicycle accident that resulted in a hospital stay is $59,402 with an average work loss cost of $16,219.³⁵⁴ It would require over 35,350 works, or about 17 years of full-time work, for an additional $1.68 per hour to cover the expected medical costs of one bicycle accident that resulted in a hospital stay. Mitigation of the risk of unexpected accident-related costs are most efficiently addressed through insurance coverage, and the pooling of risks across many delivery workers. The DCWP's preference for higher hourly pay, and the personal savings of each delivery worker is ineffective, inefficient, and will leave delivery workers exposed to avoidable financial risks..

³⁵⁴ These figures are from the website Cost of Injury & Calculators | WISQARS | Injury Center | CDC.

24. All rational delivery workers, who are concerned about accident risk, prefer an accident insurance policy to a slightly higher hourly pay rate. Unfortunately, the mandated $1.68 per hour in extra pay, to compensate for possible accident-related expenses, will discourage apps from paying twice for the same accident risk. An app is unlikely to pay accident insurance premiums for its delivery workers if NYC mandates a higher hourly rate to compensate for possible accident-related expenses, even if the app purchased accident insurance for its delivery workers. The DCWP could avoid this issue by allowing a lower minimum pay rate for apps that provide accident insurance.

25. The Second Proposed Rule notes that DoorDash provides, at no cost to workers, generous occupational accident insurance for its delivery workers who may suffer an injury while making a delivery on the platform.³⁵⁵ The policy covers medical expenses up to $1,000,000, and provides disability payments equal to as much as 50% of average weekly earnings. This coverage is available automatically to delivery workers with no deductibles, co-pays, or premium payments required. The DCWP's criticism of DoorDash's insurance coverage is that accidents that occur while workers are logged in to the app, but not making deliveries, are not covered by the policy. The DCWP, however, does not explain why it cannot identify minimum acceptable standards for such injury insurance that would qualify for a waiver of the $1.68 per hour pay component..

26. A likely outcome of a minimum pay rate that includes an additional $1.68 per hour to cover possible accident-related expenses, is that delivery workers will be under-insured, and possibly uninsured against the risk of an accident. If the minimum pay policy is implemented, and accidents inevitably occur, injured delivery workers will likely be in a much more difficult financial position than they would be if the policy credited apps for providing insurance. The $1.68 surcharge proposed by the DCWP should be waived for apps that provide accident insurance.

³⁵⁵ https://help.doordash.com/dashers/s/article/Occupational-Accident-Policy-FAQ?language=en_US

The DCWP Overstates Expenses for App-Based Delivery Workers

27. The DCWP calculates expenses for e-bikes and cell phones that amount to $2.26 per hour and adds that amount to the minimum pay per hour in the Second Proposed Rule. This is unchanged from the First Proposed Rule as the DCWP seems to have misunderstood the argument that excessive expense cost calculations may be related to incorrect inferences about delivery time worked and equipment purchases from a flawed worker survey. The expenses factored into the minimum pay rate are inconsistent with the fact that the typical app-based food delivery worker works fewer hours per week and fewer weeks per year than many part-time workers. Data cited in the First Proposed Rule show that the typical food delivery worker does not make food deliveries in every week and in weeks in which deliveries are made, the average worker's delivery time is 12.6 hours per week.

28. Food delivery workers' equipment expenses included in the mandated minimum pay rate per hour should be in proportion to the equipment's use for delivery work relative to personal use. Cell phones and e-bikes have considerable value to delivery workers in their non-work time and the typical app-based food delivery worker's non-work time is much higher than delivery time. Only the extra costs of using cell phones and e-bikes for delivery work, after recognizing the benefits of this equipment for personal use, should be included in the mandated minimum pay requirement.

29. The Second Proposed Rule states "all phones workers report purchasing for work with apps, are also used for personal use at typical levels, and allocates cost proportionate to use. Under this method, the expense component of the rate reflects only 37% of total phone costs." For e-bikes and e-bike accessories, the Second Proposed Rule states that the DCWP "attributes the entire cost to app delivery. Seventy percent of e-bike workers report app delivery as their only job, and another 7% as their main job. This sets a low upper limit on the amount of use such equipment could be put towards other purposes.”

30. 37% of total phone costs and 100% of e-bike costs are excessively high work-related expenses for part-time workers who do not make any deliveries during many weeks each year. Even during weeks in which deliveries are made there are many hours per week that cell phones and e-bikes are not used for deliveries but are instead devoted to personal use. The DCWP’s expense calculations seem consistent with full-time full-year workers and are purportedly justified by the worker survey data described in the First Proposed Rule. As explained in my first comment, the worker survey data are not representative of the experiences of typical food delivery workers because the survey underrepresents the experiences of typical part-time delivery workers. In addition to apparent explicit biases, the worker survey is dubious because of its lack of security and verification of responses, and the Second Proposed Rule did not adequately address these criticisms.³⁵⁶ The e-bike workers in the survey who report app delivery as their only job are not representative of all e-bike workers. Many e-bike workers who were not surveyed likely use their e-bikes primarily for non-work activities.

31. The unrepresentative worker survey data are also relied on by the DCWP to determine how often equipment and accessories are purchased for delivery work, and what types of equipment and accessories are purchased for delivery work. The responses to questions about equipment purchases and use are unreliable because the survey underrepresents part-time and part-year delivery workers who replace equipment less frequently because of their limited delivery work.

32. As noted in my original comment, there is a substantial inconsistency between the worker survey data and the delivery data supplied by the apps concerning how many hours the typical delivery worker spends making deliveries. About 46.6% of survey respondents who said they made deliveries using e-bikes indicated they worked 30 or more hours per week. In contrast, the delivery data from the apps indicate that fewer than half of workers make a delivery in a typical week, and in weeks in which at least one delivery is made, the average delivery time is 12.6 hours per week.

³⁵⁶ These criticisms are included in comments to the First Proposed Rule.

33. The relatively high frequency of individuals in the worker survey sample who claim to work 30 or more hours per week is completely inconsistent with the delivery data provided by the apps. The delivery data show that few delivery workers have as many as 30 “logged in” hours in a week; fewer than half make any deliveries in any given week, and during weeks in which at least one delivery is made, the typical delivery worker has many more hours of nonwork time than delivery time.

34. Cell phones and e-bikes have considerable value to delivery workers outside of their delivery work and the Second Proposed Rule mandates that apps subsidize the cost of e-bikes and cell phones for personal use. The DCWP’s conclusions about costs are based on inferences from an unreliable survey sample that does not adequately represent the population of delivery workers. The $2.26 per hour calculation for equipment costs is excessive because it appears to incorrectly assume that app-based food delivery workers are full-time and full-year workers. A proper accounting of cell phone and e-bike expenses for food delivery workers would require much less than $2.26 per hour to compensate workers for their use of equipment while making deliveries.

The Study Incorrectly Identifies On-Call Time for Delivery Workers

35. The DCWP continues to incorrectly identify the time that delivery workers are “logged in” but not making deliveries as “on-call time” even though the data contain no information about the wide range of activities that workers may be engaged in during this time. The use of the phrase “on-call time” is misleading and inaccurate because delivery workers can be engaged in a variety of activities while passively rejecting offers. “On-call time” typically means an employee is required by its employer to be available to work in the event of a sudden change.³⁵⁷ The DCWP’s purported justification for requiring apps to pay delivery workers at the same hourly rate when they are “logged in” but not working is rhetorical. However, simply calling time on an app “on-call time” does not justify the mandate for apps to pay delivery workers for that time.

³⁵⁷ I understand that, according to New York law, an employer must compensate a non-exempt employee with premium pay for “on-call time.”

36. App-based food delivery workers are independent contractors and free to choose whether to accept or decline a delivery offer while “logged in.” The time delivery workers are “logged in” to an app, but not completing deliveries, is not “on-call time” because they are free to reject any or all delivery offers during this time and can be engaged in a range of other activities. Appbased food delivery workers voluntarily choose when to accept a delivery offer and are not mandated to do so by the app. The proposed minimum pay rate means that delivery workers are paid at the same rate whether they are completing deliveries, waiting for a delivery offer, declining a delivery offer, or engaged in other activities and have no intention of completing any deliveries or evaluating delivery offers.

The Proposed Minimum Pay Rate Policy Will Reduce Both Schedule Flexibility and Delivery Efficiency

37. The proposed minimum pay rate policy will substantially increase the cost of app-based food deliveries and undermine the ability of apps to provide value to merchants, consumers, and delivery workers. The aggregate pay requirement disproportionately raises the costs of delivery workers who are more selective about which delivery offers to accept. As explained in the Harvard Business School study, these are the workers who place the highest value on a flexible schedule. Ironically, if apps are required to pay delivery workers for all “logged in” time they will be incentivized to contract with workers who value work flexibility the least.

38. The reduction in the number of delivery workers who value work flexibility from the platform will decrease the efficiency of the delivery process, because in the aggregate these workers receive offers “in the right place at the right time” often enough to account for a substantial portion of deliveries. The objectives of the DCWP’s minimum pay rate policy include: (i) an increase in the fraction of time that workers make deliveries while on the app, and (ii) decreases in the rate at which workers decline delivery offers. These objectives will cause a reduction in total “logged in” time, the number of available delivery workers logged in to the app at any time, and the share of “logged in” time that workers devote to deliveries, on average. There is no reason to presume that reducing the frequency with which workers decline delivery offers or increasing the number of hours per worker per week devoted to deliveries, will benefit the typical app-based delivery worker.

39. The DCWP erroneously refers to an increase in the share of “logged in” time that is accounted for as delivery time as an increase in efficiency. The DCWP makes this error because it does not recognize the benefits that delivery workers enjoy from the option to accept or decline delivery offers, or how the ability to reject inconvenient delivery offers ultimately lowers costs to merchants and consumers. If apps are required to pay workers for all “logged in” time they will be less effective in facilitating efficient deliveries.

40. The proposed minimum pay rate policy incentivizes apps to contract with workers who accept a higher fraction of delivery offers and are willing and able to work more hours per week and more weeks per year, and the DCWP never examines the impact of these changes. These changes have an adverse impact on delivery workers who prefer shorter workweeks and more flexible work schedules.

41. An apparent goal of the proposed minimum pay rate is to achieve a 51% increase in the number of deliveries completed per hour by individuals who are logged in to the app. The DCWP mistakenly refers to an increase in deliveries per hour logged in to the app as an increase in productivity. Because an increase in delivery fees will reduce the number of food deliveries, the combination of an increase in deliveries completed per hour of “logged in” time and a decrease in the rate at which deliveries are declined reduces the number of workers who are logged in to the app in a typical week. There is no economic rationale for the claim by the DCWP that productivity is higher if workers decline fewer delivery offers and complete more deliveries per hour than they are “logged in.” Instead, deliveries will be less efficient and the average quality of a match between a delivery worker and a delivery route will be lower.

Economic Effects of the Proposed Minimum Pay Rate

42. The proposed minimum pay rate policy will increase the hourly cost of app-based food delivery workers, but the DCWP has not studied some of the possible unintended consequences of the policy. A higher mandated pay rate for app-based food delivery workers will increase the fees charged to merchants, restaurants, and/or consumers. The DCWP assumes the reduction in the number of food delivery orders will be proportional to the increase in delivery costs. The decrease in food delivery orders will have a substantial negative impact on restaurants, merchants, consumers, and delivery workers throughout NYC. The DCWP presents this decline against the backdrop of strong growth in the market for app-based food deliveries. Strong growth is not guaranteed as delivery fees increase, especially if an economic recession occurs. In addition, the economic impact of the policy should be compared to what is expected in future years, absent the policy change, rather than making comparisons to current economic conditions.

43. A goal of the higher minimum pay rate is to increase the earnings of food delivery workers, but the policy will almost surely eliminate food delivery opportunities for many of the workers who place the highest value on work schedule flexibility. These workers will increase costs under the proposed rule given the minimum pay rate policy, because they will raise the share of “logged in” time that is not attributable to delivery time. Some of these workers, who represent a substantial share of the app-based food delivery workforce, will see their income fall.

The DCWP has not studied the economic impact of their policy on these workers.

44. The increase in delivery costs may also impact how much consumers tip delivery workers. Consumers may react to substantially higher delivery fees by adding smaller tips when they place delivery orders. If the increase in pay from the apps is offset largely by a decline in tips, there will be less of a change in the total earnings of food delivery workers, and less of a decline in food delivery orders. If a decline in tips mitigates the increase in costs to consumers, many app-based food delivery workers may earn about the same per hour as they do now, with a lower share of their earnings due to tips. Even if this occurs, and the costs perceived by consumers is unchanged because of smaller tips, the mandated minimum pay rate is not neutral because of the mandate to compensate delivery workers for all time “logged in” to the app. Workers who value more work schedule flexibility and choose to reject delivery offers at a higher rate will be adversely affected by the policy even if the delivery costs for consumers are unchanged because of smaller tips.

Conclusions

45. The proposed minimum pay rate in the DCWP's Second Proposed Rule is excessive because: (1) it mandates that apps pay for time that workers are logged in to the app, but not making deliveries, which artificially inflates the cost per hour of delivery time, (2) it includes an unreasonably high adjustment for equipment expenses for delivery workers who typically work less than many part-time workers, and (3) it fails to discount the minimum pay rate for apps that provide accident insurance and instead provides a reason for apps to stop offering accident insurance.

46. The proposal to require apps to pay workers for time when they are not making deliveries gives apps an economic incentive to increase delivery time as a share of time workers are logged in to an app. This is a stated goal of the DCWP, but it also makes it difficult for apps to offer work opportunities with the same work schedule flexibility that app-based delivery workers currently enjoy.

47. The proposed minimum pay rate in the Second Proposed Rule will have a number of economic effects including: (1) a reduction in the number of delivery workers, (2) a reduction in the flexibility of work schedules which is a valuable to many delivery workers, (3) higher costs of food deliveries and prices for consumers, (5) less efficient deliveries which will also contribute to higher delivery costs, (6) fewer food delivery orders, and (7) negative outcomes for merchants and consumers in NYC. It appears that the DWCP has given no or insufficient consideration to these effects.

April 7th, 2023
NY, NY

Esteemed Members of the City Council:

We are Couriers of Relay, and we believe that - despite being well-intentioned - the Minimum Pay Rule will ultimately hurt couriers more than help us.

Here is why:

By passing this rule, Delivery Apps and restaurants will be forced to pass along this added cost onto consumers. Most likely, this will be done via "Regulatory Surcharges", as we have seen this happen already in other cities like Seattle and San Francisco.

Consumers are paying more than ever before for delivery - this has been widely reported by local and national press.

It is our fear that these additional fees and charges to consumers will naturally translate into lower tips.

Because of the added expense, many consumers will either tip less, or simply not tip at all.

What is possibly worse, though, is consumers will rightfully believe it is unnecessary to continue tipping. Consumers can't be blamed if they are under the impression that Delivery Apps now are forced to pay couriers a regulated minimum wage, and that by paying the "Regulatory Surcharge" or similar fee, there is no longer a need to leave a gratuity.

Additionally, it is elemental that an increase in cost like this will mean fewer deliveries. Fewer deliveries means fewer opportunities for us to make money.

Relay's model stands out from the rest of the industry, as their hourly guaranteed rate gives couriers a predictable way to earn money that already matches the tipped minimum wage.

Because of Relay's different pay model and unmatched efficiency, couriers are already earning almost $30/hour on average.

The law mandating this rule means well, but by ignoring gratuities, is not grounded in reality.

Ultimately, gratuities form an inescapable part of the delivery equation.

We believe that this rule should not move forward, and that lawmakers should recalibrate the law to take gratuities - and the different business models of the delivery / courier apps it aims to regulate - into consideration.

Respectfully,

Deliveristas of Relay

Marco Vasquez	Alvaro Varela	Adolfo Perez	Luis Alarcon
Miguel A. Catalan	Guillermo Tepox Garcia	Omar Sosa	Dany Cojtin
Felix Martinez	Lucio Alberto Martinez Rojas	Isaac Sanchez	Guadalupe Garcia Sanchez
Eliceo Chavez	Omar Sosa	Anselmo Anselmo Pères	Guadalupe Mejia
Ruben Bazan	Luis Oquendo	Sara Moreno	Yeiser Lopez
Dario Garcia	Jaime Neppas	Procopio Bardomiano	Hernan David Laines
Ricardo Rueda	Joseph Armeira Martinez	Nancy Cruz	Miguel Julajuj
Erik Lopez	Miguel Martinez	Salvador Chuy	Jaime Velazquez Moran
Jacinto Garcia	Erick Romero	Edgar Coj	Jorge Ortiz
Fernando Prado	Alberto Barrera Cortes	Eduardo Bixcul	Felipe Chivalan
Ubaldo Ruiz	Sergio Macias	Marcos Perez	Gilberto Santos
Antonio Odriguez	Jose Luis Toxqui	Amr Aly	Kevin Fernando Raxtun Pilo
Tomas Gutierrez	Isaias Lopez	Maicol Miculax	Martin Batz Gonsales
Edgar Antonio Montaña Mayorga	Edwin Mendez	Julian Tem Baten	Alexander Ramirez
Jose Gutierrez	Pablo Zaldana	Luis Roberto Reyes	David Miranda
Sergio Cantu	Eduardo Gonzalez	Sebastian Aguilera	Moises Hernandez
Omar Alonso	Eduardo Guajan	Kevin Hernández	Otoniel Xiloj Cutz
Melvin Baten	Miguel Ángel Martinez Tirado	Diego Garcia	Geovany Chen
Antonio Galvez	Raul Hernandez	Ricardo De Jesús González	Jaime Velazquez Moran
Fernando López	Pedro Bravo	Juan Chavez	Willian Ramirez
Alex Perez	Leonardo Bonifacio Baquiáx Sapon	Miguel Solano	Maximino Sambrano
Sebastian Escobar	Ronald Costop	Francisco Baten	Cristian Álvarez
Zidan Zinaddin	Salvador Chuy	Marvin Vicente	Elvis Ramos
Baldo Ramos	Brandon Garcia	Higinio Noel Mojica Diaz	Rolando Ajiquichi
G L	Erick Romero	Cornelio Reyes Flores	Sandra Arcadio
Alan Aguirre	Omar Hernandez	Carlos Rodriguez	Carmelo Villano
Roberto Ramirez	Victor Tzay Julajuj	Crecencin Serrano	Pedro Saminez

Hugo Tol		Alberto Barrera Cortes		Gustavo Garcia		Manases Socorro Cruz
Braulio Toxtle		Miguel Aguilar		Deivid Xutuc		Carlos Cabrera
Yoelvis Salcebo		Ernan Saldana		Eduardo Bixcul		José Manuel Gaspariano
Ricardo Perez		Omar Perez		Jenifer Melendez		Nancy Nunez
Raphael Calderon		Victor Ajquiy		David Lara		Manases Socorro Cruz
Oscar Lopez		Ewin Mendoza		Uriel Ramirez		Luis Maz
Silvestre Cabrera		Onecimo Juarez		Alejandro Castro		Jose Yat
Nestor Gonzales		Jose Vicente Barre Vargas		Davis Chonillo		Ignacio Cosigua
Fernando Lopez		Carlos Lopez		Juan Felix Tojin Yat		Sergio Pereira
Alexander Castro		Adelado Angel		Horacio Ortega Mendoza		Cesar Perez
Luis A Maz	Edgar Rivera	Eduardo Lajuj Yos	Rodolfo Ministro Israel Toxle	Mario Hernandez		Sebastian De Leon
	Cesar Perez	Raphael Calderón	Wilson Ramon	Carlos Velaz Martin	Alex Sectta
David Velasquez	Moises Gonzalez	Oriana Martinez		Palemon Ministro Yonalby Maldonado		Evaristo De Dios
	Victoriano Julajuj	Rogelio De Jesús
Anjel Yobany		Pablo Zaldana		Moises Garcia		Manuel Ramirez
Fidel Mercenario		Byron Abimael Cum Bixcul		Stavros Roditis		Carlos Cabrera
Adelso Lopez		Thiago Austin Velarde Jimenez		Juan Carlos Castillo		Jesus Martinez
Jorge Gonzales		Carlos Lopez		Jairo Calel Boron		Wilmer Ramirez
Sebastian De Leon		Leonardo Lopez		Angel Tuluxan Saquic		Abad Cantu
Raúl Solano		Agustín Lezama		Manuel Herrera		Juan Llanos
Luis Simon	Benjamin Lopez	Pedro Chavez	David Jimenez Carlos Jacinto Perez	Manuel Moreno		Olivier
Fonseca	Miguel Baquiaux Luis Barrios Román Pajarito		Miguel Gonzales	Carlos Barrera
Eliseo Leon		Brandon Casanova		Pedro Saminez		Antonino Saavedra
Frédy Saguach		Marcos Flores		Jaziel Martinez		Alejandro Santos
Benito Zamora		Pedro Neri		Jaziel Jaziel		Ricardo Castro
Gerardo Rodriguez		Efrain Ramirez		Edwin Aroldo Lajuj Xinico		Salvador Galvez
Josua Ramos Carmelo Villano Thiago Austin Velarde Jimenez Wolfram Chavez Raphael Calderón Joshua Reyes Md Shajid Ricardo Vasquez
Esdras Guanta		Jose Cantu		Santos Talo		Sebastian Espitia
Carlos Jacinto Perez		Kevin Fernando Raxtun Pilo		Hasina Swety		Fernando Hernandez
Alberto Guevara		Eder Yat		Adelado Angel		Pablo Xilotl
Brayan Ramos		Jesus Rivera		Adolfo Tarax		Angel Quiroz
Ricardo Cruz		Wilson Ramon		Alexander Solis		Daniel Vásquez
Justi Lopez		Axel Martinez		Marcos Jacobo		Leticia Maldonado
Cristian Hernandez		Kevin Fernando Raxtun Pilo		Miqueas Ixcoy		Souleymane Moyanga
Carlos Jacinto Perez	Abel Ruiz	Luis Maz	Obsurio Ramirez Oscar Lopez	Armando Ramirez		Esteban Sapon Sapon
	Jorge Velecela
Francisco Cano		Danilo Castro Mendoza		Samuel Perez Lopez		Jonathan Hernández
Francisco Cano	Israel Raxtun	José Pérez	Francisco Ramirez Benito Zamora	Lorenzo Molina		Miguel Cocon Rogelio De
Jesús Alexander Perez	Sergio Sapon	Edvin Cal	Augusto Yaxon
Marco Uriel Cortes Pineda		Angel Guzman		Pedro Hernandez		Abdulio Gomes
Ramiro Rosas		Isaac Perez		Oscar Raul Baten Escalante		Anthony Martinez
Miguel Angel Rodriguez		Olbin Mejia		Ernesto Garcia Sanchez		Fidelfo Perez
Leonel Mendez		Adelso Lopez		Jhon Vasquez		Guadalupe Alvarado
Aaron Lopez Perez		Diego Mora		Keon Robert		Bernardo Isidoro Cabrera
Rufino Marcelo		Pablo Sipac		Luis Armando Par Quisquina		Erik Moreno
Luis De Jesús		Darlin Valdez Santos		Juan Boron		Agustin Dominguez
Fernando Lopez		Wilson Garcia		Eduardo Lopez		Esdras Alvarado
Mauricio Ramirez		Sergio Sapon		Cristino Ramirez		Roman Pajarito
Miguel Aguilar		Nestor Arenas		Otilo Munoz		Marcos Poncio
Pedro Cot		Jaime Mendoza		Francisco Mendoza		Roman Pajarito
Alexis Lopez		Kevin Rodrigez		Otilo Munoz		Fredy Boron
Alejandro Martinez Pastor		Jose Ortega		Anthony Figueroa		Jaime Hernandez
Mahamadou Doukoure	Antonio Alvarado	Juan Felix Tojin Yat	Josue Pérez Jose Luis Rojas Rojas			Juarez Venegas
	Jesus Preciado	Eder Yat
Delfino Rojas		Julian Tem Baten		Alexis Tzancir		Urzair Villegas
Filiberto Baten Miranda		Marcelo Guoman		Oscar Raul Baten Escalante		Alan Aguirre
Alexander Lopez Perez	Sergio Sapon Jonathan Salas		Guadalupe Juarez Fernando Lopez	Jessica Guzman		Kevin Baten
	Sebastian Garcia
Geovany Yampol		Silvestre Ramirez		Darlin Valdez		Francisco Velazquez
Arquimides Villano Rodriguez		Mynor Morales		Idalia Ruiz		Juan Vicente
Marvin Rios		Pedro Lopez		José Herrera		Edgar Andrade
Elder Rojas		Kevin Rodriguez		Pablo Berdejo		Moises Garcia
Cristofer Perez		Pablo Geraldly Sipac Batz		Marvi Lajuj Xajpot		Francisco Perez
Edgar Mendoza		Abraham Rojas Ramos		Eduardo Lopez		Francisco Escamilla
Manuel Lopez		Ignacio Romero		Virgilio Gonzalez		Marvin Ixcoy
Seferino Hernández		Enrique Suy		Manuel Sanchez		Maynor Baten
Vernantino Baten		Miguel Angel Romero		Eligio Pacio		Carlos Ixcoy
Edwin Hernandez		Wageh Bohnam		Alexis Tzancir		Junior Espinoza
Alfredo Diaz		Jorge Acevedo Ruiz		Jacobo Lopez		Adrian Cardenas
Santiago Matias		Pedro Chávez		Miguel Cortez		David Jimenez
Valeriano Miranda		Manuel Rosales		Armando Vicente Baten		Alex Test
Manases Socorro Cruz		Hermelindo Rios Baten		Luis Maz		Santiago Ramirez
Daniel López		Gumercindo Ramirez Perez		Rodolfo Tecocoatzi		Miguel Julajuj
Lorenzo Yos		Gustavo Osvaldo Mendez Vaten		Francisco De La Cruz Ruiz		Omar Perez

Jeremiah Thomas-William	Mario Monzon	Enrique Martinez	Alex Contreras
Elgar Ramos	German Ramirez	Jose Mendoza	Alfredo Quisquina
Aurelio Tem	Wuilson Arriaga	Shoaib Hossain	Santiago Ramirez
Mayolo Juárez Almorin	Ricardo Ajanel	Leonel Cum	Gabriel Barrera
Jaime Ramirez Carlos Perez Ricardo Xotoy Edgar Rivera Prospero Sanchez Humberto Perez Moises Garcia Alfonso Reyes Mejia Ignacio Cosigua Kevin Rodríguez Pablo Berdejo Alfredo Quisquina
Brenda Villegas	Esdras Alvarado	Fernando Hernandez	Miguel Cayetano Mauricio Cano
Cristian Perez			Piotr Skreczko Miguel Cisneros
Juan Barrera	Filogonio Miranda	Alfonzo Navarro	Victor Delgado
Lorenzo Yos	Brayan Perez	Domingo Sanchez	Higinio Noel Mojica Diaz
Luis Luna	Guadalupe Garcia Sanchez	Antony Escobedo	Luis Gonzalez
Marvin Coronado	Alex Contreras	Virgilio Gonzalez	Victor Delgado
Rigoberto Quic Rodriguez	Edin Eduardo Yos Yaqui	Miguel Agustin Calleja	Adrian Cardenas
Justin Ivon	Joel Guzmab	Leonides Mejia	Mahfuza Haque
Romeo Rojas Rojas	Marvi Lajuj Xajpot	Francisco Perez	Hernán Laines Ezat Shafik Cesar Garcia Abraham Coiti
Victor Delgado Santos Talo Javier Sanchez	Selvin Ramirez	Alfonso Perez
Thomas Gonzalez	Eduarda Gracias	Jose Baquiax	Jose Quisquina
Ezat Shafik	Terrance Gilliard	Alex Baten	Modesto Faustino
Estuardo Mendez	Wagner Mendez	Enrique Martinez	Marvin Cumes
Orlando Huerta	Johana Vivas Guillermo Mendez	Carlos Quintero Noe Leal	Alejandro Gutierrez Garcia
Lopez			Agusto Baten Selvin
Ricardo Aguilar	Rigoberto Guarcax	Juan Carlos Arellanes	Alfonso Perez
Flavio Tayun	Jesus Alberto Cortes	Abdul Rehman	Maynor Baten
Peng Choo	Sergio Sanchez	Jenny Hernandez	Angel Guiracocha
Miguel Angel	Edin Ramos	Arnold Alonzo Larias	Pierre Sawadogo
Concepción Pedro Luna Juarez	Jeronimo Rueda	Luis A Maz	Omar Perez
Arnoldo Lopez	Jorge Rosas	Juan Carlos Ordoñez	Yoni Cristino
Ismael Velazquez	James Mendoza	Rajesh Khatri	Rodolfo Tuy Castro
Maria Mendez	German Ramires	Adelaido Villamar	Crisanto Ramirez
Mario Ramirez	Daniel De La Luz	Wendy Lancheros	Miguel Aguilar
Edgar Cuxil	Oscar Pichardo	Vicente Carrasco	David Ramirez
Hector Guarcax	David Stevens	Marvi Lajuj Xajpot	Armando Martinez
Miguel Cocon	Edin Eduardo Yos Yaqui	Adolfo Perez	Sneider Silva
Israel Espana	Wellington Esteban Garcia Bautista	Jorge Velecela	Marvin Rojas
Brian Ryan Edgar Coj Emerson Lajuj Selvin Lopez	Rosalio Becerro Paolo Soares	Cristian Álvarez	Veronica Azanes
Juan Carlos Garcia Peralta	Vitalino Sales	Alex Boukrid	Saturmino Enriquez
Jose Baten López	Elgar Ramos	Edwin Lucas	Gabriel Cantor
Patricio Martinez Reyes	Henry Francisco Lopez Vasquez	Miguel Gonzalez	Rodolfo Tuy
Juan Carlos Matzar	James Mendoza	Noel Baten	Daniel Vásquez
Andrea Chacon	Salvador Maximiliano	Peng Choo	Edgar Montaña
Franciso Ramirez	Rogelio Evaristo De Dios Floreció Tentle	Pedro Hernandez Vanessa Castro	Albaro Jiguan
Oscar Hernandez	Edgar Miranda
Luis Felipe Vasquez	Alonso Rodriguez	Vicente Carrasco	Ricardo Lopez
Ansberto Juarez	Javier Porfirio	Mario Alejandrez	Jose Molina
Yudy Centeno	David Flores	Jose Cobo	Jason Long
Luis A Maz	Victor Delgado	Seferino Hernández	Robinson Monzon
Joseph Wade	Yago Sandoval	Armando Hernández	Rigoberto Perez
Lorenzo Yos	Emad Metry	Romeo Tarax	Anthony Ramirez
Eduardo Salazar	Miguel Palma	Diego Sapon	Iván Méndez
Leonel Cruz	Ibrahim Lemzaouda	Abdelrahman Elgendi	Modibo Diallo
Juan Perez	David Flores	Francisco Martinez	Adelso Rolando Lopez Ramirez
Luis Perez	Fernando Juárez	Gerardo Duran	Hariss Attiobe
Juan Perez	Alexander Ortiz	Rodrigo Leon Alvarez	Emiliano Esteban Ajpop Pacheco
Miguel Aguilar	Alexis Juarez	Miguel Cisneros	Sergio Pereira
Miguel Mendieta	Stacy Moreno	Ambrocio Maya	Eligio Pacio Tepoz
Celso Baten	Jorge Rosas	Alonso Rodriguez	Yovani Perez
Wilson Arriag	Arnulfo J Garcia	Jorge Uruchima	Brandon Calell
Raul Gusman	Maria Mendez	Adolfo Perez	Juan Andrés Velaquez
Mario Vilchis Sanchez	Antony Bersian	Peng Choo	Roman Pajarito
Carlos Villegas	Nivirt Sergyous	Moises Hernández	Roman Pajarito
Patricio Cortez Us	Noe Bernabe Lopez Lopez	Valentin Victoriano	Alexander Ramirez
Miguel Mendieta	Lisandro Ramos	Byron Oliva	Francisco Melgarejo
Oswaldo Sapon	Belete Asegie	Vicente Carrasco	Kamilo Rojas
Facundo Araujo	Giovanny Ajpacaja	Jonathan Hernández	Juan Luis Herrera Herrera
Leonardo Gonzalez Anibal Ramirez Oscar Herrera Osbaldo Garcia Jose Luis Basurto Ricardo Luciano Adonias Lopez Perez Aparicio Ramos
Erik Cuautle	Cayetano Rivera	Jose Cobo	Edwin Lorenzo
Basilio Adam	Miguel Angel Romero	Martin Serrano	Alejandro Perez Gonzales
Ethan Sanchez	Palemon Leal	Carlos Tarax	Sebastian Buchan Salvador
Rodrigo Corona	Giovanny Ajpacaja	Jorge Uruchima	Jose Mendez
Catalina Tayun	Delfina Diaz	Francisco Merin	Manuel Lopez
Habraham Lopez	Manuel Ramirez	Mohamed Shalaby	Jose Quino
Erik Cuautle Jesenia FosterCristino Ramirez	Miguel Nazario Jairo Velasquez	Romeo Lopez Lucas Calel Quino	Jose Yat
Daniel Mendez	Geovani Baten	Edvin Cal	Horacio Ortega Mendoza

Fernando Perez	Miguel Gonzalez	Santi Diaz	Samuel Perez Lopez
Fernando Raymundo	Parmenides Villano	Pedro Zanchez López	Lucas Romero
Romina Diaz	Patricia Garcia	Franc Slab	Gabriel Lopez
Luis Jiame	Bartolo Romero Aguilar	Frael Guerrero	Manuel Calel
Catalina Tayun	Alejandro Contreras	Mario Hernandez	Victor Delgado
Roberto Ramirez	Victor Tenezaca	Andy Hernández Sapon Erik Cuautle
Karen Insignares	Noe Bernabe Lopez Lopez	Adolfo Espinoza	Oswaldo Pu
Habraham Lopez	Alex Ezequiel Sequec Campa	Jaime Bermejo	Felipe Chivalan
Patricio Cortez Us	Mario Tetlaetle	Pedro Zanchez López	Eligio Guzmán
Daniel Mendez	Luis Maldonado	Guadalupe Alvarado	Eligio Pacio Tepoz
Jairo Velasquez	Patricio Cortez Us	Jose Ramirez	Pedro Chavez Antonio
Elizabeth Medina	Francisco Ramirez	Gerardo Flores	Jeremy Garcia
Zenaïdo Espinobarros	Erick Ajpacaja	Rodrigo Hernandez	Ricardo Espinoza
Nivirt Sergyouc	Palemon Velazquez	Guillermo Mendez	Yobany Perez
Javier Gonzalez	Rolando Hernandez	Josue Miranda	Irain Ramirez
Agustin Ángeles Sanchez	Miguel Ángel Martinez	Cristian Oliveros	Solis Solis
Melanie Mucciolo	Victor Alejandro	Eduardo Martinez	Rene Guzman
Alfredo Lopez	Jorge Uruchima	Alba Mendoza	Barzilai Ramirez
José Orozco Gustavo Ramos	Alejandro Martinez Pastor	Santi Diaz	Jesus Alberto Cortes
Jonathan Delvalle	Marvin Gonsalez	Daniel Juarez	Irain Ramirez
Jorge Tian	Jesus Gonzalez	Marvin Cumes	Jesus Gonzalez
Mahmoud Abdelrahim	Ricardo Hernandez	Severiana Martínez	Gabriel Rosales Flores
Luis Canizal	Erick Hernandez	Onecimo Juarez	Gonzalo Savedra
Patricia Garcia	Garcia Juan	Josue Mendez	Abel Vicente
Bertano Velazquez	José Mendez	Angel Castro	Severiano De Jesús
Hector Gomez	Silvestre Ramirez	Evelia Mota	Oswaldo Lopez
Sergio Francisco	Luis Ramirez	Eduarda Garcia	Carina Gomez
Giovanni Zapata	Domingo Tohom	Jose Ramirez	Armando Martínez
Genaro Ramirez	Mohamed Mossad	Fabian Apolinar	Gerardo Angulo
Eloy Martinez	Oscar Baten Mendez	Pedro Neri	Carlos Morales
Juan Llanos	Edilzar Ramirez	Christofer Hernandez	Julio Mendoza
Carranza Bardomiano	Luis Vazquez	Beshara Nasim	Adelso Lopez
Josias Itzep	Manuel Cano	Aroldo Quexel	Olbin Mejia
Mahabub Alam	Hector Avalos	Virgilio Gonzalez	Kirolos Fame
Cristian Cipriano	Emerson Lajuj	Josue Mendez	Victor Espinoza Santiago
Isaac González Dorantes	Mateo Tecun	Angel Quiroz	Hugo Flores
Giovanni Zapeta	Ovidio Escalante	Fernando Baten Escalante	Miguel Angel Castro Bocel
Elias Gomez	Mauricio Cano	Juan Carlos Arellanes	Ismael Velasquez
Saturnino Enriquez	Andres T. Barrera L.	Francisco Baten	Victor Espinoza Santiago
Jorge Weiss	Stiven Sosa Reyes	Pedro Saminez	Elisco Cojtin
Humberto Morales	Jeronimo Rueda	Ismael Xicay	Wilson Gamez
Amánoldo Tarax Calel	Wilson Castillo	Eleazar Baquix	Jennifer Lopez
Jose Sanchez	Sergio Diaz	Jose Orozco	Monica Ochoa
Isai Gusman	Luis Roberto Reyes	Mohammed Salazar	Timoteo Ramirez Rojas
Vicente Castillo	Eslam Esa	Juan Perez	Alexsis Sambrano
Elias Gomez	Marcos Lopez	Alonso De La Cruz	Nicolas Reyes
Jaime Bazán	Noel De Jesus Ramires	Daniel Juarez	Aroldo Tzorin
Jose Sanchez	Brandon Clemente Ramos	Eduardo Reyes	Yobany Perez
Manuel Uruchima	Maximo Chavez	Catalina Tayun	Leonel Villa
Jaun Ayala	Francico Hernandez	Efren Martinez	Alexander Ignacio
Ivan Perez	Oscar Tenango Tlapala	Generado Iglesias	Maurice Guerra
Edgar Montaña	Brayan Alexander Gómez Gómez	Luis Miguel Arenas	Angel Tipaz
Juan Xep	Alfredo Delarosa	Wilson Ramirez	Cristian De Jesus
Elias Gomez	Eladio Salgado	Ricardo Varela	Eligio Pacio Tepoz
Alex Gudiel Méndez Gomez	Juan Rodriguez	Sandra Arcadio	Emanuel Lopez
April Rose Guanzon	Moises Hernández	Brandon Casanova	Ahmed Abdrabou
Ludin Miranda	Hector Roberto Perez Perez	Wilmer Lopez	Moisés Capir
Carlos Figueroa	Hector Herrera Herrera	Miguel Ángel Castro Bocel	Rogelio Borrego
Andrea Chacon	Jorge Cuevas	Enrique Papma	Carlos Chavez
Miguel Aguilar Cortes	Luis Coto Y Ibate	Ismael Xicay	Doroteo Gomez
Emerson Lajuj Yaqui	Edilzar Ramirez	Alonso De La Cruz	Jeremias Larias
Estaban Castillo	Marcos Mendez	Rolando Martines	Cristian De Jesus
Eduardo Perez	Mateo Tecun	Cristian Escudero	Jacob Ajches
Saul Gracias Flores	Ovidio Escalante	Pedro Garcia	Jason Rojas
Jeisson Guevara	Marcos Garcia	Galindo Lopez	Walter Ignacio
Pedro Zanchez López	Alberto Melo	Joseph Wade Mccabe	Moises Genis
Belete Asegie	Javier Rivera	Adelso Tohom	Octaviano De La Rosa
Ryan Boujemaa	Amanoldo Tarax Calel	Miguel Ángel Castro Bocel	Abdul Auwal
Alvaro Juarez De Jesús	Adán Ramirez	Mario Felipe	Cristian Cipriano
Ulises Lopez	Elvis Godines	Juan Perez	Jeremias Larias
Angel Guzmán	Marcos Perez	Rolando Martines	Cristian De Jesus
Marino Campos	Joaquin Salvador Torres	Pedro Chaves	Cristian Cipriano
Bonifacio Yos	Johan Guevara	Rudy Argueta	Wolfram Chavez

Oscar Miron	Fernando Lopez	Germán Barrera	Doroteo Gomez
Oscar Pérez Xoc	Erika Gonzalez	Juan Perez	Adolfo Vivar
Oscar Perez Xoc	Pedro Lopez	Angel Aj	Alfonso Tuy Castro
Alvaro Juarez De Jesús	Luis López	Oswaldo Velazquez	Edgar Andrade
Axel Lopez	Marcos Pérez	Damian Meyo	Miguel Ximil
Sergio Francisco	Diego Alberto Ortiz Rodriguez	Baldemar Ramirez Ramirez	Rogelio Evaristo De Dios
Moises Baxin	Hector Roberto Perez Perez	Marcos Jacobo	Alfonzo Juarez
Gabriel Martinez Cabrera Martinez	Gustavo Perez	Gerardo Flores	Servando Francisco
Lisandro Ramos	Johan Guevara	Inocencio Belasquez	Francisco Perez
Heriberto Ramirez	Guadalupe Contreras	Rafael Parra Guzmán	Iván Mendez
Oscar Cardoso	Juan Uraga	Edgar Montaño	Angel Uzcatogui
David Joper	David Grande	Carlos González	Moustafa Karak
Moises Baxin	Jorge Valdez	Jose Esteban Gomez	Marvin López
Wilmer Ramirez	Kevin Ortiz	Lucio Catalán Bardo	Rafael Alvarado Cabrera
Isaias Sapon	José Rojas	Felix Montiel	Solis Solis
Raúl Solano	Gustavo Perez	Byron Yaqui	Luis Ramirez
Heriberto Lopez	Estuardo Vasquez	Edvin Itzep	Marcos Jacobo
Esteban Castillo	Axel Rivera	Mario Felipe	Carla Perez
Manuel Torres	Brayan Ramos	Jonathan Hernandez	Frael Guerrero
Tony Stark	Alberto Sapon Morales	Giovanni Zapeta	Manuel Sanchez
Sherria Harris	Basem Youssef	Manuel Antonio	Francisco Escamilla
Alex Pérez	Jose Lopez	Pedro Chavez	Isaac Sanchez
Andy Lopez Yax	Angel Berry	Prospero Sanchez	Jose De Souza
Heriberto Lopez	Yovany Ramirez	Eduardo Noriega	Antonio Mendoza
Omar Hernandez	Fidelfo Perez	Adan Perez Baten	Alex López
Alexander Flores	Jaime De Jesus	José Gustavo Ramos Orozco	Carlos Alonzo
Héctor Hernandez	Nelson Ramos	Raul Ariza	Nestor Arenas
Sherria Harris	Miguel Ángel Romero	Ismael Maldonado	Bayron Escalante
Martin Mauricio	Gustavo Perez	Alejandro Benitez	Crisantos Ramires
Pedro Aguilar	Alfonso Trujillo	Daniel Varilla	James Mendoza
Mateo Atzin	Efrain Tarax	Jesus Preciado	Doroteo Gomez
Basilio Hernandez	Javier Flores	Fabian Apolinar	Rodrigo Corona
Edgar Morales	David Martinez	Merzek Nakhla	Romeo Garcia
Julio De Leon	Edwin Julajuj	Abinadi Carretero	Freddy Rojas
Erik Alberto Cuautle Perez Domingo Tohom	Saul Gracias Flores	Maximo Chavez Elmira Sagidolla	Brenda Villeas
Ansberto Juarez	Ibrahim Ba
Ernesto Lopez	Otoniel Ramirez	Alessandro Torres	Carlos Ixcoy
Bernardo Ortiz Leon	Sergio Veliz	Ismael Sacuj	Nelson Matos F
Gorge Cuevas	Jacobo Lopez	Ricardo Lopez	Juan Lopez
Misael Rojas	Enver Castro	Manases Socorro Cruz	Roberto Perez
Elmira Sagidolla	Felipe Arango	Joel Guzman	Victor Alejandro
Hector Perez	Paulino Ixcoy	Jonathan Moran	David Jimenez
Martin Mauricio	Oswaldo Ramos	Alvaro Ramirez	Jose Ramirez
Mateo Atzin Tomas Benjamín Sapon Baquiux German Cuc Marcos Gonzalez Brayan Baten Rojas Martin Gonzalez Alejandro Contreras Julio López	Carlos Cojtin	Nicolas Corredor	Carmen Gonzales
Javier Garcia	Angel Guzman	Luis Oquendo Roberto Perez	Luis Nunez Alejandro Hernandez
Abad Cantu Concepción Luna Luis Ramirez
Baldemar Ramirez	Oscar Lopez	Alejandro Benitez	Franc Sleb
Eusebio Garcia	Carlos Florian	Gerardo Iglesia	Miguel Miranda
Carlos Martínez	Sebastian Ramirez Rojas	Merzek Nakhla	Mohammad Hossain
Samy Abdelshehed	Adrian Cardenas	Anderson De Lima Borges	Basem Youssef Cristibal Ramirez
Jamilto Capir Ajtzalam	Jose Mendez		Fernando Ramirez
Silverio Jimenez	Concepción Pedro Luna Juarez	Brandon Casanova	Mario Callejas
Richard Ramirez	Jesus Rodriguez	Liam Alvarado	Eligio Pacio Tepoz
Basilio Hernandez	Erik Ortiz	Baldemar Ramirez Ramirez	Mario Ordoñez
Miguel Alvarez Franco Luna Villa Fabian Apolinar Arturo Martinez Diaz Macario Rojas Angel	Hermelindo Rios Baten	Ramirez Miguel Marte Miguel Hernandez
Franco Luna Villa	Javier Garcia	Valentin Rodríguez Merida	Diego Lopez
Mario Vilchis	Manuel Ramirez	Mateo Torres332 378 7600	Ezequiel Damian
Anthony Martínez	Luis Pacheco	Daniel Varilla	Ibrahim Lemzouda
Carlos Velasquez	Rolando Soto	Aroldo Tzorin	Cristian Oliveros
Andres San Agustin	Omar Sosa	Ismael Leon	Tama Doucoure
Alexander Flores	Rudy Argueta Robinson Monzon Miguel Alvarez	James Paez	Guadalupe Mejia
Giovanny Ajpacaja	Ariel Ortiz	Brian VazquezCristian Romero	Edgar Xicay
Pablo Sapon	Emiliano Hernandez	Jaime Neppas	Kaba Grabiell
Franco Luna Villa	Jose Portillo	Hernandez	Rogelio
Hidalgo Pedro Campos	Victor Delgado Cesar	Angel Sanchez
Juan Jimenez	Luciano Godinez	Juvenal Grande	Adam Tem
Juan Carlos Gonzalez	Anderson Méndez	Pablo Xilotl	Yobany Ramirez
Ricardo Vazquez Lopez	Oscar Lopez	Alejandro Hernandez	Bayron Escalante
Williams Sapon	Ricardo Maldonado	Benito Cabrera	Jesus Martinez
Oscar Cortez	Gabino Chen	Mario Crus Temaj Miranda	Otoniel Xiloj Cutz
Natanael Sapon	Daniel Hernandez	Gonsalo Contreras	Margarito Rangel
Adan Baten Jose Baquiux Abraham Lopez Miguel Angel Romero Alessandro Cot Orellana Romeo Hernandez Habibur Rahman Ovidio Baten Ramirez Luis Alberto Sánchez González Domingo Sanchez Marvin Xicay Andres T Barrera L.

Guillermo Méndez		Cristian Perez		Wageh Bohnam		Abdul Auwal
Augusto Velasquez		Paulino Ixcoy		Bernardo Dueñas		Daniel Vázquez
Alejandro Rodrigues	Angel Garcia	Rusbeldo Sales	Ricardo Corredor	Abad Cano	Mauricio Cano Nop	Humberto
Morales	Luis Maldonado
Jorge Chiroy		Jorge Enrique Sir Cumes		Jerardo Gonzalez		Jesus Preciado
Sandra Arcadio		Daniel Hernandez		Santiago Flores		Israel Perez
Wa Mendez		Luis Maz		Mauricio Matzaquisa		Francisco Gomez
Pantaleon Chajon		Roberto Velázquez		Rene Coj		Luis Alarcon
Zacarias Garcia		Luis Maz		Javier Gonzalez		Adam Noriega
Jessica Guzman		Saul Cano		Enedino Vazquez		Jose Luis Galvez
Walter Ozuna	Jose Baquix	Daniel Varilla	Juan Carlos Meneses	Alvarado Cesar Pecher	Gabriel Calvario	Joshua Perez Orlando Huerta
Ángel Pérez		Tomas Gutierrez		Julio López		Vicente Sapon García
Manuel Galindo		Alberto Sapon Morales		Israel Ramirez		Marco Salazar
Wagner Mendez		Abraham Rojas		Carlos Adorno		Mario Vilchis
Jose Barre		Juan Amastal		Abel Gonzalez		Carlos Salvador Torres
Hala Megally		Angel Garcia		Hermelindo Rios Baten		Jerry González
Sebastian Lima	David Gonzalez	Cesar Hernandez		Tomas Paredes	Ethan Sánchez	Maximino Sambrano
	Javier Gonzalez	Sergio Méndez
Hugo Flores		Eloy Martinez		Alejandro Hernandez		Victoriano Julajuj
Manuel Bonilla		Jonathan Hernandez		Angeles Elizalde		Olbin Cano
Victor Lopez		Rufino Joel Yat Gonzalez		Bernardo Dueñas		Alexis Lopez
Ricardo Choxom		Mario Alejandro		Eduardo Reyes		Manases Socorro Cruz
Elmer Escalante		Pilar Martinez		Julio Lopez		Elias Ordonez
Manuel Bonilla		Jose Portillo		Ana Luna		Mario Chiroy
Wilson Ramitez		Ivan Lopez		Ivan Perez		Octavio Reyes
Michael Torres		Jorge Cuevas		Byron Tarax		Juan Carlos Perez
Fausto Sanic		Angel Ramirez		Sara Reyes		Carlos Salvador Torres
Wilson Ramitez		Rajesh Khatri		Gregorio Tlaxcantitla		Fernando Saminez
Elvin Miculax		Oscar Cortez		Israel Ramirez		Victor Alejandro
Lorenzo Yos		Rogelio Borrego		Candido Merino		Oscar Gonzales Suy
Arcadio Ramirez		Ignacio Reyes		Juan Ortiz		Raul Hernandez
Kerelos Tanyos		Ivan López		Javier Gonzalez		Eli Perez
Kerelos Tanyos	Jose Gomez	Luis Ramírez	Linn Thomas Cristobal	Badillo	Suricata Tayun	Angel Sitan Angel Yax
Benayada Hocine		Ricardo Garcia		Rosa Ramon		Sara Moreno
Badilio Xaper Capir		Julio Xicay Seguach		Candido Merino		Francisco Gomez
Manuel Pérez		Diego Gadiel		Gregorio Tlaxcantitla Morales		Carlos Chavez
Eduardo Bixcul		Julio Mendoza		Moises Sotoy		Orlando Huerta
Carlos Moreno		Luis Moreno		Justin Velasquez		Juan Hernandez
Ivan Basurto		Javier Ramos		Eduarda Gracias		Wilfredo Ramirez
Mario Sales		Kevin Hemianopsia		Iván García		Uriel Ramirez
Nicolas Carrillo		Daniel Hernandez		Leyla Rodriguez		Franc Sleb
Wagner Mendez		Luis Moreno		Luis Ramirez Ramirez		Jahangir Haque
Gudalupe Ramirez		Juan Vasquez		Luis X Quinche		Juanj Castro
Ruben Garcia	Max Torres	Hermilo Roblez	Armando Vicente	Baten Samuel Lopez	Oscar Rojas	Mario Basurto Aroldo Tz0Rin
Samuel Lopez		Ramon Ramon		Luis Alexis Salas		Emely Jerez
Harry Laberon		George Mensah		Esteban Castillo		Edy Roberto Tujal Cot
Kevin Deng		Mario Basurto201		Alberto Angel		Otoniel Xiloj Cutz
Rodrigo Mendez		Hector Tzarax		Demetrio Garcia		Alex Aguilar
Juan Gonzalez		Alexander Pérez		Jaime Velazquez		Francisco Tapia
212-729-0588	Rojas	Meliton Flores	Matlalcuatzi	Ne ali Gonzales		Jerardo Gonzalez
Mina Said		Antonio Bazan		Santos Baquix		Alberto Melo
Adam Ortiz		Jaime Cumes		Marcos Noriega		Sebastian Aguilera
Gamaliel Cutzal		Alexis Allende		Candido Merino		Nancy Santos Ramos
Adam Ortiz		Mario Vázquez		Katherine Farfanlazo		Kevin Rodriguez
Jason Ajin		Diego Gadiel		Lucio A Martínez		Maximino Calixto
Huann Geh Yw		Eustoquio Aquino		Omar Hernandez		Eduardo Lajuj Yos
Juan Gonzalez		Alfredo Juarez		Sebastian Gamez		Enrique Gonzales
Cesar Sontay	Omar Perez	Martimiano Garcia	Carlos Garcia	John Chikowski	Miguel Garcia Candelaria	Ordonez Calel Alejandro
Rodriguez

RELAY

Comments on Updated Proposed Rules

Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Service Workers

NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection

April 7, 2023

On behalf of Relay, I submit this comment for the benefit of the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (“DCWP”) to reconsider and revise the proposed rule, entitled Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Service Workers (the “Proposed Rule”). In drafting the Proposed Rule, DCWP has not considered the grave risks it poses to Relay, the lone Courier Service in the food delivery ecosystem, the numerous independent small restaurants who rely on Relay, and the Relay couriers that the Proposed Rule seeks to protect.

Relay is a New York City-based on-demand food courier service that allows restaurant owners to manage their deliveries across multiple platforms, including those from Third-Party Delivery Services, restaurants’ own websites, and phone orders. Relay serves approximately 3,000 New York City food establishments, the majority of which are independent small businesses, who rely upon Relay for a service that no other company provides at scale. See Exhibit A (letter from 270 independent small restaurants). The average Relay courier makes close to $30 per hour today.

The Proposed Rule does not adequately account for the fundamental difference in business models between “Third Party Delivery Services” (Grubhub, UberEats and Doordash) and “Courier Services” (Relay).

Because DCWP has not considered Relay’s unique role in the food delivery ecosystem the Proposed Rule will harm Relay, and thus independent small restaurants and Relay’s couriers, in ways that DCWP has failed to appreciate. As to Relay, the Proposed Rule disproportionately burdens Relay. Relay is a B2B service, and unlike the Big Three apps, has no way of directly passing any increase in cost directly to consumers. Relay will have to pass these costs onto the independent small restaurants. The inevitable result is an increase in cost to consumers, which will translate into lower sales for restaurants. The Proposed Rule therefore disproportionately burdens not only Relay, but also small independent businesses, who are only now starting to regain their footing after suffering anemic sales the past few years on account of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Although well intentioned, the Proposed rule will also inevitably harm the very group it seeks to protect - the couriers of NYC. Alarming, the Proposed Rule fails to consider the likely impact it will have on courier gratuities. Gratuities constitute a significant portion of how couriers currently earn a living and will continue to do so even after an increase in minimum wage. A Relay courier's average wage is $30 per hour largely from gratuities. With the Proposed Rule, consumers will either leave smaller or no gratuities at all, strictly out of fiscal necessity.

In addition, the Proposed Rule fails to consider how consumers will tip less for behavioral reasons. For example, when consumers see how costs have been passed on to them in additional "admin" fees to support this wage, there is a risk they will assume that the new minimum wage alone is sufficient compensation. The Proposed Rule therefore risks lowering the current hourly wage of Relay couriers.

Relay respectfully urges DCWP to consider the irreparable harm the Proposed Rule poses to Relay's unique business model, the restaurants who rely on Relay as a valuable alternative to delivery fulfillment by the Big Three, and the couriers whose working conditions and pay will decline.

The Proposed Rule Fails to Consider the Competitive Alternative Relay Provides to the Big Three Apps' Delivery Fulfillment Services and Disproportionately Harms Relay

Relay is proud of its track record and reputation among New York City food couriers. Much like traditional food delivery workers that have served New York City's restaurant ecosystem for generations, Relay's couriers are paid in accordance with New York State's tip credit rate, $12.50 per hour plus gratuities, no matter how many - or how few - deliveries they make while logged into the platform. The average Relay courier makes close to $30 per hour today - twice the industry average according to DCWP's report.

