Under HPD's Extremely Low and Low Income Affordability Program, sponsors purchase City-owned or privately owned land or vacant buildings and construct multifamily buildings in order to create affordable rental housing. Construction and permanent financing is provided through loans from private institutional lenders and from public sources including HPD, the New York City Housing Development Corporation, the State of New York, and the federal government. Additional funding may also be provided from the syndication of low-income housing tax credits. The newly constructed buildings provide rental housing to low-income families with a range of incomes from 30% to 80% of the Area Median Income ("AMI"). Projects may include tiers of units with rents affordable to households earning up to 100% of AMI. Subject to project underwriting, up to 30% of the units may be rented to formerly homeless families and individuals.

LEGAL NOTICE NEW YORK STATE URBAN DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION NEW YORK STATE URBAN DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION
D/B/A EMPIRE STATE DEVELOPMENT
NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING TO BE HELD TUESDAY, OCTOBER
19, 2021, pursuant to SECTION 16 OF THE NEW YORK STATE
URBAN DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION ACT IN CONNECTION WITH THE PROPOSED HIGH LINE MOYINHAN CONNECTOR
CIVIC PROJECT

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that a public hearing, open to all persons, will be held, on Tuesday, October 19, 2021, from 6:00 P.M. until 8:00 P.M., by the New York State Urban Development Corporation d/b/a Empire State Development ("ESD"), pursuant to Section 16 of the New York State Urban Development Corporation Act (Chapter 174, Section 1, Laws of 1968, as amended; the "UDC Act"), to consider the General Project Plan (the "General Project Plan"), for the proposed High Line Moynihan Connector Civic Project (the "Project"). Due, to the COVID-19 pandemic and restrictions on public gatherings, the public hearing will be conducted as a virtual hearing utilizing the Zoom video communications and teleconferencing platform. Detailed instructions for participation in the virtual hearing can be downloaded, at https:// esd.ny.gov/high-line-connector.

The public hearing is for the purpose of: (1) informing the public about the Project; (2) giving all interested persons an opportunity, to provide comments on the General Project Plan, pursuant to Section 16 of the UDC Act; and (3), pursuant to Chapter 14 of the City Charter and Title 34, Chapter 7 of the Rules and Regulations of the City of New York, giving all interested persons an opportunity, to provide comments on the granting of a revocable consent by the City of New York (the "City"), to allow the Project to span a City right-of-way.

Project Site

The proposed Project would be located primarily on property, owned by the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey ("PANYNJ"), on Manhattan Tax Block 728, Lot 1 in Community District 4, and portions of it would extend over West 30th Street and West 31st Street, which are City-Owned streets.

Project Description

The Project is described in detail in the General Project Plan, available, to the public as set forth below. The Project involves the design and construction of two new elevated bridges connecting the present terminus of the High Line spur, at West 30th Street and Tenth Avenue, to the privately-owned public open space, at Manhattan West, a mixed-use development, located north of West 31st Street between Ninth and Tenth Avenues. The Project would create a seamless, safe pedestrian connection from Moynihan Train Hall to destinations on the Far West Side of Midtown, including Hudson Yards, the Javits Center and the Hudson River waterfront. The Project is anticipated to be completed in 2023.

The Project would be designed and built through a public-private partnership among ESD, PANYNJ, Friends of the High Line ("FHL") and a Brookfield Properties affiliate ("Brookfield"). FHL, which will act as the grantee for the Project, is a nonprofit organization that operates the High Line and works with the surrounding community. The grantee for purposes of the GPP will be responsible for daily maintenance and cleanliness of the Project. FHL is devoted to reimagining the role public cieaniness of the Project. FHL is devoted to reimagining the role public spaces play in creating connected, healthy neighborhoods and cities. Brookfield, which will act as developer of the Project, is a global commercial real estate firm and developer, and the owner of Manhattan West. Brookfield would manage the design and construction of the Project. The budget for the Project is $50 million and will be funded by a $20 million State grant administered by ESD and contributions of $