The difference in wages earned by couriers on the Relay platform compared to those on third-party delivery services is largely driven by a different operations model. Since couriers are currently paid an hourly wage, Relay's model is based on maximizing the efficiency of its delivery system. Because Relay pays its couriers hourly, Relay is incentivized to maximize the number of trips a courier does per hour, resulting in more trips per hour for Relay couriers, and, by extension, more gratuities. For restaurant owners, Relay's model provides reliability; even during peak times, their orders will be delivered expeditiously.

In December 2022, Relay submitted comments on the Department's first proposed rule. The first proposed rule would incentivize Relay to move from a per-hour wage calculation to a per-trip formula in order to keep costs manageable for restaurants and consumers. Couriers were clear that they opposed such a change in Relay's model. While the current Proposed Rule attempts to address some of the concerns raised at the December public hearing, this Proposed Rule will have significant, likely unintended consequences on food delivery couriers, independent food establishments, consumers, and Relay.

Relay's business model is fundamentally different from the three other companies this rule aims to regulate. Relay is strictly a "B2B" service, meaning that unlike Doordash, UberEats and Grubhub, Relay has no direct relationship with consumers.

Instead, Relay is hired by local independent restaurants seeking to lower the commission rates they pay those companies. Because Relay is unable to directly charge consumers for this cost increase (which Uber, Grubhub and Doordash can), the Proposed Rule will disproportionately and irreparably harm Relay, without any corresponding gain for couriers or independent small restaurants, as further explained below. As DCWP observed, couriers working on Relay already are earning more than twice ($30/hr) what they earn working for the Big Three Apps ($12.00/hr). In so many words, the City is trying to fix something that isn't broken for Relay. Relay couriers will be forced to either find a new line of work, or join one of the companies that have a model less advantageous to couriers.

The Proposed Rule Fails to Consider How Small Independent Restaurants - Finally on a Path to Recovery Post-COVID - Will Lose Sales

The restaurants served by Relay couriers are not large, national chains. The vast majority are independently-owned neighborhood restaurants. These restaurants, many of which have served as cornerstones in their communities, operate on the slimmest of margins. Particularly as many still struggle to recover from the pandemic, relatively small fluctuations in their operational costs can have a significant impact on their bottom lines. One of the reasons Relay's restaurant partners often choose self-delivery (and Relay, by extension), is because it helps them keep their costs low. The Second Proposed Rule would unequivocally require Relay to increase its delivery prices, and increase that will unfairly impact Relay and these small restaurants.

Most independent restaurants simply can't absorb additional cost increases. They will have no choice but to pass along these costs to their customers. Higher fees will dissuade many customers, reducing restaurants' delivery volume and reducing their revenue.

Lastly, the costs of raising the minimum wage are a hotly contested policy matter, but empirical studies indicate that the employment effects of minimum wage law are mixed at best and harmful at worst.

New York's recent increase of the minimum wage for fast-food delivery workers provides a salient case study. While New York was considering the increase, experts warned policymakers of potential adverse effects on employment and the health of the industry; three years later, analysts have reported such effects, including recession-like impacts on employment³⁵⁸. Before adopting the Second Proposed Rule, DCWP should look especially closely at these studies and the microeconomic effects here, where independent restaurants have few delivery fulfillment options and operate on thin margins

The Proposed Rule Fails to Consider How Food Delivery Couriers, Especially for Relay, Risk Seeing Their Earnings Fall, Rather Than Rise

As discussed above, couriers on Relay's platform typically earn wages that are significantly higher than the industry average. If the Second Proposed Rule takes effect, Relay will be forced to take steps that further limit the number of couriers on the platform, especially during off-peak hours. This will limit delivery worker's potential hours on the platform and their overall wages.

It also will strain the system. With fewer delivery workers available to restaurants during certain periods, the average per trip distance is likely to increase. Not only does this increase in travel time reduce potential wages, but it is counter to the maximum distance regulations recently enacted to protect the safety of delivery workers.

Perhaps most significantly for couriers on Relay's platform, the Second Proposed Rule will likely have a negative impact on gratuities. Surcharges or other fees will be necessary to cover the proposed wage increase. As DCWP acknowledges, these additional costs are likely to have an impact on consumers' willingness or ability to tip. Losing tips will result in a significant decline in their overall earnings of couriers on the Relay platform.

Furthermore, consumers will rightfully believe that this rule means that couriers now are earning a living wage - without taking gratuities into account - and that this means there is no need to continue leaving a tip when ordering.

Lastly, as costs increase for consumers, demand for delivery will fall. This decrease in order volume means that earning opportunities for couriers will be slashed, further hurting NYC couriers.

³⁵⁸ Tara Crowl, Restaurateurs Are Scrambling to Cut Service and Raise Prices After Minimum Wage Hike, Eater (Feb. 19, 2019), <https://ny.eater.com/2019/2/19/18226831/minimum-wage-restaurant-reaction-nyc-finances>; Mark J. Perry, Who'd A-think It? NYC Minimum Wage Hike to $15 an Hour Is Causing Pain for Many of the City's Restaurants, AEI (Feb. 19, 2019).

The Proposed Rule Fails to Consider the Full Impact of the Proposed Rule on Vulnerable and Mobility Impaired Consumers

While food delivery is often described as a luxury, for some New Yorkers it has become a necessity. Every day, Relay couriers deliver meals to individuals who are mobility impaired, immunocompromised or otherwise homebound, and to families for whom food delivery is the primary way a hot meal reaches the table in time for dinner. DCWP's study anticipates an increase in consumer-borne costs, up to as much as $5.18 per order. This will require many New Yorkers, especially those on fixed incomes, to make difficult decisions about their food purchases. Consumers will either reduce their number of delivery orders or forgo adding gratuities. Both options will result in decreased revenue for local small businesses and reduced wages for delivery workers.

For the reasons above, Relay respectfully urges DCWP to revise the Proposed Rule in light of these overlooked risks and concerns.

Thank you for your consideration.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Alex Blum', with a stylized, cursive script.

Alex Blum

December 16, 2022

To Whom It May Concern:

Delivery has always been a vital component of New York City's restaurant ecosystem. Now, as restaurants continue to struggle from the lingering impacts of the pandemic and rising inflation, we need partners like Relay to help us manage and grow our delivery business efficiently and affordably. We the undersigned restaurant operators request that the Department of Consumer & Workforce Protection (DCWP) recognize the differences between Relay and the consumerfacing platforms and amend the proposed delivery worker regulations accordingly.

The truth is that Relay's operations model is drastically different than consumer-facing thirdparty delivery apps like UberEats, DoorDash or Grubhub. Much like traditional courier services, they work primarily with independent restaurants – not chains – to help us streamline and fulfill our delivery orders. They do not have a marketing or ordering platform of their own. Their low pricing keeps this necessary fulfillment service accessible to small businesses. And, as business operators, we appreciate the fact that the couriers who work with Relay also earn good wages: Relay couriers earn an average of $30.45/hr., compared to $14.50/hr. that other couriers earn.

If Relay is required to comply with the new regulations, however, our delivery costs would drastically increase. Unlike other platforms, Relay does not have customers that it can charge an additional service fee to; restaurants will bear the full cost of implementing these new regulations. For many of us, that is a cost that we simply cannot afford.

We therefore ask that DCWP consider the significant adverse impacts to local restaurants and amend the proposed rules by exempting Relay.

Thank you for your consideration.

Dan Pace
Zucker's Bagels

Kate Brisson
Bondi Sushi

Nick Kenner
Just Salad

Jordan Feldman
Springbone kitchen

Wilfredo Cerrato
Weekends Cafe

Rafael Magno
Empanada Mama

Amanda Scala
Calexico Carne Asada

Alonso Buendia
Amy Thai Bistro

Matt Post
Javelina

Peter Katsiaris
SVL SOUVLAKI BAR

Greg Fanslau
AGR Hospitality

Hady Kfoury
NAYA

Jose Tso
Flor de Mayo Restaurant

Mark Georgacopoulos
INDAY

Michael Jacobs

David Hess
Bondi sushi

Sophie Wyand
Juice Press

Bella Palterovich
Locanut

Dave Pesso
The Hummus & Pita co.

Jonah Phillips
Friedman's

Micha Magid
Mighty Quinn's BBQ

Zabi Arifee
Palace Chicken and Grill

Joel Tietolman
Mile End Delicatessen

Munir Tahir
Atomic wings

Ankush Punhani
Fine indian dining group

Chrsitopher Pugliese
www.tompinssquarebagels.com

Axel Meier
SA Hospitality Group

Kat Lee
Restaurant

Jamie Blumberg
Glaze teriyaki

Mohamed Ayadi

Zaki Omar
Atomic Wings

Blake Butler
Pickle Hospitality

Alper Uyanik
Harlem Burger Co.

Nuttawut Vee
Thai Terminal

Orly Reitkop
Batata

JASON ROTTER
Just Salad

Jack Yehya
Quinoa Kitchen

Scott Gregerson
Jet's Pizza

Keedick Coulter
Bobwhite Counter

Roberta Pettit
Two Boots Pizza

Ryan Huang
Restaurant

yosef Cohen
Lula bird

george tenedios
fresh&co

Nelson Cho
Flor de Mayo

Kyujo Chung

Corner Table Restaurants / The Smith	The Companion NYC icn	Kal restaurant
Joseph Ferrara Maman	Mohammed Ali Razai Pinkberry	Chad Vigneulle Harlem Public, At The Wallace
Mauricio Gonzalez Harlem Public	Johnny Condron The Grey Dog	matthew kouskalis Mighty Quinn's BBQ
Charles Marshall The Marshal Restaurant	Lara Bianca Vicente Tradisyon	Alessandro Biggi Avocaderia LLC
Danie Bendjy Rangoon	Steven Klein Dough	Chris McClellan Torch & Crown Brewing Company
Chirawat Patpongpijul Uni Thai Bistro	Ziyad Hermez Manousheh	Vittorio Antonini Enoteca Inc
Maggie Liang PacRim sushi restaurant	Sandro Fioriti Ristorante	Henry Aberle Takumen
Brian Robinson Gnarly Vines	James Finnegan The Sandwich Shop	SILVIU ANTONESCU SALAD BOX
Stephen Macrina Union Pizza Llc dba Union St. Pizza	Juan Perez Pita Grill Restaurant	Stephan Grigioni SG
Kelly Fitzpatrick Blue Park Kitchen	Danny Galeotafiore Danny's Pizzeria	Roland Semaan Balade and balade your way group
Louis Thompson Terrace Bagels	Stephanie Lempert Meadowsweet	Fumi Sueyoshi Crepe Master LLC
Rick Demarco Calexico	HUIHAO XU Lucy's On Bedford LLC	Lipa Salamon Refresh
Matt Christy Bluestone Lane	Danny Lyu Summer Salt	Kyle Xu Lucy's Kitchen
Rick White The Bier and Cheese Collective	Prentiss Alter Dlvya's Kitchen	Hannah Donagrandi abaita
David Donagrandi abaita restaurant	Vinod Sharma Bengal Tiger Indian Food	Nares Jeta Yum yum too

antonella silvio
pisillo italian panini

TJ Gargan
Teddy's Bar and Grill

Cory Bonfiglio
Beer Street New York

Isaac Bijou
Perizia Kosher Pizza

Vincent Licata
Burger Village Astoria

Magda Sayeg
Usra Group LLC

Vitaly Sherman
Beer Boutique

Matthew La Rue
Taqueria Diana Cantina

Endri Qalliu
L'Osteria

Ken Chino
SakaMai / All Blue Hospitality

Michele Bancale
Salsa Pizzeria

Henry Glucroft
Henrys

Warren Wan
Hak Box

Sivan Baron
Silvana

Abdel Ouedraogo
Silvana

Frank Ottomanelli
Ottomanelli

Hannah Cheng
Mimi Cheng's

Christopher Taha
Money Cat Vietnamese American

Christopher Taha
Leon's Bagels

Ana Ivkovic
Wattle Cafe

Andy Perez-Benzo
The Sandwich Shop

Mariana Vieira
Brigadeiro Bakery

Sharon Hoota
Hummus Kitchen

Tara Oles
Urban Vegan Roots

Ignazio Sciulara
Pizza

Chanel Connerly
BIS Du Boeuf INC

Nicholas Granato
Serafina

Wayne Jaffe
Blank Slate Coffee + Kitchen

Sivan Baron
Yatenga French Bistro and Bar

Abdel Ouedraogo
Yatenga

Jo Ellen gabel
Coming Soon Food Group LLC

Daron Yemini
LaSandwicherie

Jenny Baker
Father Knows Best

CHRISTOPHER BISCEGLIE
Jungle Cafe

Katherine Buenaflor
Wing Jawn

Jayden Yeom
Chicken restaurant

Phil Hartman
Two Boots

Maggie Low
Lilliandloo

Michael Beringer
Fitrition

Jacob Pressley
Northend Food Hall

Sam Belanger
French Roast

Tara Kashyap
Lula bird

Warren Wan
Hak Box

Robert Gillin
The Supply House NYC

John Unrath
Greenwood Lake Group, LLC

Maya Ferrante
Pecking House

Kevin Kim
Gramercy Wine

Tom Sperduto
Krupa Grocery

Yusef Task Matt Etchemendy
Pizza K&D Wines

richard klein Taksim Turkish cuisine Aces

Jeremy Tannenbaum
Fields Good Chicken

Jack Louth
Olea Mediterranean Taverna

Matt Fulton
Stocked Cafe & Burgers

Sean Mandel Oak Barrel yosef Cohen Betty Bakery Oak and Barrel Lula bagel

Eric Huang
Pecking House Restaurant

Liz Kwon
Vanderbergen Inc / White Tiger

Yookwon Chung
Vanderbergen Inc / dba White Tiger

Sojung Kwon
455 Myrtle Inc. / dba White Tiger Tavern

Chelsea Altman
455 Myrtle Inc. / dba White Tiger Tavern Top Quality

Mark Rancourt

Frank Yu
AweSum DimSum

Nicole Pavone
Harlem Public

Paul DiSpirito
Lioni Italian Heroes

Yagil Kadosh
Kulushkat

John Bermingham
Harefield Road

Menashe Gottlieb
Gottliebs kosher restaurant

Marisa Abaza
High five food and drink

Allan Reis
AR LIQUORS CORP

Lingxia Zheng
Asian

Pornthiwa Ajalanon
Thai restaurant

Yossi Gershovitz
Prime Avenue restaurant

Peter Papadopoulos
Singas Famous Pizza

Mohamed Moustafa
Atomic Wings

Sonny Solomon
Veeray Da Dhaba

Luke Momo
Quality Eats

Huascar Aquino
Huascar & Company Bakeshop

John-Paul Quattrone
Cool Wine & Spirits

John-Paul Quattrone
Cool Wine & Spirits

Matt Pomerantz
Zucker's Bagels

Karnchana Vongsawat
Amy Thai Bistro

carlos vega
Astoria Bier And Cheese

Evrotas Volman-Schwebel
Santa Panza / Holy Belly LLC

Phut Rungravekul
Thai101

asher sendyk evil katsu

Fabio Migliaccio

Tommy Brunton

Angelo Bracco

Bond Street Coffee & Goods

Nick Moshkovich
Bonberi Mart

Elie Mouawad
Dessert shop

Benjamin Kaplan
PLNT Burger

Robert Eby
Ejs luncheonette

Juan Beltran
Minus Moonshine

Nir Kahan
Hokey Poké - The Chick Shop

Liad Matatyahu
Cafe Mogador LLC
George Ortiz
La Puerta Roja

Danielle Avvento
Poulet Sans Tete

Takyashilah Sabree
Urban vegan kitchen

andrew lopresto
babbalucci

Peter Shelsky
Shelsky's Smoked Fish, LLC (DBA ShelskScungilli CP Kings Corp. (DBA Shelsky's Yaya tea

Angelo Viscoso
Sotto 13

Christopher Bartle
Two Boots

Bond Street Coffee & Goods

James Bracco
Bond Street Coffee & Goods

Adriana Ozarkiv
Bustan NYC

Michael Fadem
Ops & Leo

Eder Hernandez
Vibtage cafe

Alejandro Torres
El Gallo Taqueria

Richard Jurmark
EJ's Luncheonette

Josh Waters
Marinara Pizza
Robin Wertheimer
Werkstatt Restaurant

Anastasia Kulinich
Om juice bar

Adriana Ozarkiv
Penelope

Lai So
Ajisai on duane

Lewis Spada
Lewis Spada

Rick Jurmark
EJs Luncheonette

Efrain Romero
Two Boots WV

Bond Street Coffee & Goods

Alberto Tartari
Gastronomica Corp

Adriana Ozarkiv
Tamam

Ravenna Wilson
Native Bread

Aqxyl Storms
Minus Moonshine

Melissa Irisarri
Minus Moonshine

Hoyoung Lee
Slow Loris

Mervyn Winston
MMR FOODS INC
John Dantzer
Torch & Crown Brewing Co.

Joanna Preuninger
The Corkery

mathew wong
TEA AND MILK

Terri Rickwell
Amor Loco

Maggie Kwong

Mauricio McFarlane
Brooklyniteburgers

brad gardiner
Two Boots Pizza

From: Sekou Siby <siby@rocunited.org>
Sent: Monday, April 3, 2023 3:21 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Public Comment submission: Delivery workers wage

You don't often get email from siby@rocunited.org. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Public Comments by Dr. Sekou Siby, President & CEO of ROC United

My name is Dr. Sekou Siby, and I am the President & CEO at Restaurants Opportunities Centers (ROC) United. ROC was founded by restaurant workers displaced from the World Trade Center after September 11, 2001. ROC's mission is to improve restaurant workers' lives by building worker power and uniting workers of various backgrounds around shared goals and values. ROC has grown into a national organization dedicated to achieving economic stability and thriving futures for restaurant industry workers and is the country's oldest and largest restaurant worker-led organization. ROC has been a hub of workforce development training and worker organizing since the organization's earliest days. At the height of the pandemic, many servers became delivery workers because their restaurants shut down.

I want to comment on the new rules that the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) is proposing to establish methods for determining the minimum payments that must be made to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service, as required by New York City Administrative Code § 20-1522.

Even with the decrease in the hourly pay from the initially proposed $23.82 to the current $17.96, this minimum pay level still represents a significant and much-needed improvement in the pay of delivery workers. Earlier estimates by industry researchers and the NYC DCWP revealed that delivery workers' average pay per hour is between $4 and $7 per hour, which is below the legal minimum pay in New York. Delivery workers are essential and deserve fair pay for their labor.

The recent adjustments made to establish a minimum pay for workers paid by the trip and not by the hour would result in the pay of approximately .53 dollars per minute from the time the workers accept the order until the time they deliver the food. This payment method would also allow for significant improvements in total payments received by delivery workers.

I support the updated minimum pay proposal of the DCWP and urge the City of New York to implement the new payment rules without further delays.

Thank you for the opportunity to deliver this testimony.

--

1

Dr. Sekou Siby, MBA, DBA
President & CEO
Restaurant Opportunities Centers United & ROC Action
275 7th Ave., Suite 1504
New York, NY 10001

Restaurant Workers' Bill of Rights \(RWBOR\)

Book a meeting: <https://calendly.com/siby-1>

To schedule time with me, contact
Leslie@rocunited.org www.rocunited.org Pronouns:

He/Him/His <https://team.rocunited.org/>

P: 212-343-1771

C: 917-538-1227

The information in this e-mail message and any files transmitted is confidential and may be legally privileged. It is intended only for the use of the individual(s) named above. If you are the intended recipient, be aware that state and federal privacy laws may restrict your use of any confidential or personal information. If you, the reader of this message, are not the intended recipient, you are notified that you should not further disseminate, distribute, or forward this E-mail message. If you have received this e-mail in error, please notify the sender and delete the material from any computer. Thank you

Myo Thway, Burmese Bites

To the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection,

I am writing to comment on the revised rule recently published by the agency that would set a minimum pay rate for app-based restaurant delivery workers. I am the owner of Burmese Bites, a small business in Queens that has been serving customers since YEAR OPENED.

While we have always loved welcoming customers into our restaurant, our business changed significantly after the pandemic, when we joined delivery platforms like DoorDash and UberEats that help us reach new customers and grow our business.

In the past few years, delivery workers have played an important role in New York's economy, including supporting businesses like mine through tough times. As a small business owner, I know what it's like to put in hard work and I have respect for the work that delivery workers do every day.

I am glad to see that the City has been receptive to feedback about its initial proposal to set a minimum pay rate for delivery workers. However, I am concerned the City has still not done enough to consider how the revised proposal would actually negatively impact customers, delivery workers, and small business owners like myself.

This proposal seems to provide delivery platforms with two options for how to pay delivery workers, but neither would likely avoid significant changes to how these platforms operate or drive up costs for small businesses and consumers.

The first option requires platforms to pay workers for all of the time that they are logged on to a delivery app, but it is clear this fundamentally misrepresents the way that these apps are used in practice. Many delivery workers choose to earn with these platforms because of the flexibility and independence they provide, allowing them to log on and accept or deny any order they are offered when and where they choose. However, if platforms are forced to pay delivery workers for time the app is open but workers are not on delivery, they'll be forced to limit this time which necessitates severe restrictions on flexibility that draws many to these platforms in the first place.

The second option maintains the ability to pay workers for time they spend making deliveries, but at a rate of almost $30 per hour this year, rising to $33 per hour by 2025, an unprecedented increase that would undoubtedly result in raising the cost of delivery services for consumers.

The implications of this potential rule are clear: higher costs means fewer orders for small businesses like mine. We know that even slight changes to prices can impact decisions customers make, including if they decide they can afford to order delivery at all. The City originally estimated that its proposal would increase costs for consumers on each order by an upwards of $5 per order, a significant increase that would strain many small businesses and leave many uncertain if they would be able to survive.

The decrease in deliveries would be especially hard for restaurants and local businesses in further out areas of New York City like where my restaurant is located in Queens. It's possible that if businesses in those areas are not receiving enough orders, delivery platforms may need to severely reduce or eliminate service in these areas altogether.

The past several years have been challenging for Burmese Bites as we have been facing many of the challenges restaurants across the City have been struggling with, such as inflation, supply chain issues and staffing shortages. I am concerned about my business's ability to meet our margins if this new minimum pay rate goes into effect, we may not be able to withstand the increase in costs.

I urge the DWCP to carefully consider the potential impacts of this rule on small businesses and to make some additional changes. While establishing a meaningful pay rate for delivery workers is well-intentioned, we need to ensure that our small business owners are not ultimately paying the price. I encourage the agency to revisit this proposed rule and come up with a new solution that protects small businesses and local restaurants from higher costs, so that we can continue to serve so many communities across the City.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit testimony.

Sincerely,
Myo Thway
OWNER of Burmese Bites

John Batas, New York City Bagel & Coffee House

To the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection,

I am writing to comment on the revised rule recently published by the agency that would set a minimum pay rate for app-based restaurant delivery workers. I am the owner of New York City Bagel & Coffee House, a small business in Queens that has been serving customers since 2015.

While we have always loved welcoming customers into our restaurant, our business changed significantly after the pandemic, when we joined delivery platforms like DoorDash and UberEats that help us reach new customers and grow our business.

In the past few years, delivery workers have played an important role in New York's economy, including supporting businesses like mine through tough times. As a small business owner, I know what it's like to put in hard work and I have respect for the work that delivery workers do every day.

I am glad to see that the City has been receptive to feedback about its initial proposal to set a minimum pay rate for delivery workers. However, I am concerned the City has still not done enough to consider how the revised proposal would actually negatively impact customers, delivery workers, and small business owners like myself.

This proposal seems to provide delivery platforms with two options for how to pay delivery workers, but neither would likely avoid significant changes to how these platforms operate or drive up costs for small businesses and consumers.

The first option requires platforms to pay workers for all of the time that they are logged on to a delivery app, but it is clear this fundamentally misrepresents the way that these apps are used in practice. Many delivery workers choose to earn with these platforms because of the flexibility and independence they provide, allowing them to log on and accept or deny any order they are offered when and where they choose. However, if platforms are forced to pay delivery workers for time the app is open but workers are not on delivery, they'll be forced to limit this time which necessitates severe restrictions on flexibility that draws many to these platforms in the first place.

The second option maintains the ability to pay workers for time they spend making deliveries, but at a rate of almost $30 per hour this year, rising to $33 per hour by 2025, an unprecedented increase that would undoubtedly result in raising the cost of delivery services for consumers.

The implications of this potential rule are clear: higher costs means fewer orders for small businesses like mine. We know that even slight changes to prices can impact decisions customers make, including if they decide they can afford to order delivery at all. The City originally estimated that its proposal would increase costs for consumers on each order by an upwards of $5 per order, a significant increase that would strain many small businesses and leave many uncertain if they would be able to survive.

The decrease in deliveries would be especially hard for restaurants and local businesses in further out areas of New York City like where my restaurant is located in Queens. It's possible that if businesses in those areas are not receiving enough orders, delivery platforms may need to severely reduce or eliminate service in these areas altogether.

The past several years have been challenging for New York City Bagel & Coffee House as we have been facing many of the challenges restaurants across the City have been struggling with, such as inflation, supply chain issues and staffing shortages. I am concerned about my business's ability to meet our margins if this new minimum pay rate goes into effect, we may not be able to withstand the increase in costs.

I urge the DWCP to carefully consider the potential impacts of this rule on small businesses and to make some additional changes. While establishing a meaningful pay rate for delivery workers is well-intentioned, we need to ensure that our small business owners are not ultimately paying the price. I encourage the agency to revisit this proposed rule and come up with a new solution that protects small businesses and local restaurants from higher costs, so that we can continue to serve so many communities across the City.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit testimony.

Sincerely,

John Batas

OWNER of New York City Bagel & Coffee House

Mouna T., LA TAVERNNE INC

To the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection,

I am writing to comment on the revised rule recently published by the agency that would set a minimum pay rate for app-based restaurant delivery workers. I am the owner of La Tavernne Inc., a small business in Brooklyn that has been serving customers since 2012.

While we have always loved welcoming customers into our restaurant, our business changed significantly after the pandemic, when we joined delivery platforms like DoorDash and UberEats that help us reach new customers and grow our business.

In the past few years, delivery workers have played an important role in New York's economy, including supporting businesses like mine through tough times. As a small business owner, I know what it's like to put in hard work and I have respect for the work that delivery workers do every day.

I am glad to see that the City has been receptive to feedback about its initial proposal to set a minimum pay rate for delivery workers. However, I am concerned the City has still not done enough to consider how the revised proposal would actually negatively impact customers, delivery workers, and small business owners like myself.

This proposal seems to provide delivery platforms with two options for how to pay delivery workers, but neither would likely avoid significant changes to how these platforms operate or drive up costs for small businesses and consumers.

The first option requires platforms to pay workers for all of the time that they are logged on to a delivery app, but it is clear this fundamentally misrepresents the way that these apps are used in practice. Many delivery workers choose to earn with these platforms because of the flexibility and independence they provide, allowing them to log on and accept or deny any order they are offered when and where they choose. However, if platforms are forced to pay delivery workers for time the app is open but workers are not on delivery, they'll be forced to limit this time which necessitates severe restrictions on flexibility that draws many to these platforms in the first place.

The second option maintains the ability to pay workers for time they spend making deliveries, but at a rate of almost $30 per hour this year, rising to $33 per hour by 2025, an unprecedented increase that would undoubtedly result in raising the cost of delivery services for consumers.

The implications of this potential rule are clear: higher costs means fewer orders for small businesses like mine. We know that even slight changes to prices can impact decisions customers make, including if they decide they can afford to order delivery at all. The City originally estimated that its proposal would increase costs for consumers on each order by an upwards of $5 per order, a significant increase that would strain many small businesses and leave many uncertain if they would be able to survive.

The decrease in deliveries would be especially hard for restaurants and local businesses in further out areas of New York City like where my restaurant is located in Brooklyn. It's possible that if businesses in those areas are not receiving enough orders, delivery platforms may need to severely reduce or eliminate service in these areas altogether.

The past several years have been challenging for La Tavernne Inc. as we have been facing many of the challenges restaurants across the City have been struggling with, such as inflation, supply chain issues and staffing shortages. I am concerned about my business's ability to meet our margins if this new minimum pay rate goes into effect, we may not be able to withstand the increase in costs.

I urge the DWCP to carefully consider the potential impacts of this rule on small businesses and to make some additional changes. While establishing a meaningful pay rate for delivery workers is well-intentioned, we need to ensure that our small business owners are not ultimately paying the price. I encourage the agency to revisit this proposed rule and come up with a new solution that protects small businesses and local restaurants from higher costs, so that we can continue to serve so many communities across the City.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit testimony.

Sincerely,

Mouna T.

OWNER of La Tavernne Inc.

Dawn Skeete, Jam'lt Bistro

To the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection,

I am writing to comment on the revised rule recently published by the agency that would set a minimum pay rate for app-based restaurant delivery workers. I am the owner of Jam'lt Bistro, a small business in Brooklyn that has been serving customers since YEAR OPENED.

While we have always loved welcoming customers into our restaurant, our business changed significantly after the pandemic, when we joined delivery platforms like DoorDash and UberEats that help us reach new customers and grow our business.

In the past few years, delivery workers have played an important role in New York's economy, including supporting businesses like mine through tough times. As a small business owner, I know what it's like to put in hard work and I have respect for the work that delivery workers do every day.

I am glad to see that the City has been receptive to feedback about its initial proposal to set a minimum pay rate for delivery workers. However, I am concerned the City has still not done enough to consider how the revised proposal would actually negatively impact customers, delivery workers, and small business owners like myself.

This proposal seems to provide delivery platforms with two options for how to pay delivery workers, but neither would likely avoid significant changes to how these platforms operate or drive up costs for small businesses and consumers.

The first option requires platforms to pay workers for all of the time that they are logged on to a delivery app, but it is clear this fundamentally misrepresents the way that these apps are used in practice. Many delivery workers choose to earn with these platforms because of the flexibility and independence they provide, allowing them to log on and accept or deny any order they are offered when and where they choose. However, if platforms are forced to pay delivery workers for time the app is open but workers are not on delivery, they'll be forced to limit this time which necessitates severe restrictions on flexibility that draws many to these platforms in the first place.

The second option maintains the ability to pay workers for time they spend making deliveries, but at a rate of almost $30 per hour this year, rising to $33 per hour by 2025, an unprecedented increase that would undoubtedly result in raising the cost of delivery services for consumers.

The implications of this potential rule are clear: higher costs means fewer orders for small businesses like mine. We know that even slight changes to prices can impact decisions customers make, including if they decide they can afford to order delivery at all. The City originally estimated that its proposal would increase costs for consumers on each order by an upwards of $5 per order, a significant increase that would strain many small businesses and leave many uncertain if they would be able to survive.

The decrease in deliveries would be especially hard for restaurants and local businesses in further out areas of New York City like where my restaurant is located in Brooklyn. It's possible that if businesses in those areas are not receiving enough orders, delivery platforms may need to severely reduce or eliminate service in these areas altogether.

The past several years have been challenging for Jam'It Bistro as we have been facing many of the challenges restaurants across the City have been struggling with, such as inflation, supply chain issues and staffing shortages. I am concerned about my business's ability to meet our margins if this new minimum pay rate goes into effect, we may not be able to withstand the increase in costs.

I urge the DWCP to carefully consider the potential impacts of this rule on small businesses and to make some additional changes. While establishing a meaningful pay rate for delivery workers is well-intentioned, we need to ensure that our small business owners are not ultimately paying the price. I encourage the agency to revisit this proposed rule and come up with a new solution that protects small businesses and local restaurants from higher costs, so that we can continue to serve so many communities across the City.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit testimony.

Sincerely,

Dawn Skeete

OWNER of Jam'It Bistro

Regarding minimum payments for third party delivery workers

Good afternoon. My name is Kathleen Reilly, and I am the NYC Government Affairs Manager for the New York State Restaurant Association. We are a trade association representing food and beverage establishments in New York City and State. We are the largest hospitality trade association in the State, and we have advocated on behalf of our members for over 80 years. Our members represent a large and widely regulated constituency in New York City, and our industry continues to be disproportionately harmed by the lingering impact and losses of the Covid-19 pandemic.

We understand that the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection has carried out a study regarding the current pay conditions for food delivery workers who are independent contractors with the third-party delivery platforms active in New York City – prominently, Grubhub, Doordash, UberEats, and Relay. We understand the Department’s intentions to better compensate these workers and bring their pay better in line with other minimum wages present in the city. We furthermore appreciate that the Department has taken into consideration the outpouring of public comments made at the first rule hearing, and subsequently issued an updated rule.

As we understand it, the updated proposed minimum rate would be $19.96/hr by April 1, 2025, if delivery platforms pay for both trip time and on-call time, or $33.27/hr ($19.96/0.6) if delivery platforms utilize the alternative pay structure and pay for active trip time only. We understand that the new proposed pay rates would apply only to delivery workers who are independent contractors, rather than delivery workers directly employed by our member restaurants. All of that said, we would still like to point out several consequences of this proposed pay rate rule that we anticipate impacting our membership.

If third-party delivery platforms are required to pay their delivery workers at a higher rate for both trip time and “on call” time, or a much higher rate for just trip time, we anticipate these platforms responding with some combination of the following: passing on much higher delivery costs to customers; creating more regimented and less flexible work opportunities for drivers; reducing or eliminating delivery fulfillment in New York City. Each one of these responses would negatively impact restaurants. If consumers are hit with much higher delivery fees, they will likely reduce their demand for delivery orders. If third-party platforms implement more regimented and less flexible work opportunities, for instance, placing a low cap on how many drivers can have the app open at once, setting more rigorous delivery-per-hour metrics, or closing drivers out of the app after making a certain number of trips per day or week, we foresee slower delivery times and rushed or unsafe delivery driving. If the platforms choose to simply reduce or eliminate delivery fulfillment in New York City, many restaurants will be cut off from the opportunity to deliver altogether, if hiring their own staff delivery worker is not feasible.

In conclusion, the New York State Restaurant Association would simply urge the Committee to consider these consequences, and to take into account the various opinions coming from the delivery worker community as well. While we are only indirectly impacted by this rule change, we want to limit any negative spillover effects on the restaurant industry, which is still struggling to recover from the negative impacts of the pandemic. Thank you for considering our feedback, and we remain dedicated partners in building a fair, transparent, and productive food delivery market in New York City.

Respectfully Submitted,

Kathleen Reilly

NYC Government Affairs Manager

New York State Restaurant Association

401 New Karner Road

Albany, New York 12205

THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE COMPTROLLER
BRAD LANDER

Vilda Vera Mayuga
Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th floor New York, NY 10004
via: email

March 21, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

As New York City elected officials committed to advancing fair pay for the essential work of third-party delivery and courier service workers, we are deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP)'s unacceptable decision to further delay the promulgation of a final rule implementing Local Law 115 of 2021, and to introduce further erosions to the rule that would codify a subminimum wage for deliveristas.

First, by its delay, DCWP is in violation of the law, which required the rule to be in place by January 1, 2023. Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who have long deserved a raise.

Second, while DCWP staff worked hard to research and calculate a minimum pay rate in an effort to fulfill the requirements of the legislation (and the worker-led campaign that resulted in its passage), the new rule is a large step backwards. The Second Proposed Rule introduces new, troubling elements that undermine the goals of the original legislation. As a result, the average deliverista would receive far below minimum wage.

While DCWP attempts to present the "hourly wage" for workers as $19.96, with the proposed but misleading $3.60 per hour reduction for "multi-apping," and the $2 reduction in 2023 for "phase-in" (better described as willfully allowing the apps to keep paying a subminimum wage for two years), $2.26 for expenses and properly allocating $1.10 towards time off (the base wage includes an additional 6% for vacation and sick pay) and $2.25 for taxes and workers compensation, the average base wage for 2023 would actually be $12.69.

New York State's minimum wage reached $15 per hour in 2019. In 2019 dollars, the $12.69 on average per hour that deliveristas would take home under DCWP's proposal is worth just $10.87 of goods and services in 2023. Even with the adjustments that DCWP includes to cover the costs of workers' comp, Social Security, and Medicare, deliveristas still do not receive health insurance or unemployment insurance. If you proceed with this rule, you will be codifying a subminimum wage for the some of the most exploited workers.

We are especially disturbed by the appearance that the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers; indeed, in their comments to DCWP they declare that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.³⁵⁹ So, it is no surprise they have fought implementation of the rule designed to ensure the workers receive a minimum wage. It would be appalling if the City of New York imposed a subminimum wage and a months-long delay even for workers to receive it as a result of corporate lobbying.

App-based delivery workers risked their lives through the pandemic to provide food to New Yorkers, enabling people to remain in their homes during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak in New York City. They continue to provide food and other goods to New Yorkers every day, amidst extreme weather and health and safety risks on the streets which are functionally their workplace – all at subminimum wages and without benefits. Out of that experience, they organized a moving and powerful campaign that captured the attention of New Yorkers, demanding justice and fair treatment, which led to a package of bills including LL 115.

New York City now has an opportunity to lead the nation by establishing a minimum wage standard for this growing industry that would adequately compensate delivery workers for their labor and their pivotal contributions to our city. We are encouraged by the seriousness with which DCWP initially undertook the required study of working conditions of third-party food delivery workers, including income, expenses, required equipment, modes of transit and safety conditions. We plead with you to return to the seriousness with which you initially sought to comply with the law.

While you cannot restore the five months of wages you have illegally taken from delivery workers, you can adjust the rules to ensure that they will, at the very least, receive at least the minimum wage as their base pay rate going forward:

1. The $3.60 pay reduction for so-called “multi-apping” must be entirely eliminated.

The proposal to reduce workers' base pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is not supported by the report, is inappropriate and results in a guaranteed sub-minimum wage for many workers. DCWP has failed to provide any evidence or explanation for why “multi-apping” should reduce workers' pay, and as far as we can tell, it

³⁵⁹ “Uber Eats, DoorDash, Grubhub, and tech industry advocates commented that the base pay rate should take into consideration the flexibility of food delivery workers' work arrangement and would appropriately be lower than the minimum wage applicable to employees.” DCWP Notice of Public Hearing and Opportunity to Comment on Proposed Rules, 3/7/23.

is premised on entirely faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multiapping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their oncall/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. We have seen no evidence whatsoever that there is ever a time when workers are actually being paid by multiple apps at the same time. Under the Standard Method, there is no guarantee that an individual worker would be paid for their waiting time, which DCWP estimates as 40% of their time on average. Without paying for waiting time, it is a subminimum wage formula by definition.

In addition, it appears that multi-apping has precipitously declined as more apps have moved to requiring workers to reserve assigned shifts in advance, and order volume has diminished. This means that even if it were justified, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP and the apps both know these amounts are overinflated. DCWP should not condone the apps’ failure to provide more recent data as subpoenaed by relying on outdated figures to implement this punitive policy.

2. The “phase-in” must be eliminated. There is simply no justification for allowing multi-billion dollar apps to continue to pay subminimum wages for the next two years.

The current bill purports to ensure that the average worker will earn the “minimum wage,” but does not actually ensure that every worker will earn at least $15 for 60 minutes of work. The multi-apping deduction threatens to reduce this by $3.60 per hour, without justification. To add insult to injury, the rule would then, for the first year, reduce wages an additional $2 below even the subminimum wage it provides, as a result of the “phase in.” There is no justification for this. All other large (and small) employers are required to pay the minimum wage; no special dispensation should be given here. The apps are not small businesses with precarious margins that cannot sustain sudden changes in labor costs. There was no “phase-in period” for driving apps under the TLC driver pay rule, and no reason to treat the delivery apps – who have profited from their workers reduced pay for several years long – any differently. The proposed phase-in should be eliminated.

3. Workers must be paid for their individual waiting time rather than in the aggregate or based on an industry average.

Presumptions of how individual market participants will act have no place in this rule.³⁶⁰ The Standard Method would allow companies to pay individual workers just $6.53 an hour after expenses and the Alternative Method would allow the apps to withhold upwards of $4 an hour from workers as a whole. By not limiting those apps which can elect to use the Alternative Method until April 2024 and allowing apps to change their methodology of choice each pay period, the Department ensures that the aggregate pay requirement will continue to pose harm to workers with dire results. By allowing a company to only

³⁶⁰ Indeed, the SOH at pg. 10 states that the “Department assumes that ... Relay, which already pays workers for on-call time, will choose the standard method” despite Relay’s own testimony that “this proposal would almost certainly force us to change our payment model to one where we pay couriers per-trip.”

pay some of its workers for their time on trips at a lower rate than otherwise, and then give bonuses to other workers, apps will be incentivized to encourage dangerous behavior.

4. The formula for COLA increases must be revised to account for inflation in business expenses as already implemented by the TLC.

The proposed rules are insufficiently tailored to ensure that workers will not fall below minimum wage due to disparate inflationary impacts on expenses and purchasing power. The formula should accordingly be revised to separately calculate inflation for the base and expense components after an annual review of expenses. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers. At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, this review process is required by § 20-1522(c).

Only by making these revisions to ensure that deliveristas actually earn at least the minimum wage will DCWP fulfill its obligations under the law and show these essential workers the dignity they deserve. Through this delay, DCWP has already unacceptably reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. We are counting on you to reverse the proposed harmful erosion of the rules, in order not to make this any worse

Sincerely,

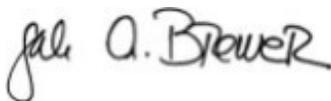

Brad Lander
New York City Comptroller

Christopher Marte
New York City Council Member, District 1

Erik Bottcher
New York City Council Member, District 3

Gale Brewer

New York City Council Member, District 6

Kristin Richardson Jordan
New York City Council Member, District 9

Marjorie Velázquez
New York City Council Member, District 13
Chair, Committee on Consumer and Worker
Protection

Antonio Reynoso
Brooklyn Borough President

Carlina Rivera
New York City Council Member, District 2

Julie Menin
New York City Council Member, District 5

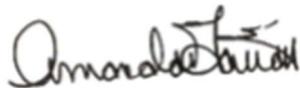

Shaun Abreu
New York City Council Member, District 7

Carmen De La Rosa
New York City Council Member, District 10

Pierina Ana Sanchez
New York City Council Member, District 14

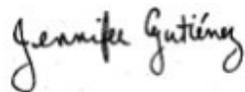

Amanda Farías
New York City Council Member, District 18

Shekar Krishnan
New York City Council Member, District 25

Nantasha Williams
New York City Council Member, District 27

Jennifer Gutiérrez
New York City Council Member, District 34

Chi Ossé
New York City Council Member, District 36

Alexa Avilés
New York City Council Member, District 38

Rita Joseph
New York City Council Member, District 40

CC: Deputy Mayor Maria Torres-Springer

Tiffany Cabán
New York City Council Member, District 22

Julie Won
New York City Council Member, District 26

Lincoln Restler
New York City Council Member, District 33

Crystal Hudson
New York City Council Member, District 35

Sandy Nurse
New York City Council Member, District 37

Shahana Hanif
New York City Council Member, District 39

DISTRICT OFFICE
56 PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE
BROOKLYN, NY 11207
TEL: (718) 642-8664
FAX: (718) 889-6017

CITY HALL OFFICE
250 BROADWAY, SUITE 1823
NEW YORK, NY 10007
TEL: (212) 788-7284
FAX: (212) 227-5636
SNurse@council.nyc.gov
District37@council.nyc.gov

THE COUNCIL
OF
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
SANDY NURSE
COUNCIL MEMBER, 37TH DISTRICT, BROOKLYN

SANITATION AND SOLID WASTE MANAGEMENT CHAIR

COMMITTEES
CIVIL SERVICE AND LABOR
CONTRACTS
ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION
RESILIENCY AND WATERFRONTS
VETERANS

SUB-COMMITTEE
LANDMARKS, PUBLIC SITINGS, AND DISPOSITIONS

Commissioner Vilda Vera Mayuga
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th Floor NY, NY 10004

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

As the New York City Council Member representing Brooklyn's 37th District and a former delivery worker myself, I am deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. Delivery workers are an extremely exploited, unprotected class of mostly immigrant workers and this move is unacceptable.

The draft rule delays and undermines the law requiring a minimum pay standard for Deliveristas by January 1, 2023. With this unlawful delay, DCWP is essentially stealing at least five months of pay from workers whom it is legally charged to protect. Wage theft is exactly what your agency is supposed to be protecting New Yorkers from.

The fact is, these companies are making millions off the back of exploited, under-paid mostly immigrant workers because they have websites and algorithms. These companies provide no safeguards, no benefits and no long term security for their workers.

Without addressing the problematic issue of "order bundling", the proposed rule allows the app companies to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate. This is the opposite of what DCWP should be working towards.

DCWP has provided no evidence that multi-apping is a problem. DCWP has not provided evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time. The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called "multi-apping," is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no "multi-apping" deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work. There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Moreover, we cannot ignore the clear power imbalance between these apps and their workers. There is undeniably an historical trend of employers attempting to delegitimize, scare, and incite disorder within worker campaigns. Many of these apps have multi-billion dollar market valuations, and it is at best disingenuous, and at worst outright bullying, to threaten workers who are trying to make a living in one of the most expensive cities in the country.

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8th.)

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

Food delivery workers in our city have been fighting for a minimum wage for more than two years. By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn't make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,

Sandy Nurse
Council Member, District 37

DISTRICT OFFICE
37-04 QUEENS BOULEVARD, SUITE 205
QUEENS, NY 11101
TEL: (718) 383-9566
FAX: (718) 383-9076

CITY HALL OFFICE
250 BROADWAY, ROOM 1749
NEW YORK, NY 10007
TEL: (212) 788-7370
FAX: (212) 513-7195
Jwon@council.nyc.gov

THE COUNCIL OF
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
JULIE WON

COUNCIL MEMBER, 26TH DISTRICT, QUEENS

CHAIR
CONTRACTS

COMMITTEES
CONSUMER AND WORKER PROTECTION
FINANCE
OVERSIGHT AND INVESTIGATION PUBLIC HOUSING
TECHNOLOGY
TRANSPORTATION AND INFRASTRUCTURE

CAUCUS
BLACK, LATINO AND ASIAN CAUCUS
PROGRESSIVE CAUCUS
WOMEN'S CAUCUS

Friday April 7, 2023

Honorable Vilda Vera Mayuga, Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th Floor
New York, NY 10004 via: email

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the COVID-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits.

As the Council Member for the 26th District, representing Long Island City, Astoria, Sunnyside, and Woodside, I am outraged with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and would like to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, I am concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule is the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work. There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in.

There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, the Adams’ administration has reduced the pay of workers that it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential deliveristas.

Sincerely,

Sincerely,

Council Member Julie Won

26th District
New York City Council

jw:ib

COMMUNITY OFFICE
37-32 75TH STREET, 1ST FLOOR
JACKSON HEIGHTS, NY 11372
TEL: (718) 803-6373
FAX: (718) 803-9832

CITY HALL OFFICE
250 BROADWAY, ROOM 1816
NEW YORK, NY 10007
TEL: (212) 788-7066

EMAIL: krishnan@council.nyc.gov

THE COUNCIL
OF
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
SHEKAR KRISHNAN

COUNCIL MEMBER, 25th DISTRICT, QUEENS

CHAIR
PARKS AND RECREATION

COMMITTEES
IMMIGRATION
EDUCATION
LAND USE
OVERSIGHT AND INVESTIGATIONS
CONSUMER AND WORKER PROTECTION
SMALL BUSINESS

Commissioner Vilda Vera Mayuga
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th Floor
New York, NY 10004

April 7, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

I am writing to express my disappointment with your agency's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021, which will delay and diminish enactment of a long-overdue minimum wage for delivery workers.

I represent Council District 25 which includes the neighborhoods of Jackson Heights and Elmhurst. My constituents include many of the 65,000 delivery workers in our city who are fighting for a fair minimum wage. I was proud to be in support of Local Law 115 of 2021 which was passed by the City Council last year. I was encouraged by the previous steps taken by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) to roll out rules so that wages could go into effect by January 1, 2023, as outlined by the legislation. However, DCWP's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 both delays and undermines the law requiring a minimum pay standard for Deliveristas. Further, DCWP is essentially stealing at least five months of pay from workers whom it is legally charged to protect.

If the proposed rule takes effect as currently written, it would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices, such as "order bundling" are ignored. Thus I write to urge you to consider changes to its most recent draft rule before implementing it.

Instances Of "Multi-Apping" Are Inflated

There is no reason that the proposal should include an opportunity to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because of so-called "multi-apping." Delivery workers may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job. The recent minimum pay rule for for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers has no “multi-apping” deduction. This is regardless of the fact that similar to delivery workers, FHV drivers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open. However, it must be stated that during this waiting time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. The department has not provided evidence to the contrary, that workers are being paid by multiple apps simultaneously.

In addition, “multi-apping” has precipitously decreased. Many delivery apps have begun to require reservations to work. There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is likely overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for “multi-apping” on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

The Phase-In Period Is An Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include a phase in period which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it in this proposed rule and this phase-in period should be removed.

Consider Unregulated Business Practices That Undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Underestimating The Impact Of Inflation On Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based FHV drivers.

Food delivery workers in our city have been fighting for a minimum wage for over two years. By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting.

I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule to give our essential Deliveristas the pay they have fought for and rightfully deserve.

Respectfully submitted,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Shekar K', written in a cursive style.

Shekar Krishnan
Council Member, District 25 - Elmhurst and Jackson Heights

THE COUNCIL
OF
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
250 BROADWAY
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10007

GALE A. BREWER

TEL: (212) 873-0282

COUNCIL MEMBER, DISTRICT 6 GBREWER@COUNCIL.NYC.GOV

April 7, 2023

Testimony before the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection on the minimum pay rate for app-based restaurant delivery workers

My name is Gale A Brewer. I am the Council Member for the 6th District, which encompasses most of the Upper West Side up to 108th Street west of Broadway, a part of Clinton (to West 54th Street) and all of Central Park.

Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve fair living wages to support themselves and their families. The average current hourly pay for Deliveristas in New York City is around $11 an hour after expenses and including tips. The Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) should not have gone back on the $24 an hour pay proposal late last year in favor of a $19.96 hourly rate.

The methodology used to determine the lower rate, including the so-called “multi-apping” reduction, is cynical and flawed. The two year “phase-in” plan is without justification and amounts to a corporate giveaway. Further, by missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law at the start of the year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP is hurting the very workers it is charged with protecting.

Los Deliveristas Unidos – a collective organized by the Worker’s Justice Project in 2020 to confront abuse and lack of regulation and raise the new industry’s labor standards – has been organizing and fighting for minimum pay for years. We cannot wait any longer for New York City to establish a minimum pay rate for delivery workers that reflects their hard work, the cost of mobility devices and ongoing maintenance, tax liabilities, and more.

410 Atlantic Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11217
(718) 875-5200

www.lincolcrestler.nyc
district33@council.nyc.gov

Lincoln Restler
COUNCIL MEMBER DISTRICT 33

Committees
Criminal Justice | Education |
Environmental Protection | General
Welfare | Governmental Operations |
Public Housing | Parks and Recreation |
Transportation and Infrastructure

April 6, 2023

RE: Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers Proposed Rules

Local Law 115 of 2021 was clear: implement a fair minimum wage for delivery workers by January 1, 2023. I am deeply disappointed that the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) has caved to the demands of delivery app companies and failed to protect Deliveristas in a timely fashion. The newly proposed rule is not only months behind schedule, but would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate.

Deliveristas are essential to New York City. These 65,000 New Yorkers work arduous hours ensuring that people are fed and helping our small businesses survive. We would not have made it through the pandemic without them and continue to rely on them daily. They deserve to make a living wage and be protected from corporate wage theft. Each additional day of delay is unacceptable.

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called "multi-apping," is premised on faulty assumptions and there is no evidence that this practice would impact pay. Delivery workers do not get paid during their on-call or waiting time, and therefore, like FHV drivers, they should not be penalized for waiting for jobs from several potential sources. Further, DCWP's proposed deduction is overinflated and based on outdated data about delivery driver activity.

Despite already being months behind the legal deadline to increase wages, the new proposed rule also continues to include a "phase in" to allow corporations to further delay paying fair wages for an additional two years. New York's $15 minimum wage went into effect four years ago without a phase in, and TLC driver pay rules similarly went into effect immediately. There is no conceivable justification for allowing corporations to continue to profit on the backs of essential workers.

Additionally, corporations are already attempting to undermine proposed pay rates through practices such as "order bundling," which allow app companies to reduce workers' pay by sending multiple orders in one trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harmful business practices will undermine the intent of the law.

On top of these continued delays and carve outs, rising inflation costs are decreasing net pay to delivery workers who are already struggling to get by. We cannot continue to let large corporations undermine this process. I urge DCWP to promptly strengthen these rules and ensure Deliveristas finally start getting paid the wages they deserve.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Lincoln Restler". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.

Lincoln Restler
New York City Council Member, District 33
district33@council.nyc.gov

District Office
456 5th Avenue, 3rd Floor
Brooklyn, NY 11215
(718) 499-1090

City Hall Office
250 Broadway, Suite 1731
New York, NY 10007
(212) 788-6969

THE COUNCIL OF
THE CITY OF NEW YORK

Shahana Hanif

39TH DISTRICT

Committees
Chair of Committee on Immigration
Member of Committee on Education
Member of Committee on Criminal Justice
Member of Committee on Governmental Operations
Member of Committee on Cultural Affairs, Libraries, and International Intergroup Relations
Member of Committee on Mental Health, Disabilities, and Addictions

Testimony of Council Member Shahana Hanif to the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection- April 7, 2023

Good morning, I'm Council Member Shahana Hanif. I represent the 39th District in Brooklyn and chair the Council's Committee on Immigration. I'm extremely disappointed that we're here today discussing a Second Proposed Rule from the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) regarding minimum pay for food delivery service workers.

The Department's First Proposed Rule took important steps towards rectifying the under-compensation that our City's delivery workers have suffered through since the emergence of the online third party food delivery system. However, DCWP's new proposal rolls back this progress and threatens to establish a sub-minimum wage for these workers.

It is clear to me that this Second Proposed Rule was made at the behest of the third party apps that profit from the exploitation of delivery workers. This is unacceptable. Silicon Valley tech companies cannot be writing public policy for New York City. I urge the Department to revise the Rule so that it reflects the true industry conditions that its own study found, instead of catering to false narratives peddled by corporate lobbyists.

On March 21st, I was proud to join Comptroller Lander, Borough President Reynoso, and 21 Council Members in sending a letter to Commissioner Mayuga that laid out four changes that must be made to this Rule in order for it to comply with Local Law 115 of 2021. I'd like to take this opportunity to reiterate them here:

1. The $3.60 pay reduction for so-called "multi-apping" must be eliminated;
2. The "phase-in" of the minimum pay standard must be eliminated;
3. Workers must be paid for their individual waiting time rather than in the aggregate or based on an industry average; And

4. The formula for Cost of Living Adjustments must be revised to account for inflation in business expenses.

My Bangladeshi constituents in Kensington who do this work deserve better than this. The Latino, African, and Asian immigrants who predominantly make up this workforce and who I am tasked to advocate for as Immigration Chair deserve better than this. They risked their health to keep our communities fed and keep the restaurant industry alive during the pandemic. They've been denied the basic dignity of bathroom access and shelter during snowstorms. They've experienced unsafe street conditions that killed 18 deliveristas in 2022 alone.

The Rule in front of us today would illegally continue the exploitation of this essential workforce. I am proud to join with groups like Los Deliveristas Unidos and Desis Rising Up and Moving in opposing this Rule. The Department must reject this Rule and return with a revision that meets the requirements of Local Law 115 of 2021 and allows delivery workers to make a living wage.

Thank you,

Council Member Shahana Hanif, District 39
Chair, Committee on Immigration

DISTRICT OFFICE
244 UNION AVENUE
BROOKLYN, NY 11211
TEL: (718) 963-3141
FAX: (347) 223-4347

CITY HALL OFFICE
250 BROADWAY, SUITE 1740
NEW YORK, NY 10007
TEL: (212) 788-7095

E-MAIL:
jgutierrez@council.nyc.gov

THE COUNCIL
OF
THE CITY OF NEW YORK

JENNIFER
GUTIÉRREZ

COUNCIL MEMBER, 34th DISTRICT, BROOKLYN

CHAIR
TECHNOLOGY

COMMITTEE
ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT
EDUCATION
ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION
HOSPITALS
STATE AND FEDERAL LEGISLATION
WOMEN AND GENDER EQUITY

Commissioner Vilda Vera Mayuga
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th Floor
NY, NY 10004

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

I am deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 both delays and undermines the law requiring a minimum pay standard for Deliveristas by January 1, 2023.

There are multiple issues that the new rules bring up that I am strongly opposed to and disappointed to see that DCWP is not working in good faith alongside everyday working New Yorkers. The proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices, such as, "order bundling" is ignored.

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called "multi-apping," is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no "multi-apping" deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time. The amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data. DCWP should also be committed to study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as "order bundling," which can reduce workers' pay under the Alternative Method scenario.

Additionally, with every day we continue to delay money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8th.) The further "phase in" continues the required minimum wage payments for an additional two years. This does not even touch the fact that COLA rates are not being calculated here.

Food delivery workers in our city have been fighting for a minimum wage for more than two years. By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn't make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Jennifer Gutiérrez".

Jennifer Gutiérrez Council Member, District 34

STEVEN RAGA
Assembly member
30th District

THE ASSEMBLY
STATE OF NEW YORK

ALBANY

COMMITTEES
Agriculture
Banks
Government Operations
Social Services
Veterans Affairs

CAUCUS & TASK FORCES
Black, Puerto Rican, Hispanic, &
Asian Legislative Caucus
Bipartisan Pro-Choice Legislative
Caucus
New York Legislative Aviation
Caucus
Asian Pacific American Taskforce
Puerto Rican/Hispanic Taskforce

Commissioner Vilda Vera Mayuga
New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th Floor
New York, NY 10004

April 7, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

I am writing to express my disappointment with implementation delays of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for Deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

It is imperative that New York City’s 65,000 app-based delivery workers are receive the fair pay that they are entitled to by law. At a time where New Yorkers are facing issues of inflation and an increased cost of living, it is unconscionable and a detriment to New Yorkers to delay this implementation any further.

Additionally, the proposal to reduce workers’ pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Contradictory examples are for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, and delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

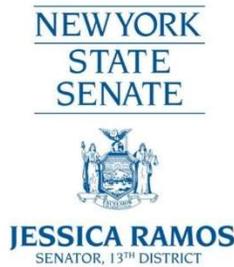

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,

Steven Raga
Member of Assembly
New York State Assembly — 30th District

ALBANY OFFICE: 921 Legislative Office Building, Albany, NY 12248 • 518-455-4755 • FAX: 518-455-3791
DISTRICT OFFICE: 55-19 69th Street, Maspeth, New York 11378 • 718-651-3185 • FAX: 718-651-3027

CHAIR
Labor
COMMITTEES
Agriculture
Commerce, Economic Development and Small Business Corporations, Authorities and Commissions
Judiciary
Transportation

□ ALBANY OFFICE:
307 Legislative Office Bldg.
Albany, NY 12247
Phone: (518) 455-2529
□ DISTRICT OFFICE:
74-09 37th Ave., Ste. 302
Jackson Heights, NY 11372
Phone: (718) 205-3881

Vilda Vera Mayuga, Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th floor
New York, NY 10004
Via: email

April 7, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

As the New York State Senator representing the 13th District and as Chair of the Senate Committee on Labor, I am deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP). DCWP's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementing Local Law 115 of 2021 both delays and undermines the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023. With this unlawful delay, DCWP is stealing at least five months of pay from workers it is legally charged to protect.

Perhaps even worse, the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices, such as "order bundling," is ignored.

"Multi-Apping" is a scheme invented by the Apps to pay a sub-minimum wage. The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called "multi-apping," is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no "multi-apping" deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. They fulfill that delivery when they receive a job, they fulfill that delivery, so only one app pays them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps simultaneously.

Regardless, multi-apping has precipitously decreased as many apps require reservations to work, along with reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule and the accompanying monetary reduction needs to be more inflated. In addition, DCWP bases its monetary reduction on outdated figures because the apps refuse to comply with subpoenas.

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as "order bundling," which can reduce workers' pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders the workers must complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harmful business practices will allow the app companies to continue paying delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right all other workers enjoy in our city.

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for costs must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. In addition, the adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped, or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn't worsen this for our essential deliveristas.

Inflation is at its highest point in 40 years, and corporate profits are at their highest point in 70 years. The Department of Consumer and Worker Protection should focus on helping alleviate the burden of rising costs for workers and consumers by ensuring work is fairly compensated. When deliveristas bear the overhead for app-based companies, they will feel pressured to cut costs in other aspects of their work to ensure they take as much home as possible. Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Instead, workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay.

Rather than compromising on worker pay, I request that the agency focuses on regulating the business practices that favor employer profits over worker livelihoods.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Jessica Ramos". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.

Jessica Ramos New York
State Senator
Chair, NYS Senate Labor Committee

SENATOR
GUSTAVO RIVERA
33RD DISTRICT

NEW YORK STATE SENATE

ALBANY, NEW YORK 12247

CHAIRMAN, MAJORITY MEMBER HEALTH
COMMITTEES:
ALCOHOLISM AND SUBSTANCE ABUSE
CRIME VICTIMS, CRIME AND CORRECTION
FINANCE
HIGHER EDUCATION HOUSING, CONSTRUCTION AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT
MENTAL HEALTH

April 7, 2023

To: The NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP)

From: New York State Senator Gustavo Rivera
33rd District, The Bronx

Written Testimony re: The NYC DCWP proposal to add rules establishing methods for determining the minimum payments that must be made to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. So many of the Bronx constituents I represent in the 33rd Senate District were essential workers who showed up during the height of the pandemic, particularly delivery workers that traversed the City day in and day out despite extreme conditions, demanding work, and in too many cases, exploitative practices by employers and contractors. As a State Senator and as a New Yorker, it is unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage to support themselves, their families, and our communities.

I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. I stand with delivery workers in urging you to ensure that they are given a minimum wage now.

ALBANY OFFICE: CAPITOL BUILDING, ROOM 502, ALBANY, NEW YORK 12247 (518) 455-3395 • FAX (518) 426-6858
DISTRICT OFFICE: 2432 GRAND CONCOURSE, SUITE 506, BRONX, NEW YORK 10458 (718) 933-2034 • FAX (718) 933-2825
grivera@nysenate.gov

From: Zohran Mamdani <mamdani@nyassembly.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 7, 2023 11:22 AM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Written comment re delivery workers' minimum wage and Local Law 115
[You don't often get email from mamdani@nyassembly.gov. Learn why this is important at <https://aka.ms/LearnAboutSenderIdentification>]

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov<<mailto:phish@oti.nyc.gov>> as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Hello,

The below is my written comment submission regarding delivery workers' minimum pay and Local Law 115:

There are over 65,000 app-based delivery workers in NYC, delivering food and goods for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits. I was proud that our City Council led us in 2021 to assert these workers' right to a minimum wage through Local Law 115. And yet, here we are two years later, with the City behind on rolling out this crucial improvement to deliveristas' lives. I'm outraged by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115. Every day the City is delayed violates this law and causes unnecessary harm — withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips to support themselves and their families. I also want to register my full-throated opposition to DCWP's proposal to reduce the standard of minimum pay it had previously supported, caving to pressures from Silicon Valley's lucrative corporations who choose to exploit their workers. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a substantial minimum wage and without further delay.

Best,

Zohran K. Mamdani

Assembly Member (AD 36)

24-08 32nd Street, Suite 1002A

Astoria, NY 11102

718-545-3889

Check out our [

<https://gcc02.safelinks.protection.outlook.com/?url=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.newyorksocialistsinoffice.com%2F&data=0>

5%7C01%7Crulecomments%40dcwp.nyc.gov%7C7c809b18b6d54bff485008db377bd43c%7C32f56fc75f814e22a95b15da

66513bef%7C0%7C0%7C638164777203598466%7CUnknown%7CTWFpbGZsb3d8eyJWJoiMC4wLjAwMDAiLCJQIjoiV2lu

MzIiLCJBTiI6Ik1haWwiLCJXVCI6Mn0%3D%7C3000%7C%7C%7C&sdata=M%2FIMJa%2BLoJKAn11Bcso06H57Jo1z21oNHV1dByM%2Fs0Q%3D&reserved=0 | legislative platform] !

REVISED RULEMAKING ON MINIMUM PAYMENTS FOR FOOD DELIVERY WORKERS, LOCAL LAW 115 of 2021

Last Updated 4.7.23

TESTIMONY: NYC DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER AND WORKER PROTECTION

Tech:NYC is a nonprofit member-based organization representing over 800 technology companies in New York. Our membership includes hundreds of innovative startups as well as some of the largest tech companies in the world. We are committed to ensuring that the tech sector remains a leading driver of the city's overall economy and that all New Yorkers can benefit from innovation. Tech:NYC works with government and community partners to guarantee that New York remains the best place in the country to start and grow a technology company.

Since they were first introduced in NYC, delivery platforms have become increasingly popular with New Yorkers across the five boroughs. Indeed, they have helped to power economic development across the city, offering customers the ability to discover new local businesses, giving restaurants new ways to grow their businesses, and delivery workers new ways to access earning opportunities. It is estimated that today there are over 65,000 delivery workers, 23,000 restaurants, and 317,000 restaurant-based jobs in New York City. On-demand delivery services have expanded rapidly since the beginning of COVID-19, as platforms are continuing to provide consumers with more options. Today, delivery apps and services are more popular than ever: according to the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection, there were 17% more app-based deliveries made in the first six months of 2022 compared to the same period in 2021. Additionally, between March 2021 and May 2022, app-based deliveries made up 15% of all NYC restaurant sales. Delivery platforms available in New York not only provide the digital infrastructure that enables restaurant delivery, but these companies are directly investing in the city's tech workforce and local economy by keeping physical offices and employing in roles ranging from software engineering to sales and marketing.

Tech:NYC supports the goal of establishing a minimum payment standard for food delivery workers and thanks the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) for taking into consideration many recommendations made on the initial proposed Local Law 115 rulemaking. To accurately reflect how delivery workers use these platforms — and rely on them to provide flexible work opportunities — additional revisions to the proposed rule are needed.

As found in response to the initial rulemaking and in DCWP's own study, delivery workers often have multiple delivery platform apps open at one time, which allows the workers to complete assignments from one app while still searching for assignments on another, a practice referred to as "multi-apping". Delivery platforms also provide workers the flexibility to accept or decline delivery assignments at their discretion, which means that workers often have delivery apps open even though they may not be actively looking for or prepared to accept their next assignment, known as "on call time." One of the benefits of delivering through these platforms is that delivery workers can control their own schedule — including when they work — to respect the schedules of any other jobs or other personal commitments they may hold.

The updated rule’s proposed standard minimum payment method would require platforms to pay workers for all of the time that they are logged on to a delivery app, a rule that inaccurately reflects how workers use delivery platforms. Delivery workers are accustomed to and appreciate the ability to log into platforms as much as they please, as well as accept or deny orders at their discretion. With the proposed minimum payment method, platforms may account for high amounts of “on call time” by limiting the time that delivery workers can log onto the platform, removing a key benefit those workers enjoy.

The proposed alternative minimum payment method would only require delivery platforms to pay delivery workers for the time spent on actual deliveries, but the multiplier to account for “on call time” when not on deliveries is equally unrealistic and would result in a $33 per hour rate of compensation by 2025, which would match the same impacts on delivery workers and restaurants as the standard payment proposal.

Should delivery platforms need to increase fees to customers and/or restaurants in order to comply with the updated rule’s two proposed payment standards, demand from consumers could be significantly reduced, resulting in fewer orders — and less revenue — for local restaurants. Increased consumer-facing costs may also have a negative impact on tipping practices, a source of income delivery workers also rely on. Separately, the two proposed payment standards would likely result in delivery platforms needing to reduce the availability of orders for delivery workers, to account for how delivery workers use “on call time.” While the new proposed rule provides a reduction factor for being logged into multiple apps at once, it still does not address the unlimited and extended amounts of time that a worker could be logged into an app without actively accepting deliveries.

There is still a significant gap between how and when delivery workers log onto delivery platforms and how DCWP is proposing to compensate for “on call time.” As seen in the for-hire-vehicle sector, NYC TLC’s utilization rate aims to account for driver time spent without passengers and has resulted in the practice of limiting the time that drivers can access a platform, impacting both drivers and riders. In order for these rules to work more effectively for restaurants, platforms and delivery workers, and to avoid increased food delivery costs to NYC consumers, Tech:NYC recommends that DCWP continue amending the proposed rule, and develop a more reasonable alternative minimum pay rate.

Paul Zuber
Executive Vice President

To the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker

Protection,

On behalf of The Business Council of New York State, I am writing to urge the agency to make additional revisions to the proposed rule that would establish a minimum pay rate for app-based restaurant delivery workers.

Our organization is the leading business organization in New York state, representing the interests of both large and small businesses throughout the state and serving as an advocate for the business community in the state's political and policy-making arenas. Representing more than 3,000 member companies, local chambers of commerce, and professional and trade associations, 76% of which are small businesses, our membership combined employs more than 1.2 million New Yorkers.

As The Business Council has stated previously, we broadly support establishing reasonable minimum pay standards for food delivery workers who provide an essential service to New York City. This was especially true during the pandemic, when they helped many in the restaurant industry survive.

While we appreciate that the agency was receptive to feedback on its initial proposal, we continue to have serious concerns that the proposed regulations will still lead to significant additional costs associated with delivery that will be passed on to businesses and consumers. These increased costs may drive down orders from local restaurants, bringing a sudden decline in revenue at a time when record inflation and rising prices continue to put pressure on small businesses.

This proposal would provide platforms with two options for paying delivery workers, but neither would likely avoid significant changes to how these platforms operate and how delivery workers currently prefer to use them or prevent excessive new costs for businesses and consumers.

The first option requires platforms to pay workers for all of the time that they are logged on to a delivery app, but it is clear this fundamentally misrepresents the way these apps are used in practice. Many delivery workers choose to earn with these platforms because of the flexibility and independence they provide, allowing them to log on and accept or deny any order they are offered when and where they choose. However, if platforms are forced to pay delivery workers for the time the app is open, but workers are not on delivery, they'll be forced to limit this time which necessitates severe restrictions on the very flexibility that draws many to these platforms in the first place.

The second option maintains the ability to pay workers for the time they spend making deliveries, but at a rate of almost $30 per hour this year, rising to $33 per hour by 2025, an unprecedented increase that would undoubtedly result in raising the cost of delivery services for New Yorkers.

As a result, while well-intentioned, no matter which option is selected, small businesses and consumers throughout New York City will feel the consequences of the revised version of this proposal.

The City estimated that its original proposal would increase costs for consumers on each order by upward of $5, leading to fewer orders likely being placed. The revised proposal would still result in higher prices, meaning fewer orders for delivery workers – those that the City is trying to support in the first place – and additional unintended consequences for restaurants because of reduced orders, in some cases leaving many uncertain if they will be able to receive enough orders to survive.

Ultimately, it's also likely that platforms will elect to alter their operations because of the new rules, possibly reducing or eliminating service altogether in certain parts of the City. We know how many businesses in our community depend on delivery to connect with their customers, and this would be especially concerning for restaurants like those in the outer boroughs that may not have the same volume of daily delivery requests as busier parts of the City, where operational changes could be especially harmful.

Delivery provides a crucial service connecting the small businesses, workers, and New Yorkers who use it. While it is vital to ensure these workers are making a fair wage, we are respectfully asking the DWCP to consider the potential impacts of this rule carefully and to make additional changes to ensure that the rule will not harm small businesses in New York City.

We encourage the agency to strike the proper balance so that we are supporting workers, but these services remain accessible for all and help contribute to growing our local economy.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit testimony.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Paul Zuber". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Paul" being larger and more prominent than the last name "Zuber".

Paul Zuber
The Business Council of New York State

Worker Minimum Wage & Additional On-street Infrastructure April 7, 2023

Vila Vera Mayuga
Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th Floor New York, NY 10004
via: email April
07, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

Transportation Alternatives (TA) represents the voice of over 150,000 New Yorkers who support streets safer for walking and biking, and more efficient transit, we write to express our deep disappointment with the delay of implementing Local Law 115 of 2021 (the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023), to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals, and to highlight the need for safer on-street bicycle infrastructure for delivery workers.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, we are concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Safer Streets are a Safer Work Zone for Delivery Workers

TA is an organization committed to fighting for a more livable, accessible, and bike-oriented city, and we know how important delivery workers are to the fabric of our advocacy community and the city as a whole. In 2019, after years of organizing with the ‘Deliver Justice’ coalition, we celebrated the passage of state laws that legalized electric bikes and scooters. These bikes are commonly used by delivery workers during physically demanding work shifts which can go as long as 12 hours. Prior to their legalization, workers were subject to arbitrary tickets and confiscation of their necessary work vehicles, and for which the worker was solely fiscally responsible. With these devices now legal, it’s time to establish the Deliverista Minimum Pay so delivery workers can thrive.

Working cyclists have one of the most dangerous jobs in the city. Since 2020, 33 delivery workers have been killed on the job - 26 of which were the result of traffic violence. A component of the work’s danger is a result of its wage structure. Tip-based work incentivizes faster job completions/deliveries to pad a meager average hourly wage of 7.09. This forces workers to perform dangerous street maneuvers to finish jobs quickly, including riding the wrong way down streets and opting for dangerous streets to save time. Delivery workers face higher days missed from work because of injuries and often are not provided health insurance by their employers.

A $28.82 minimum wage would allow delivery workers to better prioritize their personal safety on the street. It also supports various costs incurred to start work. Delivery Workers typically need to provide their own e-bike or moped for deliveries and this equipment can cost upwards of five thousand dollars. The high value of these items makes them targets for theft and robbery. 54% of deliveristas report having their bike stolen, compared to the citywide average of 26% for NYC households. When these vehicles are stolen, workers must replace them out of their own pocket. The minimum wage also supports hazard pay for work during extreme weather conditions and GPS trackers to combat this rampant theft.

We need a citywide network of safe bike infrastructure to keep delivery workers at a safe distance from cars, trucks, and other obstacles that may harm them during a delivery job. Several crucial areas require the administration’s urgent action to improve bike safety, including:

- Overcrowded bridges like the Queensboro and Washington Bridges. The Queensboro bridge has experienced a 12% year-over-year increase in ridership and features a high share of delivery workers crossing daily, but maintains only one shared lane for all traffic on foot and bicycle.
- Fifth Avenue in Midtown Manhattan, the street with the highest bicycle ridership in the city and no dedicated biking infrastructure.

- Swaths of the outer boroughs, which have very little bicycle infrastructure for delivery workers, such as South Brooklyn, and Queens neighborhoods like Flushing and Jamaica.
- Overburdened heavily trafficked existing bike lanes like 1st and 2nd Avenue, which have dramatically grown in bike ridership but remain the same size. These lanes need to be expanded to handle more capacity from new mobility devices which are able to go faster than traditional bicycles.

New York depends on delivery workers. They were essential in supporting millions of residents through pandemic shelter-in-place policies, and now as we move towards an increasingly remote work culture. As New York rebuilds and grows, we must ensure delivery workers can work and prosper in safety.

I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn't make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,
Juan Restrepo
Senior Organizer, Transportation Alternatives

April 5, 2023

To: New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection

From: Do J. Lee, Ph.D. Biking Public Project
Queens College CUNY
Do.Lee@qc.cuny.edu

Re: Updated Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC

To whom it may concern:

I write this testimony to express deep concern and opposition from myself and the Biking Public Project for the changes made in the updated proposed Minimum Pay Rate for AppBased Restaurant Delivery Workers in NYC. The Minimum Pay Rate should provide a livable wage, but the changes in the update fail to provide what was promised for our essential delivery workers.

Specifically, the $3.60 per hour reduction based on the rationale of multi-apping fundamentally undermines wages for food delivery workers and operates in opposition with the legislation. As noted in the letter from NYC Comptroller Brad Lander and many NYC Council Members, this means that the average base wage in 2023 would be at $12.69 per hour, which remains below minimum wage. This is an unacceptable change in the update that clearly works in the favor of delivery app platforms. The $3.60 pay reduction from multi-apping needs to be removed and the unnecessary phase-in period for minimum wage standards should be eliminated as well. Furthermore, the worker expenses and costs are underestimated because delivery workers are currently forced to minimize their expenses because of their low wages whether through cheaper equipment (e.g. e-bikes and batteries) or being unable to afford expenses like necessary medication or medical treatment. The expenses allotted to worker pay should be increased to reflect the need for workers to be able to pay for necessary expenses and adequate equipment.

I am further concerned that the proposed model in the update that provides options between the Standard Method and Alternative Method will be abused by delivery app platforms as a means to flexibly change labor arrangements to find novel ways to pay workers less. At minimum, the proposed rule needs to provide workers, not app companies, the control over which method to use for their payment for labor.

Finally, this proposed rule needs to regularly evaluate delivery worker pay throughout the course of the implementation of this rule to ensure that employers are truly raising wages to the minimum standard as opposed to the long history of employers ignoring labor and pay requirements for food delivery workers.

While I supported the DCWP's initial proposal to set a minimum overall pay standard of $23.82 per hour for app-based restaurant delivery workers, this updated proposal is not acceptable, and I do not support the updated changes. This update would perpetuate and institutionalize the systematic underpayment of delivery wages and offloading of costs onto food delivery workers that has persisted for many years and magnified greatly through the app-based delivery employment model.

Thank you,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Do J. Lee', with a long horizontal flourish extending to the right.

Do J. Lee, Ph.D.
Biking Public Project
Queens College CUNY
Do.Lee@qc.cuny.edu

To the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection,

On behalf of the Five Borough Chamber Alliance, I am writing to urge the agency to make additional revisions to the proposed rule that would establish a minimum pay rate for app-based restaurant delivery workers.

The Five-Borough Chamber Alliance includes the Bronx, Brooklyn, Manhattan, Staten Island, and Queens Chambers of Commerce, and represents most of the 200,000 small businesses throughout New York City. 85% of our membership consists of companies with ten or fewer employees; however, collectively these companies account for the majority of New York City's employment.

The Five Borough Chamber Alliance broadly supports establishing reasonable minimum pay standards for food delivery workers, who provide an important service to New York City. This was especially true during the pandemic, when they helped many in the restaurant industry survive.

While we appreciate that the agency was receptive to feedback on its initial proposal, we continue to have serious concerns that the proposed regulations will still lead to significant additional costs associated with delivery that are likely to be passed on to businesses and consumers. These increased costs may drive down orders from local restaurants, bringing a sudden decline in revenue at a time when record inflation and rising costs are already putting pressure on small businesses.

This proposal would provide platforms with two options for how to pay delivery workers, but neither would likely avoid significant changes to how these platforms operate and how delivery workers currently prefer to use them or prevent extreme new costs for businesses and consumers.

The first option requires platforms to pay workers for all the time that they are logged on to a delivery app, but it is clear this fundamentally misrepresents the way that these apps are used in practice. Many delivery workers choose to earn with these platforms because of the flexibility and independence they provide, allowing them to log on and accept or deny any order they are offered when and where they choose. However, if platforms are forced to pay delivery workers for time the app is open but workers are not on delivery, they'll be forced to limit this time which necessitates severe restrictions on flexibility that draws many to these platforms in the first place.

The second option maintains the ability to pay workers for time they spend making deliveries, but at a rate of almost $30 per hour this year, rising to $33 per hour by 2025, an unprecedented increase that would undoubtedly result in raising the cost of delivery services for New Yorkers.

As a result, while well-intentioned, no matter which option is selected the consequences from the revised version of this proposal will be felt by small businesses and consumers throughout New York City.

The City estimated that its original proposal would increase costs for consumers on each order by an upward of $5, leading to fewer orders likely being placed. The revised proposal would still result in higher costs, meaning fewer orders for delivery workers – those that the City is trying to support in the first place – and additional unintended consequences for restaurants because of reduced orders, in some cases leaving many uncertain if they will be able to receive enough orders to survive.

Ultimately, it's also likely that platforms will need to alter their operations because of the new rules, possibly reducing or eliminating service altogether in certain parts of the City. We know how many businesses in our community depend on delivery to connect with their customers, and this would be especially concerning for restaurants like those in the outer-boroughs that may not have the same volume of daily delivery requests as busier parts of the City, where operational changes could be especially harmful.

Delivery provides a crucial service connecting the small businesses, workers and New Yorkers who use it. While it is important to ensure these workers are making a fair wage, we are respectfully asking the DWCP to carefully consider the potential impacts of this rule and to make additional changes to ensure that the rule will not harm small businesses in New York City.

We encourage the agency to strike the proper balance so that we are supporting workers, but these services remain accessible for all and help contribute to the growing of our local economy.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit testimony.

Sincerely,

Lisa Sorin
President & Chief Executive Officer
Bronx Chamber

Randy Peers
President & Chief Executive Officer
Brooklyn Chamber

Jessica Walker
President & Chief Executive Officer
Manhattan Chamber

Linda Baran
President & Chief Executive Officer
Staten Island Chamber

Thomas Grech
President & Chief Executive Officer
Queens Chamber

Rebecca Dixon
Executive Director

www.nelp.org

NELP National Office
90 Broad Street
Suite 1100
New York, NY 10004
212-285-3025

Washington, DC Office
1350 Connecticut Ave. NW
Suite 1050
Washington, DC 20036
202-640-6520

California Office
2030 Addison Street
Suite 420
Berkeley, CA 94704
510-982-5945

Washington State Office
300 Lenora Street #357
Seattle, WA 98121
206-324-4000

April 7, 2023

Testimony to the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection in Support of New York City Delivery Worker Minimum Pay Standard

We write on behalf of the National Employment Law Project (NELP), a national nonprofit with more than fifty years of experience advocating for the employment and labor rights of low-wage workers. NELP works across the country with organized groups of app-based workers, supporting campaigns at the local, state, and federal level, and has been involved with recent campaigns by rideshare and delivery workers for basic labor and employment rights.

NELP supports a strong minimum pay standard for New York City's appbased food delivery workers. Since the depths of the pandemic, the City's delivery workers have been working long hours in dangerous conditions for subminimum wages, and receive few, if any, benefits or protections.³⁶¹ As long as their employers continue to classify them as non-employees, they do not have a right to a guaranteed minimum wage, paid leave, unemployment insurance, workers' compensation, and employer provided healthcare.³⁶² Worse still, the pay is not only low but inconsistent week to week, which makes it difficult for workers to care for their families and themselves, pay their bills on time, or build up savings.³⁶³

The Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's (DCWP) proposed rule promises to finally guarantee these essential workers a minimum wage, a huge victory for the delivery workers across New York City—a victory made possible by the dedicated organizing and leadership of Los Deliveristas Unidos and other organized groups of delivery workers.

With that said, NELP writes to flag some of our concerns with the new proposed rule.

³⁶¹ App-Based Workers Speak: Studies Reveal Anxiety, Frustration, and a Desire for Good Jobs, NELP Policy & Data Brief (Oct. 27, 2021), <https://www.nelp.org/publication/app-based-workersspeak-studies-reveal-anxiety-frustration-and-a-desire-for-good-jobs/>. See also A Minimum Pay Rate for App-Based Delivery Workers in NYC, New York City Dept. of Consumer and Worker Protection (Nov. 2022), <https://www.nyc.gov/assets/dca/downloads/pdf/workers/DeliveryWorker-Study-November-2022.pdf>.

³⁶² Ben Zipperer, Celine McNicholas et al., National Survey of Gig Workers Paints a Picture of Poor Working Conditions, Low Pay, Economic Policy Institute (Jun. 1, 2022), <https://files.epi.org/uploads/250647.pdf>.

³⁶³ Irene Lew, Debipriya Chatterjee, and Emerita Torres, The Gig is Up: An Overview of New York City's App-based Gig Workforce during COVID-19 18-19, Community Service Society (July 2021), https://smhttp-ssl-58547.nexcesscdn.net/nycss/images/uploads/pubs/Gig_Workers_V10.pdf.

The City's Many-Month Delay in Implementing the Pay Standard is Costing Workers Every Day.

First, we are disappointed at the months-long delay in the City's implementation of this pay standard. Each day that passes without a legal wage floor for delivery workers is another day that the City's approximately 65,000 delivery workers, who are predominantly immigrants and other workers of color, continue to work for subminimum wages. The pay standard should be implemented as soon as possible.

The Pay Standard Should Be Implemented In Full Immediately.

Second, we continue to disagree with the Department's plan for phasing in the minimum pay standard. Uber, DoorDash, and GrubHub are multi-billion dollar companies with access to near-unlimited credit in the capital markets. They do not need multiple years to figure out how to adequately compensate the workforce that generates value for their shareholders; they can afford to pay their workers a minimum wage right away. As currently proposed, the rule effectively sets a legal pay floor below the state's minimum wage of $15 an hour for the next two years. Only in year three does the pay standard actually guarantee delivery workers the full proposed minimum wage. Especially as the highest inflation in forty years has sent living costs and work expenses for delivery workers skyrocketing, causing them extreme hardship, it is essential that the full minimum wage be in effect from the start. DCWP should scrap its phase-in and implement the pay standard, in full, immediately.

Delivery Workers Must Be Paid for All the Time They Work.

Third, it is critical that these workers—like others—are paid for all the time they actually work. The "alternate method," a feature new to the Department's Second Proposed Rule, better compensates workers for all of their labor, including "on-call time," by employing a "utilization rate." The utilization rate is a measure of what proportion of the average delivery worker's time is spent on-trip, which the City's data suggests is 60%. DCWP then requires companies to pay drivers for their on-trip time, plus the additional 40% of driver time that otherwise would go uncompensated. This method guarantees that individual workers are compensated for at least an approximation of all the time they work, just as any other employees are under wage and hour laws. Under the dual-track "standard method" laid out in the Department's earlier rule, which includes both an individual pay and aggregate pay requirement, workers would only be guaranteed to receive a minimum wage for "on-trip" time. The individual pay component only requires companies to compensate their workers for on-trip time, and while the aggregate pay component of the standard method may ensure some workers are ultimately paid for more time than this, it fails to set an adequate wage floor that guarantees all workers that they will be paid for the all the time they work.

NELP therefore supports the Second Proposed Rule to the extent it better compensates workers for their labor. But the Department should take this logic one step further, and require all app-based companies that do not voluntarily pay their workers on an hourly basis to comply with the alternate method, rather than giving them the option to comply with the unworkable standard method.

The Multi-Apping Adjustment in the Second Proposed Rule Should be Better Explained or Re-Considered.

The reduction of the base pay rate by $3.60 an hour to account for “multi-apping” is poorly explained, and the evidence offered by the Department to support it inadequate. While we understand that some adjustments to the pay standard should be made in light of the switch from the standard method to the alternate method, it remains unclear to both workers and advocates alike why worker pay should be reduced by $3.60 an hour.

Going forward, the Department should recalibrate the multi-apping factor using data collected from the companies—data that app companies are currently refusing to disclose in spite of a subpoena—about how much time workers spend on-trip and on-call for each app. With that data in hand, DCWP should also consider calculating company-specific utilization rates that better account for the amount of time individual workers spend working for each app.

If Companies Retaliate Against Workers With “Lock-Outs,” DCWP Should Exercise its Regulatory Authority to Ensure Equitable Access to Delivery Work.

Unfortunately, but unsurprisingly, app-based companies have responded to the City’s proposed minimum wage by fear-mongering about the viability of their business should they be required to pay a minimum wage, and by threatening workers with “lock-outs.” Companies have been sending messages through their apps arguing that this proposal will require them to kick workers off the apps, and that it will mean irregular and unpredictable access to the platforms for workers whose livelihoods depend on regular and predictable access. This logic is poor and self-serving, but it remains possible that companies will nonetheless carry out the lock-outs they are threatening. The Department should think strategically about how it may protect workers from retaliation and unfair deactivations by ensuring that access to work remains equitable, and that the companies cannot successfully weaponize the minimum pay standard to make the lives of their workers more difficult.

Moreover, the Department should continue to work with worker organizations and advocates throughout the implementation of this rule, with a view to preventing business practices—like “order bundling”—that will undermine worker safety and pay.

Higher Pay for App-Based Delivery Workers is a Racial Justice Imperative.

Excluding workers from labor rights is racist policy. For example, agricultural and domestic worker exclusions from bedrock New Deal laws meant that 65 percent of the country’s Black workers were excluded from federal wage and hour and collective bargaining protections.³⁶⁴ Today, in New York City, app-based delivery workers’ exclusion from basic labor rights primarily affects workers of color and immigrants. And even within New York’s immigrant communities, marginalized racial minorities are over-represented among delivery workers, including indigenous Central Americans and Black immigrants.³⁶⁵

³⁶⁴ Larry Dewitt, The Decisions to Exclude Agricultural and Domestic Workers from the 1935 Social Security Act, Social Security Bulletin, Vol. 70:4 (2010), <https://www.ssa.gov/policy/docs/ssb/v70n4/v70n4p49.html>.

New York's first-in-the-nation $15 minimum wage was an important step toward addressing the racial income gap (though it has since fallen behind as it's been frozen at that level since 2019).³⁶⁶ But even the strongest minimum wage leaves app-based delivery workers behind because of the way their companies are manipulating employee status and working hours. DCWP can dramatically improve the material conditions of tens of thousands of workers of color in the City, and should continue to consider the imperatives of racial justice as it implements this rule.

With the reservations expressed above, NELP supports the Department's Second Proposed Rule, and urges rapid implementation of a final standard so that New York's delivery workers can start earning the minimum wage to which they should have long been entitled.

Sincerely,

Daniel Ocampo, Legal Fellow
Laura Padin, Director of Work Structures
Cathy Ruckelshaus, Legal Director & General Counsel
National Employment Law Project

³⁶⁵ Maria Figueroa, et al., Essential but Unprotected: App-Based Food Couriers in New York City, Cornell University Industrial and Labor Relations School & Workers' Justice Project, at 23 (Sept. 14, 2021), <https://img1.wsimg.com/blobby/go/6c0bc951-f473-4720-be3e-797bd8c26b8e/09142021CHARTSLos%20Deliveristas%20Unidos-v02.pdf>.

³⁶⁶ See Laura Huizar and Tsedeye Gebreselassie, What a $15 Minimum Wage Means for Women and Workers of Color, National Employment Law Project (Dec. 2016), <https://www.nelp.org/wp-content/uploads/Policy-Brief-15Minimum-Wage-Women-Workers-of-Color.pdf> (“A $15 minimum wage could make significant inroads in helping women and people of color make ends meet, closing persistent gender and race-based pay and wealth gaps, and improving educational and health prospects for children.”).

AMAZON LABO UNIO

AMAZON LABOR UNION

900 South Avenue, Suite 100
Staten Island New York, 10314

Chris Smalls
President

Derrick Palmer Vice President

Wilhelmenia Shuler
Secretary Treasure

Michelle Valentin-Nieves
Recording Secretary

Vilda Vera Mayuga
Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection 42
Broadway, 9th Floor
New York, NY 10004

April 6, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Their struggle and the struggle of Amazon warehouse workers is aligned. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits, relying on the generous tips of other New Yorkers who are also struggling to make do.

As the Amazon Labor Union, representing 8,500 workers at JFK8 Staten Island, a majority of whom are racialized as black and brown New Yorkers from every borough, we write to express our deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying five months' pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, we are concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as "order bundling" is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion-dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage. This is despicable, we cannot let them operate in our city treating New Yorkers like this.

It is not surprising that they are fighting the implementation of the rule – but it would be appalling if the City of New York bended to the pressures of big companies and imposed a subminimum wage and a months-long delay even for workers to receive it because of corporate lobbying. New York is a city that does not back down to bullies, will its government reflect that?

While you cannot restore the five months of wages the City has illegally taken from delivery workers, you can adjust the rules to ensure that they will, at the very least, receive at least the minimum wage as their base pay rate going forward:

1. The $3.60 pay reduction for so-called "multi-apping" must be revisited.

The proposal to reduce workers' base pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called "multi-apping," is not supported by the report, is inappropriate and may result in a sub-minimum wage for many workers. DCWP has failed to provide any evidence or explanation for why "multi-apping" should reduce workers' pay, and as far as we can tell, it is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no "multi-apping" deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. We have seen no evidence whatsoever that there is ever a time when workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, it appears that multi-apping has precipitously declined as more apps have moved to requiring workers to reserve assigned shifts in advance, and order volume has diminished. This means that even if it were justified, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP and the apps both know these amounts are overinflated. DCWP should not condone the apps' failure to provide more recent data as subpoenaed by relying on outdated figures to implement this punitive policy.

2. The "phase-in" must be eliminated. There is simply no justification for allowing multibillion-dollar apps to continue to pay subminimum wages for the next two years.

The current bill purports to ensure that the average worker will earn the “minimum wage,” but does not actually ensure that every worker will earn at least $15 for 60 minutes of work, under the Alternative Method scenario. To add insult to injury, the rule would then, for the first year, reduce wages an additional $2 below even the subminimum wage it provides, because of the “phase in.” There is no justification for this. All other large (and small) employers are required to pay the minimum wage; no special dispensation should be given here. The apps are not small businesses with precarious margins that cannot sustain sudden changes in labor costs. There was no “phase-in period” for driving apps under the TLC driver pay rule, and no reason to treat the delivery apps – who have profited from their workers reduced pay for several years long – any differently. The proposed phase-in should be eliminated.

3. Regulate apps’ business practices to prevent them from paying rates that are below the minimum wage rate.

We urge DCWP to closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists in sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this, and other potentially harmful business practices, will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.]

4. The formula for COLA increases must be revised to account for inflation in business expenses as already implemented by the TLC.

The proposed rules are insufficiently tailored to ensure that workers will not fall below minimum wage due to disparate inflationary impacts on expenses and purchasing power. The formula should accordingly be revised to separately calculate inflation for the base and expense components after an annual review of expenses. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers. At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, this review process is required by § 20-1522(c).

Only by making these revisions to ensure that deliveristas earn at least the minimum wage will DCWP fulfill its obligations under the law and show these essential workers the dignity they deserve.

Through this delay, DCWP has already unacceptably reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. We thank you for your efforts to support deliveristas, but we urge you to make these necessary adjustments to ensure that food delivery workers immediately receive a fair, minimum pay.

Sincerely,
Amazon Labor Union

Food Chain Workers Alliance

3055 Wilshire Blvd. Suite 300, Los Angeles, CA 90010

213-761-8893 www.foodchainworkers.org

info@foodchainworkers.org

April 7, 2022

Vilda Vera Mayuga Commissioner

Department of Consumer and Worker Protection 42 Broadway, 9th floor New York, NY 10004

via: email

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

I am writing on behalf of the Food Chain Workers Alliance to express our deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for Deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

The Food Chain Workers Alliance is a bi-national coalition of worker- based organizations whose members plant, harvest, process, pack, transport, prepare, serve, and sell food. We are working to build a more sustainable food system that not only provides for healthy food but also ensures that the people who are making and selling our food – including the delivery workers of New York City – are treated fairly.

Delivery workers play a critical role in our city. During the pandemic they ensured New Yorkers could access vital food and kept the restaurant industry afloat. We proudly stand with Las Deliveristas Unidas in calling for fairness and justice for delivery workers who have risked hazardous conditions, dangerous weather, and unsafe streets to keep our city fed.

We know that the majority of people who make and serve our food across the food chain are women, immigrants, and/or people of color. Despite employment growth, the food chain pays the lowest hourly median wage to frontline workers compared to workers in all other industries. This is absolutely the case for delivery workers in our city as well, who work incredibly long hours for low pay.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, we are concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers' rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don't believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work. There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers' pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn't make this any worse for NYC's essential Deliveristas.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide these comments.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Sonia Singh".

Sonia Singh
Co-Director
Food Chain Workers Alliance

04/01/2023

To the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection,

I am writing on behalf of the Haitian American Caucus to comment on the revised rule recently published by the agency that would set a minimum pay rate for food delivery workers.

The Haitian American Caucus is a global community development nonprofit organization whose mission is to provide Haitian communities around the world with access to information and resources that will foster self-development and success. We strive to educate the Haitian community in New York City and globally and provide them with essential tools to ensure their personal and professional success.

Our organization represents New Yorkers of diverse backgrounds, including minority and immigrant New Yorkers who have been able to both take advantage of the opportunities provided by third-party delivery services for flexible earning opportunities, as well as small business owners who can use them to reach new customers.

We support the City's efforts to establish a minimum pay rate for delivery workers and their role in our communities. However, at the Haitian American Caucus, we feel that just as important as setting an appropriate minimum pay rate for delivery workers is creating a system that benefits everyone, including local restaurants and small businesses.

The proposal seems to provide delivery platforms with two options for paying delivery workers, but neither would likely avoid significant changes to how these platforms operate or prevent extreme new costs for businesses and consumers.

The first option requires platforms to pay workers for all of the time logged on to a delivery app, but it is clear this fundamentally misrepresents the way these apps are used in practice. Many delivery workers choose to earn with these platforms because of their flexibility and independence, allowing them to log on and accept or deny any order they are offered when and where they choose. However, if platforms are forced to pay delivery workers for a time the app is open, but workers are not on delivery, they'll be forced to limit this time which necessitates severe restrictions on the flexibility that draws many to these platforms in the first place.

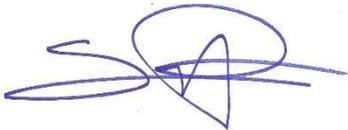

The second option maintains the ability to pay workers for the time they spend making deliveries, but at a rate of almost $30 per hour this year, rising to $33 per hour by 2025, an unprecedented increase that would undoubtedly raise the cost of delivery services for consumers.

While we appreciate that the City was receptive to feedback on its initial proposal, the current proposal still presents concerns about the significant additional costs associated with delivery. If these increased costs are passed onto consumers, it will result in fewer delivery orders from local restaurants. This will cause a decline in revenue for small businesses that count on delivery services to reach their customers and provide essential services to our communities. The City estimated initially that its proposal would increase costs for consumers on each order by an upwards of $5 per order, a significant increase which many small minority-owned businesses would not be able to survive.

The impacts of fewer delivery orders would be especially devastating for outlying areas of the City, where there is a higher percentage of low-income residents and restaurants are often run by people of color. If the proposed rules were to take effect, it would mean fewer orders for those businesses, and platforms could be forced to reduce or eliminate service altogether in less dense parts of the City.

Small businesses have to do everything they can to fight for survival, especially for minority-owned businesses that traditionally face other barriers and disadvantages. The City should be doing everything it can to help ensure its success, and that is why we respectfully urge the agency to reconsider the revised rule and put together a solution that works for everyone. We can ensure a good wage that protects small minority-owned businesses and local restaurants from higher costs so that they can continue serving their communities.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit testimony.

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read 'Samuel M. Pierre, Sr.', with a stylized, overlapping loop structure.

Sincerely,
Samuel M. Pierre, Sr.
Executive Director Haitian American Caucus
spierre@hacus.org

From: Fahd Ahmed <fahd@drumnyc.org>
Sent: Friday, April 7, 2023 10:50 PM
To: rulecomments (DCWP)
Cc: Ortiz, Carlos (DCWP)
Subject: [EXTERNAL] DRUM comment on delivery worker minimum wage proposal

You don't often get email from fahd@drumnyc.org. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

We submit this testimony as DRUM - Desis Rising Up & Moving, an organization of working class South Asian immigrants, workers, and youth. Amongst our membership are nearly 1,200 delivery workers, and several hundred more amongst our contacts. The majority of these workers are Bangladeshi, but also some Punjabi, Nepali, and Pakistani. The majority of our delivery worker members work for UberEats, GrubHub, and DoorDash, a significant minority work for Relay, and a small minority for other corporations. We offer our comments on the basis of the particularities of our delivery worker members.

Minimum wage is a standard across the state, and delivery workers should not be excluded from such standards.

Firstly, we oppose the two method system. Anytime such differentiated systems are created to accommodate the corporations, it is the workers who suffer and pay for the corporations profits. And the more complex the rule systems get, the more it obfuscates the actual relationship between the workers labor and their actual wages.

For these reasons, the Standard (hourly) Method Payment is preferred, and at the original proposed $23.82/hour rate. In the same time that the proposal reduced the proposed wage from $23.82 to $19.96, the number of workers “multiapping” has drastically reduced, and would be completely reduced if a reasonable minimum wage were implemented. More importantly, there are several efforts underway to regulate lithium-ion batteries - Mayor Adams Administration’s policy changes, City Council Intro 752, and City Council Intro 663 - all of which will add significant expenses for workers to upgrade and maintain safer (UL-certified) but more expensive batteries and accessories.

The Alternative Method of payment is an example of complex obfuscation we mentioned above. We can the havoc wrecked on the taxi industry by differentiated systems, which was sharply predicted by the New York Taxi Workers Alliance (NYTWA) in advance, and indeed came to fruition. We really should look to NYTWA’s advocacy and frameworks to draw lessons for delivery workers. Since workers are not guaranteed a certain number of deliveries per hour or shift, paying only for time-in-hand ensures that workers will not receive a consistent pay rate from one week to the next, increasing the precarity of their economic situation, and negates the actuality of an actual minimum wage.

For these reasons we reiterate the need for an industry-wide standard that applies to all apps, and doesn’t allow the corporations to jockey with each other in more efficient exploitation of workers.

For purposes of transparency, we also ask that DCWP:

- communicate to the workers and to the public, which apps plan to utilize which payment method.
- Invest in an education campaign for the workers about the payment method(s) - what it is, how it works, and what it means for them.

Delivery workers put their bodies on the line to city the city fed and running. We must guarantee them a minimum (and livable) wage. We cannot have workers who have made more than 4,000 deliveries for DoorDash, putting in 12 hours of work and earning $20 at the end of the day. (See: <https://www.nytimes.com/2022/12/08/nyregion/nyc-food-deliveryworkers-wage-increase.html>)

--

1

∴

Fahd Ahmed

Executive Director

DRUM - Desis Rising Up & Moving

72-18 Roosevelt Avenue

Jackson Heights, NY 11372

To the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection,

I am writing on behalf of the Yemeni American Merchants Association to comment on the revised rule recently published by the agency that would set a minimum pay rate for food delivery workers.

The Yemeni American Merchants Association (YAMA) advocates for Yemeni-American business owners through outreach, education, and by providing a community and support system with the collective goal of providing a brighter future for Yemeni-Americans. Our organization works to support these immigrant-owned small businesses, and ensure they continue to have access to economic opportunity and a level playing field in New York's economy.

New York City bodegas, which make up a significant part of our membership, were hit particularly hard by the pandemic, with many facing staffing issues, COVID-19 illness in their communities and a decrease in foot traffic in their stores. One of the few opportunities during the pandemic was the increased demand for food and grocery delivery. We saw this as an opportunity for our members and worked with delivery platforms like DoorDash to equip our bodegas with the technology to modernize and sustainably grow their businesses through delivery. Many of our bodegas have seen great success on these platforms and have relied on delivery as a key revenue stream in this post-pandemic economy.

We are supportive of the City's efforts to establish a minimum pay rate for delivery workers and the role that they play in our communities. However, at YAMA we feel that just as important as setting an appropriate minimum pay rate for delivery workers is creating a system that works to benefit everyone, which includes small businesses.

The proposal seems to provide delivery platforms with two options for how to pay delivery workers, but neither would likely avoid significant changes to how these platforms operate or prevent extreme new costs for businesses and consumers.

The first option requires platforms to pay workers for all of the time that they are logged on to a delivery app, but it is clear this fundamentally misrepresents the way that these apps are used in practice. Many delivery workers choose to earn with these platforms because of the flexibility and independence they provide, allowing them to log on and accept or deny any order they are offered when and where they choose. However, if platforms are forced to pay delivery workers for time the app is open but workers are not on delivery, they'll be forced to limit this time which necessitates severe restrictions on flexibility that draws many to these platforms in the first place.

The second option maintains the ability to pay workers for time they spend making deliveries, but at a rate of almost $30 per hour this year, rising to $33 per hour by 2025, an

YEMENI AMERICAN MERCHANTS ASSOCIATION

جمعية التجار اليمنيين الأمريكيين

Educate - Advocate - Elevate نعلم - ندافع - نرتقي unprecedented increase that would undoubtedly result in raising the cost of delivery services for consumers.

While we appreciate that the City was receptive to feedback on its initial proposal, the current proposal still presents concerns about the significant additional costs associated with delivery. If these increased costs are passed onto consumers, it will result in fewer delivery orders from small businesses like our bodegas. Our bodega owners are already struggling with rising costs due to inflation and this drop in revenue could be harmful to our bodegas who have grown to rely on delivery services for the survival of their businesses. The City originally estimated that its proposal would increase costs for consumers on each order by an upwards of $5 per order, a significant increase, which many small immigrant-owned businesses would not be able to survive.

The impacts of fewer delivery orders would be especially devastating for outlying areas of the City, where there is a higher percentage of low-income residents and small businesses are often run by people of color. If the proposed rules were to take effect, it would mean even fewer orders for those businesses and it is possible platforms could be forced to reduce or eliminate service altogether in less dense parts of the City.

Small businesses have to do everything they can to fight for survival, and that is especially true for immigrant-owned businesses, like our bodegas, who traditionally face other barriers and disadvantages. The City should be doing everything they can to help ensure their success, and that is why we respectfully urge the agency to reconsider the revised rule and put together a solution that works for everyone. We can ensure a good wage that also protects small immigrant-owned businesses from higher costs, so that they can continue to serve their communities.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit testimony.

Sincerely,

Amr Abozaid
Director of Merchant Services

ADVANCING OUR COMMUNITY

Vilda Vera Mayuga
Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th floor
New York, NY 10004
via: email

April 07, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits.

The Chinese American Planning Council represents over 200,000 New Yorkers, and we write to express our deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals. We feel that it is critical that delivery workers are adequately compensated with robust wages, and that they have the structures and supports necessary.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, we are concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8). I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn't make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.

Sincerely,
Wayne Ho,
President and CEO
Chinese-American Planning Council

Comments on the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection Second Proposed Rule Establishing Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers

Nevin Cohen
Mustafa Hussein
Emilia Vignola
CUNY Urban Food Policy Institute

Sherry Baron
The Barry Commoner Center for Health and the Environment

April 7, 2023

The CUNY Urban Food Policy Institute’s research and education aims to advance just, healthy, and resilient urban food systems, which includes the health and wellbeing of food workers. The Barry Commoner Center’s mission is to identify and help solve environmental and occupational threats to human health. Together, we have been examining the occupational safety and health issues facing food delivery workers, from the stresses caused by the algorithms that govern platform-based work to the specific risks of low-wage, precarious delivery work in a dense city like New York.

In our previous testimony, we commended the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) for its efforts to set a floor for the hourly compensation of food delivery workers that is fair, adequate, and consistent. We also recognized the critical efforts of worker organizations like Los Deliveristas Unidos and their members in bringing to light the inequities of app-based delivery work, documenting the experiences faced by delivery workers, and demanding policies to ensure that these essential workers receive adequate compensation.

Based on our assessment of the revised rules and considering continued concerns raised by organizations like Los Deliveristas, who represent many of the city’s food delivery workers, and the NYC Comptroller and numerous City Council Members, we urge DCWP to make three important changes:

(1) Eliminate the proposed $3.60 adjustment for multi-apping. Apart from the limitations of estimating multi-app behavior from survey data collected in just one quarter in 2021, the method the DCWP used to calculate the multi-app adjustment is premised on faulty assumptions. Considering the limited evidence of how multi-apping affects current compensation and how it is likely that practices will change in the first year of the new rule, we feel it is prudent not to recommend any downward adjustment in the base pay. Doing so would likely perpetuate the practice of paying delivery workers a subminimum wage.

(2) Eliminate the proposed phase in rate. Requiring companies to pay 100% of the full rate ($23.82) as of the effective date of the rule would ensure that workers gain the anticipated benefits of the higher compensation level immediately.

(3) As the new rule is implemented, it is critical for DCWP to collect and provide access to data to enable workers, labor organizations, and researchers, as well as DCWP staff, to monitor implementation and evaluate the rule's effectiveness at ensuring that delivery workers receive fair compensation and that the new minimum compensation level results in financial and wellbeing gains. We recommend requiring third-party food delivery or courier services to collect and report to DCWP data on worker equipment theft and breakage and on-the-job accidents and injury. Such data would enable DCWP to assess the need to re-evaluate the hourly expense component of the minimum compensation rate and whether additional regulations are required to improve the safety of food delivery work.

Thank you for the opportunity to present our comments today. We are happy to clarify or elaborate on our remarks and look forward to working with DCWP and the city's food delivery workforce as the rules are implemented.

RUTGERS

School of Management and Labor Relations workplace

justice lab@RU

2023, New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection—Public Hearing on Rules Added to the Determination of a Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers
Friday, April 7, 2023 – Online Hearing

Testimony by Andrew B. Wolf, PhD. Research Fellow, Workplace Justice Lab@Rutgers University, School of Management and Labor Relations

My name is Andrew Wolf and I am a research fellow at the Workplace Justice Lab@Rutgers University and an incoming assistant professor of Industrial Labor Relations at Cornell University. I am a labor sociologist who focuses on the impact of the gig economy's entry into immigrant dominated occupations in New York City. I was a member of the research team that conducted a survey of employment conditions faced by app delivery workers published by the Cornell Workers Institute and which the New York City Council cited in their original law establishing that the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) create methods for determining the minimum payments that must be made to platform food delivery workers, as required by New York City Administrative Code § 20-1522.

This proposed rule which would establish a minimum wage for app delivery workers is an essential first step in ensuring that gig workers are treated with dignity, respect, and are paid a fair wage. But the rule needs to be revised to ensure drivers are actually paid a minimum wage after expenses. In the study we conducted we found delivery workers made significantly below the minimum wage, around $7.87 an hour, and faced considerable expenses justifying the City's action on the workers' behalf. In essence this ruling restores the right to a minimum wage which was unfairly taken from these workers when the apps classified these workers as independent contractors. Previously, when delivery workers were directly employed by restaurants, they were entitled to these rights. They should not lose their rights because Silicon Valley firms have attempted to circumvent labor law.

Even with the proposal under consideration today of $17.96 an hour, representing a significant decrease from the initially proposed $23.82, it still represents a massive improvement over the subminimum wage our study team, and the DCWP's own study, found these workers to be making currently. Importantly, it must be noted that the minimum wage must properly account for the large costs faced by these drivers—a finding from both our survey study and the DCWP's. The burden of these costs has been shifted onto these workers due to their classification as independent contractors. Given this I urge the City to reverse their changes to the rule and ensure these apps cannot continue to pay a sub minimum wage.

The rules under consideration today, especially if revised to the original proposal, would make a massive improvement in the lives of the City's forgotten essential workers. These drivers kept us fed and delivered medicine to those who were sick during the pandemic and yet they continue to be denied a living wage. As our research shows delivery workers are primarily immigrants of color who undertake a dangerous job and face frequent incidents of discriminatory treatment from the apps, customers, and restaurants. Of late, the apps have been threatening the workers livelihoods if they do not help oppose this minimum wage. The proposed rules under consideration today would go a long way to rectifying this history of poor treatment and state that delivery workers deserve rights and a decent living.

I support the establishment of a fair minimum pay proposal by the DCWP and I urge the City of New York to revise this rule and implement a rule which ensures delivery workers are actually paid a living wage as soon as possible and without further delay.

My name is Dr. Patricia Campos-Medina, and I am the Executive Director of the Worker Institute, at the School of Industrial and Labor Relations at Cornell University.

The Worker Institute is the premier labor education and research center in New York State engaged in research and education on contemporary labor issues, to generate innovative thinking and solutions to problems related to work, economy, and society.

I would like to comment on the new rules that the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) is proposing to establish methods for determining the minimum payments that must be made to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service, as required by New York City Administrative Code § 20-1522.

We at the Worker Institute are the authors of the report "Essential but Unprotected: App-based Food Couriers in New York City" published in September of 2021 which led to critical policy solutions by this legislative body and due to the critical advocacy of Los Deliveristas Unidos, has led to critical policy solutions under discussion here today.

The report published by the WI in 2021 examined the working conditions of app-based delivery workers engaged by digital platforms such as UberEATS, Doordash and GrubHub to deliver food to consumers in New York City.

The report involved both primary and secondary empirical research, including a survey of 500 app-based couriers doing deliveries in NYC, focus groups with workers, and individual interviews.[\[1\]](#) The goals of this research was to raise awareness among stakeholders about the pressing issues that app-based delivery workers were facing in the largely unregulated platform economy and to help inform policy and organizational solutions to their experiences these workers face serving the needs of NYC residents and commuters.

Among all the violations this workforce experiences, the most pressing violation findings was uncertain and low pay. Out of the 500 app food delivery workers who participated in the study, 42 percent experienced underpayment of wages and or not paid at all—that is wage theft.

The study also found that the average pay for a food delivery worker is between $4 and $7 per hour, which is well below even the federal legal minimums.

Therefore, a policy solution that addresses the issue of low pay and/or wage theft pay, is an essential policy intervention by this legislative body to address the needs of this critical workforce in NYC.

Therefore, based on our research findings, we urge this body to take to establish a min wage of at least $17.96 for app platform workers.

Even with the decrease in the hourly pay from the initially proposed $23.82 to the current proposal of $17.96, a minimum pay level will represent a significant and much needed improvement in the pay of delivery workers.

The recent adjustments made to establish a minimum pay for workers that are paid by the trip and not by the hour would result in pay of approximately 53 cents per minute since the time the workers accept the order until the time, they deliver the food. This payment method would also allow for significant improvements in total payments received by delivery workers.

It is the responsibility of policy makers to address of noncompliance with basic labor and human rights.

We urge the City of New York to implement the new payment rules as soon as possible and without further delay.

Thank you for the opportunity to testify.

April 7, 2023 for NYC City Council

Research on Pay and Working Conditions DCWP is proposing to add rules establishing methods for determining the minimum payments that must be made to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service, as required by New York City Administrative Code § 20-1522.

New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP)
Public Hearing on Rules Added to the Determination of a Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers

Friday, April 7, 2023

Public Comments by Maria Figueroa, LPD, MPA

My name is Maria Figueroa, and I am Dean of the Harry Van Arsdale Jr. School of Labor Studies at SUNY Empire State University. My comments draw on research I have conducted as an expert in the field of labor and employment relations, with a focus on worker issues in the digital platform economy. I have more than 30 years of experience as a labor researcher, having worked at national labor unions and at Cornell University's School of Industrial and Labor Relations.

My comments focus on DCWP's Second Proposed Rule, and specifically on the two payment methods (Standard and Alternative) for determining the minimum payments that must be made to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service, also known as a platform or app.

Despite reductions in hourly pay resulting from the introduction of a multi-apping factor, both newly proposed methods represent significant improvements in the pay currently received by delivery workers in New York. Earlier estimates by labor researchers and the DCWP revealed that delivery workers' gross average pay per hour is about $12, which is below the legal minimum wage in New York City.

The Standard Method of Payment, which establishes pay per hour, involves a reduction of $3.86 from the initially proposed $23.82 to the currently proposed $19.96. This payment method is mainly intended for delivery workers who work for apps that pay by the hour, such as Relay. This newly proposed minimum hourly rate includes average hourly expenses of e-bike workers, which is appropriate as most workers who work for Relay use e-bikes as their main mean of transportation.

The Alternative Method of Payment, which establishes pay per trip, will result in payment of approximately 53 cents per minute since the time the workers accept the order until the time they deliver the food. This payment method also represents a significant improvement in pay levels of delivery workers.

My recommendations to DCWP follow.

1. Recalibrate the multi-apping factor of $3.60 using more and updated data, which should be provided by the apps.
2. Collaborate with worker organizations and advocates to closely monitor implementation of the new rule and prevent business practices that will undermine the pay and safety of workers. Such practices on the part of the apps may include bundling multiple orders in one trip, and restricting the hours in which workers can connect to the app. Information provided by workers in the field indicates that apps would limit the number of workers connected during certain hours (potentially peak hours), and may bundle multiple orders in one trip. These practices would help the apps to contain labor costs and maintain or increase their profit margins. But these will come at the expense of workers' pay, safety, and employment opportunities.

3. Implement the new rule as soon as possible and without further delay.

Thank you for the opportunity to deliver this testimony.

Online comments: 687

- Emil Batista Hernandez

First I want to thank you for taking the time to see further than just a flat min wage, they would've find a loop to pay us less if that were the case, I love both options but I feel 2nd option is more beneficial to my needs, I like the flexibility and so by choosing option 2 I'll be able to keep it, please do make sure they don't hide tips, those have to be upfront, I'm certain they're going to try something fishy like hiding the tips until after delivery in order to take revenge on us for fighting for a fair living. Thanks

Comment added March 8, 2023 8:24am

- MD ESSA RUHULLAH

Thanks you . some delivery app fixed trip time. If restaurant food process delay how can delivery time count. I like 2nd option.

Comment added March 10, 2023 1:31pm

- Antonio

El pago ya debió de hacerse echo desde enero pero no se que está pasando el pago lo necesitamos cuanto antes ya que los deliveris o tips están cada día Peor ya no solo piensan en nosotros ni en los clientes que tienen que esperar sus órdenes durante 2 horas o mas

Comment added March 13, 2023 10:39am

- Lorenzo

Necesitamos el pago los deliveris muy malos hay ordenes que recibimos que bienen 4 o 3 órdenes por 10 o 7 dólares que esas órdenes tenemos que repartir en 1 hora o mas ósea que ni siquiera ganamos el salario mínimo que ya está estipulado en la ley sólo queremos algo digno para nosotros por todo el esfuerzo que se a echo

Comment added March 13, 2023 10:43am

- Anonimo

Hola soy deliverista desde hace 7 años trabajo en el área de manhattan y estoy de acuerdo con un pago gusto ya que hay muchos trabajadores que sufren accidente y no tenemos apoyo de ninguna parte al parecer hay organizaciones que dicen apoyarnos y solo lucran con nuestro trabajo y nombres y la policía en caso de un accidente y robo no nos apoyan y aclaro no quiero que una organización me represente proyecto y Justicia Laboral (Ligia Directora ejecutiva) no me representas no eres deliverista

Comment added March 13, 2023 3:06pm

- Wolfram

Tengo 4 años y medio trabajando como repartidor, que la ciudad tome la mejor opción para los repartidores basados en los comentarios.

Desde mi punto de vista un pago por hora les ayudaría a los compañeros que trabajan en compañías como " Doordash, Grubhub y Uber" hasta el momento solo la compañía "relay" paga a $.12.50 la hora.

Pero de hacerse el cambio las compañías tomarían represalias contra los repartidores por buscar un mejor pago entonces la ciudad debería advertirles que no haya represalias contra los trabajadores.

Otra cosa hay una organiza llamada Workers Justice Project asociada a los Deliverystas Unidos, que supuestamente nos representa pero lo hace solo para pedir dinero y al final no se ve la ayuda entonces no queremos que nos sigan representando los queremos fuera, que la ciudad tome la opinión de cada repartidor y haga un análisis porfavor.

Comment added March 13, 2023 5:58pm

- Anónimo

Llevo trabajando para Uber mas de 4 años y el salario es justo lo que necesitamos ya que ay ordenes que nos llegan de 2 dólares a 3o4 millas u eso es unq burla así nosotros ya que tememos que recorrer muchas distancia por un pago que no es lo mínimo y si cancelamos la orden la app nos penaliza

Comment added March 14, 2023 4:26pm

- Karol

Es bueno seguir ejerciendo presion a la ciudad exigiendo el salario minimo soy una trabajadora en la industria de delivery hace ya varios anos y siempre depende mi familia y yo de las propinas de los clientes mientras que las companias no nos pagan nada y si exigen que seamos eficientes en nuestros trabajos.

Comment added March 14, 2023 4:32pm

- Lion

Desde que la industria esta en la ciudad de nueva york ha demostrado claramente su desinteres por un pago a aquellos trabajadores que con tanto esfuerzo llevan la despensa a miles de familias neoyorquinas, ya es hora de que esto cambie y el salario es lo que necesitamos para que esto cambie y tengamos lo que nos merecemos por derecho como trabajadores esenciales.

Comment added March 14, 2023 4:38pm

- Anonimo

La ciudad ya debe darse cuenta que un salario es justo lo que necesitamos todos y nos lo Emos ganado con mucho esfuerzo y ya basta de llevar órdenes de muchas millas que ni siquiera tip llevan

Somos trabajadores esenciales

Comment added March 14, 2023 4:40pm

- jeronimo

llevo 5 años trabajndo para las apps y ya creo que sea justo hacer un pago que sea justo para todos nosotros tengo fe que el alcade y todo su equipo va apensar en todos y cada uno de los trabajdores que hacemos una labor increible en las calles y llevamos la comida medicina y todo lo esencial que las personas necesitan ala puerta de su ogar

Comment added March 14, 2023 4:55pm

- Matt

Vamos a apoyar el salario mínimo ya tenemos 3 meses que debió ser aprobado y ahora ya falta poco por un pago justo para nosotros los que estamos en esta industria.

Comment added March 14, 2023 5:02pm

- Will

Es importante aclarar que el salario debió ser efectivo a partir de enero del 2023 y el hecho de que aún no tengamos salario los repartidores de comida es una prueba de que las aplicaciones están metidas en la política utilizando estrategias para prorrogar o tratar de disminuir lo que ya la ciudad ha estipulado, sigamos en la lucha hasta que logremos el salario que nos merecemos.

Comment added March 15, 2023 9:01am

- Vik

Ahora que estamos a punto de lograr el salario mínimo el nuevo desafío será que estas compañías cumplan con la propuesta emitida por la ciudad, así que es importante resaltar la importancia y también la responsabilidad que tenemos los trabajadores de denunciar, reportar cualquier abuso que estas compañías puedan tener en un proceso de cambio que ahora debe ser a favor de nosotros los trabajadores, es un momento histórico que después de años de trabajo gratuito ahora miles de personas se verán beneficiadas.

Comment added March 15, 2023 9:16am

- Jorge

Apoyo el salario llevo esperando 3 meses y aun los trabajadores no entendemos porque la prorroga que pasa con la ciudad ahi que tomar accion y mantenernos unidos y fuertes.

Comment added March 15, 2023 10:41am

- Monik

Las aplicaciones durante muchos años han abusado de los trabajadores sin darnos un salario digno ahora quieren bajar el salario sin tenerlo es un descaro pero seguimos luchando hasta que tengamos derecho como cualquier trabajador.

Comment added March 15, 2023 10:53am

- Rascal

Muchos deliveristas estamos a la expectativa del pago esperamos que sea un incremento justo para todos.

Comment added March 15, 2023 11:00am

- Jaber

Esperamos el pago minimo sea superior ya que nosotros tenemos muchos gastos operativos aparte de nuestra despensa basica.

Comment added March 15, 2023 11:11am

- Alberto Herrera

The payment to the workers has already been reduced by around 4 dollars less, it is absolutely sad and regrettable how the city disappoints the so-called hero deliverists in times of pandemic and now once again they are the forgotten ones of the equation, not to mention that our work It's already risky, as a survivor of accidents and multiple assaults, In addition, there is an organization that pronounces itself protectors of the deliverists of the city of New York, big affirmations for not having a single program to help the needs of the city workers, in short I agree with the current proposal of minimum payment and categorical rejection of the org that lies to the face of the workers

Comment attachment

TapScanner-15-03-2023-11:10.pdf

Comment added March 15, 2023 11:13am

- Jose

Llevo 20 años en este país y es increíble tener un salario como repartidor nunca lo he tenido y lo que venga seguro será una oportunidad para mejorar mi calidad de vida.

Comment added March 15, 2023 11:14am

- Karmager

El salario mínimo ya establecido es un beneficio que debimos haber tenido hace tiempo ojalá vengan más beneficios y que estas organizaciones sigan presionando ya que nadie presiona a estas compañías que se quedan con todo el dinero.

Comment added March 15, 2023 11:19am

- Lina

Tuve un accidente hace 1 mes llame a la compañía de delivery para que me ayudaran me respondieron que no podían hacer nada, me penalizaron por la entrega del delivery y se me dañó mi herramienta de trabajo, apoyo el salario así nos vana devolver mucho con lo que se han quedado estas compañías.

Comment added March 15, 2023 11:23am

- Karina

Desde que descargue esta aplicación hace 6 meses solo he recibido órdenes baratas no mayores a 8 dólares en su mayoría de 2 3 y 4 dólares 3 4 y 5 millas es muy lejos por muy mal pago.

Comment added March 15, 2023 11:28am

- Leonard

Por los miles de trabajadores que se encuentran luchando por un salario justo apoyo la iniciativa del pago mínimo.

Comment added March 15, 2023 11:35am

- Ale

En temporadas de invierno que son las mas duras y agrestes donde los trbajadores siempre llevamos la peor parte y recibimos deliveries de bajo costo. este salario sera un colchon y una ayuda economica ya que a veces tenemos que regresar a nuestras casas con poco dinero por culpa de las aplicaciones que se quedan con las propinas.

Comment added March 15, 2023 11:43am

- Rincon Ale

A estas companias lo unico que les importa es los clientes no les importa nosotros los que llevamos los deliveries tampoco reconocieron que fuimos trabajadores esenciales durante COVID19 ahora que la ciudad nos quiere ayudar con un salario digno seguro estaran peleando por no otorgarlo.

apoyo el salario.

Comment added March 15, 2023 11:51am

- Alan

Estoy de acuerdo con el salario minimo porque con solo propinas es muy dificil sobrevivir en una ciudad donde los gastos de renta y despensa son elevados.

Comment added March 15, 2023 2:02pm

- Roger

Para mis companeros y yo merecemos este salario ya que todos los dias hacemos una labora responsable y honesta llevando la comida a miles de Americanos e inmigrantes tambien que requieren de nuestro buen servicio.

Comment added March 15, 2023 2:38pm

- Nate

Apoyo el pago minimo no me gusta depender de la caridad de la gente solo porque no tenemos salario creo que lo merecemos y seguro la ciudad tambien esta de acuerdo en que somos trabajadores importantes para su ciudad.

Comment added March 15, 2023 2:41pm

- Victor

Por todos los deliveristas que han tenido accidentes y otros que ha muerto sin tener beneficios por parte de estas companias es la hora de parar esta injusticia y ahora tener un mejor pago para todos.

Comment added March 15, 2023 2:45pm

- Roberto

Es una excelente opcion el salario pagar por hora nos beneficia a veces las aplicaciones lo tienen a uno mucho tiempo parado sin recibir ordenes y no generas nada de dinero.

Comment added March 15, 2023 3:03pm

- Rafael

Eso se una muy bien que tengamos un salario todos los trabajadores de las aplicaciones a veces te manda ordenes muy baratas y no alcanzas a completar un salario decente para llevar a tu casa y cubrir con todos tus gastos.

Comment added March 15, 2023 3:08pm

- Jesus

Acepto el salario bien mal que si estamos ganandonos deliveris de a peso no es justo queremos suficiente para vivir dignamente.

Comment added March 15, 2023 3:55pm

- Diogenes

Movamos la fuerza que tenemos como grupo para presionar por el salario es la unica manera de tener una ayuda por parte del gobierno la union hace la fuerza.

Comment added March 15, 2023 4:09pm

- Pablo

Abajo las empresas que se lucran sin pagar un salario arriba aquellos que buscan igualdad de derechos para los mas vulnerables. apoyo el salario minimo.

Comment added March 15, 2023 4:14pm

- Carlos

De mi parte no quiero seguir viviendo con mi dinero apenas para sobrevivir si este salario va a ser mejor lo apoyo pero vigilen a aquellas companias que busquen hacer la trampa porque ellos siempre quieren ganar.

Comment added March 15, 2023 4:22pm

- Juan

Ahora si en el frio o en el calor lluvia o nieve va a dar gusto trbajar con un pago minimo lo apoyo al 100 por ciento.

Comment added March 15, 2023 4:26pm

- Jacob

Empujemos para recibir este salario no más injusticias Doordash Grubhub uber relay se lo llevan todo

Comment added March 15, 2023 4:38pm

- Dolly

Hola, gracias por darme este espacio para comentar soy trabajadora hago deliveries y es muy injusto siempre me manda muy lejos por poco dinero si queremos salario lo apoyo totalmente
Gracias

Comment added March 15, 2023 4:40pm

- Carlos A

Si no es hoy es nunca vamos a apoyar el salario porque ahorita no tengo y si no salen órdenes entonces tenemos cero en nuestros bolsillos

Comment added March 15, 2023 4:48pm

- Nestor

Trabajo en un restaurante medio tiempo la otra mitad en aplicaciones y cuando me doy cuenta que no recibo un pago por hora en las aplicaciones me parece muy injusto me hace pensar que no le importamos a estas compañías así que lo más pronto el pago mínimo por el bien de todos.

Comment added March 15, 2023 4:51pm

- Esteban

Las aplicaciones tienen un método de reclutar personas muy particular (trabaja cuando quieras) es una estrategia para tener a todo el mundo en la calle trabajando a bajo costo y sin un pago mínimo, estas compañías saben que uno trabaja hasta 16 horas diarias porque para la mayoría este trabajo es full time + over time la diferencia es ganamos sólo propinas, así que apoyo el salario mínimo

Comment added March 15, 2023 4:54pm

- Eloy

Antes trabajaba 14 horas hasta que un día en la noche me robaron mi moto y a mi me toco cubrir todos los gastos ahora me toca hasta más temprano con el temor que me vuelvan a robar ahora con este salario talvez no tenga seguridad pero voy a ganar algo adicional que cubra en caso de otro evento que afecte mi integridad.

Comment added March 15, 2023 4:56pm

- Martinez E

Este invierno las aplicaciones enviaron toda la temporada órdenes baratas de 2 y 3 dólares mientras uno se mojaba y estaba en el frío en la calle por horas ahora páguenos un salario creo que es justo

Comment added March 15, 2023 5:02pm

- Gerardo

El que diga que no le sirva el salario sin saber aún cómo va a ser necesita más información para mi yo si lo quiero y lo apoyo

Comment added March 15, 2023 5:05pm

- Mario

A mi me va regular con las aplicaciones pero quiero que me empiece a ir mejor el salario será la prueba que las cosas mejoren para todos

Comment added March 15, 2023 5:09pm

- Oldair

Tengo trabajando con las apps desde hace tres años y creo yo que la ciudad de NY y el alcalde ya devén de aprobar deonaves el salario nos lo emos ganado

Minum Pay minimun Pay

Comment added March 15, 2023 5:09pm

- Oliver

Ay días que tengo que llevar delivers de 2o 3 Dolores no Se me hace justo urge el salario mayor Adam's ponganse en nuestros zapatos porfavor

Minimum pay

Comment added March 15, 2023 5:18pm

- Juan

Necesitamos el salario cuanto antes señor alcande es una prioridad para nosotros y nuestras familias espero nos entienda urge

Pago mínimo pago mínimo

Comment added March 15, 2023 5:30pm

- David

Me tengo que llevar deliveris de 3 o 4 dolares y si no lo ago me bajan la puntuación de mi aplicación y no es justo señor alcalde necesitamos el pago nos urge a nosotros y nuestras familias

Pago mínimo pago mínimo

Comment added March 15, 2023 5:43pm

- Benito

Necesitamos el pago señor alcalde son varias las necesidades que tenemos y no alcanza con lo que ganamos

Pago mínimo pago mínimo

Comment added March 15, 2023 6:42pm

- Gustavo

Estoy a favor de un pago gusto , no queremos trabajar solo por propina , queremos respeto , no deliverys de 4 dolares que tardas más de 1 hora con ellos

Comment added March 15, 2023 6:48pm

- Raul

Necesitamos temmos que llevar ordenes de 3 o 4 dolares a 6 o 5 millas ybya mo es justo

Pago mimino pago mimimo

Comment added March 15, 2023 6:48pm

- Luis Antonio Cabrera

Nos urge un pago mínimo o un pago ya que tenemos que llevar deliveris de 3 o 4 dolares

Pago mínimo pago mínimo

Comment added March 15, 2023 7:46pm

- Oscar

Necesitamos el pago mínimo señor alcalde nos urge lo necesitamos lo merecemos

Pago mínimo

Comment added March 15, 2023 7:48pm

- Alex Jacobson

Deliveristas deserve fair wages! If anything, they deserve hazard pay-levels of wages, biking on NYC streets is DANGEROUS, and its a high enough stress life without making delivery workers worry about making enough money to live on from hour to hour. $24/hour at the very least!

Comment added March 15, 2023 7:56pm

- Alyssa Mae Berman

A minimum wage is necessary for workers to survive the cost of living. Delivery workers have the right to work without discrimination. $24 is barely enough to keep essential workers paid a living wage; that's why we can't budge on the $24 minimum (not $19)!

The "Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers" law is a basic human right.

Comment added March 15, 2023 8:14pm

- Paul Duke

Minimum wage is necessary for workers to have fair rights and fight back against discrimination. Adams administration promised a $24 minimum wage but they change it to a $19 wage. That's not a living wage! These workers are marginalized people and often exploited due to that. They deserve protection, dignity, and a living wage. Imagine this city without delivery workers!

Comment added March 15, 2023 9:10pm

- Sergio solano

Hola llevo haciendo este trabajo de Repartidor de Comida desde el 2006 y siempre hemos aceptado los aumento de salario de acuerdo a lo que la ciudad nos ha ayudado...creo que lo más importante es que nosotros mismos podamos dirigirnos directamente alas aplicaciones y poder compartir nuestras experiencias como repartidores de verdad...es una falta de respeto de esta organización lucrativa workers justice proyect y Los Deliveristas unidos...solo buscan sacar ventaja de todo esto y ellos llevarse créditos y donaciones de las aplicaciones...Queremos que la ciudad y los medios se enteren Que ellos no nos representan...si ustedes nos pueden ayudar sería mucho mejor y no por medio de intermediarios muchas Gracias...El pueblo unido jamás será vencido!!!

Comment added March 15, 2023 9:27pm

- Nato

Trabajo 12 horas para ganar lo necesario y llevar los deliveris de 2 o 1 dolar nos urge un pago señor alcalde lo necesitamos cuanto antes

Comment added March 15, 2023 9:37pm

- Gustavo

Necesitamos q las aplicaciones pague. Más la hora mínimo $25 nos roban las propinas nos mandan bien lejos nos castigan si no llevamos las ordenes nos mandan a los super mercados y nos dan cajas de agua soda alimentos como si lleváramos carro y lo digo por relay driver es la q mas nos humilla somos esenciales lluvia viento frío trabajamos nos accidentamos y no nos apoyan al contrario nos castigan de que ya no podemos trabajar por el accidente solo nos usan y nos votan queremos algo justo

Comment added March 15, 2023 9:52pm

- Octavio lopez

I do agree with this payment i disagree whith the workers justice proyect representing the delibery

Community , im happy with that payment but please don't let this organization to keep representing us

Comment added March 15, 2023 11:42pm

- Serapio

Es una buena opción ya que en los accidentes robo de bicicletas las aplicaciones no te brindan ninguna ayuda y las aplicaciones no te entregan las propinas completas los 23.78 estaba bien asta que una organización Yamada prolecto justicia laborar vino a exigir más eso creo jodió bajandola a 19 y algo el pago bien pero que sea algo justo y no queremos que está organización nos represente más

Comment added March 16, 2023 12:56am

- Jose Angel

Trabajo en la ciudad de Nueva York desde hace 20 años como repartidor de comida y pienso que todas las aplicaciones deberían de pagar como mínimo un salario base y dejar al descubierto los recibos ya que muchos restaurantes se quedan con la propina de los repartidores y que el alcalde tome cartas en el asunto ya que nos tiene olvidados a los según trabajadores esenciales

Comment added March 16, 2023 7:35am

- Manny Ramirez

En mi opinión personal

Creo que ya la ciudad está caminando hacia atrás al reducir el pago

Con la inflación y los costos de operación que son altos tuvieron la oportunidad de marcar un antecedente y hacer historia en la nación,

Como parte de la comunidad creo que hará bien por que aún con la rebaja ya será un ganar ganar para los Deliveristas de la ciudad,

Aprovecho el espacio para hacer un llamado a la ciudad que la organización workers Justice Project

No sirve a los trabajadores,

Se sirve de ellos,

Con representacion sin beneficio para los trabajadores,

Worker Justice Proyect

No nos representa !!

Comment attachment

TapScanner-15-03-2023-11:10-1.pdf

Comment added March 16, 2023 7:51am

- Frank Avila

Lo que esta pasando pues confunde a los compañeros y ami
Prometieron 30 por hora
Después que no que 24 y luego prometió esa organización que 29 ok
Y luego que 29 son 17 y ahora que 19 por hora,
Con tantos recursos y no saben hacer una simple cuenta,
Si en lo más básico no se ponen de acuerdo menos en lo que realmente
importa,
Protección el los atropellamiento y los asaltos,
Esa organización promete mucho y no ha hecho nada
Ligia donde están el dinero de para los trabajadores ?
Todos nos lo preguntamos?

Comment added March 16, 2023 8:10am

- Ernesto S

Yo creo que esta bien lo que han dejado como parte del salario
Por que más propinas ya la cosa cambia
Espero y no lo muevan más
Con esto de que primero es una cantidad y luego otra
Nos hacen creer que Ligia también es la directora de departamento de protección al trabajador
Puras promesas vacías!!
Ligia no nos representas !

Comment added March 16, 2023 8:19am

- Gustavo

Hola mi nombre es gustavo llevo 10 años trabajando de Delivery y 5 con las apps las apps siempre nos roban la propina nos tratan injustamente eh estado 10 horas en la apps y solo e ganado $60 dólares sería justo que nos paguen por hora ya que solo te usan cuando te necesitan relay paga por hora $12.50 eso no alcanza para nada aparte es la que peor te trata te manda a recoger solo. A recoger ordenes de 3 millas y a dejar otras de 3.5
millas y si no la llevas te castiga debería de aver un pago justo por hora ellos se hacen ricos y no pagan un salario justo mínimo de $25 por hora gracias

Comment added March 16, 2023 9:45am

- Max

Pienso que es una idea buena tener un pago mínimo no hay garantías en este momento que podamos mantener bn a nuestras familias

Comment added March 16, 2023 10:00am

- Christian gomez

Para mi decisión me gustaría que paguen por hora ya que solo vivimos de las propinas

Comment added March 16, 2023 10:35am

- Daniel

yo opino que dejen la aplicación así cómo está porque cuando empiezan a pagar la hora, el horario ya no será flexible para nosotros que si estamos trabajando, aparte sólo nos dejarán trabajar como 40 horas a la semana, tampoco uno ya no podrá rechazar órdenes.

Comment added March 16, 2023 10:36am

- Christian gomez

Me gustaría que las aplicaciones paguen por hora para poder tener más posibilidades

Comment added March 16, 2023 10:37am

- Scott Wilson

All workers in NYC need to be paid $15 for every 60 minutes of work — regardless of their employee/contractor status. Companies that don't pay a living wage need to be banned from operating in NYC.

Comment added March 16, 2023 10:38am

- Jessica Olivares

Estoy de acuerdo con el pago minimo
Que es la propuesta de la ciudad Actual

Lo que no estamos de acuerdo es que la organización workers justice project

Deje de representar a los deliveristas

Esa organización de promesas vacías,

No más workers justice project !!

No más ligia Gualpa !!

Comment attachment

TapScanner-16-03-2023-09:56.pdf

Comment added March 16, 2023 11:50am

- Yecenia

Soy una mujer de parto de comida estoy de acuerdo con un pago justo esto está desde hace un año que paso por que lo atrasaron primero somos excenciales ahora nos excluyen de un pago dignó a nosotros estoy de acuerdo con las leyes de la ciudad, en lo que no estoy de acuerdo y quiero que se me escuche es que esta organización llamada Worker's Justice Project (WJP) Y LOS DELIVERISTAS UNIDOS dirigida por la señora Ligia Gualpa me represente ya que ella misma dijo que hay donaciones y no nos llegan a los afectados que somos nosotros los trabajadores, señores le hago un llamado así mismo como ahora le exigen a las aplicaciones que nos paguen exígalen a ella que nos de explicaciones de las donaciones ella sabe que tenemos muchos accidentado muchos muertos y no tenemos ayuda de ella .No quiero ser representada por WORKER'S JUSTICE PROJECT Y LOS DELIVIRISTAS UNIDOS dirigida por LIGIA GUALLPA

Comment added March 16, 2023 12:48pm

- Ricardo m

El pago nos va a beneficiar a todos compañeros es momento de estar unidos hoy mas que nunca y pedirle al alcalde exigirl3 un pago que nos lo emos ganado dia con dia

Comment added March 16, 2023 1:10pm

- Esmailing

Es más que claro que a las aplicaciones no les interesa que tengamos un pago justo por nuestro trabajo ya que cada vez ellos reclutan nuevos repartidores para que haya más oferta de estos que demanda y así nos obligan a tomar órdenes ridículamente bajas.

Tomen en cuenta que trabajamos bajos las inclemencias del clima, una ciudad por demás insegura, ladrones, atracadores y aparte de esto las apps no cumplen con la ley.

Comment added March 16, 2023 3:00pm

- David

It's a slap in the face to promise delivery workers a \$24 minimum wage only to change all plans at the last minute and reduce it to \$19 per hour. Seriously, what a shame. I'm honestly very disappointed in the city's decision. What they have created is a scenario in which the companies will continue to have the upper hand at our expense. Not paying us for on-call time is unacceptable, especially on days where it's very slow with only 1–2 trip offers per hour. For example, if you only receive 1 trip offer within a given hour whose drop-off location is just 10 minutes away, you'd get paid $$(0.50 \times 10)$ + tip (if the customer leaves one) + "fixed multiplier rate" (could be interpreted as the useless surges that Uber tries to entice people with that contribute virtually nothing, as it's nothing more than a sneaky way of getting away with paying people a base fare of $< \$1$), which could come out to $\$5 + \1 tip + $\$0.25$ in "fixed multiplier rate" = $\$6.25$ in total payment. Paying us $\$0.50$ per minute for the duration that we're engaged in trips won't offset the instability that the initial proposal was intent on correcting. The moronic idea of thinking that the "fixed multiplier rate" would somehow address on-call time is ludicrous as it is just a way for delivery companies to once again avoid responsibility for paying us what we deserve, and is inferior to the preferred and respected practice of getting paid on an hourly basis, such as the structure implemented by the company Relay. The city made a colossal mistake in entering into a confidential agreement with the companies to conduct worker pay analysis, because the companies have nearly perfected the art of purposely manipulating data, failing to comply with the city's repeated efforts to obtain pertinent information to move forward with the proposal, and has signaled that the city is gravitating away from the worker and closer to the interest of the companies. The only way these companies will do the right thing is if they're regulated and audited regularly. If, for whatever reason any of the companies disagree or fail to comply with the regulations that will ultimately take effect, they should terminate operations in New York City, not be given "alternatives" that their scum attorneys and skeleton representation present as a way out of doing the right thing. I strongly urge the city to completely reconsider their ideas, as I see things that I'm not okay with at all and that don't represent the protections of workers, but further empower the companies. What's staggering about this is that these companies spend hundreds of millions of dollars in campaigns that sole purpose serve to effectively limit our income when that money could be honestly spent on helping their workforce. It's gotten to the point where working for these companies is just as bad as working for the railroad, where back in the day workers had dependable pay, and could say they were proud of the work they did. Nowadays it's a disaster working for them and these delivery companies. In New York City, Uber has cut quest promotions back considerably by offering them much less frequently and offering less in bonuses overall, and they have completely discontinued the dollar surges that would offer workers an extra \$1-\$5 on every trip. They're getting progressively worse everyday. Now they want workers to keep receipts on hand from "Shop and Pay" orders when that is clearly the customer's responsibility to take care of, not us. I know what they're doing, they're making all these sneaky changes because they are trying to cut their workforce by employing all sorts of lowlife games like penalizing people for unassigned themselves from deliveries that take too long, forcing workers to take on undue responsibility by keeping track of customer receipts, and purposely hiding trip information when we receive orders so they just get done without the worker's knowledge of how far they're actually going, and once again wage theft because some customers think it's okay to revoke a worker's tip when they're enroute, which is not only unethical, but should be considered downright illegal. Also, the city needs to implement a rule that requires the companies to receive permission from the city before they deactivate workers, because currently, as it stands, the workers have no protections at all, and with the companies now doing really shady things to reduce their workforce by a lot, the city needs to act as the eyes in the sky to monitor the companies. The city's current, "revised" proposal is not only incomplete, but it is honestly woefully insufficient. This should not, and I repeat, this should not be the city's final decision on this matter until we, the workers, are put first, and the companies put second. To the city: you have a lot of work to do. Go back, throw away the alternative proposal and step up. Being strong means making right decisions, remember that.

Comment added March 16, 2023 3:39pm

- Oscar

First I want to say that the future of jobs is not in establishing a minimum hourly pay and forcing workers to comply with schedules, trips, any kind of action regardless of weather or road conditions. One should be free to choose when, how and where to work.

That said, the apps should be forced to give bonuses when there is bad weather, when they are important days (like father's day) and when an order exceeds the value of 100 dollars and the customer is not even giving 5% tip that is the application itself to put that minimum tip for the worker, since many times orders of that value are extremely large making it difficult to move them carefully, quickly and more in bad weather days.

I also wanted to comment on a non-profit organization (Workers Justice Project/Deliviristas unidos) that is "supporting" us and started this whole process of minimum hourly pay, asking for signatures and promising people completely different things than what they ended up doing when they were asking for those signatures.

It is an organization that has received a lot of money or is in the process of receiving another large amount and they have never been transparent with what they are going to do with that money or how much money they have received, or what prizes they have won, because let's remember that all the money this organization receives is supposed to be for the help they are supposed to give to the food delivery workers.

I like both options but I feel 2nd option.

Comment added March 16, 2023 3:40pm

- Juan González

Necesitamos un pago justo que haiga pago mínimo para todos no podemos vivir de la propinas y las compañías tampoco son claras con las propinas también quiero aclarar que

a mi ese mariguano y Manny Ramírez junto con la organización no me representan

Comment added March 17, 2023 11:19am

- Paulo

Si estaría bien que pagarán por hora el problema que yo veo cuántas horas nos darán las app y que condiciones van poner tendríamos que firmar otro contrato ustedes creen que las app nos van a dar 40 horas por semana yo creo que no porque habemos muchos repartidores de comida tendríamos que agarrar horario y pienso que ganaríamos menos dinero y tendríamos que llevar entregas a lugares peligrosos como prolectos de vivienda y barrios peligrosos

Comment added March 17, 2023 2:26pm

- Ernesta Galvez

Soy repartidora de comida y me parece muy bien un pago justo aclaro no hablo por todos cada cabeza es un mundo hablo por mi la decisión ya estaba desde el año pasado no entiendo por qué no se está poniendo en vigor parecemos cangrejos en vez de avanzar no estamos retrocediendo que paso ser ALCALDE ahora el pago está en sus manos tiene que decir ya por que estemos o no estemos de acuerdo esto va suceder es mejor que de una pronta respuesta de un salario justo.tambien hago un llamado respetosamente al departamento de LABOR que así como investiga a las aplicaciones también nos gustaría que investigue a Worker Justice Project(WJP) y los deliverista unidos dirigida por Ligia Guallpa ya que la señorita dijo que hay donaciones y no ha llegado a los compañeros y compañeras accidentadas y por que no apoyo a los compañeros muertos tampoco se les ha dado apoyo

Comment added March 17, 2023 2:59pm

- Roman paredes

I do not agree with this payment i want to remain as an self contractor .

Comment added March 17, 2023 3:07pm

- FREDY

So estoy de acuerdo con el pago base muchas gracias por el apoyo

Comment added March 17, 2023 6:19pm

- Joel

No queremos Qué nos pague por hora estamos bien como estamos ahora nosotros no ganamos por hora nosotros ganamos por propina

Comment added March 17, 2023 7:02pm

- Animo

Tube un accidente resientemente y la compañía nunca abisto o pregubtado Como estoy entonces urge tener un Pago y le pido al señor alcalde que nos brinde eso ya que no queremos depender solo de las propinas

Comment added March 18, 2023 1:50pm

- Pedro

Necesitamos el Pago señor alcalde urge piense en nosotros y nuestras familias que dependemos de este trabajo

Pago minimo Pago minimo

Comment added March 18, 2023 1:55pm

- Anónimo

Habeses llevamos carreras largas con ordenes muy grandes y no llevan tips seria lo justo que nos den un pago justo que tengamos y nos lo merecemos

Comment added March 18, 2023 1:59pm

- Pedro

El salario nos urge un pago mínimo señor alcalde

Comment added March 18, 2023 2:12pm

- Oscar

Como repartidor que soy desde ase 15 no quiero ser un repartidor que me represente worker project justici y quiero seguir un contratista independiente

Comment added March 18, 2023 4:14pm

- Max suarez

Here I leave my note, the truth is that I do not agree with the new minimum wage paid by the hour, I want to continue being an independent contractor, and I do not want The Workers Justice Project to continue representing me

Comment added March 19, 2023 12:54am

- Gustavo ajche

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 19, 2023 2:25pm

- Antonio Martinez solis

Comentario para apoyar el Pago Minimo y postear en la pagina del DCWP Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 19, 2023 6:22pm

- Rocael

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 20, 2023 10:43am

- Rolando

Comentario para apoyar el Pago Minimo y postear en la pagina del DCWP Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 20, 2023 10:59am

- Anonimo

Comentario para apoyar el Pago Minimo y postear en la pagina del DCWP Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 20, 2023 11:00am

- José Olivares

Soy repartidor de Manhattan y estoy de acuerdo con un pago que nos ayude un poco más a mejorar nuestra economía

Ya que también tenemos muchos gastos q a veces no alcanzamos a cubrir.

Comment added March 20, 2023 11:02am

- Anonimo

Nos urge un pago ya que solo dependemos de los tips y los tips no son pago señor alcalde necesitamos un pago nos urge lo necesitamos

Comment added March 20, 2023 12:02pm

- Sergio

Cabe señalar que las empresas contratan a personas para que escriban testimonios falsos aquí en los comentarios, así que tenga cuidado cuando vea personas que dicen que quieren confiar únicamente en las propinas o que ser un contratista independiente es el camino hacia el futuro cuando sea ciertamente no. Como repartidor aquí en la ciudad, ignora a las personas que quieren impedir que aseguremos nuestro dinero ganado. Necesitamos un salario mínimo y nunca dejaremos de luchar.

Comment added March 20, 2023 1:15pm

- Anonimo

El pago es justo lo que necesitamos señor alcalde ya no quiero llevar deliveris de 3 0 4 dólares pago mínimo pago mínimo

Comment added March 20, 2023 1:21pm

- Anónimo

Yo estoy contento con mi trabajo espero que beneficie a todos señor alcalde

Comment added March 20, 2023 2:01pm

- PEDRO ISAIAS ROJAS TEM

Comentario para apoyar el Pago Minimo y postear en la pagina del DCWP Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y

Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago mínimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y también a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad económica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 20, 2023 3:37pm

- Jorge velecela

Si me gustaría. Que sería bueno que apruebe el pago mínimo porque sería bueno para todos los que trabajamos así en este trabajo y que respete y valore nuestro trabajo gracias

Comment added March 20, 2023 4:10pm

- Fernando

Hola soy un deliverista desde hace 8 años y me parece que este cambio sería un buen cambio para nosotros como repartidores

Comment added March 20, 2023 4:27pm

- Pablo

Estoy de acuerdo con la propuesta ya que ahorita estamos llevando deliveries de 3 o 4 dólares no es justo que no tengamos un pago señor alcalde pago mínimo pago mínimo

Comment added March 20, 2023 4:43pm

- Anónimo

Estoy de acuerdo con el pago nos beneficiará a todos y hacer de nuestro trabajo digno que nos lo hemos ganado señor alcalde

Pago mínimo pago mínimo

Comment added March 20, 2023 5:33pm

- yoav B

this is great for battling unfair wages. this is because it shouldn't be legal for a person to work for an hour and only receive 10$ in a city like NYC. our delivery workers risk their lives every minute of their job only to receive less than the bare minimum, minimum wage rate. We should be giving our delivery workers at least minimum wage and free hospital care should they get struck by a car on the job.

Comment added March 21, 2023 10:36am

- carlos Saldana

Acaso mio no es gusto que la orden 3 o 4 dolares llegar al restaurante demora 10 a 15 minutos
Ya nosotros necesitamos un salario mínimo.

Comment added March 21, 2023 11:08am

- Florentino saldana

Ya nosotros tenemos que hacer algo para el salario minimos
Nomás por que lo rechazas la orden bajo ya te bajan puntuacion
No es gusto trabajar sin propina.

Comment added March 21, 2023 11:22am

- Jose mejia

Estoy de acuerdo con el incremento del salario mínimo, es justo para el trabajo que hace el Delivery

Comment added March 21, 2023 12:08pm

- Humberto ramirez

Me parece bien el salario mínimo

Comment added March 21, 2023 1:22pm

- Melecio Clemente

A mi punto de vista por el tiempo que llevo trabajando me gustaría que me pagaran por hora.

Comment added March 21, 2023 1:59pm

- Melecio Clemente

Quiero el salario minimo trabajo en manhattan y el pago de propinas es muy bajo y fuera de eso la aplicacion nonte paga nada

Comment added March 21, 2023 2:00pm

- Samuel Alvarez

Me gustaria recibir un Pago minimo por hora seria lo Mas justo como trabajador independiente.

Comment added March 21, 2023 2:14pm

- José Cando

Estoy de acuerdo con el salario pues eso nos cambiaría mucho nuestra calidad de vida porque para poder pagar nuestros gastos tenemos que trabajar muchas horas en la semana para hacer dinero apenas para vivir

Comment added March 21, 2023 2:55pm

- Shannon Walsh

Minimum wage is an absolutely a necessity for workers. It's abhorrent that drivers are not now guaranteed basic income and it's creating a second class of citizens. This should not be allowed to happen.

Comment added March 21, 2023 8:18pm

- Benz

Necesitamos un salario dignó. No se puede vivir de solo propinas.
Gracias

Comment added March 21, 2023 9:26pm

- Abdiel

queremos un pago digno,no solo propinas. Las aplicaciones no ofrecen un pago justo y son muy abusivas en su trato a los repartidores.

Comment added March 21, 2023 9:36pm

- EMMANUEL AMARO PEÑA

Es necesario asignar un salario digno a repartidores, vivir de propinas no es justo mientras las aplicaciones se quedan la mayor parte de las ganancias sin invertir en seguridad, salarios y equipo de reparto.

Comment added March 21, 2023 9:49pm

- Aida Hm

To whom it may concern:

It is important to insist and let you know that delivery workers are not able to live only from the tips they receive from customers, they are hard workers like any other professional who has a higher payment. They deserve better payments, to feel protected and to be treated like what they are: hard workers.

Please accept the request, so they can have a better quality life.

Comment added March 21, 2023 11:45pm

- Juan cruz

Me parece algo justo ya que en la calle se sufre frio y lluvias sin promocion a algo extra

Comment added March 22, 2023 1:32pm

- Anonimo

Sería genial el pago ya que recorremos muchas millas y hay días que no ganamos nada pago mínimo

Pago mínimo pago mínimo

Comment added March 22, 2023 3:09pm

- Byron Gonzalez

Hola es una buena iniciativa y para nosotros como deliveristas es justo obtener esa decisión de la ciudad de New York ya que por medio de nosotros hacemos posible llevarles sus alimentos a la comodidad de los clientes en sus hogares sin importar las inclemencias del clima ya sea calor lluvia o nieve para seria muy justo ser aprobado esta medida ya que nos es necesario

Comment added March 22, 2023 3:11pm

- Luis Basurto

Ps ami me parece muy buena ideas que nos paguen 19.96 la hora

Comment added March 22, 2023 3:49pm

- Carlos

Comentario para apoyar el Pago Minimo y postear en la pagina del DCWP Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 22, 2023 4:49pm

- Anonimo

Comentario para apoyar el Pago Minimo y postear en la pagina del DCWP Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 22, 2023 4:51pm

- Anonimo

Es lo Bueno Para nosotros ahableses nos accidentamos y la app no nose da in un Pago necesitamos un Pago minimum
Pago minimo

Comment added March 22, 2023 5:42pm

- Larhonda Unaipon

Hello cityofnewyork.us owner, Good work!

Comment added March 23, 2023 1:57am

- Anonimo

Las aplicaciones nos deberían pagar por el tiempo de cuando uno acepta el pedido asta que lo entrega porque ay negocios que lo demoran seria bueno que nos pagaran por tiempo

Comment added March 23, 2023 1:14pm

- Ánimo

M párese miuy bien el salario sería genial tenerlo nos ayudaría mucho anustras familias

Comment added March 23, 2023 1:28pm

- Ánimo

Comentario para apoyar el Pago Minimo y postear en la pagina del DCWP Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 24, 2023 3:16pm

- Alejandro

Comentario para apoyar el Pago Minimo y postear en la pagina del DCWP Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 24, 2023 3:21pm

- Anónimo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 26, 2023 6:48pm

- Jaime

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 26, 2023 10:56pm

- Miguel

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York

propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 26, 2023 10:57pm

- Pedro

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y

Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 26, 2023 10:58pm

- Pepe

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 7:55am

- Luis M

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos

por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 7:56am

- Javier Lopez

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque

nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 7:59am

- Ana

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 8:00am

- Arturo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 8:01am

- Jorge

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 8:06am

- Laura

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 8:08am

- Lina

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 8:09am

- Miguel Guzmán

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 8:11am

- Noemi

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 8:12am

- Adolfo

jaguiar260@live.com Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 8:14am

- Salomon

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 8:17am

- Yesenia C

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York

propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 8:19am

- Anónimo

Nos merecemos un pago mínimo. Ya que las aplicaciones no pagan na más están aprovechando de las propinas. Las propinas saben muy bien que es boluntad. Y las aplicaciones le hacen como pago de viaje.. estoy a fovar del pago minimo

Comment added March 27, 2023 10:21am

- Victor

Mi opinión es que nos hagan un pago digno de nuestro trabajo porqué la mayoría de los clientes no nos dan propina

Comment added March 27, 2023 10:25am

- Quic

Necesitamos un pago digno

Comment added March 27, 2023 10:28am

- Anonimo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 12:06pm

- Anomimo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago

minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 12:57pm

- Eulogio

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 1:35pm

- Cristian

Llevo algunos años trabajando con algunas aplicaciones y cada vez el pago es menos, distancias largas ya no podemos vivir e propinas estos últimos años a sido lo peor. Ver a muchos compañeros muertos por robarle su instrumento de trabajo, queríamos confiar en la ciudad q nos haga respetar pero con tanta prorroga parece que se están poniendo de acuerdo o pasando cheques bajo la mesa para. Nosotros no tengamos una oportunidad de tener un sueldo digno como cualquiera..necesitamos un sueldo justo competitivo y legal ahora!!

Comment added March 27, 2023 2:05pm

- Jorge

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 27, 2023 3:53pm

- Miguel

Cada vez que vengo a ver el progreso que han hecho mis compañeros de trabajo, estoy descontento con el estado del trato que experimentamos a diario en nuestros trabajos. Estoy de acuerdo con la gente que trabaja conmigo porque las propinas que nos dan los clientes no son suficientes para sobrevivir. No hay suficiente trabajo disponible cuando hace buen tiempo afuera y mis ganancias realmente sufren. Quiero un salario digno que me ayude a mantener a mi familia. Cuando nuestros compañeros de trabajo están siendo asaltados y robados en las calles a nadie le importa, las aplicaciones solo se enfocan en ganar dinero y pagarnos cada vez menos. Muchos días estoy trabajando por menos del salario mínimo en la ciudad en todo tipo de clima. Vengo aquí a pedir ayuda a la ciudad y veo tanta gente escribiendo exactamente el mismo comentario una y otra vez que me hace preguntarme, ¿es ese un compañero de trabajo? ¿O es alguien más que tiene la intención de bloquear nuestra libertad y esfuerzo? Es muy difícil para nosotros. Por favor, pedimos un pago por hora para apoyar a nuestras familias. No puedo aceptar un pago de cincuenta centavos por minuto, no es suficiente y es irrespetuoso con mi profesión y mis compañeros de trabajo, necesitamos un pago digno por nuestro arduo trabajo. Cuando la gente dice que tenemos libertad financiera para trabajar cuando queramos no es cierto, está muy lejos de la verdad. Estoy poniendo mi esperanza y fe en la ciudad para que ellos salven nuestra profesión, ya que merecemos ayuda para que podamos tener éxito. No dejaré de alentar a mis compañeros de trabajo a seguir luchando contra estas aplicaciones para asegurarme de que nunca ganen. Escúchanos, somos los que mantenemos la ciudad en movimiento y merecemos poder ganarnos la vida haciendo un trabajo duro en una ciudad muy implacable donde nadie se preocupa por ti, solo por su orden de comida.

Comment added March 27, 2023 8:30pm

- Elmer Diaz

I have a lot to say and the first thing is that no one asked me how much we really need. Did the mathematics give this amount? It is true that we have a lot of expenses But such a high figure only leads customers to stop ordering food Or not so often anymore We need more IS IT TRUE but sacrificing the worker in these aspects?? It is poorly thought out, the company has to reduce its profit margin If the orders already have too much fee for the orders A luch that costs 15 dl with fee ends up at 25 without tip With the new regulations we are expecting 30 or more a luch?? What would happen to those of us who depend on tips And those of us who depend on this job Since there are no orders, it is obvious that there would be no work And therein lies the problem with that wjp organization and its director who does and says no one asks, there are 65.000 of us in the city and I'm sure they're not watching for all of us

Comment added March 28, 2023 8:30am

- Oscar

I do not agree with this new method of payment by the hour , please leave my tips alone , lets keep the delivery fee for us and the tip alone . We make money with the tips and the delivery fee for us .

Comment added March 28, 2023 9:26am

- Juan

Todo aumento que hagan será el cliente quien lo pague directa o indirectamente

Eso significará menos propinas

Por lo que es peor menos ordenes.

Estamos de acuerdo que necesitamos un poco más pero sin lugar a dudas necesitamos que las apps solo paguen mas por las millas corridas!.

Aclarando que la organización que propuso esto No pregunto a los 65 mil trabajadores (la organización no nos representa)...

Comment added March 28, 2023 9:55am

- Jorge

Estoy de acuerdo con el pago mínimo por que la verdad la aplicación está abusando y no esta pagando la hora solo están pagando la propina y abusan de las millas espero que si paguen la hora

Comment added March 28, 2023 10:17am

- Jorge

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York

propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 11:50am

- Anonimo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que

nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 11:51am

- Cesar

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 11:51am

- Alex

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 12:12pm

- Nelson

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 12:27pm

- Rojas

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 12:28pm

- Misael

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago

minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 12:28pm

- Luis

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 12:28pm

- Rolando

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que

trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 12:29pm

- Eliseo Rodríguez Méndez

Yo estaría de acuerdo por el pago por hora

Comment added March 28, 2023 1:04pm

- Alfonso

Estoy de acuerdo con un pago justo para que no solo me beneficie a mi sino también a mis compañeros que trabajamos duro en las calles todos los días.

Comment added March 28, 2023 1:05pm

- Alfonso Santiz

Estoy de acuerdo me párese bien que aya pago justo para mejorar la calidad de vida mía y de mi familia

Comment added March 28, 2023 1:06pm

- Anonymous

Please stop copy and pasting the same comments over and over again on this page, you're not improving our situation with spamming a city website with that. There's too many automated bots spamming the comments section of this proposed law. To the DCWP: Be very weary of the validity and authenticity of the majority of these comments claiming they want $0.50 per minute. It's nothing but spam and a lie. We the workers want hourly pay. HOURLY PAY! HOURLY PAY! HOURLY PAY! HOURLY PAY! HOURLY! WE WILL HAVE IT NO OTHER WAY!

Comment added March 28, 2023 1:07pm

- Gilberto

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 1:07pm

- Alberto

El pago es lo que necesitamos es hoy día que tenemos que estar todos unidos señor alcaldel necesitamos el pago mínimo pero ya

Comment added March 28, 2023 1:10pm

- Fredy

Estamos de acuerdo con el pago mínimo señor alcalde

Comment added March 28, 2023 3:28pm

- Ovidio

Estoy de acuerdo con esta iniciativa que ayudará a los trabajadores como yo a tener más ingresos y mejorar nuestra calidad de vida

Comment added March 28, 2023 4:02pm

- Davies

El salario mínimo para deli veristas es una clara prueba que las organizaciones si sirven para apoyar a los trabajadores

Comment added March 28, 2023 4:04pm

- Jesler

Las corporaciones se han hecho millonarias con el trabajo de nosotros ya creo que es tiempo de que nos toque una parte del salario que como trabajador regular nos merecemos

Comment added March 28, 2023 4:06pm

- Olivia B.

I use these delivery services every now and again to get something nice to eat and I never knew how bad these workers had it. It makes me feel so bad. I see them here whenever I leave my house in Brooklyn whizzing by on Nostrand Avenue with their mopeds and now that it has been brought to my attention, I completely understand why they protest so much when I watch the news on TV. After doing research online, I can't believe my eyes reading that they get paid $3 for a delivery if an ungrateful customer doesn't want to tip them. I'm appalled. They're not being valued by the very people who employ them is what I see. Even though I always tip, I didn't know that they don't get paid if they don't perform a delivery. I thought they were paid minimum wage in addition to tips.

These workers have always been nice and kind to me whenever I order takeout from some of the Caribbean restaurants in my neighborhood, so it's a huge shocker to me that they are treated like dirt. I have to support them because they help me when I need them. They deserve so much better and this breaks my heart. I'm going to tell my family members about this too because not enough people know what those workers are going through. I'm really happy that I did some searching after watching all these news stories on TV and reddit feeds pop up on my phone after these workers were in protest. Their employers treat them like absolute garbage and honestly gives me a very bad opinion of the people who they work for. I am fully in support of them receiving a generous pay rate that they can depend on. If any of the workers are here, I want to say thank you so much. I appreciate you. Tell your employers to go jump off a bridge.

Comment added March 28, 2023 4:18pm

- Samuel

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que

nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 4:45pm

- Mario

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 4:48pm

- Gil

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 4:49pm

- Gero

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 4:49pm

- Gere

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 28, 2023 4:50pm

- Jeremiah Knight

New York City is dangerous and stressful to work in. I am with the city on this one, pay them at least $18 an hour and give them PTO. Anything less is unacceptable.

Comment added March 28, 2023 5:03pm

- Vitin

Soy un deliverista que trabaja para las empresas Doordash y Grub hub. Como hombre que mantiene a mi hogar, es extremadamente importante que se apruebe esta ley para que nos paguen por hora, porque mis pagos están por todas partes de esta semana a la siguiente. Un pago por hora me ayudará con mis responsabilidades, por lo que solo es aceptable un pago por hora. Gracias.

Comment added March 28, 2023 5:12pm

- Anonymous

I work for the 3 major companies doing deliveries and I'm stepping in to tell the DCWP that they should highly consider a more secure medium to hear comments that isn't subject to blatant misrepresentation as is done here. For example, any one of the delivery companies DoorDash, GrubHub, UberEats, and Relay is responsible for falsifying comments to get their way, but I am not having anymore of this. At 4:49 PM today (March 28th) someone posted a bogus comment using the name "Gero," then, 1 minute later at 4:50 PM they posted the EXACT same comment using another fake name "Gere," (changing the name by 1 letter). The DCWP has to see that the companies are screwing around and messing with our well deserved pay raise. Anyone falsifying claims of being a delivery courier on here to create an opposing, fictitious argument should be banned from participating at this hearing. The companies always use the same exact comment, it's so obvious at this point! They do nothing but copy and paste it over, and over, and over again! Doesn't the DCWP understand that they included a second alternative because the companies got what they wanted by impersonating workers on the comment section and the DCWP actually believed those were real people?! It's unbelievable what these companies are capable of. They have nothing better else to do than strip away the security that workers have! Please take away the alternative option! We don't want penny change! Geez, the city is so gullible that it's absolutely pathetic at this point. You guys aren't on our side and it's disgusting, it's a shame!

Comment added March 28, 2023 5:29pm

- Marcelina lopez

Somos 70 mil trabajadores que tenemos que pasar muchas necesidades en la calle con el clima los ladrones ya es justo tener un salario que nos pueda ayudar un poco más en momentos difíciles realizando este trabajo.

Comment added March 28, 2023 5:51pm

- Valeri

Soy una deliverista de la ciudad de Nueva York me gustaría un pago por hora ya que siempre tenemos que aceptar ordenes que son muy bajas y no es suficiente el dinero que hacemos diariamente espero que con el salario mínimo mejoremos las condiciones más que nada de nosotras las mujeres trabajadoras porque siento que físicamente es un trabajo más desafiante.

Comment added March 28, 2023 5:55pm

- Max suarez

this again pay by the hour does not work for me I prefer the doordash payment from before

Comment added March 28, 2023 7:34pm

- Gian franco

I don't agree with the hourly payment I agree with a minimum base payment of 5 dollars per order plus Tip I did much better work than hourly

Comment added March 28, 2023 7:36pm

- Anonymous

Like I said before, stop spamming the comments section with this "I don't agree with this payment" automated mumbo-jumbo nonsense response. Get out of here with that. We are workers and want stable, hourly pay. Go big, or go home. You guys hired by the companies to spam that are ridiculous.

Comment added March 28, 2023 9:49pm

- Anonimo

Digamos que van a dar un salario y dicen que los tips van a ser menores cuando se refieren a menores estamos hablando de 2 oh 3 dolares para que te manden hasta 9 oh 8 millas 6 oh 7 millas y tienes que aceptar si no aceptas te descansan bueno hay muchos puntos que aclarar en esto las apps van a acceder pero a sus conbeniencias tambien

dios mio mete tu mano que sea para bien yo digo que pagaran un minimo por hora y los tips que lo dejen como estan

Comment added March 29, 2023 1:00am

- Agustin

Ya es hora de que nos paguen por hora porque las aplicaciones eatan abusando de nosotros .

Comment added March 29, 2023 9:56am

- Andrew

I firmly believe that these workers deserve protections. I can't imagine what it's like to work with no protections or benefits here, it's nearly impossible. Paying these workers at least $15 for every hour worked will ensure that their earnings are more secure. People treat these guys horribly. It's time that people listen to them. I always tip the people who deliver my food well, but it's not our fault they're not getting paid enough, it's really who they work for, so that's why I blame DoorDash and the others for this problem. The problem will be solved once they receive a guaranteed $15 per hour.

Comment added March 29, 2023 11:03am

- Vicente

La realidad es que este trabajo no paga lo suficiente. ¿Cuánto tiempo debemos trabajar horas inhumanas para apenas pagar nuestras cuentas y no tener nada para nada más? Esa no es la forma de vivir. Necesito que me paguen un salario digno, por la hora que sea confiable y de la que pueda depender. No puedo hacer más ordenes por valor de $3.50, eso ya no sucederá. Ayaudanos por favor.

Comment added March 29, 2023 11:18am

- Danny

Lo siento, pero el sistema de ingresos alternativos empoderará aún más a las empresas y limitará mi salario diario. Eso simplemente no puede suceder. Que te paguen cincuenta centavos por minuto en las entregas nunca funcionará porque hay días en los que solo recibes una entrega por hora, así que esa idea tiene que desaparecer. Sufrimos robos y lo que ganamos apenas alcanza para pagar el alquiler, y mucho menos todo lo demás. Ignore estos bots falsos que afirman que quieren vivir de propinas minúsculas que no están garantizadas. Mis trabajadores y yo estamos luchando por un salario por hora fuerte. Siento que dieciocho dólares garantizados por hora, cada hora será excelente.

Comment added March 29, 2023 11:26am

- Soto

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago mínimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago mínimo será de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. También apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago mínimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operación y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho básico de un pago mínimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Protección al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago mínimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y también a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad económica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 29, 2023 11:26am

- Anonymous

I'm asking the DCWP to please flag the following comment for removal as it is spam and continues to harm the progress that us workers want to obtain: "Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone..." It's nothing but a fake copy-and-paste template that people hired by the delivery companies are spamming this comment section with. There's no screening process to distinguish between actual and false comments here. This is a truly unreliable way to achieve successful change. The companies are effectively destroying the work force. I'm going to say this for the last time as a delivery courier her in NYC. We NEED hourly pay. DISCONTINUE the idea of paying $0.50 per minute when engaged on deliveries, it is INSUFFICIENT.

Comment added March 29, 2023 11:38am

- Feenando

Nos gusta la forma de pago si queremos elmpago mínimo nos urge señor alcalde

Comment added March 29, 2023 12:04pm

- Arbelio

El trabajo lo hago con gusto siempre tractor de complacer a los clientes gracias a la compania por dar la oportunidad de trbajar y si merecemos El salario

Comment added March 29, 2023 2:56pm

- Alex

Nos gustaría tener un salario justo señor alcalde pago mínimo

Comment added March 29, 2023 2:56pm

- Edin Barrera

Necesitamos el pago minimum Cuanto Antes señor alcande pago minimum

Comment added March 29, 2023 3:07pm

- Eric Figueroa

I'm a consumer who regularly uses apps like Grubhub to get food delivered to my home. I appreciate the hard and risky work that delivery workers do for us.

I support the minimum pay rule proposed by New York City that will provide better pay for this essential workforce.

Comment added March 29, 2023 7:26pm

- Shaquille Figueroa

We need a living wage 24 dollars is what we need we work to hard the job isn't easy at all always gotta be safe

Comment added March 29, 2023 7:56pm

- Rachael Stein

The city should support this proposal because delivery workers are key to keeping many businesses in this city running, and they deserve a living wage.

Comment added March 29, 2023 9:15pm

- Berenice

Delivery workers deserve better

Comment added March 29, 2023 9:27pm

- Terrence Jakob Gatton

Delivery workers are a pillar of this city and they deserve better than the treatment they get from this city, tech companies, and even some customers. Everyone wants their food on time but no one cares if deliveristas are paid laughable wages, on an app that allows tipping to be "optional", in a city whose cycling and ebike infrastructure routinely subjects non-drivers to unbelievably dangerous conditions and horrible, inconsiderate drivers every day

Setting a just minimum wage for this workforce is a bare minimum, it is embarrassing to this city that this is even a debate or mildly controversial

Comment added March 29, 2023 9:34pm

- Jean Bae

Without delivery workers, the city will collapse tomorrow. If they can't be treated properly as employees protected by labor law, we should at least give them fair wages.

Comment added March 29, 2023 9:57pm

- Holly Gunder

It wasn't long ago that we were calling our delivery workers front-line heroes and essential workers. Now, when it's our administration's turn to pay our workers reasonable wages, they forget their high praise. Eric Adams promised our workers a $24 minimum wage. Though that's still barely a live-able wage in this city, negotiating it down to $19 is abominable. Our delivery workers deserve respect and fair payment for their labor. Stop exploiting their labor – pay our delivery workers what they deserve.

Comment added March 29, 2023 10:11pm

- Angela Pham

Our delivery workers are the backbone of nyc. They deserve a living wage.

Comment added March 29, 2023 10:56pm

- Evan

Minimum wage is necessary for delivery workers. The Adams administration has promised a $24 minimum wage and should stick with the proposed minimum wage for delivery workers who are essential to the NYC economy

Comment added March 29, 2023 11:11pm

- Kevin Li

Delivery workers should be compensated adequately for their work. A $24 minimum wage is the least that delivery workers should expect to be paid. The Adams administration should go forward with the initial proposed amount of $24 minimum wage.

Comment added March 29, 2023 11:13pm

- Czarina Ramos

A living wage at $24 would ensure that deliveristas can do their jobs in a safe manner with the assurance that they will earn their fair pay no matter what. Recent years through the pandemic have highlighted how essential deliveristas are, and their pay should reflect that.

Comment added March 29, 2023 11:53pm

- Kelli

I fully support there being a minimum wage to all delivery workers. Not only a minimum wage but a living wage.

Comment added March 30, 2023 12:15am

- Luka Jacobowitz

Minimum wage is highly necessary and the deliveristas put their life on the line so that people can get their things more conveniently, it's the least we can do.

Comment added March 30, 2023 12:18am

- Kitana Andrews

The deliveristas consist largely of marginalized peoples who are living at or under the poverty line. They deserve to have a living wage as they are part of what keeps this city fed through any weather. Don't try to deny them what they are owed, and that is to be able to live a decent life

Comment added March 30, 2023 12:58am

- Jill

Delivery workers deserve at least a minimum wage of $24 which is still too low. They should be compensated even more considering they are putting their lives on the line everyday facing terrible weather/road conditions.

Comment added March 30, 2023 1:00am

- Christina LeMoine

The wage promised are hard working deliveristas is $24/hour. Stand by your word. Delivery workers do what no one else wants to do. They have many expenses and often get treated poorly. Let us know you see all of us! You see deliveristas and will give them the $24 promised now, this is the absolute minimum they can take for the dangerous and taxing work they do. Thank you for honoring your promise to working class, brown and immigrant New Yorkers who keep it city running at all times.

Sincerely,

Christina LeMoine

Comment added March 30, 2023 8:29am

- Sean Defaz

The second option is the way to go

Comment added March 30, 2023 8:37am

- Chris

Anything less then the $24/hour, that deliveristas fought for and promised by Mayor Eric Adams is unacceptable!

This is a dangerous job and the burden of cost for equipment and health care is all shouldered by the underpaid immigrant workers.

We need our deliveristas and they need acceptable pay. Tipping fatigue is up. The big companies who bypass workers rights for profit should be shouldering the cost of, at the very least, the $24/hour agreed upon.

Comment added March 30, 2023 8:43am

- Cat

Support your local food delivery workers!!

Comment added March 30, 2023 9:06am

- Alyssa Mae Berman

A $24 minimum living wage is required for delivery workers to provide an essential service in NYC. NOT ONE PENNY LESS! These workers care for New Yorkers from all walks of life and they must be respected and paid a fair living wage!

Comment added March 30, 2023 9:09am

- Dane Torcivia

Please give the hardworking deliveristas the minimum wage they deserve!! They've been serving all communities for years and do a service that many rely on, especially during the height of covid! They deserve a living wage!!!

Comment added March 30, 2023 9:19am

- Jacqueline

Food delivery workers feed millions of people in New York City but are not being compensated at a wage that allows people to feed their own families. These essential workers deserve at minimum a living wage that compensates them for their work and their vitality to the city, economy, and the companies that benefit from their labor.

Comment added March 30, 2023 9:35am

- justin mugits

Delivery workers deserve a fair wage. This plan should go through without and deductions. Support workers not greedy tech companies

Comment added March 30, 2023 10:10am

- Emily Hamilton

Minimum wage is essential for all!

Comment added March 30, 2023 10:10am

- Anonimo

Es injusto que penalicen delivery's por no aceptar órdenes. En cambio recibimos diariamente órdenes de 3 4 o 6 millas y los precios en muchas o la mayoría de las ocasiones empieza en 2-6 pedidos que toman muchas veces hasta una hora. Expuestos al tráfico y constantemente ser despreciados por muchos en la ciudad. Nuestro único objetivo es movilizarnos para generar ingresos para llevar comida a nuestros hogares

Comment added March 30, 2023 10:13am

- Lulu Ro

We need the exploitation of our working class employees to end, especially when the same companies that profit off of there labor are raking in millions- more than ever before. The city would not be the same with delivery workers. Give them and their families an equitable future. Please. There are nyc children and families that rely on fair wages in order to be clothed, sheltered and fed.

Comment added March 30, 2023 10:20am

- Jorell Rivera

Food Delivery workers provide an essential service to countless New Yorkers, and they deserve the basic dignity that a livable minimum wage would afford them. Stop wasting time and pass a law guaranteeing them a minimum wage! They should at least get $24/hour!

Comment added March 30, 2023 10:26am

- Az

$19 is not a living wage. Food delivery is hard work and deserves fair and secure salary. $24 per hour is a bare minimum to compensate for idle time waiting for deliveries.

Comment added March 30, 2023 10:42am

- Lana Pochiro

Delivery workers keep this city running! They deserve a living wage—the $24/hr that they were promised is the bare minimum and these workers cannot wait any longer to receive what they deserve. Rents and the cost of basic daily necessities like groceries are rising rapidly. We cannot leave our delivery workers behind. New York City would not be New York City without them. Treat them with dignity and respect. Pay them a living wage!

Comment added March 30, 2023 10:58am

- Nora Killoran

This proposed minimum wage for delivery workers is crucial for a fair wage and reasonable standard of living.

Comment added March 30, 2023 11:29am

- Christina

I remember ordering food back at the height of the pandemic that me and everyone was calling these men and women heroes and essential workers. They put their lives at risk doing work that statistically speaking is some of the most dangerous work that you could engage in here in New York City. To know that they make less than people who work minimum wage jobs absolutely shatters me. It's time that they receive $24 per hour for their hard work and effort. I know that city will try to seize this opportunity that they so dearly deserve, but I believe they will prevail! A $24/hr wage is an appropriate wage for their experiences on the job. From the Lower East Side, I support you essential workers!

Comment added March 30, 2023 11:58am

- Iker

We cannot maintain inhumane remuneration for some of the most essential workers in the city. The pandemic shows how society runs literally on them, and their conditions should reflect this importance. All support for higher minimum pay for food delivery workers! Anything else will be a cruel measure designed only for the profits of the few instead of the dignity and prosperity of the many.

Comment added March 30, 2023 11:59am

- Raul

Sí, gracias, esto es lo que queremos, un salario por hora digno. Como deleverista haciendo ordenes, estoy de acuerdo con mis hermanos en esto, $24 por hora garantizados es excelente y me ayudará a cumplir con mis responsabilidades en el hogar. Me siento despreciado por todo el trabajo que hago. Estoy feliz de que la gente finalmente se dé cuenta de que no hacemos lo suficiente.

Comment added March 30, 2023 12:07pm

- Cheryl

Pay people a living wage!

Comment added March 30, 2023 12:20pm

- Gilberto

Me enteré de esta ley a principios de este año en enero y me preguntaba qué pasó... Estaba esperando que me pagaran más. Ahora quieren recortar nuestro salario y dar aún menos... Frustrante. Apenas gano dinero ahora que estoy en las calles todos los días, la mayoría de las veces solo gano $ 40 – $ 60 trabajando más de 8 horas, necesito un pago por hora garantizado, al menos $ 20 por hora, es simplemente desgarrador y me enoja mucho. .A veces solo quiero rendirme pero no lo hago porque mi familia necesita ayuda. No puedo esperar mucho más por esta ayuda, es demasiado tiempo... por favor, necesito esta ley para asegurarme un salario por hora, los muchachos aquí ya no podemos vivir de sobras y propinas, no es trabajando más

Comment added March 30, 2023 12:26pm

- Jensen

When I found out about this after passing by a rally one of their unions had it felt so wrong knowing delivery people are so exploited and severely underpaid. I never knew they only worked on tips. That's just not sustainable. If they don't get paid by the hour they are basically struggling much more than everyone else. These people that they work for don't feel bad? That's disgusting how they get away with throwing pocket change at their faces. As a loyal customer who appreciates my delivery workers, they 1000% deserve higher pay no doubt at all. What is with you people, pay them an hourly wage, ya'll are acting like that's acting for a lot when people working at Mcdonald's make more than them and they don't got to deal with the extreme cold and heat. Incredibly sad, things just got to change!!

Comment added March 30, 2023 12:36pm

- Tian Xiao

Good afternoon to the labor board committee,

I am writing to you on behalf of all my coworkers here in New York of Asian ethnicity representing China and Taiwan. We have numerous immigrants that have come from several provinces in China to attempt to find a improved life with nice opportunities to enjoy for us. There, my coworkers support their wives with children and are outside working in Manhattan, Queens, Brooklyn, anywhere in the land. Having some conversations with them has been both a enlightening and painful experience to me. Often, I hear "my pay is too low," and "this is not stable" a lot in our talks. News coverage will show our fellow men being attacked when engaged in their work, then are turned a blind eye by the employer. This is fundamentally going to bring problems. The skill needed for this work is higher than $7 per hour in salary. I cannot describe the difficulty and stresses that we endure not knowing how much earnings everyday will bring. It brings me and my coworkers instability to plan for our finances. We are asking the labor board to please look into our efforts and see past the greedy nature of our employers, we are surely harmed by their ways. A salary that will provide protections, and that stabilizes hourly amounts in crucial to our success. Kindly, and sincerely, we appreciate our turn to speak.

Tian Xiao

Comment added March 30, 2023 12:51pm

- Jason Colon

These are the people risking limb and life to bring you things like food and sd cards. Why not support those doing the labor work you dont want to?

Comment added March 30, 2023 2:02pm

- Henriquez

No quiero ver más ordenes de $3 y $4 que ir millas en distancia. A veces tarda una hora entera en terminar y solo ganas $3, es increíble el trato. Este problema se solucionará con una paga digna, dieciocho dólares la hora es con lo que estoy de acuerdo. Cobrar por minuto como los taxis es demasiado inestable, simplemente no es posible ni aceptable. A veces solo recibo 2 pedidos por valor de $3 en una hora completa y estoy ganando $6 por hora, es la verdad. Además, se acerca la primavera y el buen tiempo traerá más problemas a otros trabajadores con salarios horribles.

Comment added March 30, 2023 2:04pm

- Jacob Cañas

Delivery workers face incredibly difficult and dangerous conditions and must be compensated fairly. A $24/hr minimum wage should be the floor.

Comment added March 30, 2023 2:13pm

- Nini

Please respect living wagessss !

Comment added March 30, 2023 2:41pm

- Chris Thormann

I fully support this as an active worker.

Comment added March 30, 2023 3:02pm

- Jamie Bryan

Let's invest in these indispensable contributors to the fabric of life and commerce in our city — individuals who labor under difficult and sometimes dangerous conditions.

Comment added March 30, 2023 3:05pm

- Melanie Kruvelis

Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed throughout the pandemic, facing illness and death on a daily basis to do so. Workers need a living wage, and that's not what Adams' proposed increase, as rents and basic costs skyrocket. Workers need a living wage!

Comment added March 30, 2023 3:17pm

- Emma Antenen

Minimum wage is necessary for workers to have fair rights and fight back against discrimination.

Adams administration promised a $24 minimum wage but they change it to a $19 wage. That's not a living wage! These workers are marginalized people and often exploited due to that. They deserve protection, dignity, and a living wage. Imagine this city without delivery workers!!!!

Comment added March 30, 2023 3:20pm

- ruby brown

Minimum wage is necessary for workers to have fair rights and fight back against discrimination.

Adams administration promised a $24 minimum wage but they change it to a $19 wage. That's not a living wage! These workers are marginalized people and often exploited due to that. They deserve protection, dignity, and a living wage. Imagine this city without delivery workers!

Comment added March 30, 2023 3:20pm

- Sebastian

I came here just to say that I read the two options that the app companies have to choose from. It's obvious that they're going to choose the second option because that would enable them to pay the workforce drastically less as they're going to continue to abuse and exploit them like they already do. Don't let them do that. Do everything to fight for a desirable, hourly wage! Nobody can live in NYC for a measly 50 cents a minute while engaged in deliveries, that's preposterous and downright disrespectful to them because we all know it's not possible to survive here with such a meager income! I'm a restaurant business owner in SoHo and they help me generate income and as a result, I see them as partners that deserve competitive pay. They're free to use my restrooms and I give them discounts on some of my menu options because they help me out. Now it's time for the city to help them out and pay them a minimum hourly wage. I'm in full support of higher and reliable delivery worker income.

Comment added March 30, 2023 3:22pm

- Nicole B

Delivery workers are some of the hardest working folks in the city, they absolutely deserve this wage increase.

Comment added March 30, 2023 3:36pm

- Jessica Rosa

I'm a consumer who regularly uses apps to get restaurant food delivered to my home, and I appreciate the hard and often risky job that delivery workers do for us. I support the minimum pay rule proposed by the City of New York that will provide delivery workers with the ability to earn the minimum wage they deserve.

Comment added March 30, 2023 3:38pm

- Angelo Peña

Ordering takeout and taking Uber taxis from point A to B have become progressively more expensive but the workers who provide these services are not being paid any higher, despite all the taxes and fees that the company is charging. I am very annoyed knowing that the workers are paid way lower than what is justifiable due to Uber's predatory nature. Today I had received an email from Uber that was titled "Albany wants to nickel and dime you with new taxes on rideshare and delivery." Instead of Uber taking responsibility for their problems, they conveniently place the blame on Albany, which has nothing to do with how poorly they pay their workforce. They're pathetically claiming that the New York State Legislature is imposing another 50 cent per-trip fee when it comes to rideshare operations and a 25 cent delivery fee for food/convenience orders. The truth is that Uber THEMSELVES are choosing to impose these fees. The NYS Legislature has nothing to do with that. It is NOT the Legislature's responsibility to bail them out. It's UBER'S problem. You're telling me that because you continually fail to properly compensate your taxi drivers and delivery messengers that now I AM stuck paying for UBER'S problem? NO. The men and women who spend 12-16 hours a day working doing taxi trips and delivery routes DESERVE the pay raise, it IS NOT the Legislature's responsibility to pick up your slack. I will be sharing this message publicly on many problems to expose Uber and their demoralizing, gaslighting stance that I'm fed up with. Instead of doing the right thing, these companies try to find any way to escape responsibility and it's sickening at this point. Talk about a lack of morality, you guys make it the workforce's and customer's problem by regularly uppercutting their effort and charging the customers more and more to the point where it's downright prohibitive to use. You're basically saying that because delivery messengers want better pay that it's the customer's problem to foot the bill and you guys do nothing but spend millions on all of this misleading propaganda to try to convince people that it's the NYS Legislature's fault? ARE YOU KIDDING ME? ABSOLUTELY NOT, the hard working people who generate so much revenue for Uber rightfully DESERVE this pay rise. Like Uber said in their OWN email to us customers: No, ENOUGH IS ENOUGH to you Uber!!! The workforce in NYC will succeed, we stand united!!!

Comment added March 30, 2023 4:27pm

- Julius Ron

I am a regular consumer of the app and I really appreciate how these workers do and deserve something for their work, but it seems that the payment would come directly from clients like me so it is good for them and we as clients would have to adjust a bit

Comment added March 30, 2023 4:29pm

- Chris

Food delivery workers are a vital part of NYC; they feed the city and do difficult, dangerous work. They deserve a fair living wage, one that compensates them for their time and their essential work, and that allows them to pay their operating expenses, purchase health insurance, etc. Anything less than a $24/hr floor is absurd, but really they should earn more. I also believe that the third party services that employ them should provide them with health insurance on top of a fair living wage, because of the dangerous nature of the work.

Comment added March 30, 2023 4:58pm

- Alan Pissarenko

As the city's cost of living is sky high, I think it's about time companies pay delivery workers a fair wage that would allow them to live comfortably, rather than struggling to make money while working for a multi billion dollar industry

Comment added March 30, 2023 5:07pm

- Sophie

We need to do something this can no longer be stalled. Delivery workers risk their lives because our streets are so unsafe. We must at least make the minimum wage $17.96 per hour with adjustments for standby time. These big companies saying otherwise are cruel and should not be prioritized. Let's prioritize people. Do what's right and act fast. You have people's well being waiting on you.

Comment added March 30, 2023 5:23pm

- Sophie k

We need to do something this can no longer be stalled. Delivery workers risk their lives because our streets are so unsafe. We must at least make the minimum wage $17.96 per hour with adjustments for standby time. These big companies saying otherwise are cruel and should not be prioritized. Let's prioritize people. Do what's right and act fast. You have people's well being waiting on you

Comment added March 30, 2023 5:23pm

- Henry Joseph

It's time to do the right thing and give our hard working delivery workers a living wage like you promised.

Comment added March 30, 2023 6:14pm

- Meli

Please help get these ESSENTIAL workers a respectable pay rate. They deserve it. This city can't function without them

Comment added March 30, 2023 8:36pm

- Melissa Laudенbach

Adam's administration promised to set a $24 minimum wage for delivery drivers but has backpedaled to $19. That is not a living wage. Many people earning the minimum wage belong to marginalized groups that are easily exploited. Delivery drivers protection, dignity and a living wage.

Comment added March 30, 2023 9:42pm

- Bikash Adhikari

Hi My name is Bikash. And I have been working for just 1 and half month. The payment to the workers has already been reduced by around 4 dollars less, it is absolutely sad and regrettable how the city disappoints. Our work is already risky, as a survivor of accidents and multiple assaults, In addition, there is an organization that pronounces itself protectors of the deliverists of the city of New York, big affirmations for not having a single program to help the needs of the city workers, in short I agree with the current proposal of minimum payment and categorical rejection of the org that lies to the face of the workers.

Even I feel 2nd option is more beneficial to my needs, I like the flexibility and so by choosing option 2nd I'll be able to keep it.

Comment added March 30, 2023 10:23pm

- Anonymous

RE: Bikash Adhikari

You were the first person to comment on this public discussion page using another alias. Refrain from posting recycled comments. You work for one of the companies fabricating fictitious arguments and you're impersonating a delivery worker. Nobody should tolerate your fake lies. Just stop.

Comment added March 31, 2023 9:50am

- Anonymous

I support option 1. The platforms (Apps) should pay the workers decent wages and take responsibility for those employees that work for them, including, but not limited to, workers' compensation. It is time that Apps do not misclassify workers and that pay good wages.

Comment added March 31, 2023 12:24pm

- Raul

Minimum wage will affect everyone's ability to work, it will mean a lot of people struggling to get hours and will hurt everyone. Many delivery workers make more than the suggested minimum wage. The only change to be considered should be abolishing the top dasher program which affectively lets doordash manipulate schedules and pay, which is illegal as we are independent contractors. Other than this the flexibility is what makes this work convenient, at times lucrative and fair. Only a select few will get hours to work under minimum wage meaning job loss for many who lack other skills, including ability to speak english.

Comment added March 31, 2023 2:41pm

- Edgar Tavaréz

These companies leverage against the workers, the restaurants and the customers, and pit them against each other. All these companies do is pass a note. They don't prepare or cook any food, they don't pickup or deliver the food and they take money from the workers, and restaurants and even price gouge the items, in comparison to the actual menus from these restaurants and only talk about the money that they don't have, while sitting on billions, which they will continue to generate, even if the workers were to get paid $30/hr. Regulations are key. This is NYC! Every business wants to be here and if they're not forced to play fair here, they'll continue robbing everyone, in every other region. And I've worked for most of these companies since 2014. I'm extremely familiar with their business practices, especially with doordash and UberEATS. Flexibility is not the cost for paying workers an hourly wage, that is a weak talking point that worked in the state of California and ripping those workers out of anything resembling a decent wage.

Comment added March 31, 2023 2:44pm

- Emil Batista Hernandez

This "multi apping" you guys talk about makes no sense, you make it sound like we're getting paid by 2 or more apps at the same time, no... we can't duplicate ourselves in order to work 2 deliveries from 2 different apps, the only reason we do multi app is because we get paid so little and most of the day demand is so slow that even with 2 and 3 apps open you only get a few 2$ or 3$ deliveries, this is why we're forced to cancel deliveries over and over and pray for one of them to have a good tip to finally get to work, this is why we desperately need a minimum livable wage instead of depending of people's gratuities and these app getting the bigger size of the pie while doing absolutely nothing compared to us risking our lives, getting robbed and sometimes losing our lives just to try and make a living, please stop delaying or lowering the initial wage, we don't get any insurance, we don't get any tools, everything to work with we have to pay ourselves and yet we get paid 2.5$ base per delivery and they get to charge 15-30% to the restaurant and about the same % again they charge the costumer, makes me wonder how in heavens they keep “losing money” if they get about 90+% of the pie even from Uber drivers taxis they get 60-80% of what the costumer pays and yet they do nothing other than pay 2$ to costumer service agents from India and 2.5$ to us, im sure they’re hiding something and stealing lots of money, you should seriously consider doing an audit on those thieves.

Comment added March 31, 2023 4:29pm

- Estalin

Yes

Comment added March 31, 2023 5:42pm

- Kaitlyn

I’m urging mayor Adams and the NYC council to make good on their deal to a fair minimum wage for workers and hold the delivery service apps accountable for their exploitation. These delays are so disrespectful to those who keep this city fed!

Comment added March 31, 2023 5:51pm

- Evelyn Saz

Apoyo el pago mínimo que propone el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York. Este pago mínimo será de $29.93 por hora para los repartidores que trabajan para aplicaciones que pagan por una entrega, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde que aceptamos un pedido hasta que hacemos la entrega. Solo recibimos el pago cuando entregamos. Este pago no afecta las propinas de los trabajadores porque se pagan por separado. Este salario mínimo garantizará que los repartidores de alimentos tengan suficiente dinero para cubrir sus necesidades básicas y algunos de sus gastos. Por lo tanto, insto al alcalde Adams a que emita una decisión final y que implemente la nueva ley. ¡Gracias!

Comment added March 31, 2023 6:59pm

- Anonimo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 31, 2023 10:28pm

- Anonimo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Protección al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago mínimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y también a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad económica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added March 31, 2023 10:32pm

- Kevin

I would prefer getting paid for every hour that I work a set rate, that would really help out very much with bills.

Comment added March 31, 2023 11:49pm

- Julio vargas

I would not like the hourly wage because I love my flexibility to work when I want. I rather would like for the apps to raise the minimum base pay. PS we delivery workers represent ourselves there's a group called the "deliveristas unidos" they are crooks and take advantage of us they never have done a delivery in their lives.

Comment added April 1, 2023 7:21am

- Jackson Dunnington

Delivery workers take on dangerous work to make NYC run and can't even afford to live here! $18 minimum wage is the least they deserve

Comment added April 1, 2023 10:41am

- Greg

I disagree, flexibility is a myth when it comes to this job. You cannot go outside at any time of day to make money because of the lack of demand outside of dinner hours. You can log on at any time, but you absolutely do not have the ability to make good money at anytime, so that's been debunked. Now, getting paid an hourly rate will guarantee stability when NYC is getting less lucrative every passing month with this job. Most often times you are bombarded with $3 and $4 orders. That's not going to provide stability and financial security. Bottom line, we need to be paid hourly. Anything else is unacceptable and should not be entertained, period.

Comment added April 1, 2023 11:40am

- Pedro Salina

Gracias por todo el arduo trabajo de mis compañeros y los sindicatos de entrega por representar nuestros esfuerzos. Que me paguen un salario digno en el que pueda confiar es excelente. Dieciocho dólares por hora garantizados es lo que necesitamos mis compañeros y yo.

Comment added April 1, 2023 1:15pm

- John Malave

Hello, my name is John. I've been working with Doordash for almost 4 years now. I love the flexibility Doordash offers. I am a full-time parent, and I hardly have any time to work full-time jobs. Doordash gives me that breathing room but I can dash when ever I want and end it whenever I need to for this reason I'm against the minimum payments. This takes away the whole flexibility that Doordash now offers. The flexibility allows me to work when I want and be home for my kids when they need me and not having to lose a job because of my inconsistencies I love working for Doordash. The flexibility definitely works for me and I can always make money whenever I need it, thank you Doordash for this opportunity you have given many people. I hope it stays like this, so I could continue providing for my kids, and also remain up a figure in their lives without limitations.

Comment added April 3, 2023 8:23am

- Franklin

No, I disagree with that. We want stable, hourly pay. If you're not understanding of that it's because we want more reliable finances. Sorry, but your views are counterproductive in improving the quality of this job. Thank you for understanding.

Comment added April 3, 2023 10:32am

- Melvin

Yo soy deliverista de hace 4 años esto cada año es peor la compañía ya no piensa en los trabajadores ya solo piensan en ellos mimos mientras estamos afuera en clima extremo sin recibir un pago justo apoyo el salario es un dinero que nos ganamos y merecemos como trabajadores

Comment added April 3, 2023 10:35am

- Ricardo sanchez

Estoy de acuerdo porque ganó muy poco con sólo propinas y creo que si somos trabajadores merecemos un salario como cualquiera

Comment added April 3, 2023 12:25pm

- Gustavo

Estoy de acuerdo con un pago justo las compañías pagan deliveries a muy bajo costo y tenemos que recorrer entre 4 y 7 millas para llevar una orden, apoyó 19.96 y 29.93 nuestros gastos operativos también son altos así que este pago no es alto ni bajo es lo justo para todos como trabajadores

Comment added April 3, 2023 12:53pm

- Hermenegildo De Jesus

No es justo correr tantas millas por baja propina las calles están muy peligrosas no tenemos un seguro médico y tenemos que correr siempre con nuestros gastos incluyendo gastos operativos

Comment added April 3, 2023 1:16pm

- Francisca Aguilar

Apoyo el pago mínimo

Comment added April 3, 2023 1:40pm

- Guadalupe Aguilar

Apoyo el salario mínimo

Comment added April 3, 2023 1:42pm

- Gilberto

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 3, 2023 3:19pm

- Eric R. Alvord

Please reconsider the new rules platform for DoorDash.

Comment attachment

DoorDash-Earning-Standards-Comment-Submission.pdf

Comment added April 3, 2023 8:27pm

Eric Alvord

DoorDash - Earning Standards Comment Submission

Eric
To: Abigail Mathai

Sat, Apr 1 10:10

Cc: Kaitlyn Griffith <kaitlyn.griffith@ext.doordash.com>

My name Eric A., I live in Cayuga county NY, and I DoorDash in Auburn NY. I've been Dashing for roughly a month and have been successful with the current platform. I oppose the proposed rules New York City is proposing for DoorDash. I need flexibility when it comes to working DoorDash because it's the only job that you can pick your hours and DoorDash when you want. Thank you for your time. EA

[Quoted text hidden]

- Bikash Adhikari

A minimum wage is necessary for workers to survive the cost of living. Delivery workers have the right to work without discrimination. $24 is barely enough to keep essential workers paid a living wage; that's why we can't budge on the $24 minimum (not $19)!

The "Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers" law is a basic human right. Minimum wage is necessary for workers to have fair rights and fight back against discrimination. Adams administration promised a $24 minimum wage but they change it to a $19 wage. That's not a living wage! These workers are marginalized people and often exploited due to that. They deserve protection, dignity, and a living wage. Imagine this city without delivery workers!

Comment added April 3, 2023 9:50pm

- Jonny

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 3, 2023 11:20pm

- Paris Giselle

My name is Paris I live on the upper east side I been working as a dasher for 2 years I am writing in opposition to the requirement under nyc proposed pay rules that could force changes to the platform that will restrict how I can use them in a way that works for me I love dashing I also have other gigs to work I love to fit dashing into my schedule because not only I like to deliver I also love seeing new restaurants to support on my free time especially small businesses I love flexibility of it while I want strong minimum pay protections such as extreme pay rate this will definitely harm my flexibility as a freelance artist and dog walker dashing allows me to work around my gigs this is why I choose to be a dasher.

Comment added April 4, 2023 8:54am

- jennica

The "Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers" law is a basic human right.

Comment added April 4, 2023 11:12am

- Efrain

Soy Deliverista ya desde un año con Doordash en Upper West Side. Ya tengo dos semanas que no me ha pagado Doordash y estamos luchando para que me pague un salario justo. Nosotros mecemos un pago justo y que estas aplicacion ni siga abusando de nosotros.

Yo pido al señor alcalde que pase un pago que reconoce nuestro trabajo.

Comment added April 4, 2023 11:31am

- Timothy

There needs a be an hourly pay structure because all these apps do is routinely exploit people with slave wages. As other commenters said on here before, you can't just dash whenever you want and make good money, that's not the way it works here. This is not worth doing anymore unless you can get paid by the hour. I completely disagree with people saying that the hourly pay would jeopardize demand. It will not, because orders that people typically wouldn't do because they pay so low will get done even faster because people are getting paid an hourly rate. It's hilarious how people think they could log on at 4 in the afternoon and start steadily working. Lmao, you can keep that $5. I'm saving my time for the dinner rush. Anything outside of those hours is a huge waste of time. People need to face reality. These apps are nothing but pocket change to buy milk at the local bodega, lol.

Comment added April 4, 2023 11:32am

- Lidia

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 4, 2023 11:52am

- Señor Alejandro S. Contreras

Está poniendo muy malo y la paga no está subiendo y mi alquiler y mis facturas se están volviendo muy difíciles de pagar Algo tiene que cambiar porque no estoy ganando nada en los últimos meses. Por favor, por favor, danos un salario garantizado, nos lo merecemos por lo duro que trabajamos..

Comment added April 4, 2023 12:23pm

- Jen Kline

Please move forward with the current proposal to give Delivery Workers a STARTING minimum wage of $17.98/hour. Delivery workers deserve a living wage and they deserve the $24/hour wage proposed by Mayor Adams and not the less than $18/hour wage currently in the legislation. However, they need a living minimum wage ASAP. Please do your part to move this legislation forward now.

Comment added April 4, 2023 1:53pm

- Justine LaViolette

All workers deserve a livable wage. Our city needs a livable minimum wage for delivery drivers NOW!

Comment added April 4, 2023 2:31pm

- Melinda Moore

They deserve it! NYC Deliveristas are out all day and night in every kind of weather for inhumane pay. They deserve $30/hr minimum. The city does not run without their incredibly hard work.

Comment added April 4, 2023 4:57pm

- David

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 4, 2023 5:24pm

- Cristian

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 4, 2023 5:26pm

- Anonimo

Exigimos el pago mínimo que propone el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York. Primero, pedimos el pago mínimo de 17.96 dólares por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora. Este pago se incrementará en el año 2025 a 19.96 dólares por hora. Esto tendrá un impacto positivo para los deliveristas que trabajan para la plataforma como Relay que paga por hora. ¿Por qué es importante este aumento? Es importante porque en este momento la plataforma Relay está pagando por debajo del salario mínimo de la ciudad de Nueva York. También exigimos a la ciudad el pago mínimo de 29.93 dólares por hora para los repartidores que trabajan para aplicaciones que pagan por una entrega, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde que aceptamos un pedido hasta que hacemos la entrega. Este pago no afecta las propinas de los trabajadores porque estas se pagan por separado.

Comment added April 4, 2023 5:54pm

- Dorian

We need hourly pay. Fifty cents when doing orders is not enough. Please revise the plan and remove that option, I don't want to see that with my job. Hourly pay only, thanks.

Comment added April 4, 2023 6:40pm

- Sara Flounders

I support the minimum payment that the New York City government is proposing.

This minimum pay will be $29.93 per hour for deliverers who work for apps that pay for a delivery, and deliverers will receive 50 cents per minute from the time they accept an order until they make the delivery. Now they only receive payment when they deliver. This payment does not affect the workers' tips because they are paid separately. This minimum pay will ensure that food delivery workers have enough money to cover their basic needs and some of their expenses. Therefore, I urge Mayor Adams to issue a final rule and implement this new rule. Thank you!

Comment added April 4, 2023 9:52pm

- Tony Murphy

I support the minimum payment that the New York City government is proposing. This minimum pay will be $29.93 per hour for deliverers who work for apps that pay for a delivery, and we will receive 50 cents per minute from the time we accept an order until we make the delivery. We only receive payment when we deliver. This payment does not affect the workers' tips because they are paid separately. This minimum pay will ensure that food delivery workers have enough money to cover their basic needs and some of their expenses. Therefore, I urge Mayor Adams to issue a final rule and implement this new rule. Thank you!

Comment added April 4, 2023 9:58pm

- Alejandro López

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 4, 2023 10:08pm

- Rene Siney

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 4, 2023 10:22pm

- John lava

I agree to a fair payment, without considering my tip as part of the payment, I do not agree to the company taking my tip as part of my payment, if the base pays 8 dollars without tip at a certain distance assuming 1.8 miles and another order with the same distance but that includes a 5 dollar tip and the company only pays 3 dollars to even out the payment, I don't allow it less in a first world country

Comment added April 4, 2023 11:27pm

- Sarao Bery

Minimum wage is a human right and delivery workers are the hardest working, least protected laborers in NYC.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:09am

- Anonymous

I support option #1 the minimum payment proposed by New York City. This minimum pay will be $29.93 per hour for delivery workers who work for apps companies that pay for a delivery, and we will receive 50 cents per minute from the time a delivery worker accept an order until make the delivery. This payment does not affect worker tips because they are paid separately. At the moment people can't survive with the payment they get now. It's for the well being of many families that we need the approval of the option number 1. This minimum wage will ensure that delivery workers have enough money to cover their basic needs and some of their expenses. Therefore, I urge the city to issue a final decision and implement the new law. Thank you!

Comment added April 5, 2023 8:19am

- Sue Harris

I support the minimum payment that the New York City government is proposing. This minimum pay will be $29.93 per hour for deliverers who work for apps that pay for a delivery, and the workers will receive 50 cents per minute from the time they accept an order until they make the delivery. They only receive payment when they deliver. This payment does not affect the workers' tips because they are paid separately. This minimum pay will ensure that food delivery workers have enough money to cover their basic needs and some of their expenses. Therefore, I urge Mayor Adams to issue a final rule and implement this new rule. Thank you!

Comment added April 5, 2023 8:26am

- Dalia

Good delivery workers are some of the hardest working people in our city and deserve protection through minimum wages

Comment added April 5, 2023 8:42am

- ginger

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 5, 2023 8:52am

- Cheyenne Stewart

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 5, 2023 9:23am

- Elizabeth Denys

Delivery workers perform a difficult and dangerous job for less than living wages. The city needs to do everything it can to ensure these essential workers have a safe working environment and are paid a living wage. I urge you to support their ask for a true living wage.

Comment added April 5, 2023 9:28am

- Rachel Isreeli

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 5, 2023 9:39am

- Olivia McGill

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 5, 2023 10:20am

- Dmitry Kharitonov

Please I deserve equal pay and equal freedom do not limit our freedom but increase our pay. I am a college student. Also I did some mistakes in the past I am defaulted on debt so right now I am trying to pay off $40k in debt. I remember in 2019/2020 when couriers used to make close to $30 an hour also being flexible to work whenever how ever. I have to make money per order. We as couriers deserve atleast $0.65 a minute per waiting and delivery time. Please help us. We as couriers feed the city we should be respected as anybody would wanted to be. Mayor Adams I ask you to provide us with the help we need. Inflation is hitting us hard, we need $0.65 a minute, $0.50 a minute is not enough if their would only be one order per hour during the summer it is very slow. Also force the apps to close down their applications so that we can have more freedom and space between our work force that way its not over saturated. Please bring back the gig apps back to how they used to be in the good old days and up the pay inflation is taking a heavy toll on us. Thank you.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:08am

- Bianca Pasternack

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers are still not guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:33am

- Fredy

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:41am

- Armando

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir

el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:42am

- Osavaldo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:43am

- Roberto Carlos

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York

propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:43am

- Perez

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que

nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:44am

- Macario

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:45am

- Oswaldo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:50am

- Edward Koral

If we are discussing delivery workers buying workers' compensation for themselves, then we have already conceded a major issue for the delivery people, by allowing the food delivery app companies to characterize the delivery workers as independent contractors, and not employees. This is a huge mistake. By agreeing that the delivery workers are "contractors," we are buying into the disingenuous claptrap spread by the app companies – that the delivery workers are not employees. The facts surrounding their employment show that these workers owe their livelihood to these apps, and they should legally be considered employees of the app companies.

What are the implications of considering them employees?

1) The delivery app companies would need to purchase workers' compensation for their employees, at the app company's expense.

2) The delivery app companies would be held liable for the bodily injury and property damage caused when the delivery workers hit pedestrians with their e-bikes.

Instead of dealing with these two practical realities, we get this:

- A strange and irrelevant discussion about “tax deductibility” — as if delivery workers are making enough money to itemize deductions on their income taxes? As if they’re depreciating their e-bikes and other equipment? This is a smokescreen meant to conceal the real issue – that delivery workers should not even be buying their own workers’ compensation insurance. Left to their own devices, does anybody really expect delivery workers on e-bikes to be purchasing workers compensation insurance for themselves? Who’s selling it? And what is the mechanism that will require the workers to prove that they are carrying in-force coverage? Can we be real here?
- If we do compel delivery workers to buy their own workers’ compensation insurance, it is highly likely that they will end up needing to buy it from the New York State Insurance Fund, thus putting the burden of workplace injuries on the people of the State of New York, rather than employers and private insurers.
- When we characterize delivery workers as independent contractors, we relieve DoorDash, UberEats, Relay, GrubHub, etc. of responsibility for activities of employees delivering on their behalf. The app companies avoid liability for the numerous situations where delivery workers hit pedestrians with their e-bikes. Are the delivery workers carrying liability insurance documenting their financial responsibility for the damage potentially caused by their motor vehicles? Highly unlikely. Delivery workers, knowing that they are potentially fully responsible (because they’re not employed by anybody who carries a liability policy) have an extra incentive to leave the scene of accidents. This proposed rule is completely silent about that issue — it doesn’t deal at all with creating a responsible mechanism for dealing with bodily injury and property damage caused by the delivery workers, and by extension, the people who hire them. Employers in profit-making ventures need to be responsible for the bodily injury and property damage that their businesses inflict on the public. By shifting this responsibility to economically disadvantaged individuals, these employers evade responsibility, pocket the profits, and leave their victims uncompensated.

To provide some historical perspective, it's worth noting that social security benefits excluded farm workers and domestic employees for many years. Both of these are professions in which a high percentage of employees were (and are) people of color. In the 1930s our government created this employee benefit that systematically excludes people of color.

By insisting that delivery workers are independent contractors, we are for all practical purposes denying a workforce comprised mostly of people of color access to basic protections afforded workers in other industries. Does NYC want to repeat this grievous error?

For DoorDash, UberEats, Relay, GrubHub, et al., the "Holy Grail" lies in preserving the "independent contractor" status of essential delivery workers who make their business run. That's everything. By buying into that "independent contractor" status, the City makes itself, and all of the people of NYC, chumps for the restaurant lobby.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:51am

- Casimiro

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que

nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:52am

- Luis A

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:53am

- Sergio

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:55am

- Charlene Obernauer

NYCOSH has supported the efforts of deliveristas to improve their working conditions for many years, advocating for the legalization of e-bikes alongside many worker organizations, and supporting Worker Justice Project and Los Deliveristas Unidos.

This population faces hazards on the job every day as they struggle to complete their work, including:

- Deliveristas are forced to deliver as quickly as possible, racing to speed up their work to meet delivery times. This can have tragic impacts on delivery workers and is the result of companies putting pressure on workers instead of supporting them. Further, their bike equipment can be in varied state of disrepair (and should likely be provided by the employer), which can make cycling more dangerous.
- Deliveristas have high incidents of being struck by cars or other vehicles, which only increases due to their employers placing unreasonable expectations on delivery times. The stress factor of riding in NYC's streets is dire.
- Heat and cold hazards as they deliver food in high heat and low cold throughout the year.
- Deliveristas have been exposed to workplace violence, with some high-profile cases of workers being killed on the job.
- The stress of earning subpar wages on workers is severe, leading to many stress-induced illnesses.

Deliveristas deserve living wages so that they can sustain themselves and their families. Living wages should not be reliant upon the tips of generous customers, but should fall on the companies who profit off of the hard work of these essential workers.

Comment attachment

Deliveristas-Hearing-4.5.23.docx

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:56am

NEW YORK COMMITTEE FOR OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH
14 Wall St. Suite 5A, New York, NY 10005
(212) 227-6440 fax: (212) 227-9854 email: nycosh@nycosh.org
website: www.nycosh.org
100 Vanderbilt Motor Parkway, Suite 320, Hauppauge, NY 11788
(631) 435-1857 fax: (631) 231-4523

April 5, 2023

Thank you for the opportunity to submit written testimony. My name is Charlene Obernauer and I am the Executive Director of the New York Committee for Occupational Safety and Health (NYCOSH).

NYCOSH is a non-profit membership organization of workers, unions, community-based organizations, workers' rights activists, and health and safety professionals. NYCOSH uses training, education, and advocacy to improve health and safety conditions in our workplaces, our communities, and our environment. Founded in 1979 on the principle that workplace injuries, illnesses and deaths are preventable, NYCOSH works to extend and defend every person's right to a safe and healthy workplace.

NYCOSH has supported the efforts of deliveristas to improve their working conditions for many years, advocating for the legalization of e-bikes alongside many worker organizations, and supporting Worker Justice Project and Los Deliveristas Unidos.

This population faces hazards on the job every day as they struggle to complete their work, including:

- Deliveristas are forced to deliver as quickly as possible, racing to speed up their work to meet delivery times. This can have tragic impacts on delivery workers and is the result of companies putting pressure on workers instead of supporting them. Further, their bike equipment can be in varied state of disrepair (and should likely be provided by the employer), which can make cycling more dangerous.
- Deliveristas have high incidents of being struck by cars or other vehicles, which only increases due to their employers placing unreasonable expectations on delivery times. The stress factor of riding in NYC's streets is dire.
- Heat and cold hazards as they deliver food in high heat and low cold throughout the year.
- Deliveristas have been exposed to workplace violence, with some high-profile cases of workers being killed on the job.
- The stress of earning subpar wages on workers is severe, leading to many stress-induced illnesses.

Deliveristas deserve living wages so that they can sustain themselves and their families. Living wages should not be reliant upon the tips of generous customers, but should fall on the companies who profit off of the hard work of these essential workers.

Thank you.

- Ernesto San Antonio

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:58am

- Daniel

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago

minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:00pm

- Anonimo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:03pm

- Trejo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que

trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:04pm

- Anonimo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque

nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad económica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:04pm

- Eduardo

Con la gente que no entiende lo poco que ganamos, esto era un desastre inevitable, hay gente que no da propina y las aplicaciones esperan que nos arriesguemos a hacer órdenes a esa gente, que a menudo te trata mal y tiene actitudes desagradables. Este trabajo necesita una revisión completa. El problema era que esto no debería haber sido creado a expensas del trabajador para depender de las propinas, simplemente no es suficiente. Queremos que el pago por hora sea el resultado final. Rechaza la idea de que te paguen cincuenta centavos durante las entregas. Eso es muy bajo y no proporciona estabilidad. Para nosotros es importante un salario digno. Insto a la ciudad a que regrese y piense mucho porque este plan revisado ciertamente no lo es. Gracias.

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:13pm

- Yair

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago mínimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago mínimo será de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. También apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago mínimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operación y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho básico de un pago mínimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Protección al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago mínimo, y que

nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:21pm

- Ernesto

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:27pm

- Monica Moorehead

I support the minimum payment that the New York City government is proposing. This minimum pay will be $29.93 per hour for deliverers who work for apps that pay for a delivery, and they will receive 50 cents per minute from the time they accept an order until the delivery. They only receive payment when they deliver. This payment does not affect the workers' tips because they are paid separately. This minimum pay will ensure that food delivery workers have enough money to cover their basic needs and some of their expenses. These workers help to make the city run with this work that is vital and difficult. Therefore, I urge Mayor Adams to issue a final rule and implement this new rule. Thank you!

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:30pm

- Fernando

Estoy de acuerdo con los compañeros y yo soy uno de los que apoyan cuando se necesita espero pronto se resuelva para nuestro bien

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:30pm

- José Téllez

Yo opino igual que los compañeros estaría bien que se subiera el sueldo andar en la calle es un riesgo muy grande como repartidor de comida

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:37pm

- Gerardo López templos

Yo opino que nos ayuden con un seguro en caso de accidentes y el salario que sea justo

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:43pm

- Ricardo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago mínimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago mínimo será de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. También apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago mínimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operación y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho básico de un pago

minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:47pm

- Santos

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:51pm

- Anónimo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que

trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:51pm

- Coah

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque

nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad económica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:54pm

- Yhair Cuamatzi

Yo estoy a favor de la nueva regla que se quiere proponer

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:56pm

- Francisco Pazarán

Hola buenos días soy de los deliverista me gustaría que hubiera un buen salario para todos nosotros los que somos deliverista por que ahí deliberes de 3 por solo 7 dólares o muy baratos, y respecto a la policía me gustaría que nos apoyen más por luego se dedican a ponernos tikes y apoyan a los ratas y eso no es justo nosotros solo queremos trabajar bn tarde

Comment added April 5, 2023 12:58pm

- Rogelio

Esperemos que haya un salario justo que nos tomen en cuenta que cada día estamos arriesgando nuestras vidas en las calles

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:04pm

- Kathy Park Price

I wholeheartedly support Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:05pm

- Zack Youngren

I fully support this rule. Our delivery workers deserve a living wage, and the power differential between large corporations and individual workers means that we the people need to come to the aid of and stand with our workers.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:07pm

- Ricardo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:07pm

- Alison Wade

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:08pm

- Villegas

Estoy de acuerdo por un salario justo para llevar buenas ganancias para cuidar mejor de nuestras familias

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:09pm

- Rivero

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:10pm

- Emmanuel Gómez

Estoy de acuerdo con el pago por hora creo que nos veríamos más beneficiados

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:14pm

- Alejandro

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:15pm

- Macario

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir

el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:18pm

- Santos

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:19pm

- Joe Zhu

Hello!

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Thanks!

Joe Zhu

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:44pm

- Dale Corvino

I support this rule. Delivery workers should not be subject to a work environment that incentivizes them to rush and take risky actions on NYC's streets/sidewalks. A better-paid delivery workforce will result in safer streets/sidewalks.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:44pm

- Sergio

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:47pm

- Colau

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps.

Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:47pm

- Ramon

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 1:52pm

- Erik velazquez

Estoy de acuerdo con un pago justo soy un trabajador del área de queens y me siento agredido ganar solamente por propinas me gustaría tener un salario mínimo.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:13pm

- Jorge Téllez

Las aplicaciones no nos pagan un salario y la verdad como trabajador considero que la ciudad debe presionar a estas compañías para un pago justo a nosotros que nos arriesgamos en este trabajo.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:16pm

- Antonio

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:21pm

- Yovani

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago

minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:24pm

- Antonio

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:25pm

- Javier

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que

trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:26pm

- Rubicel

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque

nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:30pm

- Adrian

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:31pm

- Anonymous

Okay, let's please be professional and civil by not returning to old ways by copy and pasting comments again. You're not supporting the fight for fair pay by spamming that. Please refrain from doing that, or else I will contact the DCWP to begin auditing and flagging fictitious comments.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:33pm

- Oldair

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:37pm

- Samuel

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:40pm

- Samuel

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:43pm

- ERIC MALINOWSKI

I would like to offer testimony for the hearing on April 7, 2023.

Comment added April 5, 2023 2:46pm

- Carlos

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 3:19pm

- Carlota

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Protección al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago mínimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y también a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad económica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 3:21pm

- Carlos

Apoyo el aumento al salario mínimo para los trabajadores Deliveristas de la ciudad de NU.

Comment added April 5, 2023 3:25pm

- Ignacio

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago mínimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago mínimo será de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. También apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago mínimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operación y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho básico de un pago mínimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Protección al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago mínimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y también a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad económica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 3:37pm

- Animomo

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 3:38pm

- Yony

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago

minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 4:17pm

- Isidro

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries.

Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 4:18pm

- Joni

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que

trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 4:19pm

- Dmitry

I would like flexibility over controlled wages. The second option is great to get paid per minute on delivery. I would like to deliver my opinion on flexibility and proper pay please increase the pay to $0.65 a minute. The pay of $0.50 per minute is not bearable with inflation and the amount of requests going on right now we need to make at-least $20 per hour with the flexibility option. Please Mayor Adams asking you for help we need this done. I want to carry my self through college and pay for my debt without having to need to pan handle and get food on the streets. I am a citizen born and raised in Brooklyn. We deserve fair pay Mayor Adams. Please respect our work thank you!

Comment added April 5, 2023 5:09pm

- Olive Siu

Hello,

Delivery workers kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 5, 2023 5:09pm

- Gurpreet Singh

Hello, I wanted to leave my message for consideration to help us in our jobs in this delivery business. In Queens we have to travel such long distance for lousy fare. Before everything was OK, I was seeing extra money on the map, but since last year it has all stopped with no question. I cannot make even 50% what I use to work for. Yesterday I was working all day since the morning and I had only $44 in my pocket after the Sun went down. That's like $4 for 1 hour work. Not good. Why don't organization pay us for hours? People now don't put a value into the person who helps with these deliveries. I feel pain in my body from the constant movement, and with almost 0 in my pocket I feel not useful to the world. The wage minimum here is at 16 dollar. Why cannot we achieve same results?

Comment added April 5, 2023 5:35pm

- Kellie B

Hi, my name is Kellie B. and I'm from Canisteo, NY. I've been delivering for door dash for almost 6 months. I'm writing because I am in opposition of NYC pay requirement. I started doing Door Dash because of the flexibility with scheduling. I am a mom of 5 and my husband has a lot of health issues so it makes it difficult to work on a schedule which is why Door Dash was the perfect option for me.

Comment added April 5, 2023 5:41pm

- Anonimo

Apoyo el incremento salarial para los trabajadores repartidores de comidas en la ciudad de Nueva York. Es necesario que los trabajadores tengan un salario que les ayude a vivir en esta ciudad. Por eso apoyo el salario de 20.96 para aquellos trabajadores que le pagan por delivery, y también el aumento de salario para aquellos trabajadores que trabajan por horas. Las aplicaciones están haciendo una cantidad inmensa de dinero a costa de los trabajadores.

Comment added April 5, 2023 5:52pm

- Sylvia Morse

As a lifelong New York City resident, consumer-user of delivery apps, and urban policy analyst who worked closely with independent immigrant service workers in New York City fighting for fair wage standards in the digital gig economy, I strongly urge the City of New York to adopt the proposed rule to establish methods for determining the minimum payments that must be made to a food delivery worker by a third-party food delivery service or third-party courier service. The establishment of new minimum wage standards is already past the legal deadline of January 1, 2023, and must be addressed urgently to ensure fair wages for affected workers. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay.

However, I do not support the adoption of a new "alternative method" under the Second Proposed Rule that would "reducing the minimum pay rate to account for the time workers spend connected to multiple apps ('multiapping')."

The methods should produce minimum wages that provide a living wage in New York City. A living wage in the NYC metropolitan area is estimated at $22.51/hour for an individual with no children, and $44.20/hour for an adult with one child (MIT Living Wage Calculator, <https://livingwage.mit.edu/metros/35620>). DCWP's own research finds that app-based restaurant delivery workers "earn $14.18 per hour with tips and $7.09 per hour without tips," which are below minimum wage and in some cases below poverty wages ($8.80/hour for an adult with 1 child, according to the MIT Living Wage Calculator) The initial proposed minimum wage standard of $23.82 by 2025 was much closer to (but still not reaching) a living wage.

Large companies that run delivery apps and dominate the majority of the sector should not be able to offer a lower standard wage simply because the average utilization rate among worker-users is at least 53%. Utilization rates vary tremendously for workers depending on how long they have been on the app (as they learn to use the platform) and childcare and other obligations, among other factors. Workers who still rely on multiapping to cobble together full-time or otherwise sufficient work will continue to rely on the largest delivery apps that control the market, and should not be forced to work for lower wages simply because the app's average utilization rates are higher.

It's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 5, 2023 6:17pm

- Miriam Edwin

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 5, 2023 6:38pm

- Philip Winchester

Delivery workers have become an essential part of how NYC operates. As the city of New York we have a responsibility that they are compensated fairly for helping everyone.

Comment added April 5, 2023 6:45pm

- Juan Miguel

De acuerdo al salario mínimo para todos nos merecemos este pago

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:12pm

- Jaime

El pago nos ayudaría para mejor nuestra nivel de vida

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:12pm

- Pedro

Vamos a apoyar el salario porque nunca nos pagan y se quedan con la propinas la aplicación

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:14pm

- Alex

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:15pm

- Alfredo

Apoyamos el salario porque somos trabajadores como cualquiera de la ciudad de ny

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:16pm

- Fernando

Estoy de acuerdo con el salario

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:18pm

- Luis

Estoy de acuerdo con el pago lo necesitamos Pago Minimo ahora

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:20pm

- Allison

"I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it’s unacceptable that New York City’s food delivery workers still aren’t guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I’m deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection’s decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There’s no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.”

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:25pm

- Brian Roberto Islas Cruz

Estoy de acuerdo con el salario ya que nos beneficiara a todos señor alcalde lo necesitamos pago minimo

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:25pm

- 9296338227

Si estoy de acuerdo con el pago

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:25pm

- 9295604375

Si está bien en el pago

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:29pm

- Chavez

Estoy de acuerdo con el salario ya que quiero llevar del Loveris de 3 o 4 dólares pago mínimo pago mínimo señor alcalde

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:30pm

- Rodolfo

Quiero el pago noso emos ganado por todp el esfuerzo que emos echo
pago minimo señor alcalde

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:32pm

- Rubén

Estoy de acuerdo

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:34pm

- Luis Calle

Cuando nos accidentamos tenemos q poner de nuestra bolsa y la app no nos da nada necesitamos un pago mínimo ahora

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:35pm

- José Luis

Estoy de acuerdo

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:36pm

- Flores

El pago lo necesitamos elmpago ya que no os alcanza y son muchos gastos y el pago es lo que nescitomos señor alcalde

Pago mínimo pago mínimo

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:37pm

- Miles Shelton

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that
New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:39pm

- Gregory Suter

In a city that considers itself great, it is unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:39pm

- Alexis

Si estoy de acuerdo con que paguen por hora

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:41pm

- Vivian Wright

I'm basing my master's thesis on delivery work here in NYC and my research centers around the independent contractors who work for the companies Relay, Uber, Doordash, Grub Hub, and Chowbus. I conducted several interviews throughout the 5 boroughs at all times of day, throughout the 7 days of the week, and these are the top 5 concerns that the IC's who I interviewed have:

- 1.) Unstable earnings that dramatically fluctuate from day to day, causing the workers persistent financial strain.
- 2.) Wages that are subject to theft, with many customers revoking tips while the worker is enroute, effectively gaming the worker for their labor without the compensation that they had agreed upon.
- 3.) No paid time off available in any form. If a worker were to sustain an injury or experience a burglary on the job, there is no structure in place to reverse their lost productivity.
- 4.) A vast reduction in monetary incentives compared to previous years that has significantly lowered the overall earnings of IC's.
- 5.) An overall feeling that their complaints aren't being addressed despite years of ongoing development surrounding their work.

From what I have gathered interviewing a total of 122 independent contractors associated with the companies mentioned earlier from the period December 21st, 2022 – March 31st, 2023, 109 out of 122 (~89.3%) of them indicated insufficient earnings within the first 30 seconds of the interview. This appears to be the most prominent complication involving app-based delivery work: insufficient earnings.

Not noted above, but worth discussing is that in Upper Manhattan and The Bronx, IC's reported stolen equipment/theft at a level that I would consider statistically significant, with 30 out of 41 (~73%) interviewees that represent The Bronx alone citing that they were burglarized by antisocial individuals and groups in areas at least once in the past 12 months. They mentioned not generating sufficient income to purchase new equipment, and would resort to borrowing second-hand equipment such as mopeds from family members to resume their employment. A whopping 71 out of 77 (~92.2%) of the interviewees that represent both Upper Manhattan and The Bronx had complaints that centered around the lack of dependable tips in these neighborhoods, and that they faced frequent negative ratings, (disproportionately to the rest of the city) especially in Uber's customer-centric rating system that also penalizes workers for unassigning themselves from orders, even if they feel unsafe to perform them.

In conclusion, I highly support a wage standard for app-based delivery workers that is dependable. A revision in the second draft of the proposed law to compensate workers a mere 50 cents per minute when engaged in deliveries would further enable the delivery companies to mistreat the workforce and sustain ongoing, undue pressure on them, all while ensuring that they'll never be able to rise economically under current conditions. I sincerely hope that these workers receive the guaranteed wages that they so desperately deserve. Having interviewed them has been an enlightening experience and one that will never make me look at delivery companies the same again.

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:41pm

- Alejandro

Estamos de acuerdo con el salario ya que lo necesitamos y ya nos alcanza lo que nos da la app es importante salario mínimo pago mínimo

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:43pm

- Javier santos

Si estoy de acuerdo con que paguen por hora

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:44pm

- Chris Trujillo

Exigimos un pago Justo. No vale la pena arriesgar nuestra vida por esos viajes sin propina y pago de base tan bajos soy delivery boy casi 15 años. Los últimos 2 años está pésimo. Dedicarse a hacer este trabajo muy riesgoso se exige algo Justo. Y fuera ligia gualpa

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:45pm

- Cristian Villegas

Estoy de acuerdo con el salario y espero que mejoren nuestras condiciones laborales

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:47pm

- Valentin

Apoyo total al pago mínimo ya que nos beneficiará a todos los que hacemos este trabajo

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:50pm

- Ismael

Si estoy de acuerdo con el salario mínimo

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:52pm

- Josécarlos

Si estoy de acuerdo con el salario

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:55pm

- adan

estoy de acuerdo con el salario xq muchas veces van deliverys muy baratos y muy lejos y pues nos arriesgamos a muchas cosas como el frío el agua haberes sin comer y pues creo q estaría super bien q agregen el pago minimo

Comment added April 5, 2023 7:55pm

- Juan

Estamos de acuerdo con Los salarioya que nose combines tops

Comment added April 5, 2023 8:03pm

- Isidro

Estoy de acuerdo CV con el salario ya que nos beneficia salario mínimo salario mínimo

Comment added April 5, 2023 8:06pm

- Maralin Springer

I am writing in opposition to the NYC earnings standard's aggregate pay requirement.

Currently, I work a full-time position with NYS, but I still need extra income to cover unexpected bills and expenses. Because of my irregular and unpredictable schedule, most part time jobs don't provide a feasible option for me.

I started my gig work with Grubhub around 2018, and have been delivering for DoorDash and Uber for about the last 2-3 years. Since there's no requirement for when or how long you work, I figured there was no harm in giving it a try. It's turned out to be one of the best career decisions I've made.

I have found that having the flexibility to work in whatever time I have available is an absolute necessity for me, and has made a definite positive impact on my financial health.

If I'm in a pinch I can hit the road to earn some quick cash and cover last minute things like gas, parking, tolls, overdrafts, Escrow shortages, etc.

This helps me not only to make ends meet, but work to maintain/ improve my credit score. Unlike my full time job, I can say that the harder I work, the more it pays off.... and if it didn't work for ME, I wouldn't keep doing it.

I definitely appreciate that I am the one in control of which jobs I accept, complete or decline. I do NOT want to start seeing things like "once accepted you must complete the order, " or "you must accept all offered jobs." Those are the type of requirements that make it more difficult for someone like me to earn additional income.

Because I can turn down job offers, I'm able to choose only safe places and times to work, as well as finding the best paying job offers available.

Employers like DoorDash and Uber are already offering very helpful incentives to their delivery partners, many of which are comparable to or even better than the incentives offered by my full time employer (cash back on gas, tuition, and discounts on food orders are just a few). I worry that the proposed changes will limit these companies' ability to provide us with these incentives and to allow the scheduling flexibility that enables so many of us to do this work in the first place

In 2021, I underwent foot surgery and needed flexibility in my work conditions as I couldn't sit or stand for very long periods. My employer refused my request to work from home even for part of my schedule, which forced me to take leave instead.

Being able to "Dash" for DoorDash during those few months not only became a way to keep on top of my mounting medical expenses, but it also helped with my physical recovery, as I could give my foot daily exercise and stop as soon as I felt it was too much – something considered unreasonable by my full time employer.

The idea of setting a minimum wage for these positions sounds like a great idea until you consider all of the control that the worker would lose in the process.

The recent laws that have been put in place in NY have already solved many of the issues that used to be a problem for delivery workers. Now that I am able to set distance limits, see full trip information, time estimates, customer tips and more, I've enjoyed doing this work even more than before.

It's also been great to see these companies working with, and not against, their delivery partners, not only seeking input but actually implementing the ideas that work. Not to mention that it has helped to create new bonds in our communities, as restaurants (old and new), drivers and customers engage and “discover” each other.

Aside from losing these perks of flexibility, I worry that turning gig work into minimum wage work will only feed into that cycle of eliminating jobs/hours in order to reduce payroll costs, or raising requirements for applicants to get into basic entry-level positions (ie. requiring a Bachelors degree to do simply clerical work). That would affect not only gig workers, but other industries as well.

Please don't ruin a good thing by taking away what has become a helpful, productive and entrepreneurial experience for so many hard working people.

These jobs work BECAUSE of the fact the gig worker is in control, not in spite of it. Mandating a minimum wage will have negative effects on this industry and those who depend on it to maintain their livelihood.

I appreciate the chance to weigh in on this issue, and hope our leaders will do what is best for us as citizens and workers.

Comment added April 5, 2023 8:10pm

- Mathew

I am in support of the increase of the minimum wage for delivery workers in the City of New York. It is time that delivery workers get paid living wages. In support of the increase per hour and per delivery to 29.96. By passing this rule, the Adam's administration will do what is right.

Comment added April 5, 2023 8:38pm

- Ramona

Apoyo mejores salarios para los trabajadores de delivery en la ciudad de Nueva York. Es justo que las plataformas empiecen a pagar un buen salario para los trabajadores por hora y también aquellos trabajadores que son pagados por delivery. Ese salario debe de ser 29.96 dólares y las compañías deben respetar las propinas de los trabajadores.

Comment added April 5, 2023 8:42pm

- Raina Wong

I'm extremely grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now!

Comment added April 5, 2023 8:46pm

- Eloy

Estly de acuerdo con elmpago ppr hora ya que lo necessitates

Comment added April 5, 2023 9:02pm

- Emilio Flores

Apoyo el pago mínimo que propone el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York. Este pago mínimo será de $29.93 por hora para los repartidores que trabajan para aplicaciones que pagan por una entrega, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde que aceptamos un pedido hasta que hacemos la entrega. Solo recibimos el pago cuando entregamos. Este pago no afecta las propinas de los trabajadores porque se pagan por separado. Este salario mínimo garantizará que los repartidores de alimentos tengan suficiente dinero para cubrir sus necesidades básicas y algunos de sus gastos. Por lo tanto, insto al alcalde Adams a que emita una regla final e implemente esta nueva regla. ¡Gracias!

Comment added April 5, 2023 9:31pm

- Elsa Ponce De Maria

Legislation should set minimum pay for delivery workers. We must not allow large corporations and capitalism to continue impacting the rights of these workers. They deserve fair earnings for the essential services they provide to New Yorkers. They are at a far greater risks performing their job on the streets and deserve greater protection and hazard pay. Deliveristas have brought great convenience to our daily lives and the demand for delivery services will not decrease, fair payment should be addressed ASAP. I am an architect and urbanist working closely with gig workers. Since 2021 I have been involved in the design of a work center for the Workers Justice Project and Los Deliveristas Unidos in Williamsburg, Brooklyn. I have interviewed the workers and I know first hand about the challenges they face. I fully support this rule and hope they receive the wages and protections they deserve.

Comment added April 5, 2023 9:32pm

- Rafael

Apoyo el pago mínimo que propone el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York. Este pago mínimo será de $29.93 por hora para los repartidores que trabajan para aplicaciones que pagan por una entrega, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde que aceptamos un pedido hasta que hacemos la entrega. Solo recibimos el pago cuando entregamos. Este pago no afecta las propinas de los trabajadores porque se pagan por separado. Este salario mínimo garantizará que los repartidores de alimentos tengan suficiente dinero para cubrir sus necesidades básicas y algunos de sus gastos. Por lo tanto, insto al alcalde Adams a que emita una regla final e implemente esta nueva regla. ¡Gracias!

Comment added April 5, 2023 10:09pm

- Ricardo

Queremos pago por hora, ninguna promesa de flexibilidad, es solo una mentira...y por favor quita la opción alternativa, eso es bajando mi pago solo paga por hora, paga por hora, paga por hora!

Comment added April 5, 2023 10:28pm

- Miguel

Apoyo lo que el gobierno de Nueva York, en apoyo a nuestros hermanos que reciban su pago por hora de $29.93. Independiente de sus propinas.

Comment added April 5, 2023 10:30pm

- Fairdelivery

As inflation has raised prices strangely enough these delivery companies are paying us LESS! While charging the customers a slew of new fees none of which are passed through to us. I think this is a step in the right direction. Am i nervous about how the companies will retaliate surely they cant afford to pay all their current drivers this new amount. Just how will they decide who gets to stay and who gets let go.

Comment added April 5, 2023 10:44pm

- oneline

Um... Tips should be bonuses not wages!!! But right now the delivery companies are using their customers(tips) to pay for their workers essentially, they charge the customers fees to even cover the base payouts. They are literally getting free workers. This had to stop

Comment added April 5, 2023 11:45pm

- Gabriel Lee

As a fellow cyclist who appreciates the delivery workers who bring me food, working under often harsh and unsafe conditions and constant pressure while underpaid, I support minimum pay for the workers! It's literally the minimum we can do. Thank you!

Comment added April 6, 2023 12:18am

- pepi

thank u to all the delivery drivers who deliver warm food on a cold/ snowy/ rainy day. You guys provide such an essential service and i really appreciate the work u guys do. you should be compensated for all of your labour.

Comment added April 6, 2023 12:32am

- Monica

Deliveristas have been keeping our economy afloat for over 3 years. They are the reason nonessential workers could get groceries delivered during March and April 2020. They helped keep restaurants, mom and pop shops, bodegas, and even big businesses afloat during the pandemic, bringing us our favorite meals when we couldn't safely dine out or delivering a working laptop charger from Best Buy when ours was broken and we had class in the evening. They make sure people don't endanger themselves trying to get food after a night bar hopping or in a heavy rainstorm. Many people call this kind of work "unskilled" but I disagree. Time management, road knowledge, tact, language skills, troubleshooting tech—all of these and more are required to do this job. They easily spend over 8 hours—which in any other industry is considered outrageous or reason for overtime pay—on the job. They are getting paid a fraction of what NYC has determined is a livable wage simply because the companies have exploited a loophole in our labor laws. It is inhumane for these companies to take so much of the profit when their entire business is run by their drivers—without their labor, there is no business at all! It's time for these essential workers to get paid a living wage and for Ubers/Grubhub/Doordash/etc to recognize the value of their deliveristas.

Comment added April 6, 2023 2:05am

- Coco Brown

This is common sense. Give delivery workers fair compensation. Pay delivery laborers a fair minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 6:58am

- Sara'o Bery

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 8:22am

- Toni Arenstein

I am a retired nurse and I am outraged about the inability of the city to make it possible for delivery workers to make a living when they work such a hard unsafe job that helps many New Yorkers. These workers deliver food to people in every weather condition from torrential rains, blizzards, and 90 degree high humidity. Do people think about this when they order food through these apps. And people sometimes refuse the order and in this case the worker does not get paid by the companies that employ them. I remember reading that some delivery workers worked on days like this and traveled miles with a minimal tip and not paid for those hours that they worked. Every worker should receive adequate compensation for their hard work so I support the minimum payment that the New York City government is proposing. This minimum pay should be $29.93 per hour for delivery workers who work for apps that pay for a delivery, and should receive 50 cents per minute from the time we accept an order until they make the delivery. Currently they only receive payment when they deliver. This payment does not affect the workers' tips because they are paid separately. This minimum pay will ensure that food delivery workers have enough money to cover their basic needs and some of their expenses. Therefore, I urge Mayor Adams to issue a final decision and implement this new rule. Thank you!

Comment added April 6, 2023 8:48am

- Kerry Goleski

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 9:07am

- Gabriel Feldman-Schwartz

I am in full support of a minimum pay rule for delivery workers. They work dangerously and tirelessly to deliver food in NYC, and deserve to be compensated fairly!

Comment added April 6, 2023 9:11am

- Carolina

Let delivery workers keep their money!

Comment added April 6, 2023 9:22am

- Jacob Udell

Delivery workers deserve all they are asking for and more!

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 9:35am

- Megan Friedlander

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now

Comment added April 6, 2023 9:36am

- Anna Melendez

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who keep many New Yorkers fed and who also kept the city and many small businesses afloat during the height of the pandemic. I use food delivery apps – such as GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that these companies are profiting from a growing business model, while delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. All workers deserve living wages to support themselves and their families, and every single worker should be entitled to a minimum wage. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 which has resulted the withholding of wages. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 9:51am

- Nadia Qurashi

New York City relied heavily on delivery workers to keep our residents fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak. They risked their lives to enable people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as GrubHub – and it's utterly shameful that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no time for delay. We must do everything we can to ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:12am

- Tara Duvivier

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now. This city is already unaffordable for so many. These delivery workers have a hard job which requires them to deal with NYC traffic, NYC weather, and it is unconscionable that we aren't ensuring a decent wage.

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:23am

- Elisabeth Dyssegaard

All of us who lived through COVID are forever grateful to the delivery workers who risked their lives to keep New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat. And every day we see these same workers in the streets under extremely tough conditions. It's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. You must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:26am

- Tal Frieden

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:36am

- Toya Lillard

"I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now."

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:38am

- Angelique De Castro

As a resident of NYC who loves the diversity of food options and small business owners who have started to rely on deliver food options to keep afloat, we need to pay delivery workers fairly. They often endure harsh conditions just to deliver those who have the privilege of working from home and ordering delivery– sometimes for just a meager $1 tip. This is unfair and unjust. Delivery workers, regardless of immigration status, are New Yorkers too, and they deserve fair pay for the work they do.

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:45am

- Morgan Geraghty

I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:47am

- Miguel Medrano Azpiroz

I'm very grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. During the COVID-19 outbreak, my wife was pregnant, so I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – to eat each day for many months. New York City's food delivery workers helped me to feed my family during one of the most challenging times of our lives.

I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage.

Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021.

This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. New York City must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:51am

- Caroline Louise David

As a lifetime NYC resident, I believe it's absolutely unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – this revised proposal is not enough for worker's survival.

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:54am

- Áine Hanners

Workers should be getting a fair wage. Letting apps and platform capitalists take advantage of workers without giving them proper protections, unemployment, health insurance, maintenance costs, is untenable. Pay the delivery workers and stop subsidizing poverty profiteering from these corporate vultures. No job as deadly, difficult, and underappreciated as delivery worker should be paid so little money.

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:58am

- Jackson

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:04am

- Jade Verette

"I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now."

Jade

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:04am

- Mary

Food delivery workers deserve more than minimum wage. They brave dangerous conditions daily and so many New Yorkers are rely on their services. Pay them more.

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:05am

- Lauren Goshinski

I support this change to pay food delivery workers $19 min wage

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:13am

- Tracy Fortson

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now. PLEASE support NYC's food delivery workers, as they helped us to survive while we were quarantined during the pandemic. Thank you for your consideration.

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:15am

- santana benitez

"I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now."

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:18am

- Dan Cretella

No one should be getting paid below minimum wage. Food delivery workers kept many restaurants from permanently closing their doors during lockdowns and play an essential role in the city's economy. Give them the respect they deserve and mandate their employers compensate them fairly.

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:20am

- Jade

Gig workers, especially those who deliver food throughout our city, deserve minimum pay. These workers risk their own lives in NYC traffic, pushing their bodies to the limit for hours upon hours in all kinds of weather each day to deliver food to New Yorkers. Without a minimum wage, the very people who deliver food to homes and businesses across the city struggle to feed themselves. These workers are a big part of our city's economic system and they help restaurants expand their reach beyond the vicinity of their establishments. More importantly, these workers are members of our community. We need to ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:33am

- Anthony Capote

April 7, 2023

To: Department of Consumer and Worker Protections

Re: Protecting Pay Standard Study for App-Based Food Delivery Workers

In 2022, the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection recommended a groundbreaking wage standard for app-based delivery service workers in New York City. The proposed pay scale represented a major victory for the more than 123,000 deliveristas operating within the five boroughs and provided a model for suitable wage standards for independent contractors doing similar work around the country.

The 2022 proposed rule of $23.82/hour established an hourly pay scale that compensated workers for time they spent on call, and it included components to help offset the expenses delivery workers incur on the job and their lack of health benefits. The proposed rule was a major advance over the status quo of no standard, but it was rightly criticized by many as not having gone far enough. In particular, workers deemed the expense component of the pay scale to be inadequate.

Rather than respond to these arguments for an increase in the wage standard, however, Mayor Eric Adams now seeks to roll back the proposed hourly wage for delivery workers, effectively undoing both major successes from the first proposed rule.

First, the mayor proposed a lower hourly rate of $19.96. This is just not adequate to ensure a decent wage for workers who have to pay for their own equipment, health care coverage, and often work through inclement weather conditions.

In addition, the mayor allows app companies to pick between this normal way of paying an hourly wage, and an “alternative method” that would only cover the time from pick-up to delivery. That leaves out the time workers spend waiting or traveling to the pick-up. This alternative method effectively allows delivery service companies to opt-out of the hourly wage standard workers fought so hard to achieve. The mayor’s proposal makes a modest effort to include a higher wage standard for companies that choose the alternative method, which aims to ensure pay equity for workers across the two methods. This method would force delivery companies to pay a premium of $33.27 per hour that workers have orders in hand.

While at first glance, this model may sound preferable to the standard, it is a misleading figure. The key point is that it is a rate for the time workers have orders in hand. Paying $33.27 per hour for the time in hand is actually lower than paying $23.82 per hour for the full time people are working. It is intended to be the equivalent to paying just $19.96 per hour for the full work time, but it is in fact likely even less than that.

Because workers are not guaranteed a certain number of deliveries per hour or shift, paying only for time-in-hand ensures that workers will not receive a consistent pay rate from one week to the next, increasing the precarity of their economic situation.

The reduction in the overall rate for payment—from $23.82 to $19.96—primarily comes down to the mayor arbitrarily reducing the wage rate by $3.60 per hour by imposing a penalty for “multi-apping,” an industry myth that the mayor has employed to justify slashing the original wage standard.

“Multi-apping” occurs when deliveristas must log into work for several delivery platforms at once to make ends meet. It is worth pointing out that multi-apping is relatively rare. According to DCWP’s own report, app-based delivery workers in New York spent less than one-fifth (17.7 percent) of their time logged in to more than one application in the fourth quarter of 2021.

Multi-apping is not only uncommon among deliveristas, but also undesirable for workers. Most app-based delivery workers would prefer to work for only one app at a time, but low wages make doing so unfeasible in many cases. The primary driver behind multi-apping is that companies refuse to pay workers for on-call time spent on the app waiting for orders. One of the many virtues of the first proposed rule, in fact, is that it would require delivery service companies to pay for on-call time. A strong hourly wage standard of $23.82 would largely eliminate the need for multi-apping in the first place.

The mayor’s proposed rule uses the myth of multi-apping to justify cutting back a significant wage hike for thousands of New Yorkers by penalizing all delivery service workers regardless of whether they have ever engaged in multi-apping. The $3.60 reduction is little more than an arbitrary way to appease delivery platforms like Seamless, GrubHub, and UberEATS. Instead of going towards supporting workers’ families, that money will instead wind up in the pockets of app owners and venture capitalists who are content to make billions off the backs of New York’s underpaid workers.

The undersigned organizations and individuals join a myriad of voices from within city government including Comptroller Brad Lander, Brooklyn Borough President Antonio Reynoso, and 11 City Council members in urging the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection to institute the first proposed rule that would pay workers $23.82/hour. App-based delivery workers deserve fair compensation for their work serving millions of New Yorkers.

Signed,

Immigration Research Initiative
Economic Policy Institute
Community Service Society of New York

Deborah Glasserman
Cathy Rowan
Sarah Zimmerman
Janet Bauer
Samantha Sanders
Debipriya Chatterjee
Valerie Lucznikowska

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:36am

- Clara Flores

This city would grind to a halt without deliveriestas. They need to be compensated accordingly to the effort, time and resources they put into their work. They provide a service that allows for people to sit at home and order food during some of the worst conditions and risk their lives in NYC traffic. They should be guaranteed a minimum wage and be guaranteed their rights and have their demand met.

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:42am

- Jaclyn Biskup

Pay these people a living minimum wage!

Comment added April 6, 2023 12:06pm

- Evelyn Perez

This bill is so important and it needs to pass. The amount that delivery app workers get after services is abysmal and unsustainable especially in New York City.

Comment added April 6, 2023 12:10pm

- Nevin Cohen

Comments on the NYC Department of Consumer and Worker Protection Second Proposed Rule Establishing Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers

Nevin Cohen, Mustafa Hussein, Emilia Vignola – CUNY Urban Food Policy Institute

Sherry Baron – The Barry Commoner Center for Health and the Environment

April 7, 2023

The CUNY Urban Food Policy Institute’s research and education aims to advance just, healthy, and resilient urban food systems, which includes the health and wellbeing of food workers. The Barry Commoner Center’s mission is to identify and help solve environmental and occupational threats to human health. Together, we have been examining the occupational safety and health issues facing food delivery workers, from the stresses caused by the algorithms that govern platform-based work to the specific risks of low-wage, precarious delivery work in a dense city like New York.

In our previous testimony, we commended the New York City Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) for its efforts to set a floor for the hourly compensation of food delivery workers that is fair, adequate, and consistent. We also recognized the critical efforts of worker organizations like Los Deliveristas Unidos and their members in bringing to light the inequities of app-based delivery work, documenting the experiences faced by delivery workers, and demanding policies to ensure that these essential workers receive adequate compensation.

Based on our assessment of the revised rules and considering continued concerns raised by organizations like Los Deliveristas, who represent many of the city's food delivery workers, and the NYC Comptroller and numerous City Council Members, we urge DCWP to make three important changes:

(1) Eliminate the proposed $3.60 adjustment for multi-apping. Apart from the limitations of estimating multi-app behavior from survey data collected in just one quarter in 2021, the method the DCWP used to calculate the multi-app adjustment is premised on faulty assumptions. Considering the limited evidence of how multi-apping affects current compensation and how it is likely that practices will change in the first year of the new rule, we feel it is prudent not to recommend any downward adjustment in the base pay. Doing so would likely perpetuate the practice of paying delivery workers a sub-minimum wage.

(2) Eliminate the proposed phase in rate. Requiring companies to pay 100% of the full rate ($23.82) as of the effective date of the rule would ensure that workers gain the anticipated benefits of the higher compensation level immediately.

(3) As the new rule is implemented, it is critical for DCWP to collect and provide access to data to enable workers, labor organizations, and researchers, as well as DCWP staff, to monitor implementation and evaluate the rule's effectiveness at ensuring that delivery workers receive fair compensation and that the new minimum compensation level results in financial and wellbeing gains. We recommend requiring third-party food delivery or courier services to collect and report to DCWP data on worker equipment theft and breakage and on-the-job accidents and injury. Such data would enable DCWP to assess the need to re-evaluate the hourly expense component of the minimum compensation rate and whether additional regulations are required to improve the safety of food delivery work.

Thank you for the opportunity to present our comments today. We are happy to clarify or elaborate on our remarks and look forward to working with DCWP and the city's food delivery workforce as the rules are implemented.

Comment attachment

Comments-on-DCWP-2nd-Proposed-Rule-4-7-23.pdf

Comment added April 6, 2023 12:14pm

- Bria McNeal

Don't be greedy. Pay people a fare wage!

Comment added April 6, 2023 12:33pm

- Victoria Hernandez

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 6, 2023 12:39pm

- Brendan O'Connor

At the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, it was delivery workers who kept New York City fed and its restaurants in business. That these workers still are not guaranteed a minimum wage is unacceptable; likewise, the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 is unacceptable. As a result of this decision, these workers, who rely on tips to make ends meet, have had at least five months of pay withheld. They must be granted a minimum wage immediately.

Comment added April 6, 2023 12:52pm

- James Jones

As a remote tech worker living in Manhattan I fully support minimum pay for food delivery workers. It would be barbarism to do anything else.

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:00pm

- Jaime Caro

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:00pm

- Chia Kwa

I think delivery workers should absolutely be guaranteed a living wage. If that is not possible, then the business model of these delivery apps is not viable, and we should not allow them to exploit desperate people until they are the only option for consumers left.

I think the onus should mainly fall to the well-capitalized delivery apps to provide funding for the business model they disrupted, rather than on restaurants who have been forced to go along in order to survive.

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:09pm

- Dana

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:11pm

- Karen

Minimum pay is the minimum!!! They deserve gold!!! Delivery workers keep this city alive!!!!

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:11pm

- Jon Golbe

Pls do what you can to see that these workers are paid a fair, living wage!
No reason they shouldnt make enough to live.

As taxpayers we essentially subsidize businesses when their workers couldnt survive without public assistance. The businesses should pay

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:11pm

- Ben

Food delivery workers are essential workers. More powerful than simply thanking essential workers is supporting them and making sure their work is adequately compensated. Ensuring a minimum wage is the least the city can do to contribute to the wellbeing of all New Yorkers.

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:15pm

- Alex Dinndorf

Huge tech companies like Uber should have to pay their delivery workers. They are effectively employees of these corporations.

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:19pm

- Adam Simms

It's absolutely vital that we determine a minimum wage for food delivery workers. These folks have become a vital and important part of nyc lifestyle, especially since the pandemic and should be compensated as such. The people who came made this a common and expected resource should share in the cost of it as much as they benefit from its success.

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:25pm

- Hailey Graf

I stand with Deliveristas and their fight for minimum pay!

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

It's not fair – they're very much so essential to NYC's economy – food delivery apps are here to stay and we MUST pay them a living wage!

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:32pm

- Ciara Ruddock

Delivery workers should be paid a living wage – it is a human rights issue to pay these individuals less than minimum wage

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:42pm

- Sebastian

I support the Deliveristas in their fight for better pay and working conditions. They work so hard in all weather and all times of day, and they deserve to make a living wage and have a good quality of life. Solidarity with the Deliveristas!

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:45pm

- Matt Fisher

These workers keep our city running. Instead of continuing on with the status quo of corporations raking in huge profits, the workers deserve a living wage.

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:50pm

- Maria Aramendi

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I urge the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection to issue a final rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 immediately. There's no more time for delay.

Comment added April 6, 2023 1:57pm

- Raul Maldonado

I'm grateful for the cyclist delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home.

I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families.

I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips.

Let's get delivery workers minimum wage now!

Comment added April 6, 2023 2:04pm

- Jimmy R.

All that we ask for is a stable, minimum wage that would allow us to financially sustain ourselves for the huge amount of hours that we put in for very low earnings. Why is that so much to ask for when this is one of the most expensive cities in the world? It's not right how some of us work over 60 hours a week to make less than a part-time waiter working at a restaurant. When, if ever, is this change going to begin? I remember hearing about this in the fall of 2021 and it's already nearly 2 years later and still nothing yet. If we're supposed to be getting paid $19.96 per hour, why do we have to wait several years after this law is passed to finally get paid fully for our dedication and labor? Also, there's no retroactive pay that we'll receive for the time that this law should've been put into effect on January 1st, 2023. It's already April 2023! Also, I'm not in agreement with being paid fifty cents a minute, that's not what the original law called for and was not part of the plan. I don't like that. How are you just going to backstab the workforce like that? Why is the city now backpedaling on the progress that was supposed to come? That's like taking 10 steps forward and then 10 steps back. Please pay us a guaranteed, hourly rate. I seriously can't emphasize enough how important that it is. It would finally mean stability. This is a disgrace what delivery workers have to continue experiencing. The delivery apps make a living on the backs of hardworking men and women at their expense using their own equipment. I hope that the city listens to us.

Comment added April 6, 2023 2:05pm

- Nolan C

A minimum wage is necessary for workers to survive the cost of living. Delivery workers have the right to work without discrimination. In this economy, our hardest working should be rewarded and even though $24 is not enough, it is better than $19!

The "Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers" law is a basic human right.

Comment added April 6, 2023 2:35pm

- Kayla

It is horrific to see that delivery workers are underpaid in a society that has become so dependent on them. Delivery workers are the real heroes of NYC and should be treated as such. Tips are not a livable wage especially when most people do not tip. $24 is barely enough of a livable wage for these workers who are exploited by their employers and usually forced to work in harsh weather conditions. The city would literally crumble without delivery workers! Pay them what they deserve!! They work much harder than the administration who employs them.

Comment added April 6, 2023 2:36pm

- Alvin A.

My name is Alvin.

I enjoy Dashing & I reside in the borough of Queens.

I am sending this statement In opposition to the NYC proposed pay regulations that encourage platforms to restrict delivery worker schedule flexibility.

What I like about being a Dasher:

I began Doordash food delivery in July 2022 as a means to earn income on an exceptionally flexible schedule to pursue my profession as a musician/composer/producer.

Comment added April 6, 2023 2:41pm

- Clara B

I fully support a minimum wage of at least $25 per hour for food delivery workers. They are absolutely essential to NYC residents. They endure peril every day and ought to be protected and properly compensated.

Comment added April 6, 2023 2:43pm

- Alex Falk

Deliveristas hold the city together. They deserve not only fair and liveable compensation but also robust protections for the receipt of that compensation, including tips and compensation for long or difficult orders. I stand in support.

Comment added April 6, 2023 2:50pm

- Daniela J. Cardona

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 3:06pm

- Alberta Maldona

I support the increase of the minimum wage. We, delivery workers, should get paid 29.96 dollars per hour. Also, the city shall pay attention to the wage theft committed by the platforms.

Comment added April 6, 2023 3:10pm

- Alan Hernandez

Soy deliverista en Nueva York, haciendo deliveries para las apps. Apoyo el pago minimo que el gobierno de la ciudad de Nueva York propone.

Este pago minimo sera de $29.93 por hora para los deliveristas que trabajan para las apps que pagan por delivery, y recibiremos 50 centavos por minuto desde el momento que aceptamos una orden hasta que

hagamos la entrega. Solo recibimos pago cuando hacemos deliveries. Tambien apoyo el pago de $17.96 por hora para los deliveristas que reciben pago por hora.

Este pago minimo me va a permitir cubrir mis gastos de operacion y cubrir el costo de vida en esta ciudad.

Soy un trabajador esencial y merezco el derecho basico de un pago minimo.

Gracias al Mayor y al Departamento de Proteccion al Consumidor y Trabajador por esta nueva ley que nos da derecho a un pago minimo, y que nos beneficia a todos los deliveristas y tambien a los consumidores, porque nos va a permitir trabajar con seguridad economica y mantener la buena calidad de nuestros servicios.

Comment added April 6, 2023 3:11pm

- Ryan Cowles

As a supporter of gig workers across the country, I am deeply disappointed by the recent decision of the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection to delay the implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips to make ends meet.

It is unacceptable that these workers, who have already faced significant challenges during the pandemic, are being further burdened by the lack of action taken by the government. We cannot afford to wait any longer to ensure that gig workers are paid fairly for their labor.

It is time for us to come together and demand that gig workers receive the compensation they deserve, including a guaranteed minimum wage. We must show our support for these essential workers and hold companies and governments accountable for their treatment.

Let us stand in solidarity with gig workers across the country and demand that they be treated with the dignity and respect they deserve. Together, we can create a fair and just economy that works for all.

Comment added April 6, 2023 3:23pm

- SABRINA

This city would not run without our delivery drivers and riders. During the pandemic they risked their health and safety daily to cater to the city. They deserve better

Comment added April 6, 2023 3:28pm

- Olivia Ramirez Rodríguez

I strongly support the increase in salary for delivery workers. I worked as delivery workers to earn an extra income, and my husband has been a delivery worker for many years. The platforms have used us, the delivery workers, and pay us very little for our work. Many of us have accidents during our work hours, and many times the companies [platforms] retained our wages illegally. Recently, the platform Relay told us that we must vote against the increase of salary or we would lose our job. I do believe that it is a threat. Due to that threat, I strongly support the increase in salary. Thank you!!

Comment added April 6, 2023 3:28pm

- Barrie Cline

I'm still grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and kept many small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home while working. Work has changed since the pandemic and my family still uses food delivery apps and I think it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers deserve living wages to support themselves and their families just as we do. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 3:31pm

- Marcela Pinilla

I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 3:42pm

- Andrea Gordillo

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me, and thousands of my neighbors here on the Lower East Side to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 4:06pm

- Dario k Harris

The minimum wage should apply to EVERYONE in New York City. The various entities that claim not to be employers can say all they want that following the law would put them out of business. Even if true, who cares?

We wouldn't let someone say they can't profitably build new apartments if they're forced to follow fire code, either.

Comment added April 6, 2023 4:09pm

- Wren Mack

Please support these workers and do whatever they ask. They supported us through the pandemic and risked their lives so we could be fed and sometimes even receive stuff that made us more comfortable while we battled Covid at home. They deserve the world. Don't let the apps win.

Comment added April 6, 2023 4:15pm

- Ben Cooper

Not having a minimum wage is inhumane and illegal. The dangerous working conditions for delivery people given the city's failure to enforce safe driving laws makes this especially true.

Comment added April 6, 2023 4:17pm

- Andrew Triola

Pay the deliveristas!

Comment added April 6, 2023 4:24pm

- Courtney Williams

There is barely a person in the City whose ability to be nourished or experience convenience that hasn't been aided by our city's app based delivery workers. Surely, even from the office chair from which you read this, food delivery workers have hauled multiple orders to you so that you can dine and keep your important work on track. If, but especially as their work contributes to the value of every single New Yorker's lives, the value of their time, effort, and the families is NO LESS.

Just like you delivery workers, like all workers, deserve CERTAINTY in their lives regarding the wages they earn to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker

Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021.

This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. You may think delayed wages is fine as long as they get what is coming to them BUT IN THE LIVES OF THE WORKING POOR, DELAYED AND WITHHELD WAGES CAN LAND HONEST AND HONORABLE PEOPLE INTO IRREDEEMABLE FINANCIAL SITUATIONS THAT CAN START WITH A DING TO CREDIT BY SENDING BILLS TO COLLECTIONS AND SNOWBALL INTO EVICTIONS, HOMELESSNESS, AND ALL THE RISKS AND TRAUMAS THAT COME WITH IT THAT YOU YOURSELF WOULD NEVER WANT TO DISCOVER.

There's no time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage today. Companies are not people, and time and again they will show you that they do not have loyalty to any location, any government, or the favors or breaks that you grant them. They are unlike and undeserving of the protection that should be focused on these workers – who did not and do not turn their back on serving fellow New Yorkers.

Ensure the release of the funds and guarantee a living wage for the deliveristas now!

Courtney Williams
The Brown Bike Girl
NYC Bike Mayor

Comment added April 6, 2023 4:24pm

- Nora Jefferies

This is draft of message

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 4:30pm

- Megan DiMotta

Delivery workers continue to be pushed to their limits since the beginning of the pandemic. NYC should not just repay these workers for getting us through the toughest times but more than that delivery workers deserve respect. The DCWP has the opportunity to help provide delivery workers with dignified wages and they shouldn't delay it any longer. Delivery workers and their families should not have to struggle in our communities, they deserve livable wages.

Comment added April 6, 2023 4:31pm

- William D. Freeman

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 4:37pm

- Joshe Ordonez

As the Founder and CEO of a venture-capital-backed tech and logistics startup, I witness firsthand the difficulties faced by delivery drivers and bikers on a daily basis. Their job not only involves the timely delivery of food but also ensuring that they drive safely to prevent any accidents, thus protecting themselves and other individuals on the road. This is an incredibly stressful and risky profession that requires adequate compensation.

As a CEO, I also understand the need to keep costs low to offer competitive pricing to consumers. However, companies must not create false expectations of service while disregarding the human cost. Consumers must be aware of the implications, efforts, and impact of their choices as convenience comes with a price.

Large software companies can adopt alternative measures such as retaining only essential staff for operations and software development and reducing corporate expenses instead of burdening labor.

Delivery workers should receive a wage that is significantly higher than the minimum wage. It is the responsibility of New York City to ensure that its citizens are taken care of. The disparity created by companies in the workers' economy is a public issue that requires the city to provide other services and assistance.

New York City must also take action to improve infrastructure and create policies that ease the burden on delivery workers, such as restricting parking, reducing excessive parking tickets, and more.

Comment added April 6, 2023 4:41pm

- Luis Feliz Leon

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 4:54pm

- Carlos Villavicencio

Yo apoyo para que los trabajadores de entrega a domicilio de la ciudad de NY se les incremente el salario mínimo.

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:00pm

- Patrick Breen

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:07pm

- Casey

Delivery workers work through the conditions where the rest of us want to stay home. They deserve a minimum wage and the tips customers give intending for it to go to the workers.

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:10pm

- Aquiles Saz

Food delivery workers provide great service for many disabled people in our communities. They deserve a better and higher base salary

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:13pm

- Lynne Elizabeth

Food delivery and courier services are essential to a city, especially one as dense as New York City, and each and every one of these workers deserves to be paid at least minimum wage. Please establish rules to assure that these workers are paid fairly and regularly. Please protect them from abuse by the agencies that hire them. They work in stressful conditions and in every weather. I speak as a grateful senior citizen who depends often on deliveries of food and prescriptions.

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:15pm

- E. Ives

Pay these delivery workers fair wages. They keep the city running when the weather's bad, when people are sick, disabled, etc. Stop putting the responsibility of fair wages on customer tips, make companies pay their workers fairly.

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:26pm

- Deborah H.

Minimum wage is necessary for workers to have fair rights and fight back against discrimination. Mayor Adams's administration promised a $24 minimum wage and then they reduced it to a $19 wage. That's not a living wage! These workers are marginalized people and often exploited yet they have not turned their back on us! They deserve protection, dignity, and a living wage. This law has been delayed since 2021! I can't imagine this City without delivery workers!

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:26pm

- Jocelyn

I am writing to express my support of this initiative.

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:27pm

- Tasia

Delivery workers deserve their tips and should get a minimum wage. They were vital during the quarantine. Why deny them a living wage?

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:29pm

- Lily Puckett

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:31pm

- Bryan

GUARANTEE MINIMUM WAGES FOR ALL WORKERS

No one should be making less than $30 an hour in this city!

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:34pm

- Michael Azerrad

Like everyone else, food delivery workers deserve a living wage. How about $15/hour, minimum.

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:34pm

- Osman

pay all workers more. this excludes cops because cops are not workers (they are barely even human)

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:34pm

- Althea L

April 6, 2023

Vilda Vera Mayuga, Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway
New York, N.Y. 10004

Re: Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Service Workers

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

We write to you both as students of the City University of New York School of Law who are deeply concerned about the rights and working conditions of delivery workers in our city, and as customers of app-based delivery platforms. We agree wholeheartedly with the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (“DCWP”) that minimum pay standards must be set for app-based delivery workers, and we applaud the agency for taking steps to do so. However, DCWP must adopt a minimum pay scheme that ensures a fair, living wage for delivery workers, and it must do so quickly.

While we appreciate the convenience of ordering delivery through apps, we are troubled by the way app companies treat the delivery workers who are vital to their operations. Their insistence on cutting corners and classifying delivery workers as independent contractors leaves these essential workers without benefits and bearing the high costs of work equipment and any injuries sustained on the job. Because of their status as independent contractors rather than employees, delivery workers are personally responsible for purchasing and maintaining their own bikes, which is a substantial financial burden that would ordinarily be borne by the employer. The burden of these expenses is not reflected in delivery workers’ wages, which average around $12.21 per hour including tips or $7.87 per hour without tips, both of which are well below the citywide minimum wage of $15 per hour. Furthermore, these apps’ algorithms strongly incentivize delivery workers to make as many deliveries as quickly as possible. These onerous quotas can only be met by biking unsafely, lest delivery workers be deactivated from the apps and lose their livelihoods.

It is imperative that DCWP adopt a minimum pay rate that will require delivery apps to pay a fair wage to the workers who perform the dangerous, necessary labor that allows these companies to thrive. A fair wage is crucial to offsetting the hazards of the job and the high costs of maintaining equipment that delivery workers are forced to bear. At minimum, delivery workers must be paid the $23.82 hourly rate proposed in the original rule, if not more. It is a slap in the face to the 65,000 delivery workers who endure volatile weather, dangerous traffic conditions, and provide hot meals to other New Yorkers for DWCP to devalue their service by reducing the proposed minimum wage to $19.96 per hour. This is a sub-living wage in New York City, especially considering the business costs that delivery workers are required to pay out of their own pockets.

It is cruel to workers for DCWP set a lesser wage based on the industry's overblown fear of delivery workers using multiple apps simultaneously, or "multi-apping". Other comparable workers, such as Uber and Lyft drivers, are not held to this standard in their minimum pay rules. The delivery app's concern is one of their own creation, as this phenomenon occurs as a direct result of the substandard wages delivery workers are making right now. The low wages, coupled with rising equipment costs, force workers to overwork themselves and "multi-app" when necessity demands. With an adequate minimum wage in place, delivery workers would have less of a need to work for multiple apps at once. If app companies are so concerned about controlling whether delivery workers are "multi-apping," they should pay them appropriately. Underpaying delivery workers only serves to ensure that these workers will feel pressured to "multi-app" in order to support their families in the face of inflation and an ever-increasing cost of living.

Perhaps most importantly, DWCP must adopt a fair minimum pay scheme quickly and abandon the proposed phase-in model. The agency has already delayed enacting minimum pay for delivery workers, which was required to go into effect on January 1, 2023. Every day without the full minimum pay protections in place is another day that the delivery apps are given the green light to exploit and grossly underpay workers for their essential labor. Delivery workers deserved fair pay long ago, and continued delay is unacceptable.

In the past decade, we have seen apps like DoorDash, Grubhub, and UberEats take over in the restaurant industry, displacing the delivery workers that restaurants used to employ. This leaves few options for New Yorkers to order delivery without participating in the app economy. Knowing that such companies are infamous for exploiting workers forces consumers to participate in this exploitation. As consumers and as law students who care deeply about labor issues, we demand that your agency act without further delay to ensure delivery workers are fairly compensated for their essential work. Delivery workers have already been exploited for years and will continue to be until your agency implements Local Law 115 of 2021 and protects them from exploitation at the hands of the app industry.

In solidarity,

Chloe Carter-Daves, 2L FT

Althea Lamel, 2L FT

Pablo Aguilar, 2L FT

Kate Macrae, 2L FT

Liz Pudel, 3L FT

Xhoana Ahmeti, 3L FT

Jake Heller, 2L FT

Brenna Wolfe, 3L FT

Jennifer Rubinshteyn, 1L FT

Amelia Mullaney, 2L FT

Jaclyn Spencer, 2L FT

Maggie Israel, 1L FT

Gabriel Slaughter, 1L FT

Anna Kim, 3L FT

Cameron Cory, 2L FT

Nina McKenna, 1L FT
Eric Horowitz, 2L FT
Jen Neuman, 2L FT
Nadeem Yamak, 2L FT
Anand Bradley, 2L FT
Samanta Honigman, 3L FT
Annie Abreu, 2L FT
Ashley Gomez, 2L FT
Priscilia Martinez, 2L FT
Jaylene Gomez, 2L FT
Dana Klasky, 2L FT
Nic Shugar, 3L FT
Serena Malkani, 2L FT
Benita von Lilienfeld-Berry, 2L FT
Samiha Jamal, 2L FT
Katherine Corwin, 2L FT
Nia Wilson, 2L FT
Verleatha Hill

Comment attachment

Minimum-Pay-for-Delivery-Food-Service-Workers-Comment.docx

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:37pm

April 6, 2023

Vilda Vera Mayuga, Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway
New York, N.Y. 10004

Re: Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Service Workers

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

We write to you both as students of the City University of New York School of Law who are deeply concerned about the rights and working conditions of delivery workers in our city, and as customers of app-based delivery platforms. We agree wholeheartedly with the Department of Consumer and Worker

Protection (“DCWP”) that minimum pay standards must be set for app-based delivery workers, and we applaud the agency for taking steps to do so. However, DCWP must adopt a minimum pay scheme that ensures a fair, living wage for delivery workers, and it must do so quickly.

While we appreciate the convenience of ordering delivery through apps, we are troubled by the way app companies treat the delivery workers who are vital to their operations. Their insistence on cutting corners and classifying delivery workers as independent contractors leaves these essential workers without benefits and bearing the high costs of work equipment and any injuries sustained on the job. Because of their status as independent contractors rather than employees, delivery workers are personally responsible for purchasing and maintaining their own bikes, which is a substantial financial burden that would ordinarily be borne by the employer. The burden of these expenses is not reflected in delivery workers’ wages, which average around $12.21 per hour including tips or $7.87 per hour without tips, both of which are well below the citywide minimum wage of $15 per hour. Furthermore, these apps’ algorithms strongly incentivize delivery workers to make as many deliveries as quickly as possible. These onerous quotas can only be met by biking unsafely, lest delivery workers be deactivated from the apps and lose their livelihoods.

It is imperative that DCWP adopt a minimum pay rate that will require delivery apps to pay a fair wage to the workers who perform the dangerous, necessary labor that allows these companies to thrive. A fair wage is crucial to offsetting the hazards of the job and the high costs of maintaining equipment that delivery workers are forced to bear. At minimum, delivery workers must be paid the $23.82 hourly rate proposed in the original rule, if not more. It is a slap in the face to the 65,000 delivery workers who endure volatile weather, dangerous traffic conditions, and provide hot meals to other New Yorkers for DWCP to devalue their service by reducing the proposed minimum wage to $19.96 per hour. This is a sub-living wage in New York City, especially considering the business costs that delivery workers are required to pay out of their own pockets.

It is cruel to workers for DCWP set a lesser wage based on the industry’s overblown fear of delivery workers using multiple apps simultaneously, or “multi-apping”. Other comparable workers, such as Uber and Lyft drivers, are not held to this standard in their minimum pay rules. The delivery app’s concern is one of their own creation, as this phenomenon occurs as a direct result of the substandard wages delivery workers are making right now. The low wages, coupled with rising equipment costs, force workers to overwork themselves and “multi-app” when necessity demands. With an adequate minimum wage in place, delivery workers would have less of a need to work for multiple apps at once. If app companies are so concerned about controlling whether delivery workers are “multi-apping,” they should pay them appropriately. Underpaying delivery workers only serves to ensure that these workers will feel pressured to “multi-app” in order to support their families in the face of inflation and an ever-increasing cost of living.

Perhaps most importantly, DWCP must adopt a fair minimum pay scheme quickly and abandon the proposed phase-in model. The agency has already delayed enacting minimum pay for delivery workers, which was required to go into effect on January 1, 2023. Every day without the full minimum pay protections in place is another day that the delivery apps are given the green light to exploit and grossly underpay workers for their essential labor. Delivery workers deserved fair pay long ago, and continued delay is unacceptable.

In the past decade, we have seen apps like DoorDash, Grubhub, and UberEats take over in the restaurant industry, displacing the delivery workers that restaurants used to employ. This leaves few options for New Yorkers to order delivery without participating in the app economy. Knowing that such companies are infamous for exploiting workers forces consumers to participate in this exploitation. As consumers and as law students who care deeply about labor issues, we demand that your agency act without further delay to ensure delivery workers are fairly compensated for their essential work. Delivery workers have already been exploited for years and will continue to be until your agency implements Local Law 115 of 2021 and protects them from exploitation at the hands of the app industry.

In solidarity,

Chloe Carter-Daves, 2L FT
Althea Lamel, 2L FT
Pablo Aguilar, 2L FT
Kate Macrae, 2L FT
Liz Pudel, 3L FT
Xhoana Ahmeti, 3L FT
Jake Heller, 2L FT
Brenna Wolfe, 3L FT
Jennifer Rubinshteyn, 1L FT
Amelia Mullaney, 2L FT
Jaclyn Spencer, 2L FT
Maggie Israel, 1L FT
Gabriel Slaughter, 1L FT
Anna Kim, 3L FT
Cameron Cory, 2L FT
Nina McKenna, 1L FT
Eric Horowitz, 2L FT
Jen Neuman, 2L FT
Nadeem Yamak, 2L FT
Anand Bradley, 2L FT
Samanta Honigman, 3L FT
Annie Abreu, 2L FT
Ashley Gomez, 2L FT
Priscilia Martinez, 2L FT
Jaylene Gomez, 2L FT
Dana Klasky, 2L FT
Nic Shugar, 3L FT
Serena Malkani, 2L FT
Benita von Lilienfeld-Berry, 2L FT
Samiha Jamal, 2L FT
Katherine Corwin, 2L FT
Nia Wilson, 2L FT
Verleatha Hill

- Angela Azzolino

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:39pm

- Jaya Saxena

I wholeheartedly support minimum, fair wages for delivery workers

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:54pm

- Sonia

Claro que deberían ganar el salario mínimo es un trabajo digno, como cualquier otro trabajo que pagan el mínimo salario

Comment added April 6, 2023 5:54pm

- Josue

Si que se le aumenten a estas personas

Comment added April 6, 2023 6:08pm

- Glenn Robinson

I believe food delivery workers deserve a min pay of $24/hour. NYC is expensive, rents are high, bikes and maintenance can be pricey, and food delivery is in high demand. It's time to set the standard.

Comment added April 6, 2023 6:24pm

- Juan

Que se aplique la ley por que merecemos ganar un pago justo

Comment added April 6, 2023 6:41pm

- Irak Cehonski

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families.

There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 6:55pm

- Caleb Duncan

These workers kept us safe during a once in a lifetime pandemic. Pay them a living wage in the most expensive city in the world.

Comment added April 6, 2023 6:56pm

- Yogui

I frequently use food delivery apps, and have friends who work in the industry as app based delivery workers. For many of these men and women this is a job like any other and not a side gig. Therefore, they should be paid accordingly and on time for the services they provide. During the COVID19 health crisis, many city residents used these apps to have their orders safely delivered to their house without having to risk exposure to the virus themselves. The service these workers paid the city in her time of need was priceless.

Comment added April 6, 2023 7:03pm

- Larissa E

This city needs to ensure a LIVABLE minimum wage for our delivery workers, a vital part of this city. Reissuing the Local Law 115 of 2021 decision is causing unnecessary delay. Delivery workers are essential to me, my roommates, small businesses, my coworkers, etc. This city depends on delivery workers and they NEED this minimum wage guaranteed.

Comment added April 6, 2023 7:20pm

- Nancy

These workers have kept us fed during unprecedented times and keep doing it rain or shine. They deserve a living wage and protection from corporate exploitation. They should also have their hubs to rest, charge their bikes and whatever they need on long days of work.
All my support for them!

Comment added April 6, 2023 7:21pm

- Huich In

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 7:29pm

- Cindy Onika Charles

My name is Cindy. I live in Brooklyn, NYC, and have been working as Dasher with DoorDash for the past 2 years. I am writing in opposition to the requirement under NYC's proposed pay rule... As a full-time student, I need to be able to have an income that allows me to work around my schedule. This is why I've chosen this kind of work. I need to be able to decide when I work and how much I work each week.

Comment added April 6, 2023 7:39pm

- Council Member Lincoln Restler, District 33

Local Law 115 of 2021 was clear: implement a fair minimum wage for delivery workers by January 1, 2023. I am deeply disappointed that the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection (DCWP) has caved to the demands of delivery app companies and failed to protect Deliveristas in a timely fashion. The newly proposed rule is not only months behind schedule, but would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate.

Deliveristas are essential to New York City. These 65,000 New Yorkers work arduous hours ensuring that people are fed and helping our small businesses survive. We would not have made it through the pandemic without them and continue to rely on them daily. They deserve to make a living wage and be protected from corporate wage theft. Each additional day of delay is unacceptable.

The proposal to reduce workers' pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called "multi-apping," is premised on faulty assumptions and there is no evidence that this practice would impact pay. Delivery workers do not get paid during their on-call or waiting time, and therefore, like FHV drivers, they should not be penalized for waiting for jobs from several potential sources. Further, DCWP's proposed deduction is overinflated and based on outdated data about delivery driver activity.

Despite already being months behind the legal deadline to increase wages, the new proposed rule also continues to include a “phase in” to allow corporations to further delay paying fair wages for an additional two years. New York’s $15 minimum wage went into effect four years ago without a phase in, and TLC driver pay rules similarly went into effect immediately. There is no conceivable justification for allowing corporations to continue to profit on the backs of essential workers.

Additionally, corporations are already attempting to undermine proposed pay rates through practices such as “order bundling,” which allow app companies to reduce workers’ pay by sending multiple orders in one trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harmful business practices will undermine the intent of the law.

On top of these continued delays and carve outs, rising inflation costs are decreasing net pay to delivery workers who are already struggling to get by. We cannot continue to let large corporations undermine this process. I urge DCWP to promptly strengthen these rules and ensure Deliveristas finally start getting paid the wages they deserve.

Lincoln Restler, New York City Council Member, District 33

Comment attachment

LRestler-Delivery-minimum-wage.pdf

Comment added April 6, 2023 7:40pm

- Vladimir Vince

Food delivery workers deserve fair pay from the third party services they work for. The delivery workers were on the front lines of the COVID-19 pandemic, risking their lives to feed the rest of us New Yorkers.

I regularly use food delivery apps such as Seamless and I believe it’s unacceptable that New York City’s food delivery workers still aren’t guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support their families.

I'm deeply disappointed by the Dept of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from these workers who rely on tips.

There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 7:42pm

- Philipp Rassmann

Please support a living wage for delivery workers! Thank you!

Comment added April 6, 2023 7:42pm

- Christopher Metellus

My name is Christopher metellus and I live in Brooklyn, NY. I have been apart of door dash platform since May 2020. I worked as a dasher for 2 year and approximately 7 months. I am not in favor of NYC's proposed pay rule for numerous reasons. Given the cost of living in New York, I rely on the door dash as supplemental income to meet the rising cost and make ends meet. I am able to pay majority of my bills with the assistance of doing door dash for a few hours a day during peak hours and on the weekend. It provides flexibility and stability as I also have a full time job. I am able to maintain a work life balance. Such proposed NYC required law would be detrimental to not only my income but for me to provide for my family across the board. I have chosen this line of work as I enjoy and get fulfillment on ensuring great customer service, receiving tip incentives from customers for ensuring timeliness of deliveries. I want to be in control and be able to work freely at any given time during the week. Please do not allow such proposed law to go in effect.

Comment added April 6, 2023 8:03pm

- Cindy Charles

My name is Cindy. I live in Brooklyn, NYC, and have been working as Dasher with DoorDash for the past 2 years. I deliver with DoorDash part-time, and use my earnings from delivery work to support my non-profit organization that aims to improve children's literacy in my home country of Guyana. I am writing in opposition to the requirement under NYC's proposed pay rule. I need to be able to have an income that allows me to work around my schedule. This is why I've chosen this kind of work.

Comment added April 6, 2023 8:14pm

- Lindsey

Yes this is a good idea. We need to take care of our food delivery workers. They work hard.

Comment added April 6, 2023 8:20pm

- Brendan Hogan

Protect and recognize these laborers who are the lifeblood of our beautiful city.

Comment added April 6, 2023 8:36pm

- Adam Casey

Food delivery workers deserve fair pay from the third-party services they work for. The delivery workers were on the front lines of the CoVid-19 pandemic and risked their lives to feed fellow New Yorkers.

Comment added April 6, 2023 8:43pm

- Ricardo Zamarripa

It's time the city fulfill their promise they made to los Deliveristas and require the apps to pay them a fair wage. 3 months has been too long.

Comment added April 6, 2023 8:45pm

- Darriel

Please pay the workers their fair wage now. They deserve it

Comment added April 6, 2023 8:51pm

- Kevin Costa

I am so grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and I am confused about the withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips–what?! That seems unacceptable and there's no more time for delay! We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Thanks!

Comment added April 6, 2023 8:57pm

- Bright D Limm

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub, and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 9:03pm

- Daniel DiPietro

deliveritas deserve the same protections that typical wage workers have. The app companies have exploited the rules to avoid minimum wage laws. NYC should not allow there resident workers to lose out to the big app companies. deliveristas should be paid at least minimum hourly wage.

Comment added April 6, 2023 9:13pm

- Ethan

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 6, 2023 9:19pm

- Abigail Swenstein

How can this city not support the workers that make it run? This is inhumane. It's time to support the folks who do so much for everyone else.

Comment added April 6, 2023 9:51pm

- Wilson

Disregard those on here that say they're opposed to us getting paid $18 per hour. Those are people hired by the companies, it's obvious. We want hourly pay, it'll help us out financially as we deserve it.

Comment added April 6, 2023 9:55pm

- George Hagstrom

I'm writing to express strong support for improved compensation and working standards for delivery workers in NYC. They are one of the most important forces keeping our city running, but their job is difficult and often dangerous, yet we consistently under-appreciate them. They have organized and their requests are very reasonable.

Sincerely,
George Hagstrom

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:03pm

- Lucia D

Delivery workers truly fuel our whole city, and are working through the worst conditions all while making app/tech companies rich. I strongly encourage DCWP to reconsider its latest proposal and offer deliveristas the highest minimum wage possible. There has already been too much delay in this process, and they'll never make back what they've already lost, so it's imperative that DCWP comes out with the strongest possible policy for giving deliveristas the highest possible minimum wage.

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:05pm

- Jessie Gavin

My name is Jessie , I live in NYC , Manhattan . I have been dashing for about 3-4 years on and off .

I am against the NYC proposal pay rule that would stop me from using DoorDash the way that works best in my life .

Since it is so flexible I am able to use it as a second source of income aside from my full time job . If this changes . I can lose the income I depend on to support myself .

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:07pm

- Jesse Pringle

It's reasonable and fair for delivery drivers to make enough to live on.

Comment added April 6, 2023 10:44pm

- William Meehan

Delivery workers deserve a minimum wage so that they can depend on a baseline income. Apps today incentivize speed and heavily punish those who aren't as fast as possible; this encourages risky behavior like riding their bikes against traffic. By providing delivery workers with a minimum wage, we will also be keeping them safer.

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:03pm

- Shane M Holmes

I use food apps all the time. I am so grateful for the workers who risk their lives to make my life a little bit easier. I often order food when the weather is bad, and I know it can not be easy to deliver food in bad weather. All those people deserve everything.

Comment added April 6, 2023 11:22pm

- Katherine Huyett

Delivery workers are critical to New York City life – especially for giving us the ability to order food when sick or injured. I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 6:47am

- Veronica Avila

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept NYC fed and countless small businesses afloat during the pandemic. I regularly use food delivery apps like DoorDash, UberEats, and Grubhub, and I believe it's UNACCEPTABLE that NYC's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families.

I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementing Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay; delivery workers deserve a fair wage NOW.

Comment added April 7, 2023 7:07am

- Bill Bruno

Delivery workers kept New York City kept countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people to stay safe at home while still patronizing those businesses. Food delivery apps such as DoorDash, Uber Eats and GrubHub are regularly used in this city and the fact that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage is deplorable. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This is an unnecessary delay that is withholding at months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. The time for delivery workers to have a minimum wage is now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 7:12am

- David Goldstein

Good morning:

I do support the increase in the minimum wage for delivery workers. Being a delivery worker in NYC or any other part of the United States is a difficult job, and delivery workers deserve dignity and respect. I was a delivery worker and am currently a teacher; thus, being a deliverista is part of my story. Also, I want to emphasize the intimidation campaign against those workers that support the city rule to improve the lives of delivery workers. I have interviewed many workers harassed by platforms such as Relay, DoorDash, and others platforms. The intimidation campaign of the companies goes from sending texts to the workers to vote against this proposal or using other workers hired by the platforms to harass the workers in favor.

While the former might be legal, it is clear that the latter violates not just the National Labor Relations Act but also the different Department of Labor ruling. I have followed for the last month a page called Anti-Deliveristas Unidos, a page that fits the traditional profile of an anti-union busting campaign launched by companies to derail any effort of the workers to improve their lives. I urge the Adam's Administration and the City Council of New York City to investigate this Facebook page because of the amount of harassment and threat against the organization Workplace Justice Project, the leadership, and also some journalists who violate city, state, and federal laws. Those practices resemble the 1930s and 1940s, when companies hired mobsters to intimidate the workers. It is paramount that the administration stops this type of intimidation immediately. Those practices undermine the basic foundations of our democracy. Thank you

Please investigate this page NOW:

<https://www.facebook.com/groups/2309635352551022>

Comment added April 7, 2023 8:13am

- Katie McCarthy

Delivery workers have a right to a stable wage. They are working year round in all weather, riding in traffic breathing in fumes from cars to help New Yorkers get what they need quickly and easily. They have a right to a guaranteed minimum plus being paid for time they are waiting. Being a delivery worker is dangerous and they deserve hazard pay when the weather is bad or late at night.

Comment added April 7, 2023 8:21am

- sk

everyone deserves to be paid for their time working. i worked as a courier for one of the app-based delivery companies in 2016/2017 and remember doing the math on some slow days where i would have to wait around outside for a delivery to come in and i definitely was under minimum wage (at those year's rates), on average, by the end of the day because the only time i was paid for was when i was making a delivery. this didn't include the time to travel to the business to pick up whatever product which sometimes took not an insignificant proportion of an hour's time to travel to. because i was delivering some items that were not necessarily food, many customers did not feel the need to tip and without that additional pay, some of the shorter trips would be far below minimum wage at the company's per trip base pay. this necessitated taking multiple deliveries per hour which were not necessarily even on a logical pickup/delivery route and required unsafe rushing during travel. and because the pickup/drop off locations were often times not near one another the result was slower delivery to the customer down route which reduced tip amounts. there is something wrong with the system if i earned less than minimum wage (for the time spent logged into the delivery app waiting for and between deliveries) despite completing over 1000 deliveries in a year with a near perfect rating. the time to fix this is now, not years from now. the companies have had plenty of time to sort this issue out and they are deliberately dragging their feet to continue to exploit their labor. no more. these workers already don't receive many benefits typically offered to employees because of their classification, they at least deserve to be paid a fair wage

Comment added April 7, 2023 8:25am

- Mel Peterson

Pay them a fair and living wage!

Comment added April 7, 2023 8:52am

- Sean

A minimum wage for delivery workers is essential.

Comment added April 7, 2023 8:53am

- Sophia Tareen

The delivery workers of New York City were deemed essential workers at the height of the pandemic and yet are subject to extremely low pay and poor working conditions. These workers deserve a livable wage and the city must support them!

Comment added April 7, 2023 8:55am

- Kevin Fagan

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:03am

- Nicole S

Deliveristas deserve a minimum wage to ensure they can live in this city with health and dignity

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:09am

- Ana

Pago mínimo es lo MÍNIMO que podemos dar a los deliveristas, que nos salvaron la vida cuando estábamos en la cuarentena.

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:11am

- Sam Anderson

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum pay now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:19am

- Barak Friedman

Deliveristas deserve a fair wage!!!

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:21am

- Rachel

Please give delivery workers fair pay! They have extremely dangerous jobs and kept the city going through the pandemic.

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:21am

- Rani

I urge the city to support minimum pay for food delivery in nyc. Our delivery workers are an essential part of the city and work so hard to make new york the way that it is. In an expensive city like nyc we need to support our essential workers' ability to live and survive in the city.

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:25am

- Crystal E

Delivery workers deserve a better and fair pay for the work that they do. Food delivery is a convenience that all of us NYers use. Those workers deserve to have a liveable wage and much more.

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:25am

- C Coco

The delivery workers of NYC collectively deserve a livable wage to support themselves and family, whether it's their side gig or primary hustle. Delivery workers are essential to New York City, and demonstrated throughout the pandemic. There's no reason for their life to be put at risk for little to nothing to show for it. A higher income will prove to show self value

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:26am

- Diana Moreno

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:33am

- Samanta

DCWP should reconsider their proposed pay rates for delivery drivers. For whatever reason it was lowered to $19, 4 dollars lower than the previous $23 an hour. Delivery drivers risk both their own investments and their lives when they go out there to deliver food to people all across NYC. Because they are independent contractors their employers do not provide them with equipment or the means to deliver. This means drivers must invest in expensive bikes themselves and take care of the maintenance all at their own cost. Without a $23 /hour minimum, these drivers will continue to lose or not break even. That's not even considering the dangers of their job which is also not covered under their employment contracts. Usually when someone is hurt on the job, they receive workers compensation, however due to the nature of the contractor position and the big app companies' desire to lower their own liability, many drivers are left to pay for their own accidents (even when not at fault). Since we as an entire city relied so heavily on these essential workers during COVID and today, they should be compensated fairly. REVISE and upgrade their pay to $23/hour.

Thank you

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:35am

- Mateo Porciuncula

I know this sounds obvious but food delivery workers are workers too and it's high time they are acknowledged and treated with dignity. Fair pay is part of it.

Looking forward for rules and effective enforcement for minimum pay that are according to what a person needs to live in New York city. Companies working here can afford it and it's the responsibility and duty of our city to protect its residents from exploitation.

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:39am

- Aaditya Vishwanath

Hello,

I live in Hells Kitchen and I am in favor of this proposed rule.

I am disappointed at the reissuance and the rules.

Deliveristas deserve a living wage.

Thanks,

Adi

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:40am

- Michael W Corsillo

I'm beyond grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. Nobody should be working full time and unable to meet their basic needs. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now. New York City cannot pretend to care about workers unless it takes steps to protect all workers, including these folks with whom the city would collapse.

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:45am

- Sergio solano

Me dirijo a ustedes soy un repartidor de comida en nyc desde el 2006 he trabajado en diferentes restaurantes y desde la pandemia estoy trabajando con la aplicación de Doordash y siempre nos han pagado muy bajo y solamente las propinas nos han ayudado...no estoy en contra del salario mínimo. Ni a favor..solamente nos gustaría que nos pagaran algo mejor como un mejor pago Base de $6 Dólares por viaje a 2 millas de Distancia ya que ni eso respetan las aplicaciones...menos millas menos deliverys esa seria mi propuesta como un Repartidor independiente muchas Gracias y un mensaje claro workers justice project No me representa...

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:45am

- Estrella Martinez

Delivery workers are an essential part to how this city runs and if it would have not been for them during the pandemic this city would have fallen apart more then it already had. People would not have been able to get their essential goods without them. They deserve a fair living wage. Give it to them!

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:46am

- Cormac

App delivery workers perform a dangerous and essential job in NYC. They deserve a fair minimum wage, even if it means customers paying more for deliveries. The fact that the city has delayed this process is unconscionable, and the final rules should also include retroactive raises for workers, as was just agreed to for the NYPD.

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:47am

- Olivia

No service worker should be expected to rely on tips. I support a fair minimum wage for delivery workers.

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:47am

- Robin Graven-Milne

It is beyond time for food delivery workers to be paid a living wage. They work in dangerous conditions, in all weather, to bring us the food that we need to keep going. They face bike theft, angry drivers, and work environments that often have no place for them to wait on standby or even use the bathroom. They deserve a living wage. We must help them keep going too! I support instating these rules!

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:49am

- Max Temescu

There need to be wage protections like this in place for such a significant workforce. Please get this rule established as soon as is reasonable; apps have already snaked their way around too many requirements that other employers have to meet. Thank you!

Comment added April 7, 2023 9:57am

- Senator Jessica Ramos

See the attached letter.

Comment attachment

Deliverista-Min-Pay-Ramos.pdf

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:03am

- Carina Kaufman-Gutierrez

On behalf of the Street Vendor Project at the Urban Justice Center and our 2,900 street vendor members, we are writing in support of the minimum wage proposal desperately needed to support our city's deliveristas.

As an organization, we are deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families.

Comment attachment

Deliverista-Min-Pay-Letter.pdf

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:14am

Vilda Vera Mayuga
Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection 42
Broadway, 9th floor
New York, NY 10004

April 7, 2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

New York City's more than 65,000 app-based delivery workers are essential workers. Delivery workers kept New Yorkers fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak, enabling people to remain in their homes. Two years later, they continue to deliver for New Yorkers every day at subminimum wages and without benefits.

The Street Vendor Project at the Urban Justice Center, representing 2,900 New York City street vendors, we write to express our deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

In addition to delaying for five months pay for workers whom the City is legally charged to protect, we are concerned with the proposed rule, once it does take effect, would allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage rate if the impact of certain business practices such as “order bundling” is ignored.

It is especially disturbing that it appears the delay and the undermining of the rule were the result of potentially unreported lobbying by the app companies. These multi-billion dollar corporations have established a business model based on denying basic workers’ rights to some of the most vulnerable and exploited workers. These companies have even declared in their comments that they don’t believe delivery workers deserve a minimum wage.

“Multi-Apping” is Simply a Canard Invented by the Apps to Pay a Sub-Minimum Wage

The proposal to reduce workers’ pay by $3.60 per hour because they may keep several apps open while waiting for their next job, so-called “multi-apping,” is premised on faulty assumptions. Like for-hire vehicle (FHV) drivers, who receive no “multi-apping” deduction in their comparable minimum pay rule, delivery workers may spend their on-call/waiting time with multiple apps open; however, during this time, no one is paying them. When they receive a job, they proceed to fulfill that delivery, so only one app is paying them. DCWP has provided no evidence that workers are being paid by multiple apps at the same time.

In addition, multi-apping has precipitously decreased. Many apps have begun to require reservations to work. There has also been reduced order volume. As a result, the amount of multi-apping accounted for by the rule (and the accompanying monetary reduction) is overinflated. DCWP bases its monetary reduction for multi-apping on outdated figures as a result of the apps refusing to comply with subpoenas for more recent data.

Each Day of Delay Is Money Lost

Every day of delay is money lost for delivery workers who deserved a raise by law on January 1, 2023. Workers can expect to lose upwards of 5 months of guaranteed minimum pay (The rule cannot go into effect any sooner than May 8).

Phase-In is an Unlawful Delay

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a “phase in,” which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

Unregulated Business Practices That undermine Proposed Pay Rates

DCWP should study and closely monitor the impact of practices such as “order bundling,” which can reduce workers’ pay under the Alternative Method scenario. This practice on the part of apps consists of sending multiple orders that the workers need to complete during the same trip. Ignoring this and other potentially harming business practices will allow the app companies to continue to pay delivery workers far below the minimum wage – a right that all other workers enjoy in our city.

Undercounting Inflation for Expenses

At a time when transportation-sector business expenses have faced an inflationary rate three times the overall increase in the consumer price index, the COLA formula for expenses must be calculated after an annual review of expenses as required by § 20-1522(c) of the Administrative Code. The adjusted rate should reflect maintenance and safety costs and tax treatment, regardless of whether the worker delivers by car, moped or bike. This is the same methodology that the Taxi and Limousine Commission uses for app-based for-hire drivers.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting. I urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn’t make this any worse for our essential Deliveristas.
Sincerely,

Carina Kaufman-Gutierrez
Deputy Director
Street Vendor Project

- Shirley Lalehzar

I support food delivery workers getting paid.

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:18am

- Raj Gopal

I support delivery workers receiving a fair minimum wage

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:25am

- Erik Martinez

Minimum wage is the least delivery workers need to continue the tough job of bringing food and items to New Yorkers year long, through all weather conditions. As essential workers, this is the minimum they deserve.

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:25am

- Cara Mitchell

Throughout living in NYC, delivery work has always been something that we assume is just a given. People doing delivery through all weather, throughout the day and into the night seem like one of the few constants that never changes. The pandemic made this even more clear as we all locked down but assumed that somehow there'd always be someone available to do this work.

These apps we use have been less than fair. They lack so much transparency that it's hard for an average NYer to understand who is getting paid what and where all the fees go. This has left the door open for abuse of this workforce. We need to do better as city and demand more from these companies which would rather extract money and take it away from our workers and local business. A minimum wage and other important benefits and guarantees are a step that will have a large positive impact on workers and our ability to stand up and keep NYers money in NYers hands, especially during a time when cost of living has gone up so much.

I am disappointed and, to be honest, angry that this city has done nothing to protect these workers. Each time there seems to be an opportunity to make change, things are set aside or delayed. It's time to set things in the right direction and take action now!

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:25am

- Alannah G

I support delivery workers' rights to a guaranteed minimum wage! How many of us employ their services each week? Every time you order food because the weather outside is bad, someone else is facing those conditions for not nearly enough pay so you can stay comfortable.

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:26am

- Chrystal Nwogu

I have been Dashing for over 2 yrs. DoorDash makes it possible for me to make extra income at my convenience. Because I work full time being able to Dash after work and sometimes on the weekends gives me flexibility of my own schedule. As a delivery worker we risk their lives doing these deliveries. Bad weather, unsafe neighborhoods, unkept properties, trying to stay within the delivery time. It's a lot. I worry that if things change we will not have the flexibility to choose our schedule or how many hrs we choose to work. I prefer option 2.

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:29am

- e mclaughlin

To Whom It May Concern;

It is beyond time that food delivery drivers be paid a living wage! Their work is grueling, exhausting, and far too often – thankless. A living wage is necessary for the people to care for themselves, their vehicles and repairs, and families. Show them some respect and make it happen now!

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:30am

- Daniel Montrose

DELIVERISTAS DESERVE A LIVABLE WAGE!

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:32am

- Mirielle Clifford

Delivery workers deserve a fair minimum pay!

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:34am

- Push_Kush1985

I find it really messed up that the food delivery workers dont make an honest pay thru the food apps. They take the ultimate everyday just to provide for themselves. I too work the delivery apps on my longboard in nyc. I wish the minimum pay would make an uprising and soon.

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:36am

- Joshua Khrister Magpantay

I support a minimum wage for app-based delivery workers, as someone who depends on them greatly! These applications make too much money to not be paying people a minimum wage. I will be incredibly disappointed in my electeds if the DCWP cannot pass these rules.

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:42am

- Jacob

Delivery workers deserve a living wage!

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:47am

- Emily Watson

Our delivery workers deserve to earn a living wage. They worked hard to bring us food throughout the pandemic, on dangerous roads, at great personal risk, often without health insurance — all while third party apps made record profits. Delivery workers deserve a piece of the pie. It's up to us to make sure we stop these delivery apps from exploiting the hard work of New Yorkers.

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:47am

- Les Sugai

Delivery workers have to deal with the worst of conditions whether it be weather, traffic, and dealing with the public.

They deliver food and other necessary goods to our city's residents and workers.

They kept us going for the 3 years of the Pandemic and deserve a better wage

I am writing to support your proposed bill(s) to improve their livelihoods

Thank You

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:53am

- John Morales

I work in delivery area 3 years and it's fair for us to get paid $20 per hour, we risk our life's every day during our shifts and don't matter the weather conditions we still working, this step is necessary to improve our life conditions and also because right now everything is high prices.. Please help us

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:57am

- Jordan Warsoff

All people deserve a livable wage, especially those that are supporting so many people in NYC. We should be supporting them back with fairness and equity.

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:57am

- Rony B Patel

Please pay our essential workers. Thank you

Comment added April 7, 2023 10:58am

- YS

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps and it's unacceptable that NYC's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families.

I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay!

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:08am

- John Lit

Hola a todos y gracias por el apoyo.

Es necesario el ajuste a nuestro pago, porque actualmente las ganancias solo dan para vivir al día, algunos hasta están endeudados, hoy necesitamos el apoyo, el cambio, todos los líderes y el alcalde de Nueva York pueden aceptar y aumentar nuestro salario, vivir con $400 dólares a la semana en Nueva York no es vida. Ganar 10 dólares en dos horas sin importar qué este frío o lloviendo. Y sin aver comido en todo el día para hacer que el dinero alcance para la Renta y comida sin contar con más necesidades que las personas tengan, no es justo! Delen valor a nuestro trabajo porfavor!!

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:13am

- Katharine Hyatt

Delivery cyclists work around the clock in all weather conditions and kept the city going during COVID. They deserve a guaranteed minimum wage of at least $24 an hour, NOT $19. They deserve fair pay for the hazardous work they do and for the time they have to spend waiting for orders. I support a minimum hourly wage of $24/hour for these workers!

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:16am

- Henry Greenfield

Delivery workers are the hardest working New Yorkers. They deserve a living wage

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:19am

- Clayton Dorsey

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:22am

- Tobias Schraink

I support minimum pay for the deliveristas!

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:25am

- Jaqi Cohen

New York City's delivery workers are some of the hardest working people in our City and work in truly harrowing conditions- on dangerous streets, in inclement weather, year round. Our city's delivery workers kept us fed and safe during the height of the pandemic. These workers deserve a living wage, and the fact that they still don't earn a guaranteed minimum wage is deeply disturbing. I'm disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. Delivery workers deserve a living wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:26am

- Renfield Peale

Bike Delivery People work in grueling and dangerous conditions to provide a necessity for some and a luxury for most. Many die or are injured on the job. It's insulting and exploitative they have been under paid for so long.

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:28am

- Glitter K

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:30am

- Stacey Eliuk

This is an important change to enact for the betterment of equity in our city.

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:32am

- Walter Goodman

I support the minimum wage for delivery workers! The current system is cruel and fosters and encourages unsafe practices by all concerned.

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:35am

- Anna Feldmann

I support the deliveristas and this rule with the strongest possible voice. They deserve to be able to make it here as much as anyone with a salary.

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:40am

- Mila Rothschild

Please support better wages for these people who deliver essential goods day and night, in rain and snow, all for the financial benefit of technology company CEOs in California. It is obscene that they are not getting paid a living wage, especially when we have become so utterly dependent on their services.

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:48am

- Brooklyn Borough President Antonio Reynoso

See attachment for full testimony, thank you!

Comment attachment

DCWP-hearing-delivery-worker-pay-4.7.23-FINAL.pdf

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:49am

OFFICE OF THE BROOKLYN BOROUGH PRESIDENT

ANTONIO REYNOSO

Brooklyn Borough President

Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
Hearing on Minimum Pay for App-based Food Delivery Workers
April 7, 2023

Good morning representatives from DCWP. I am frustrated that I am here to testify on this issue again. In December, I submitted testimony praising the agency's research on the app-based delivery industry and associated recommendations, which thoughtfully considered many of the challenges that delivery workers face. At that hearing, I supported an increase to the proposed hourly rate and a reconsideration of the phase-in for the new rate. Instead, DCWP has chosen to roll back its initial proposal due to the impacts of corporate lobbying.

Last month, a group of 25 elected officials, including myself, sent a letter to Commissioner Mayuga outlining our concerns with the updated proposal. We all feel strongly about this for many reasons. First, this delay is in violation of Local Law 115 of 2021, which I supported as a Council Member. The law required DCWP to create this rule by the beginning of this year. Yet DCWP has allowed corporate concerns to outweigh improved living conditions for our city's essential workers.

More importantly, DCWP's updated proposal would put delivery workers' average pay at just $12.69/hour in 2023, well below the city's legal minimum wage of $15/hour. DCWP's justification for proposing a $3.60/hour cut to base pay is that drivers have the option of "multiapping," yet DCWP's own study estimated that only slightly more than half of drivers work with multiple apps, and that these drivers are connected to more than one app simultaneously less than one-quarter of the time. This study occurred before many apps began cracking down on this practice by requiring advance scheduling of shifts, so these numbers are likely much lower now. Yet DCWP's updated proposal allows the corporate apps to use this rare practice as an excuse to cut driver pay. This is unacceptable.

In conclusion, I will reiterate that delivery workers are essential workers. Their jobs are physically challenging and expensive, including frequent injuries on the job and associated out-of-pocket medical expenses, as well as the significant costs of fees, safe batteries, charging and storage, and safety equipment, which have only increased since I was here last. I am here again today to ask you to immediately remove the $3.60 pay reduction, eliminate the phase-in, and ensure that our essential workers are making the fair wage they deserve. Thank you.

- Jacqueline Trudeau

Deliveristas deserve to be paid a minimum wage, which should reflect a livable wage in New York City. Deliveristas are critical to the infrastructure of New York, especially since COVID, and their wage should reflect the hazards of their jobs and the costs and expenses of being a deliverista – especially since they use a form of transport that reduces congestion on city streets.

When considering the rule, the commission should consider that rideshare drivers were deemed to be employees and not independent contractors, and there are many similarities between the roles of deliveristas and rideshare drivers. Delivery companies should be required to pay a living wage to the employees who have made ordering apps successful – often at the cost of the previously existing ecosystem between deliveristas and restaurants. These rules should also be implemented as soon as possible in 2023 – companies are continuing to make profits at the cost of delivery workers. While it is important to make rules that accurately reflect the current environment, the rulemaking should not be delayed further.

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:53am

- Anthony Brueske

Please make these corporations pay and take care of these employees they refuse acknowledge. They make their business possible. 24 dollars is barely enough. 19 is far from enough, they're risking their lives for these companies and the city by doing this work, make the companies play fair. Protect the workers from the smoke and mirrors of these larger corporations like hiding tips or delaying payments. Thank you and again, please help these hard workers get proper pay.

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:53am

- Kierra Sewell

I support fair wages for all workers

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:54am

- Daniel Guzman

Deliveristas deserve a livable wage.

Comment added April 7, 2023 11:55am

- Zoë Beery

Delivery workers are now so essential to NYC that their labor is almost infrastructural, and yet it is the apps that rely on their work who reap the profits, all while deliveristas face hostile streets and tough climate conditions. They deserve everything they are demanding. Don't cave to Silicon Valley—stand up for New Yorkers!

Comment added April 7, 2023 12:06pm

- Kate Rosenstengel

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 12:22pm

- Lexa Koenig

The food delivery workers who work for companies such as UberEats, DoorDash, etc MUST have a minimum wage in our city. These companies must be required to pay the legal minimum wage for these workers. They are taken advantage of, oftentimes riding in poor weather to deliver orders.

These billion dollar companies are exploiting them for their labor. As a so-called progressive city, it's shameful that NYC has not led the charge in ensuring a fair wage. Please act on this ruling TODAY and stand up to fight these corporations.

Comment added April 7, 2023 12:26pm

- ERIC MALINOWSKI

I'm advocating for the Dept of Consumer and Worker Protection to accept their prior proposed standard wage of $23.82, which took into consideration the personal expenses of equipment incurred by Deliveristas as well as their lack of access to insurance, sick days, and medical benefits. The reduction to $19.96 does not adequately compensate them due to their standing as independent contractors.

Deliveristas are independent contractors (not employees) they are not entitled to the protections that other NY employees receive. This means that they are responsible for their medicals bills from work related accidents and that there is no insurance to cover their lost wages when they are unable to work. A trip in an ambulance to the hospital is currently $900.00 and may soon increase to $1,500.

Furthermore, the reduction in a standard wage from $23.82 to $19.96 because of multi-aping is an unfair and unnecessary punishment. The delivery apps will punish the Deliverista if they reject an order through their algorithms and rankings. They shouldn't also be punished financially, especially when they have the right to do so as an independent contractor.

Thank You:

Eric Malinowski, Esq.

Comment added April 7, 2023 12:30pm

- Addi

The gig economy sustains NYC 24/7 365 days a year. The bare minimum is give them a minimum wage and protect them from corporate malpractice like union busting.

Comment added April 7, 2023 12:37pm

- Sofia Negri

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 12:39pm

- Karin

The least we can do is offer a minimum wage for these hard workers who typically lose out on benefits and other workplace protections.

Comment added April 7, 2023 12:55pm

- Almerindo P

Hello, I'm writing on behalf of the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe that New York City's food delivery workers should be guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. Please ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now. Thank you.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:16pm

- Michael Rosenberg

We have known for a long time that "private contractors" such as the ones used by Uber, Door dash, Grubhub, etc. are often workers who spend most of their time on these apps. The lack of legal protections for these laborers allows the companies to enjoy extremely low labor cost, no severance requirement, no insurance requirement, and much more. By not protecting our laborers we are subsidizing these companies' inhumane treatment of over 90% of their labor force. These workers need protections just like the rest of us.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:25pm

- Patric Campbell

Food workers are a vital part of New York City and are not getting the fruits of their hard work currently, this rule needs to pass.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:28pm

- Jim Burke

We need a minimum pay standard for our delivery workers. Many live here in my neighborhood in Jackson Heights & they often get ZERO tips after a hard job. That is unacceptable – the restaurant & delivery app get their cut, the customer gets their delivery – the only one that often gets the short end of the stick or NOTHING is the deliverista & they did the hardest work in the transaction.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:33pm

- Conor Hodges

The city has the leverage to compel third party delivery services to pay a living wage. You must wield it.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:39pm

- Tracey Hinder

Deliveristas have one of the hardest jobs in the city and deserve work protections like a living wage, bathrooms and rest areas, charging stations, and benefits

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:39pm

- Martha Guerrero

Delivery app workers are an essential workforce in NYC and minimum payments are imperative. Not only will they enable this workforce, largely made up of migrants and people of color, to earn a living wage, but will help produce a more responsible relationship between tech firms and consumers. People who are out in the street biking every day making sure consumers get their orders safely and on time deserve minimum payments per order, instead of whatever discretionary payment calculation made by apps.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:40pm

- Lucy Block

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:44pm

- William

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:47pm

- Norah Steele

It is outrageous that food delivery workers are not afforded the basic protection of a decent minimum wage. It is foolish to believe that a typical delivery worker has the negotiating power to ensure fair compensation, and relying on tips is far too variable and does not ensure the dignity of work that these individuals deserve. We must pass legislation guaranteeing a minimum wage for food delivery workers without delay.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:51pm

- Lexi Quintero

I support this advocacy for New Yorkers in delivery service. Fair pay is only the first step- they deserve so much more.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:52pm

- Peter Finnen

I support a minimum pay for all workers and a dignified one at that.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:58pm

- Charles Chy

At the height of the pandemic, delivery workers kept their communities afloat by providing essential services despite low pay and stolen wages – NOW is the time to support these delivery workers with minimum pay.

Comment added April 7, 2023 1:59pm

- Paul Alexander Marte

No more abuse

Comment added April 7, 2023 2:07pm

- RICHARD

I'm very concerned about this issue door dash is my sole means of income and this will drastically effect my income.

Comment added April 7, 2023 2:15pm

- Lizz Thabet

Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. They provide essential services, from delivering food to medicine, throughout the entire city that many people and businesses rely on. New York City could not function without our delivery workers, and they should be paid fairly and sustainably for their labor, time, and vehicles.

I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. Please do not continue to delay. Delivery platforms have a vested interest in paying workers as little as possible to maximize their own profits. This is not acceptable and cannot be allowed to continue. We must ensure that delivery workers are guaranteed a minimum wage.

Comment added April 7, 2023 2:23pm

- Walter

I don't agree with getting paid fifty cents, I want to be paid hourly. The pay lately has been so low. I'm on board for getting paid $17.96 per hour. I have too many expenses to accept such low orders. Those orders that pay pennies are just not cutting it anymore. This law is long past due. When are the changes in hourly pay going to be implemented? It's dragging at this point.

Comment added April 7, 2023 2:23pm

- Regina

It's crucial that delivery workers get a minimum wage. They're an important backbone of the restaurant industry but suffer some of the most egregious harms – facing thefts and violence, lacking full employee protections, and encouraged to risk their own and others' safety in order to make enough money to survive. Delivery workers should be able to work with dignity, which includes setting a minimum wage paid by the apps that profit off of them.

Comment added April 7, 2023 3:08pm

- Pushpa Bhat

Delivery workers are essential to this city and deserve minimum wage protection. It really isn't much more complicated than that.

Comment added April 7, 2023 3:13pm

- Jesse Litvin

Delivering things is a job and should be compensated fairly!

Comment added April 7, 2023 3:16pm

- Alexander Schaefer

I fully support the demand that delivery workers be protected by pay minimums as other workers are.

Comment added April 7, 2023 3:41pm

- Shireen

I strongly support a minimum wage for food delivery workers! They have done essential work throughout the pandemic and face numerous pressures without adequate pay and protections.

Comment added April 7, 2023 3:51pm

- J.

I stand with Los Deliveristas. Pass these rules. Delivery apps will survive. Fair pay now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 3:58pm

- Derrick Holman

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who keep New York City fed, keep countless small businesses afloat, and who enable businesses (including the major food delivery apps and others) to function throughout the five boroughs and beyond. I have worked as a delivery worker and regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve fair and equitable living wages to support themselves and their families. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a reasonable minimum pay.

Comment added April 7, 2023 4:21pm

- Amy Cohen

See enclosed testimony.

Comment attachment

FSS-testimony-in-support-of-Local-Law-115-implementation.pdf

Comment added April 7, 2023 4:27pm

Support for Delivery Worker Minimum Wage
April 7, 2023

Vila Vera Mayuga
Commissioner
Department of Consumer and Worker Protection
42 Broadway, 9th Floor New York,
NY 10004
via: email April 07,
2023

Dear Commissioner Mayuga,

Families for Safe Streets is submitting this written testimony to express our deep disappointment with the delay of implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 – the law requiring a minimum pay standard for deliveristas by January 1, 2023 – and to raise concerns about the updated minimum pay proposals.

Families for Safe Streets is comprised of individuals who have all lost loved ones or suffered a serious injury in a traffic crash. Together, we transform our grief by telling our personal stories of trauma and loss to bring about policy and legislative change.

This issue is important to our organization because there are critical safety issues involved. Working cyclists have one of the most dangerous jobs in the city. Since 2020, at least 33 delivery workers have been killed on the job in traffic crashes. A component of the work's danger is a result of its wage structure. Tip-based work incentivizes faster job completions/deliveries to pad meager hourly wages.

As we know all too well, that is not only 33 lives cut unnecessarily short but also 33 families devastated by the loss of their loved one.

We're deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

The revised rule reduced, but continues to include, a "phase in," which explicitly allows multi-billion dollar app corporations to delay paying their workers a minimum wage for an additional two years. All other employers (even including small businesses, such as the restaurants these apps are delivering for) were required to begin paying their workers a $15 per hour minimum wage four years ago, in 2019. The initial TLC driver pay rule immediately brought FHV drivers up to minimum wage with no phase-in. There is no conceivable justification for it here.

By missing the deadline to enact the minimum pay law earlier this year and continuing to delay the process, DCWP has reduced the pay of workers it is charged with protecting and putting many more lives at risk. We urge you to revisit and strengthen the updated rule so that the City doesn't make this any worse for

- Edwin Houghton

I'm a native New Yorker and current Brooklyn resident who is extremely grateful for the delivery workers who allowed us to stay safe and feed our families during the pandemic. Even post-COVID, I don't know how I would be able to maintain without food delivery services like Seamless and Door Dash and personally I can't believe that New York food delivery workers aren't guaranteed a live-able minimum wage in 2023. The Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021 is deeply disappointing and I urge the City to stop needless delays and guarantee these essential workers a living wage ASAP.

Comment added April 7, 2023 4:46pm

- Cédric Gottfried

Delivery workers should of course been paid a minimum wage, it's absurd that it isn't the case yet! Their work is dangerous and difficult and lives are at risks because of the pressure they receive from the delivery companies who have no consideration for them. A decent minimum wage would be not only a social justice policy, but also public safety one.

Comment added April 7, 2023 5:04pm

- Eric McClure

My name is Eric McClure, and I am submitting this comment on behalf of StreetsPAC, a political action committee and advocacy organization that promotes safe-streets policies in New York City, and for which I serve as Executive Director.

New York City's 65,000 delivery workers are essential workers who keep the local economy humming while performing one of the most difficult and dangerous jobs in the city.

Deliveristas work long hours in all weather conditions, have to supply their own equipment (an e-bike can cost several thousand dollars, and unscrupulous vendors don't hesitate to sell unsuspecting delivery workers devices that are not legal to operate in New York City), face constant dangers from drivers of cars and trucks on streets that frequently do not offer any type of physical protection, and have regularly been the victims of targeted robberies that too often turn violent or even deadly, all while earning, on average, pay that is substantially below the local minimum wage.

Delivery workers kept their fellow New Yorkers fed and the city's restaurants in business during the long pandemic lockdown, and continue to perform a vital and irreplaceable role in the city's restaurant economy.

At the same time, they work by and large at the whim of app companies that reap the vast majority of delivery-based profits while subjecting delivery workers to challenging and often impossible conditions in a clearly exploitative labor dynamic.

We implore the DCWP to adopt a $28 minimum wage, and to do so without any further, unlawful delay, or phase-in period, and without any "multi-apping" reduction, to ensure that the city's delivery workers are fairly compensated for the vital role they play in New York City's economy.

Comment added April 7, 2023 5:08pm

- Chris

Workers must be compensated, and I support expanding these minimum wage rules. However, creating separate minimum wages for different work is a bit unfair. Expenses should be covered, and tipped income counted. I think wanting the higher wage could work if it came alongside a rule that mandated license plates and insurance for ebike drivers, who frequently ride on the sidewalk, endangering pedestrians, and going the wrong way up a street in order to make these food deliveries. An increase should come with increased public safety standards.

Comment added April 7, 2023 5:24pm

- Jeremiah Blatz

I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 5:38pm

- Juan Lema

We deserve $24 per hour we have to deal with many inconveniences all days , crazy drivers, the weather, also pay bills, gas, insurance etc. And now specially because everything cost more!!!!

Comment added April 7, 2023 5:44pm

- Gabriel

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. I regularly use food delivery apps – such as Doordash, Uber Eats and GrubHub – and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support themselves and their families. I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay., We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now!

Comment added April 7, 2023 5:45pm

- James Porter

I urge the DCWP to enact this rule and protect some of the most vital and under appreciated workers in the city. The right to a minimum wage was decided decades ago, let's make it happen for delivery workers today.

Comment added April 7, 2023 5:55pm

- Pedro Rodriguez

I am writing in support of fair wages for deliveristas. I use delivery services quite often and I want to ensure that the workers are not just safe but well paid. They provide a great service to the city and should be compensated for it.

Comment added April 7, 2023 6:06pm

- Javier Silva

Deliveristas deserve a just pay of at least minimum wage plus tips.

Comment added April 7, 2023 6:13pm

- Alexander P. Mozeak

$19 is not a livable wage. The essential delivery workers who make our work and home lives easier deserve to be able to put food on their own tables and house their own families. The original floor rate already approved by the Council is the bare minimum of what they should be paid. If a company can't afford to pay that, the market dictates that they shouldn't offer delivery.

Comment added April 7, 2023 6:17pm

- Walter Floyd

Fair wages for all!

Comment added April 7, 2023 6:18pm

- Gustavo Rivera, NYS Senator

I'm grateful for the delivery workers who kept New York City fed and countless small businesses afloat during the height of the Covid-19 outbreak by enabling people like me to stay safe at home. So many of the Bronx constituents I represent in the 33rd Senate District were essential workers who showed up during the height of the pandemic, particularly delivery workers that traversed the City day in and day out despite extreme conditions, demanding work, and in too many cases, exploitative practices by employers and contractors. As a State Senator and as a New Yorker, it is unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage to support themselves, their families, and our communities.

I'm deeply disappointed by the Department of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from essential delivery workers who rely on tips. There's no more time for delay. I stand with delivery workers in urging you to ensure that they are given a minimum wage now.

Comment attachment

Written-Testimony-NYS-Senator-G.-Rivera-Minimum-Pay-for-Food-Delivery-Workers.pdf

Comment added April 7, 2023 6:20pm

- Michael Beltzer

Back pay is owed to workers from 1/1/23.

The wage should be the original proposed rate or higher.

Pay must be offered for waiting time.

There must be rules against gating and lockouts.

Choice must still be allowed as a matter of safety and fairness. A driver mustn't be forced to take a far trip at the end of their shift or head to an area or address that makes them feel unsafe.

Comment added April 7, 2023 6:21pm

- Andre Vincent

App companies might try to pit customers against workers against small businesses, but we see through their broken logic. If they have the ability to gate access, curtail active time, or direct deliveristas out of hot zones – even through a mechanized management layer like an app “platform” – then those workers aren’t independent contractors, they’re EMPLOYEES. In any case, they make these companies billions, and the companies can afford to pay the higher minimum wage (NOT the new, lower proposal). If they want access to NYC’s consumer market, they need to adapt to survive here.

Comment added April 7, 2023 6:28pm

- Darren Goldner

Eric Adams,

Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve a fair wage. Don’t cut the minimum wage they rightfully won and deserve. $24 per hour is the floor.

Comment added April 7, 2023 6:40pm

- Annemarie Van Doren

Delivery workers deserve fair wages for their labor. The current wages they receive are wildly low, especially considering the uncertain weather, uncertain job descriptions, uncertain tips and unforgiving conditions (no or low access to bathrooms, rest, unconducive laws for e-bikes, disproportionate ticketing, etc). I stand with workers for the proposed wage increases.

Comment added April 7, 2023 6:41pm

- Stevie Borrello

It is outrageous that deliveristas still do not have a fair minimum wage. I am sure most everyone in the mayor’s office has ordered food delivery and taken advantage what these workers hustle day in and day out to provide the simple convenience to all of us New Yorkers. They deserve at least $20 minimum wage for all they do and risking their lives every day they get on those bikes. They shouldn’t be relying on tips that they so rarely get on orders as well (or even get stolen from them by restaurants at times). Please do right by these workers that are part of the backbone of NYC and pay them a fair and livable wage.

Comment added April 7, 2023 6:48pm

- Carrie Cella

Delivery workers deserve a living wage. Stop letting them be exploited.

Comment added April 7, 2023 7:17pm

- Rory Santaloci

Food delivery workers deserve fair pay from the third party services they work for. The delivery workers were on the front lines of the COVID-19 pandemic, risking their lives to feed the rest of us New Yorkers.

I regularly use food delivery apps such as Seamless and I believe it's unacceptable that New York City's food delivery workers still aren't guaranteed a minimum wage. Delivery workers, like all workers, deserve living wages to support their families.

I'm deeply disappointed by the Dept of Consumer and Worker Protection's decision to reissue the draft rule for implementation of Local Law 115 of 2021. This decision is causing unnecessary delays and withholding at least five months of pay from these workers who rely on tips.

There's no more time for delay. We must ensure that delivery workers are given a minimum wage now.

Comment added April 7, 2023 7:28pm

- Tim Thomas

A minimum wage is necessary for workers to survive the cost of living crisis. Delivery workers are a vital life line in this city, and deserve full worker protections and pay. I stand with them in fight for the Minimum Pay for Food Delivery Workers law.

Comment added April 7, 2023 7:59pm

- Kinsey Cantrell

Pay the deliveristas a living wage! They are a vital part of the economic ecosystem of our city and deserve full support and receipt of the wages they are owed.

Comment added April 7, 2023 8:05pm

From: Driver, Charlie (DCWP)
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2023 10:40 AM
To: Joshua Bocian <jbocian@grubhub.com>
Cc: Ortiz, Carlos (DCWP) <COrtiz@dcwp.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: [EXTERNAL] Delivery Worker Minimum Pay Public Comment

Hi Josh,

Thanks for flagging the discrepancy here. We did not receive the comments you flagged, and are working on finding out why. Regardless, we will add these comments to the public record and fully consider them.

Best,
Charlie

Charlie Driver ~ NYC DCWP t: 212-436-0396 | c: 332-225-6807 | nyc.gov/dcwp

From: Joshua Bocian <jbocian@grubhub.com>
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2023 10:34 AM
To: Ortiz, Carlos (DCWP) <COrtiz@dcwp.nyc.gov>; Driver, Charlie (DCWP) <CDriver@dcwp.nyc.gov>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Delivery Worker Minimum Pay Public Comment

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe. Forward suspect email to phish@oti.nyc.gov as an attachment (Click the More button, then forward as attachment).

Carlos & Charlie -

I'm writing with concerns about the Agency's most recent public comment period on the Second Proposed Rules related to minimum pay for food delivery service workers. After the comment period closed on April 7th, the Agency published comments received from the public to its website. The publication made clear that, unfortunately, the agency blocked comments from the domain "p2a.com". What is not clear is whether the agency did this purposely or inadvertently (perhaps due to some kind of network firewall). Either way, the comments submitted via the domain "p2a.com" are part of the public record. The domain belongs to "Phone2Action" a common advocacy tool used by membership organizations, non-profits, advocacy groups and others to facilitate participation in government by members of the public. Comments from individual members of the public submitted via this domain were not blocked during the Agency's previous comment period nor, to our knowledge, are not blocked from the City Council or other NYC Agency's comment processes.

1

I'm attaching here a list of 782 comments that were submitted by members of the public via Phone2Action, prior to the end of the comment period. These comments are part of the administrative record and we urge the agency to take the time it needs to consider them and appropriately respond to them. Those who commented through this method participated in the City's public comment process and through no fault of the commenters, the agency has failed to consider and address their comments - we urge you to do so.

Please confirm that these comments will be included in the public record. Thank you.

--
Joshua Bocian

Senior Manager - Government Affairs

GRUBHUB

646.321.7784 jbocian@grubhub.com

-- Sent from Leonardo Alves to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Leonardo Alves
222 E 41st St
New York, NY 10017

-- Sent from Andres Coral to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Andres Coral
25-50 14th Pl
Queens, NY 11102

-- Sent from Alexander Chavez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Alexander Chavez
24-44 90th Pl
Queens, NY 11369

-- Sent from Dedar Alam to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Dedar Alam
186 Montauk Ave.
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from Dzmitry Kadach to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Dzmitry Kadach
163 Marine Way
Staten Island, NY 10306

-- Sent from Youlin Fang to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af

Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Youlin Fang
940 43rd St
Brooklyn, NY 11219

-- Sent from Omar Faysal to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Omar Faysal
1245 Jefferson Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11221

-- Sent from Oscar Lopez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Oscar Lopez
1855 Grand Concourse
The Bronx, NY 10453

-- Sent from Ahmed joyal to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ahmed joynal
37-31 Crescent St
Queens, NY 11101

-- Sent from Barry Van to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Barry Van
830 Fox St
The Bronx, NY 10459

-- Sent from Quirino florentino to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Quirino florentino
537 58th St
Brooklyn, NY 11220

-- Sent from Jahan Parchment to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jahan Parchment
764 Van Nest Ave
The Bronx, NY 10462

-- Sent from Dante Richardson to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Dante Richardson
689 Glenmore Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11207

-- Sent from HONG CHEN to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
HONG CHEN
1780 1st Ave.
New York, NY 10128

-- Sent from Islam Ahmed to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Islam Ahmed
5946 Palmetto St
Queens, NY 11385

-- Sent from Lizbeth Hernandez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Lizbeth Hernandez
676 E 141st St
The Bronx, NY 10454

-- Sent from Virginio Caballero to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Virginio Caballero
312 W 93rd St
New York, NY 10025

-- Sent from Serge Jeangilles to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Serge Jeangilles
1337 Woodside Ave
Baldwin, NY 11510

-- Sent from Guanghong Shi to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Guanghong Shi
92-29 Lamont Ave
Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from Ruben Rebollar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ruben Rebollar
9803 Northern Blvd
Queens, NY 11368

-- Sent from Hareshkumar Patel to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hareshkumar Patel
84-54 250th St
Queens, NY 11426

-- Sent from Jeremy MartÁnez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

Jeremy Martinez
1479 Myrtle Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11237

-- Sent from Ziyen Lengani to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ziyen Lengani
114 W 114th St
New York, NY 10026

-- Sent from Mohammed uddin to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohammed uddin
1146 E 2nd St Apt 1FLOOR
Brooklyn, NY 11230

-- Sent from Sherdell Angel to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sherdell Angel
641 Pine St
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from Wei Lin to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Wei Lin
977 57th St
Brooklyn, NY 11219

-- Sent from Frank Quintero to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Frank Quintero

1449 E 52nd St
Brooklyn, NY 11234

-- Sent from Abel De to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Abel De
575 E 137th St
The Bronx, NY 10454

-- Sent from Nada Elhelbawy to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nada Elhelbawy
102-40 62nd Ave
Queens, NY 11375

-- Sent from Afnan Hasan to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Afnan Hasan
312 E 3rd St
Brooklyn, NY 11218

-- Sent from Hassane Ouedraogo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hassane Ouedraogo
128 E Clarke Pl
The Bronx, NY 10452

-- Sent from Abu Morshed to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Abu Morshed
1061 Glenmore Ave

Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from Nomo Bakayoko to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nomo Bakayoko
1265 Noble Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Carlos Escudero to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Carlos Escudero
24-17 31st St
Queens, NY 11102

-- Sent from Tashi Sherpa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Tashi Sherpa
69-19 43rd Ave
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from omeil harrison to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
omeil harrison
1564 E 57th St
Brooklyn, NY 11234

-- Sent from Josh Hazan to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Josh Hazan
247 W 72nd St
New York, NY 10023

-- Sent from Ramin Aliyev to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ramin Aliyev
2250 E 4th St
Brooklyn, NY 11223

-- Sent from denis denisserrabonilla to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
denis denisserrabonilla
119 Vermont St
Brooklyn, NY 11207

-- Sent from Desmomd Johnson to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Desmomd Johnson
145-50 223rd St
Queens, NY 11413

-- Sent from Ismaila Zongo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ismaila Zongo
105 Willis Ave
The Bronx, NY 10454

-- Sent from kamrul islam to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
kamrul islam
328 Halsey St
Brooklyn, NY 11216

-- Sent from Emanuel Lopez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Emanuel Lopez
470 Ocean Pkwy
Brooklyn, NY 11218

-- Sent from Luis Sanchez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Luis Sanchez
1 47th St
Islip, NY 11751

-- Sent from Juan Suriel to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Juan Suriel
550 Snediker Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11207

-- Sent from Neeraj Shrestha to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Neeraj Shrestha
1944 61st St
Brooklyn, NY 11204

-- Sent from Stefan Celojevic to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Stefan Celojevic
79-34 69th Rd
Queens, NY 11379

-- Sent from Rodrigo Garcia to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rodrigo Garcia
31-32 83rd St
Queens, NY 11370

-- Sent from Anthony Simmons to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Anthony Simmons
1068 Franklin Ave
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from David Schone to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs
Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
David Schone
1113 Linwood St
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from Eric Figueroa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs
Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Eric Figueroa
2031 St Paul Ave
The Bronx, NY 10461

-- Sent from Fanny Lopez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Fanny Lopez
69-47 Grand Ave
Queens, NY 11378

-- Sent from Sameh Tayel to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af

Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sameh Tayel
99-22 67th Rd
Queens, NY 11375

-- Sent from giorgi bujiashvili to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
giorgi bujiashvili
3059 Brighton 14th St
Brooklyn, NY 11235

-- Sent from Dennis Saxon to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Dennis Saxon
9350 215th St
New York, NY 11428

-- Sent from Oshane Phang to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Oshane Phang
1094 Rutland Rd
Brooklyn, NY 11212

-- Sent from Edward Paniagua to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Edward Paniagua
772 Pugsley Ave
The Bronx, NY 10473

-- Sent from Yeecheang Lui to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Yeecheang Lui
4238 Judge St
Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from Melvin Recarey to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Melvin Recarey
14 Fayette St
Brooklyn, NY 11206

-- Sent from Jonathan Gonzalez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jonathan Gonzalez
220 E 104th St
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from Dominick Goldberg to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Dominick Goldberg
5721 Avenue H
Brooklyn, NY 11234

-- Sent from Qwentin Greer to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Qwentin Greer
11629 Seaview Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11239

-- Sent from Shirin Akter to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Shirin Akter
443 Bushwick Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11206

-- Sent from Michael Jarrells to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Michael Jarrells
1940 Ocean Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11230

-- Sent from Gelo Angelo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Gelo Angelo
18 W 33rd St
New York, NY 10001

-- Sent from Vladimir Pierre to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Vladimir Pierre
1283 Rogers Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11226

-- Sent from Mohamadou Sakho to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohamadou Sakho
60 E 196th St
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Sayful islam to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sayful islam
113 Chester Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11218

-- Sent from Pablo Carbajal to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

Pablo Carbajal
2445 Frederick Douglass Blvd
New York, NY 10027

-- Sent from HÃ©ctor Cortez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hector Cortez
751 Flushing Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11206

-- Sent from Rosiel Martinez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rosiel Martinez
1111 Intervale Ave
The Bronx, NY 10459

-- Sent from Aneudy Mendez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Aneudy Mendez
1047 Avenue St John
The Bronx, NY 10455

-- Sent from Delowar Hossain to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Delowar Hossain
213 W 111th St
New York, NY 10026

-- Sent from kamality guzman to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
kamality guzman

86-14 124th St
Queens, NY 11418

-- Sent from Mohamadou Diawara to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohamadou Diawara
367 E 158th St
The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Mohammad Bin Maqbul to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohammad Bin Maqbul
2139 Blackrock Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Luis Bonet to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Luis Bonet
220 W 167th St
The Bronx, NY 10452

-- Sent from Mama Thiam to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mama Thiam
138-49 Barclay Ave
Queens, NY 11355

-- Sent from Wasim Shaikh to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Wasim Shaikh
2534 Curtis St

Queens, NY 11369

-- Sent from Souleymane Coulibaly to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Souleymane Coulibaly
1166 Grand Concourse
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Alejandro Herrera to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Alejandro Herrera
1416 67th St
Brooklyn, NY 11219

-- Sent from Edgar Andrade to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Edgar Andrade
35-38 101st St
Queens, NY 11368

-- Sent from Mark Sidoli to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mark Sidoli
198-22 26th Ave
Queens, NY 11358

-- Sent from said mahmoud to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
said mahmoud
9560 Queens Blvd
Queens, NY 11374

-- Sent from Jose Reynoso to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jose Reynoso
1453 Walton Ave
The Bronx, NY 10452

-- Sent from Matthew Howard to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Matthew Howard
3315 Brentwood Pl
Vestal, NY 13850

-- Sent from Claudia Espinoza to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Claudia Espinoza
95-55 111th St
Queens, NY 11419

-- Sent from Alvin Espinal to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Alvin Espinal
2120 Hughes Ave
The Bronx, NY 10457

-- Sent from Rigoberto Guzmán to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rigoberto Guzman
25 Mt Hope Pl
The Bronx, NY 10453

-- Sent from xin hong to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
xin hong
7548 Parsons Blvd
Queens, NY 11366

-- Sent from allan hernandez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
allan hernandez
2785 Sedgwick Ave
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Stephen Odei to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Stephen Odei
1075 Gerard Ave
The Bronx, NY 10452

-- Sent from Dustin Williams to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not

implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Dustin Williams
273 E 38th St
Brooklyn, NY 11203

-- Sent from Tatiana Williams to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Tatiana Williams
85 Taylor St
Brooklyn, NY 11249

-- Sent from wayne scott to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
wayne scott
107-41 Sutphin Blvd
Queens, NY 11435

-- Sent from Nur Hossain to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nur Hossain
249 Nostrand Ave.
Brooklyn, NY 11205

-- Sent from Paulo Guaman to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Paulo Guaman
11908 84th Ave
Queens, NY 11415

-- Sent from Hudson King to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hudson King
440 Melrose St
Brooklyn, NY 11237

-- Sent from daniel velez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 10, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
daniel velez
736 Riverside Dr
New York, NY 10031

-- Sent from Yanna Dixon to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af

Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Yanna Dixon
11-20 Gipson St
Queens, NY 11691

-- Sent from Gilfred Arana to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Gilfred Arana
193 Marcus Garvey Blvd
Brooklyn, NY 11221

-- Sent from Enes Oz to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Enes Oz
167 Sands St
Brooklyn, NY 11201

-- Sent from Moise Pierre-Louis to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Moise Pierre-Louis
193-22 Woodhull Ave
Queens, NY 11423

-- Sent from adnan ahmed to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
adnan ahmed
97-31 85th St
Queens, NY 11416

-- Sent from Francisco Bello to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Francisco Bello
674 W 161st St
New York, NY 10032

-- Sent from Rana Khandakar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rana Khandakar
94-21 210th St
Queens, NY 11428

-- Sent from Sehrish Malik to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sehrish Malik
990 Olympia Blvd
Staten Island, NY 10306

-- Sent from NIROD MAZUMDER to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
NIROD MAZUMDER
112th St
Queens, NY 11419

-- Sent from Mohamed Hammad to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohamed Hammad
505 62nd St
Brooklyn, NY 11220

-- Sent from Harry Stanley to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Harry Stanley
299 Broad St
Staten Island, NY 10304

-- Sent from sarkeal vaughn to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
sarkeal vaughn
834 Prospect Pl
Brooklyn, NY 11216

-- Sent from De Li to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
De Li
148 Forsyth St
New York, NY 10002

-- Sent from Tiendrebeogo Oumarou to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Tiendrebeogo Oumarou
187 St Georges Crescent
The Bronx, NY 10458

-- Sent from Maynor Emael to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Maynor Emael
287 Irving Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11237

-- Sent from Bert Thomas to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Bert Thomas
2370 1st Ave.
New York, NY 10035

-- Sent from Aziz Kurbonov to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

Aziz Kurbonov
2402 65th St
Brooklyn, NY 11204

-- Sent from Yonalma Reyes to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Yonalma Reyes
352 Randall Ave
Freeport, NY 11520

-- Sent from dustin rodriguez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
dustin rodriguez
8036 90th Ave
New York, NY 11421

-- Sent from Julio Acosta to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Julio Acosta
328 Warburton Ave
Yonkers, NY 10701

-- Sent from Ahmed Gaamom to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ahmed Gaamom
196 Court St
Brooklyn, NY 11201

-- Sent from Sylla Seydou to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sylla Seydou

460 W 126th St
New York, NY 10027

-- Sent from agusti galindo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
agusti galindo
150 E 116th St
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from Amy k to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Amy k
538 E 86th St
Brooklyn, NY 11236

-- Sent from Chouaib Dellabani to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Chouaib Dellabani
1621 65th St
Brooklyn, NY 11204

-- Sent from Julien Saint to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Julien Saint
1084 Rogers Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11226

-- Sent from Pablo Regalado to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Pablo Regalado
735 W 172nd St

New York, NY 10032

-- Sent from Felix Mateo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Felix Mateo
1111 Willoughby Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11237

-- Sent from Simone Romero to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Simone Romero
1741 Pilgrim Ave
The Bronx, NY 10461

-- Sent from Isaiah Weston to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Isaiah Weston
70-53 Sybilla St
Queens, NY 11375

-- Sent from Reyad Uddin to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Reyad Uddin
902 Avenue C
Brooklyn, NY 11218

-- Sent from Joran Jaramillo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Joran Jaramillo
35-61 92nd St
Queens, NY 11372

-- Sent from Douglas Elcock to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Douglas Elcock
185 Erasmus St
Brooklyn, NY 11226

-- Sent from Usman Jallah to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Usman Jallah
1418 Prospect Ave
The Bronx, NY 10459

-- Sent from Nasim Khan to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nasim Khan
1684 W 10th St
Brooklyn, NY 11223

-- Sent from Gabriel chavez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Gabriel chavez
11437 149th St
Queens, NY 11436

-- Sent from Xiaohui Liang to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Xiaohui Liang
13-34 125th St
Queens, NY 11356

-- Sent from Cindy Reyes to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Cindy Reyes
1013 Castle Hill Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Aliou Cisse to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Aliou Cisse
2964 Williamsbridge Rd
The Bronx, NY 10467

-- Sent from DOSTONBEK SOBIROV to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
DOSTONBEK SOBIROV
9560 Queens Blvd
Queens, NY 11374

-- Sent from Eder Icart to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not

implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Eder Icart
410 E 25th St
Brooklyn, NY 11226

-- Sent from Juan Salazar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs
Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Juan Salazar
221 W 107th St
New York, NY 10025

-- Sent from Keith Gause to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Keith Gause
15 Miller St
Wilkes-Barre, PA 18705

-- Sent from Gonzalo Siney to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Gonzalo Siney
1838 85th St
Brooklyn, NY 11214

-- Sent from Thanzir Hussain to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Thanzir Hussain
30-06 83rd St
Queens, NY 11370

-- Sent from Mohammad Yeasin to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohammad Yeasin
910 Avenue C
Brooklyn, NY 11218

-- Sent from Abed Mahmood to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Abed Mahmood
99 Meserole Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11222

-- Sent from Benjamin Vargas to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental

Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Benjamin Vargas
932 Bronx Park S
The Bronx, NY 10460

-- Sent from Frantz Nazaire to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Frantz Nazaire
898 Bushwick Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11221

-- Sent from Jose martinez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jose martinez
1715 Zerega Ave
The Bronx, NY 10462

-- Sent from Jennifer Troya to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jennifer Troya
94-19 42nd Ave
Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from Marco Ramirez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs
Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Marco Ramirez
227-06 64th Ave
Queens, NY 11364

-- Sent from jose marte to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs
Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
jose marte
235 E 149th St
The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Eddy Baten to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Eddy Baten
1285 Jefferson Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11221

-- Sent from yeahia suva to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
yeahia suva
Jamaica, quince
Queens, NY 11221

-- Sent from JodyAnn Bradford to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
JodyAnn Bradford
413 E 3rd St
Mount Vernon, NY 10553

-- Sent from Rakib Hossain to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rakib Hossain
768 Dean St
Brooklyn, NY 11238

-- Sent from Katherine Mendoza to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Katherine Mendoza
35-51 31st St
Queens, NY 11106

-- Sent from Dany Ciprianiano to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Dany Cipriano
4417 5th Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11220

-- Sent from Aboubacar Ki to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Aboubacar Ki
1346 Taylor Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from tarek dekkaki to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
tarek dekkaki
11 Winter Ave
Staten Island, NY 10301

-- Sent from shorena vreshetoki to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
shorena vreshetoki
2026 Ocean Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11230

-- Sent from Fausto Perez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Fausto Perez
312 E 116th St
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from Robert Calogerakos to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

Robert Calogerakos
1691 Davidson Ave
The Bronx, NY 10453

-- Sent from Aaliyah Mercurius to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Aaliyah Mercurius
18920 113th Ave
Queens, NY 11412

-- Sent from Chanalyia Grant to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Chanalylia Grant
1016 Washington Ave
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Juan Iovos to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Juan Iovos
461 W 148th St
New York, NY 10031

-- Sent from Bradley Perez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Bradley Perez
85 Lorraine St
Brooklyn, NY 11231

-- Sent from leonardo tenesaca to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
leonardo tenesaca

45-59 45th St
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from Daniel compaore to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Daniel compaore
3229 Bruner Ave
The Bronx, NY 10469

-- Sent from Melissa Uzuriaga to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Melissa Uzuriaga
95-23 110th St
Queens, NY 11419

-- Sent from Shanay Elliott to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Shanay Elliott
380 Cozine Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from Cesar Gonzalez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Cesar Gonzalez
645 Newfield Ave
Bridgeport, CT 06607

-- Sent from Nour Moghith to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nour Moghith
35-17 30th St

Queens, NY 11106

-- Sent from Nour Moghith to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nour Moghith
35-17 30th St
Queens, NY 11106

-- Sent from Angel De La Cruz to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Angel De La Cruz
1233 Virginia Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Bryant Jones to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Bryant Jones
24104 S Conduit Ave
Queens, NY 11422

-- Sent from Md Chowdhury to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Md Chowdhury
550 Vanderbilt Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11238

-- Sent from yuanen cheng to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
yuanen cheng
16 Freeman Pl
Staten Island, NY 10310

-- Sent from Nelson Ramirez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nelson Ramirez
1442 Fteley Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from dilara jahan to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
dilara jahan
3457 111th St
Corona, NY 11368

-- Sent from Mahbubul Hasan to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mahbubul Hasan
626 Crescent St.
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from chathushka colombage to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
chathushka colombage
53 Victory Blvd
Staten Island, NY 10301

-- Sent from Reynaldo Galvez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Reynaldo Galvez
54 E Kingsbridge Rd
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Rodolfo Villano to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rodolfo Villano
1548 Madison Ave
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from Joan Caidor to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Joan Caidor
14 Sterling Rd
Elmont, NY 11003

-- Sent from andre alleyne to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
andre alleyne
537 Linwood St
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from Jose sanchez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not

implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jose Sanchez
212 E 122nd St
New York, NY 10035

-- Sent from Leo Guzman to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs
Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Leo Guzman
33 Dodworth St
Brooklyn, NY 11221

-- Sent from Rosa Paula to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rosa Paula
126 Maujer St
Brooklyn, NY 11206

-- Sent from Michelet Ilmet to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Michelet Ilmet
4815 Fort Hamilton Pkwy
Brooklyn, NY 11219

-- Sent from Hameedullah Zadeh to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hameedullah Zadeh
85-44 256th St
Queens, NY 11001

-- Sent from Charles OBrien to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Charles OBrien
459 E 25th St
Brooklyn, NY 11226

-- Sent from Joseph theluscar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Joseph theluscar
326 E 29th St
Brooklyn, NY 11226

-- Sent from Benson Ayoreko to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental

Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Benson Ayoreko
920 Co Op City Blvd
The Bronx, NY 10475

-- Sent from Clark Hassler to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Clark Hassler
122 Forsyth St
New York, NY 10002

-- Sent from Hanifullah Ahmadi to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hanifullah Ahmadi
2043 72nd St
Brooklyn, NY 11204

-- Sent from Mehmet Kucuk to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mehmet Kucuk
47-52 43rd St
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from Kevin Beckford to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Kevin Beckford
145 E 18th St
Brooklyn, NY 11226

-- Sent from David Haywood to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
David Haywood
73 Wave St
Staten Island, NY 10304

-- Sent from Jahnnoy Shirley to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jahnnoy Shirley
145 W Kingsbridge Rd
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Moises Tavarez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Moises Tavarez
Pawnee St
PA 18015

-- Sent from Omar Adames to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Omar Adames
66-17 Woodhaven Blvd
Queens, NY 11374

-- Sent from Ricardo Collins to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ricardo Collins
211 E 94th St
Brooklyn, NY 11212

-- Sent from Chayenne Henriquez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Chayenne Henriquez
1147 E 229th St
The Bronx, NY 10466

-- Sent from Charles Huang to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Charles Huang
270 W 39th St
New York, NY 10018

-- Sent from Mohamad Diallo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohamad Diallo
2216 Frederick Douglass Blvd
New York, NY 10026

-- Sent from Zakir Hossion to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Zakir Hossion
32-48 81st St
Queens, NY 11370

-- Sent from silverio grullon to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
silverio grullon
436 Jessica St SE
Kentwood, MI 49548

-- Sent from Roman Shpitalskiy to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Roman Shpitalskiy
9608 57th Ave
Queens, NY 11368

-- Sent from giorgi shonia to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

giorgi shonia
2370 Ocean Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11229

-- Sent from Tirbhowan Persaud to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Tirbhowan Persaud
111-47 113th St
Queens, NY 11420

-- Sent from Abdul Aual to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Abdul Aual
412 E 16th St
Brooklyn, NY 11226

-- Sent from Hector Suero to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hector Suero
2143 Starling Ave
The Bronx, NY 10462

-- Sent from Patricio Jara to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Patricio Jara
58-41 78th Ave
Queens, NY 11385

-- Sent from Dannet Davis to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Dannet Davis

115-58 130th St
Queens, NY 11420

-- Sent from ysoris fernandez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
ysoris fernandez
2265 Sedgwick Ave
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Percival Williams to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Percival Williams
480 E 93rd St
Brooklyn, NY 11212

-- Sent from Yaya Kaba to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Yaya Kaba
1270 Webster Ave
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Marvin Lopez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Marvin Lopez
831 40th St
Brooklyn, NY 11232

-- Sent from Jose Espinal to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jose Espinal
67-30 Clyde St

Queens, NY 11375

-- Sent from Cyan Haughton to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs
Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Cyan Haughton
1530 Story Ave
The Bronx, NY 10473

-- Sent from wasiul islam to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs
Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
wasiul islam
145-02 88th Ave
Queens, NY 11435

-- Sent from Abdoul Nikiema to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Abdoul Nikiema
245 McClellan St
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Frank Cumbe to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Frank Cumbe
94-42 45th Ave
Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from Fabian Reyes to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Fabian Reyes
1228 Commonwealth Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Andres Garcia to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs
Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Andres Garcia
6 W 190th St
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Mahabir Singh to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs
Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mahabir Singh
38-17 Parsons Blvd
Queens, NY 11354

-- Sent from Realino Wijaya to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Realino Wijaya
85-36 Grand Ave
Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from Emad Ibrahim to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Emad Ibrahim
1026 56th St
Brooklyn, NY 11219

-- Sent from Jorge Gamboa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jorge Gamboa
3242 33rd St
Queens, NY 11106

-- Sent from Donald Zongo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Donald Zongo
600 Concord Ave
The Bronx, NY 10455

-- Sent from Hope Valencia to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hope Valencia
140-74 34th Ave
Queens, NY 11354

-- Sent from Shante Mieles to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Shante Mieles
72 Bay 37th St
Brooklyn, NY 11214

-- Sent from hilda Pizzini to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
hilda Pizzini
580 Castle Hill Ave
The Bronx, NY 10473

-- Sent from mohammad islam to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
mohammad islam
159 M.L.K. Jr Pl
Brooklyn, NY 11206

-- Sent from Nur Jewel to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nur Jewel
70-38 Broadway
Queens, NY 11372

-- Sent from Saul Feliciano to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Saul Feliciano
2676 Morris Ave
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Buddha Lama to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Buddha Lama
53-49 72nd Pl
Queens, NY 11378

-- Sent from Danny Silva to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Danny Silva
32-69 44th St
Queens, NY 11103

-- Sent from Zain Khan to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Zain Khan
2606 18th St Apt 6
Astoria, NY 11102

-- Sent from Ndiaye Serigne to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af

Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ndiaye Serigne
2129 2nd Ave
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from Salifo Zongo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Salifo Zongo
26915 47th Pl S
Kent, WA 98032

-- Sent from Arturo H to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Arturo H
127 Allen St
New York, NY 10002

-- Sent from Christina Paulson to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Christina Paulson
72-62 61st St
Queens, NY 11385

-- Sent from CHARLES BRAMBACH to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
CHARLES BRAMBACH
1646 1st Ave.
New York, NY 10028

-- Sent from Daniel Pizzurro to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Daniel Pizzurro
20 Edgewater Park
The Bronx, NY 10465

-- Sent from Celerino Alberto to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Celerino Alberto
313 E 115th St
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from William Alvarez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
William Alvarez
50-23 102nd St
Queens, NY 11368

-- Sent from Md salauddin to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Md salauddin
54-40 74th St
Queens, NY 11378

-- Sent from Shohrat Velmedov to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Shohrat Velmedov
2794 E 26th St
Brooklyn, NY 11235

-- Sent from Ramiro Torres to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ramiro Torres
103-24 Northern Blvd
Queens, NY 11368

-- Sent from Wendy Cancel to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Wendy Cancel
2455 Grand Ave
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Juan Chavez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Juan Chavez
1535 E 172nd St
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Rafia Raja to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rafia Raja
3 E 115th St
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from JosÃ© Alberto to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jose Alberto
2544 23rd St
Astoria, NY 11102

-- Sent from Maynor Rojas to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Maynor Rojas
37-38 59th St
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from Luc Zoungrana to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

Luc Zoungrana
3005 Matthews Ave
The Bronx, NY 10467

-- Sent from omar faruk to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
omar faruk
203 McKinley Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from Koami Djoka to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Koami Djoka
372 E 167th St
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Nirosha Banduge to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nirosha Banduge
56 Eldridge Ave
Staten Island, NY 10302

-- Sent from jose rosales to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
jose rosales
2544 23rd St
Astoria, NY 11102

-- Sent from Abel De Jesus to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Abel De Jesus

575 E 137th St
The Bronx, NY 10454

-- Sent from grinadia osorio to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
grinadia osorio
9825 Horace Harding Expy
Corona, NY 11368

-- Sent from joel rivas to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
joel rivas
84 Clinton St
New York, NY 10002

-- Sent from Michael Crawford to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Michael Crawford
133-07 140th St
Queens, NY 11436

-- Sent from Victor Torregrosa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Victor Torregrosa
6157 62nd Ave
Queens, NY 11379

-- Sent from Eleazar Fernandez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Eleazar Fernandez
1000 Grant Ave

The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from syed abbas to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
syed abbas
147-39 109th Ave
Queens, NY 11435

-- Sent from YASIN OZTURK to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
YASIN OZTURK
36-21 Ditmars Blvd
Queens, NY 11105

-- Sent from Halidou Bassole to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Halidou Bassole
1975 Lafontaine Ave
The Bronx, NY 10457

-- Sent from Eduardo Hernandez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Eduardo Hernandez
41-4 157th St
Queens, NY 11355

-- Sent from abderraouf rekima to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
abderraouf rekima
22-12 27th St
Queens, NY 11105

-- Sent from Giba Kamara to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Giba Kamara
1910 Amethyst St
The Bronx, NY 10462

-- Sent from freddy alvarez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
freddy alvarez
2333 Barnes Ave
The Bronx, NY 10467

-- Sent from Carlos Garcia to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Carlos Garcia
31-27 87th St
Queens, NY 11369

-- Sent from Mohammad Morshed to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohammad Morshed
918 New Hyde Park Rd
New Hyde Park, NY 11040

-- Sent from Nikk Felix to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nikk Felix
266 E 198th St
The Bronx, NY 10458

-- Sent from Jakaira Pellecier to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jakaira Pellecier
136 Vista Pl
Mount Vernon, NY 10550

-- Sent from Kevin Tocco to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Kevin Tocco
135 Corson Ave
Staten Island, NY 10301

-- Sent from Bangally Touray to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Bangally Touray
595 E 167th St
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Marco Alvarez
40-27 Gleane St
Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from Francisco Figueroa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Francisco Figueroa
104-15 177th St
Queens, NY 11433

-- Sent from Yesenia Ayala to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Yesenia Ayala
1444 St Lawrence Ave
The Bronx, NY 10460

-- Sent from Edwin Gomez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Edwin Gomez
524 Vandalia Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11239

-- Sent from Mohamed Abdulla to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohamed Abdulla
278 Milford St
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from Evert arriola to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Evert arriola
24-01 92nd St
Queens, NY 11369

-- Sent from LEON BOYCE to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
LEON BOYCE
1318 W 6th St
Brooklyn, NY 11204

-- Sent from Gage Eckert to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af

Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Gage Eckert
57 Monroe Ave
Staten Island, NY 10301

-- Sent from jhan del orbe to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
jhan del orbe
2163 Mapes Ave
The Bronx, NY 10460

-- Sent from Mahmudul Rubel to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mahmudul Rubel
392 E 3rd St
Brooklyn, NY 11218

-- Sent from Nauman Bangash to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nauman Bangash
1820 Ave V
Brooklyn, NY 11229

-- Sent from Elhadj niass to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Elhadj niass
1107 E 221st St
The Bronx, NY 10469

-- Sent from isaura santos to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
isaura santos
335 Sutter Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11212

-- Sent from Christopher Arnold to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Christopher Arnold
601 W 148th St
New York, NY 10031

-- Sent from Craig Brownfield to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Craig Brownfield
2245 Randall Ave
The Bronx, NY 10473

-- Sent from Mamadou alpha to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mamadou alpha
735 Walton Ave
The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Dmitry Kharitonov to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Dmitry Kharitonov
1311 Brightwater Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11235

-- Sent from Claudia Vivas-Rojas to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Claudia Vivas-Rojas
24-14 Steinway St
Queens, NY 11103

-- Sent from FODAY GIBA to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
FODAY GIBA
1150 Garrison Ave
The Bronx, NY 10474

-- Sent from Roaly Zabala to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Roaly Zabala
4049 Kingsbridge Ave
The Bronx, NY 10463

-- Sent from Maximo Polanco to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Maximo Polanco
2015 Creston Ave
The Bronx, NY 10453

-- Sent from Samuel Perez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Samuel Perez
1547 79th St
Brooklyn, NY 11228

-- Sent from Constancio Rodriguez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Constancio Rodriguez
38-29 54th St
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from Oscar Licon to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

Oscar Licona
506 W 171st St
New York, NY 10032

-- Sent from Joseph De La Cruz to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Joseph De La Cruz
2695 Shell Rd
Brooklyn, NY 11223

-- Sent from Omar Torres to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Omar Torres
106-09 Otis Ave
Queens, NY 11368

-- Sent from Onis Gonzalez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Onis Gonzalez
79-13 69th Ave
Queens, NY 11379

-- Sent from Mamo Koraiem to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mamo Koraiem
88-50 Ransom St
Queens, NY 11427

-- Sent from Mariana Peralta to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mariana Peralta

25-39 44th St
Queens, NY 11103

-- Sent from assata diomande to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
assata diomande
2110 1st Ave.
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from fanny Dinese to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
fanny Dinese
34-32 70th St
Queens, NY 11372

-- Sent from Raul Mendoza to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Raul Mendoza
515 W 179th St
New York, NY 10033

-- Sent from Md Hossain to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Md Hossain
905 Herkimer St
Brooklyn, NY 11233

-- Sent from Amranul Knan to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Amranul Knan
235-53 148th Ave

Queens, NY 11422

-- Sent from Sardar Durrani to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sardar Durrani
Clifton Ave
Staten Island, NY 10305

-- Sent from Fernando Batista to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Fernando Batista
1712 Barnes Ave
The Bronx, NY 10462

-- Sent from Shab Uddin to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Shab Uddin
575 Lafayette Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11216

-- Sent from Shaneque Andino to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Shaneque Andino
1694 Madison Ave
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from Ammaar Algadi to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ammaar Algadi
19 Battery Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11228

-- Sent from Ricardo Jordan to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ricardo Jordan
375 Pleasant Ave
New York, NY 10035

-- Sent from Jose Rivera to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jose Rivera
140 Darrow Pl
The Bronx, NY 10475

-- Sent from william herrera to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
william herrera
113 Sherman Ave
New York, NY 10034

-- Sent from Sher Ali to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sher Ali
9 Nixon Ct
Brooklyn, NY 11223

-- Sent from Ashanny Williams to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ashanny Williams
132 Avenue D
New York, NY 10009

-- Sent from Julio Alberto to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Julio Alberto
889 Manhattan Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11222

-- Sent from Alberto Ramirez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Alberto Ramirez
61 Ten Eyck St
Brooklyn, NY 11206

-- Sent from reynaldo gomez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
reynaldo gomez
162 Troy Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11213

-- Sent from Milton Campos to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Milton Campos
19 Maujer St
Brooklyn, NY 11211

-- Sent from Messaoud Dadouat to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Messaoud Dadouat
30-94 48th St
Queens, NY 11103

-- Sent from Paulo cesar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Paulo cesar
41-11 Gleane St
Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from Abdulahakim Alghazali to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Abdulahakim Alghazali
240 W 122nd St
New York, NY 10027

-- Sent from Fernando Muñoz to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Fernando Munoz
1056 Morris Park Ave
The Bronx, NY 10461

-- Sent from Chuck Ngan to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Chuck Ngan
1920 85th St
Brooklyn, NY 11214

-- Sent from Sirleta Nedd to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sirleta Nedd
532 Marcy Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11206

-- Sent from Eric Lin to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos

Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Eric Lin
34-12 62nd St
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from Yolanda Allen to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Yolanda Allen
109-30 160th St
Queens, NY 11433

-- Sent from Davis Aguiar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Davis Aguiar
62 E 182nd St
The Bronx, NY 10453

-- Sent from Shackeema Brown to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Shackeema Brown
1450 E 87th St
Brooklyn, NY 11236

-- Sent from Malle Siby to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Malle Siby
450 W 149th St
New York, NY 10031

-- Sent from Oumarou Douamba to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Oumarou Douamba
171 E 165th St
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from zhendeng weng to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
zhendeng weng
545 56th St
Brooklyn, NY 11220

-- Sent from luis garcia to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
luis garcia
237 E 163rd St
The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Julio varga to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Julio varga
687 Meeker Ave
Albany, NY 12222

-- Sent from Xianghui Zhou to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Xianghui Zhou
20602 47th Ave
Queens, NY 11361

-- Sent from Julissa Escobar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Julissa Escobar
127 W Parmenter St
Newburgh, NY 12550

-- Sent from Jeanne Lubin to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jeanne Lubin
632 E 89th St
Brooklyn, NY 11236

-- Sent from Wilbel Ventura to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Wilbel Ventura
277 E 207th St
The Bronx, NY 10467

-- Sent from Kanfiaguin Djekoibgue to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Kanfiaguin Djekoibgue
1660 Eastburn Ave
The Bronx, NY 10457

-- Sent from Gerson Escobar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Gerson Escobar
127 W Parmenter St
Newburgh, NY 12550

-- Sent from Mahamadi Yaogo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mahamadi Yaogo
465 E 167th St
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Carlos Alonzo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

Carlos Alonzo
527 W 47th St
New York, NY 10036

-- Sent from Ricky Trivino to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ricky Trivino
85 Eastern Pkwy
Brooklyn, NY 11238

-- Sent from Frank Guerrero to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Frank Guerrero
3165 Waterbury Ave
The Bronx, NY 10465

-- Sent from Lejla Cura to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Lejla Cura
57 Atlantic Ave
Staten Island, NY 10304

-- Sent from Balima Nicolas to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Balima Nicolas
1486 E 172nd St
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Ana Ramos to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ana Ramos

657 50th St
Brooklyn, NY 11220

-- Sent from liang zou to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
liang zou
756 43rd St
Brooklyn, NY 11232

-- Sent from Chopaine Campbell to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Chopaine Campbell
6542 Parsons Blvd
Fresh Meadows, NY 11365

-- Sent from Carlos Juarez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Carlos Juarez
961 St Nicholas Ave
New York, NY 10032

-- Sent from Mohammed ali to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohammed ali
64 Court St
Brooklyn, NY 11201

-- Sent from Ibrahim Hashem to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ibrahim Hashem
14456 87th Rd

New York, NY 11435

-- Sent from Sad Abdullah to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sad Abdullah
160-37 Highland Ave
Queens, NY 11432

-- Sent from Oneida Perez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Oneida Perez
85 Lorraine St
Brooklyn, NY 11231

-- Sent from Alex Cruz to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Alex Cruz
3671 Broadway
New York, NY 10031

-- Sent from Mudassar Bhatti to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mudassar Bhatti
68-18 174th St
Queens, NY 11365

-- Sent from Christopher Martinez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Christopher Martinez
106-33 Union Hall St
Queens, NY 11433

-- Sent from Zeng Liu to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Zeng Liu
142-39 Horace Harding Expy
Queens, NY 11367

-- Sent from SHIM Whitehead to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
SHIM Whitehead
1371 Eastern Pkwy
Brooklyn, NY 11233

-- Sent from leonard rrukaj to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
leonard rrukaj
15 Crosby Ave
Brewster, NY 10509

-- Sent from Jose Sanchez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jose Sanchez
35-57 158th St
Queens, NY 11358

-- Sent from Alberto Ramirez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Alberto Ramirez
51-03 Broadway
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from Tomas Tol to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Tomas Tol
3212 100th St
Queens, NY 11369

-- Sent from Natnael Reda to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Natnael Reda
119 Payson Ave
New York, NY 10034

-- Sent from Eli Aponte to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Eli Aponte
676 E 141st St
The Bronx, NY 10454

-- Sent from El amin to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
El amin
32-11 38th St
Queens, NY 11103

-- Sent from Ronny De to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ronny De
97-27 Woodhaven Blvd
Queens, NY 11416

-- Sent from Rodrigo Leon to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rodrigo Leon
501 W 164th St
New York, NY 10032

-- Sent from travis Bobb to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
travis Bobb
129 W 147th St
New York, NY 10039

-- Sent from Rodney Pierre to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rodney Pierre
1314 E 59th St
Brooklyn, NY 11234

-- Sent from Francisco Gomez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Francisco Gomez
45-28 42nd St
Queens, NY 11104

-- Sent from Henri bah to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Henri bah
1052 Anderson Ave
The Bronx, NY 10452

-- Sent from Stephanie Colon to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental

Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Stephanie Colon
29-15 23rd Rd
Queens, NY 11105

-- Sent from Shakell Kelshall to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental
Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Shakell Kelshall
720 Westchester Ave
The Bronx, NY 10455

-- Sent from Eduardo Velazquez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Eduardo Velazquez
20-31 Menahan St
Queens, NY 11385

-- Sent from Jenny Ramon to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jenny Ramon
555 W 43rd St
New York, NY 10036

-- Sent from Christie Martell to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Christie Martell
1800 Davidson Ave
The Bronx, NY 10453

-- Sent from Eyyup Gunes to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Eyyup Gunes
24 W 87th St
New York, NY 10024

-- Sent from Anibal Rojas to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Anibal Rojas
287 Irving Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11237

-- Sent from Jencie Samora to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jencie Samora
1105 Morrison Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Keon Blair to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Keon Blair
361 Herzl St
Brooklyn, NY 11212

-- Sent from Juan Ortega to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Juan Ortega
66-82 79th Pl
Queens, NY 11379

-- Sent from Rawle Folkes to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rawle Folkes
1510 Carroll St
Brooklyn, NY 11213

-- Sent from Robert Brown to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Robert Brown
90 Decatur St
Brooklyn, NY 11216

-- Sent from Rosalia Borja to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rosalia Borja
69-42 Grand Ave
Queens, NY 11378

-- Sent from khondoker moheet to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
khondoker moheet
221-26 104th Ave
Queens, NY 11429

-- Sent from Manuel Cali to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Manuel Cali
94-26 34th Rd
Queens, NY 11372

-- Sent from Felix Morales to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Felix Morales
858 42nd St
Brooklyn, NY 11232

-- Sent from Jessie Johnson to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

Jessie Johnson
10 Paladino Ave
New York, NY 10035

-- Sent from Sana Fabureh to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sana Fabureh
2639 Davidson Ave
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Slavko Stankovic to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Slavko Stankovic
57 Bay 26th St
Brooklyn, NY 11214

-- Sent from Giovanni Crespo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Giovanni Crespo
72-7 160th St
Queens, NY 11365

-- Sent from Noushin Jui to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Noushin Jui
1922 McGraw Ave
The Bronx, NY 10462

-- Sent from Jean-paul Kommongninda to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jean-paul Kommongninda

1442 Leland Ave
The Bronx, NY 10460

-- Sent from Roger Barratt to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Roger Barratt
20 Woodruff Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11226

-- Sent from khurshid Anwar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
khurshid Anwar
159-40 Normal Rd
Queens, NY 11432

-- Sent from Everton Springer to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Everton Springer
564 St Johns Pl
Brooklyn, NY 11238

-- Sent from melany maiza to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
melany maiza
1223 Bushwick Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11221

-- Sent from Valentin Vivar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Valentin Vivar
3221 3rd Ave.

The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Mamadou Sacku to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mamadou Sacku
230 W 129th St
New York, NY 10027

-- Sent from kevin liburd to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
kevin liburd
270 Clarkson Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11226

-- Sent from Ryan Choice to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ryan Choice
20 N 5th St
Brooklyn, NY 11249

-- Sent from Jairo Liriano to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jairo Liriano
1226 Sherman Ave
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Amara Djabate to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Amara Djabate
779 Elton Ave
The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Karen Cepeda to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Karen Cepeda
261 Buffalo Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11213

-- Sent from Mohamed Barry to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohamed Barry
269 E 52nd St
Brooklyn, NY 11203

-- Sent from Ken Volkman to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ken Volkman
550J Grand St
New York, NY 10002

-- Sent from Argelis berroa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Argelis berroa
2719 Morris Ave
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Mohammad Islam to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mohammad Islam
1418 Zerega Ave
The Bronx, NY 10462

-- Sent from Shamauri Heaven to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Shamauri Heaven
445 E 96th St
Brooklyn, NY 11212

-- Sent from Ronald Weiss to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ronald Weiss
65 Columbia St
New York, NY 10002

-- Sent from Kamal Hossain to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Kamal Hossain
216A Malcolm X Blvd
Brooklyn, NY 11221

-- Sent from Salvador GÃ¡lvez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Salvador Galvez
9102 50th Ave
Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from Christopher Grayson to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Christopher Grayson
6909 186th Ln
Queens, NY 11365

-- Sent from Miguel catalan to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Miguel catalan
594 Union Ave
The Bronx, NY 10455

-- Sent from Hugo Perez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hugo Perez
2109 1st Ave.
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from Luis Cuellar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Luis Cuellar
1588 Pacific St
Brooklyn, NY 11213

-- Sent from Randy Salcedo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Randy Salcedo
2060 Anthony Ave
The Bronx, NY 10457

-- Sent from Lisa Otto to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Lisa Otto
273 Fairbanks Ave
Staten Island, NY 10306

-- Sent from daniel Debideen to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental

Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
daniel Debideen
2047 Chatterton Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Khin myint to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Khin myint
43-27 68th St
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from jose Sotomayor to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
jose Sotomayor
602 W 137th St
New York, NY 10031

-- Sent from Darling Camacho to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Darling Camacho
77-45 79th St
Queens, NY 11385

-- Sent from Raluchukwu Nwosu to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Raluchukwu Nwosu
418 Beach Ave
The Bronx, NY 10473

-- Sent from Ramon Cabrera to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ramon Cabrera
620 Rosedale Ave
The Bronx, NY 10473

-- Sent from raheim Serrano to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
raheim Serrano
1824 Watson Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Baba Bamba to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Baba Bamba
39 W 129th St
New York, NY 10027

-- Sent from Samer Elsamad to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Samer Elsamad
601 W 151st St
New York, NY 10031

-- Sent from tomas velazquez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards, tomas velazquez
63-08 Broadway
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from Emanuel Conde to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Emanuel Conde
1978 Dr M.L.K. Jr Blvd
The Bronx, NY 10453

-- Sent from Hamoudi Hmed to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hamoudi Hmed
30-96 48th St
Queens, NY 11103

-- Sent from Mahamadou sissoko to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mahamadou sissoko
Mahamadou Sissoko
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Nasir Uddin to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nasir Uddin
19 Tehama St
Brooklyn, NY 11218

-- Sent from Jimmi Sherpa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jimmi Sherpa
192 Grayson Pl
Teaneck, NJ 07666

-- Sent from Carlos Chumil to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Carlos Chumil
30-32 83rd St
Queens, NY 11370

-- Sent from Rigoberto Rivera to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

Rigoberto Rivera
104-39 42nd Ave
Queens, NY 11368

-- Sent from Habib Nouri to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Habib Nouri
181 Havemeyer St
Brooklyn, NY 11211

-- Sent from Daniel Camilo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Daniel Camilo
24-21 Crescent St
Queens, NY 11102

-- Sent from AngÃ©lica MarÃ­a to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Angelica Maria
1275 Edward L Grant Hwy
The Bronx, NY 10452

-- Sent from Estephany Escanio to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Estephany Escanio
560 Drew St
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from Marcos Ramirez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Marcos Ramirez

502 Jackson Ave
The Bronx, NY 10455

-- Sent from Kazi Rana to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Kazi Rana
307 Albemarle Rd
Brooklyn, NY 11218

-- Sent from Jose Lema to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jose Lema
41-12 95th St
Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from Mostafa Ossman to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mostafa Ossman
6114 4th Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11220

-- Sent from Gary Grace to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Gary Grace
517 Thatford Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11212

-- Sent from Muhibur Rahman to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Muhibur Rahman
10940A 156th St

Jamaica, NY 11433

-- Sent from Job Miculax to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Job Miculax
10101 39th Ave
Corona, NY 11368

-- Sent from Sadman Kabir to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sadman Kabir
368 Miller Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11207

-- Sent from Andrew DeLauro to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Andrew DeLauro
8940 70th Rd
Queens, NY 11375

-- Sent from Luis De La Rosa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Luis De La Rosa
556 Bergen Ave
The Bronx, NY 10455

-- Sent from Edgar GABRIEL to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Edgar GABRIEL
1214 Boynton Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from kimberly Rodriguez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
kimberly Rodriguez
6908 38th Ave
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from Hector Basurto to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hector Basurto
469 W 157th St
New York, NY 10032

-- Sent from Harjot Singh to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Harjot Singh
82-52 251st St
Queens, NY 11426

-- Sent from Luis Rosario to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Luis Rosario
608 W 184th St
New York, NY 10033

-- Sent from Gomini persaud to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Gomini persaud
1211 Carroll St
Brooklyn, NY 11225

-- Sent from Jermaine Culler to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jermaine Culler
468 Bushwick Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11206

-- Sent from Md Ashchad to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Md Ashchad
1253 Leland Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Cristian Concepcion to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Cristian Concepcion
609 W 177th St
New York, NY 10033

-- Sent from Wendyam Ramde to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Wendyam Ramde
1874 Hunt Ave
The Bronx, NY 10462

-- Sent from Waly Sacko to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Waly Sacko
3207 Park Ave
The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Jose LUIS to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jose LUIS
103 Vermilyea Ave
New York, NY 10034

-- Sent from Abraham ramos to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Abraham ramos
63-10 39th Ave
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from Antone Nicholson to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Antone Nicholson
275 Kosciuszko St
Brooklyn, NY 11221

-- Sent from Martin Alvarez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Martin Alvarez
941 Hoe Ave
The Bronx, NY 10459

-- Sent from Jose Nevares to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jose Nevares
1747 Lexington Ave
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from Armando Trinidad to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental

Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Armando Trinidad
154 Broome St
New York, NY 10002

-- Sent from Melanie Pena to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Melanie Pena
720 Tiffany St
The Bronx, NY 10474

-- Sent from Fatai Raji to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Fatai Raji
68 Lockman Ave
Staten Island, NY 10303

-- Sent from Boyo Ky to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Boyo Ky
780 Pelham Pkwy S
The Bronx, NY 10462

-- Sent from Beatrice Larrieux to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Beatrice Larrieux
336 W 95th St
New York, NY 10025

-- Sent from richenader vil to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
richenader vil
974 E 99th St
Brooklyn, NY 11236

-- Sent from Ibou Kane to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ibou Kane
277 W 150th St
New York, NY 10039

-- Sent from Adriana Cabrera to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Adriana Cabrera
30-54 85th St
Queens, NY 11370

-- Sent from Weiye Li to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Weiye Li
2695 Shell Rd
Brooklyn, NY 11223

-- Sent from Carmine colaizzo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Carmine colaizzo
965 79th St
Brooklyn, NY 11228

-- Sent from Arso Laecher to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Arso Laecher
83-32 St James Ave
Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from Josue Figueroa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Josue Figueroa
4211 Hancock Ave SE
Lakeland, FL 33812

-- Sent from Roger Williams to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Roger Williams
135 Sewanee Ave
Elmont, NY 11003

-- Sent from Abul k to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Abul k
244 E 8th St
Brooklyn, NY 11218

-- Sent from Violeta Gomes to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Violeta Gomes
1566 Longfellow Ave
New York, NY 10460

-- Sent from brandy pena to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
brandy pena
8 Fleet Walk
Brooklyn, NY 11201

-- Sent from lissett rondon to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

lissett rondon
690 Gates Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11221

-- Sent from Franklyn Santos to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Franklyn Santos
99 Ridgewood Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from Md Zaman to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Md Zaman
8750 167th St
Queens, NY 11432

-- Sent from warren Younker to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
warren Younker
104-12 197th St
Queens, NY 11412

-- Sent from Christopher Santos to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Christopher Santos
730 125th St
Queens, NY 11356

-- Sent from Noureddine Hadria to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Noureddine Hadria

385 93rd St
Brooklyn, NY 11209

-- Sent from Guesseowinde Ouedraogo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Guesseowinde Ouedraogo
1056 Sherman Ave
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Edison Munive to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Edison Munive
73-22 70th St
Queens, NY 11385

-- Sent from md akter to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards, md akter
175-25 89th Ave
Queens, NY 11432

-- Sent from Pedro Navarro to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Pedro Navarro
600 W 162nd St
New York, NY 10032

-- Sent from Jesus Cortes to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jesus Cortes
90-47 Corona Ave.

Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Angel Jose
63-08 Broadway
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from jhonn rodriguez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
jhonn rodriguez
123 Haven Ave
Mount Vernon, NY 10553

-- Sent from Mina Bedaba to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mina Bedaba
61-20 Madison St
Queens, NY 11385

-- Sent from Fernando Martinez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Fernando Martinez
2676 Morris Ave
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Asad Malik to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Asad Malik
615 Westminster Rd
Brooklyn, NY 11230

-- Sent from Makhatar Ndiaye to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Makhatar Ndiaye
2035 Adam Clayton Powell Jr Blvd
New York, NY 10027

-- Sent from Ewan Biggs to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ewan Biggs
1364 Prospect PI
Brooklyn, NY 11213

-- Sent from Danyi Gonzalez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Danyi Gonzalez
371 7th Ave
New York, NY 10001

-- Sent from Carmelo Vazquez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Carmelo Vazquez
565 W 171st St
New York, NY 10032

-- Sent from Germain Zongo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Germain Zongo
1359 Findlay Ave
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Salvador GarcÃa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Salvador Garcia
3198 3rd Ave.
The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Bouda Prosper to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Bouda Prosper
2077 Caesar Pl
The Bronx, NY 10473

-- Sent from Victoria Aido to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Victoria Aido
129 W 142nd St
New York, NY 10030

-- Sent from Kovon flowers to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Kovon flowers
15 Park Pl
Brooklyn, NY 11217

-- Sent from Fredy Chabla to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Fredy Chabla
23-10 30th Rd
Queens, NY 11102

-- Sent from Mdazharuddin Patwari to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mdazharuddin Patwari
2776 Pitkin Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from Domingo Cruz to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Domingo Cruz
3671 Broadway
New York, NY 10031

-- Sent from Chad Stewart to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Chad Stewart
229 E 93rd St
Brooklyn, NY 11212

-- Sent from DIMITRIOS TZIASTOUDIS to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
DIMITRIOS TZIASTOUDIS
80-14 25th Ave
Queens, NY 11370

-- Sent from carlos sanchez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
carlos sanchez
314 Underhill Ave
Bronx, NY 10473

-- Sent from gustavo cruz to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af

Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
gustavo cruz
688 Courtlandt Ave
The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Erika Davis to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Erika Davis
1544 Boone Ave
The Bronx, NY 10460

-- Sent from Hubert Carter to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hubert Carter
420 Wortman Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11207

-- Sent from FALLOU NDIAYE to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
FALLOU NDIAYE
1880 Adam Clayton Powell Jr Blvd
New York, NY 10026

-- Sent from Diana Taveras to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Diana Taveras
43-05 54th St
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from Estulbo Gabino to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Estulbo Gabino
40-21 67th St
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from Jesus Villa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jesus Villa
616 W 207th St
New York, NY 10034

-- Sent from Sameeban Tharmarajah to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Sameeban Tharmarajah
238 Prospect Park West
Brooklyn, NY 11215

-- Sent from Fredery Gomez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Fredery Gomez
2493 Davidson Ave
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from elvis lebron to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
elvis lebron
1575 E 174th St
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Lysa Hocevar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Lysa Hocevar
15450 22nd Ave
New York, NY 11357

-- Sent from Benito Rojano to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Benito Rojano
21-13 28th Ave
Queens, NY 11102

-- Sent from Gabriela Lisseth to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Gabriela Lisseth
277 Avenue C
New York, NY 10009

-- Sent from Kenyada Woodall to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Kenyada Woodall
687 E 4th St
Brooklyn, NY 11218

-- Sent from Julien Preux to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Julien Preux
933 Putnam Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11221

-- Sent from osvaldo amador to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
osvaldo amador
226 E 122nd St
New York, NY 10035

-- Sent from Christopher Hudson to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

Christopher Hudson
1655 Flatbush Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11210

-- Sent from CAROLINA Castro to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
CAROLINA Castro
685 Georgia Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11207

-- Sent from Rafael Comunidad to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Rafael Comunidad
3916 7th Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11232

-- Sent from inoussa yerbanga to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
inoussa yerbanga
64 Sherif S Byrd Pl
The Bronx, NY 10452

-- Sent from luis Santiago to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Luis Santiago
504 Belmont Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11207

-- Sent from XiaoDong Huang to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
XiaoDong Huang

588 46th St
Brooklyn, NY 11220

-- Sent from Miguel Basdeo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Miguel Basdeo
1211 Carroll St
Brooklyn, NY 11225

-- Sent from Fallou Dione to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Fallou Dione
940 Sheridan Ave
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Argenis arias to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Argenis arias
12 Campagnoli Ave
Copiague, NY 11726

-- Sent from Neelu Sherpa to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Neelu Sherpa
69-31 44th Ave
Queens, NY 11377

-- Sent from jesus ortiz to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
jesus ortiz
961 St Nicholas Ave

New York, NY 10032

-- Sent from Randolphe Lamour to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Randolphe Lamour
901 Washington Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11225

-- Sent from Soufyane Asraui to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Soufyane Asraoui
1831 26th Ave
Queens, NY 11102

-- Sent from sebastian ballen to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
sebastian ballen
42-19 205th St
Queens, NY 11361

-- Sent from Zahirul Islam to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Zahirul Islam
4 E 107th St
New York, NY 10029

-- Sent from Ignacio Romero to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ignacio Romero
87-84 120th St
Queens, NY 11418

-- Sent from alan garcia to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
alan garcia
835 E 156th St
The Bronx, NY 10455

-- Sent from Bationo Pema to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Bationo Pema
2396 Tiebout Ave
The Bronx, NY 10458

-- Sent from Melida Baten to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Melida Baten
1329 Commonwealth Ave
The Bronx, NY 10472

-- Sent from Donna Williams to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Donna Williams
790 Concourse Village W
The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Jose Javier to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jose Javier
51-45 Manilla St
Queens, NY 11373

-- Sent from Miguel Rodriguez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Miguel Rodriguez
398 Crescent St.
Brooklyn, NY 11208

-- Sent from NicHole George to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
NicHole George
1195 Carroll St
Brooklyn, NY 11225

-- Sent from Adama Ouattara to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Adama Ouattara
2340 Adam Clayton Powell Jr Blvd
New York, NY 10030

-- Sent from Ruslan Evloev to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Ruslan Evloev
50 4th Ave
Kings Park, NY 11754

-- Sent from Yun Zhu to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Yun Zhu
35-06 170th St
Queens, NY 11358

-- Sent from Almayda Martinez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Almayda Martinez
406 E 161 St
The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Brian Laverde to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Brian Laverde
149-32 80th St
Queens, NY 11414

-- Sent from Mamadou Sow to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Mamadou Sow
404 E 158th St
The Bronx, NY 10451

-- Sent from Somali Aosta to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Somali Aosta
460 W 147th St
New York, NY 10031

-- Sent from Israel Vega to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Israel Vega
37-65 95th St
Queens, NY 11372

-- Sent from Leonides Mejia to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af

Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Leonides Mejia
1230 Teller Ave
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Reynaldo Ventura to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental
Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Reynaldo Ventura
1050 Carroll Pl
The Bronx, NY 10456

-- Sent from Seydou Dembele to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Seydou Dembele
2546 Adam Clayton Powell Jr Blvd
New York, NY 10039

-- Sent from Johanny Taveras to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jhonny Taveras
268 Osborn St
Brooklyn, NY 11212

-- Sent from Arlene Toledo to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Arlene Toledo
246 51st St
Brooklyn, NY 11220

-- Sent from Hector santos to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hector santos
400 W 55th St
New York, NY 10019

-- Sent from Juan Yosy to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Juan Yosy
757 41st St
Brooklyn, NY 11232

-- Sent from William Baldwin to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
William Baldwin
433 Lafayette Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11205

-- Sent from Charles Garcia to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how,

when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Charles Garcia
166-40 89th Ave
Queens, NY 11432

-- Sent from curtis kwetey to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
curtis kwetey
465 Ocean Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11226

-- Sent from Chris McDonald to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Chris McDonald
192 Driggs Ave
Brooklyn, NY 11222

-- Sent from Saulo Quinonez to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Saulo Quinonez
31 Fleet Walk
Brooklyn, NY 11201

-- Sent from Hicham Mihoubi to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Hicham Mihoubi
30-34 32nd St
Queens, NY 11102

-- Sent from luis padilla to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Luis Padilla
495 Hendrix St
Brooklyn, NY 11207

-- Sent from Bobby Andujar to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Bobby Andujar
59 Prince St
Brooklyn, NY 11201

-- Sent from Jessie Johnson to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Affairs Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Jessie Johnson
10 Paladino Ave
New York, NY 10035

-- Sent from Ainsbirth Winter to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,

Ainsbirth Winter
464 Eastern Pkwy
Brooklyn, NY 11225

-- Sent from jonathan cinto to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
jonathan cinto
31-36 102nd St
Queens, NY 11369

-- Sent from Edgar Heredia to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Edgar Heredia
2855 Claflin Ave
The Bronx, NY 10468

-- Sent from Christopher Batista to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Christopher Batista
1995 Creston Ave
The Bronx, NY 10453

-- Sent from Nyjae Lee to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Nyjae Lee
611 Decatur St
Brooklyn, NY 11233

-- Sent from Michael Morena to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Michael Morena

73-11 69th Rd
Queens, NY 11379

-- Sent from Noman Manzoor to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other delivery workers for fewer chances to choose when and where we deliver. And we most certainly do not want to be left out of app-based earning opportunities.

I strongly urge you to reconsider this rule.

Regards

Regards,
Noman Manzoor
114-25 131st St
Queens, NY 11420

-- Sent from DEVENDRA BAJRACHARYA to Senior Advisor for Policy and Intergovernmental Af Carlos Ortiz on Apr 6, 2023 --

To Department of Worker & Consumer Protection:

I am an app-based food delivery worker and am writing to you because the proposed rules by the DCWP will have the opposite effect of helping us. I urge you to not implement these rules.

Our flexibility and earning opportunities will be cut short. Our ability to choose how, when and if we work will be greatly diminished. We will also not have the opportunity to work for multiple apps and choose deliveries that make sense to us. We enjoy having flexible earning opportunities, and we do not want to compete with thousands of other

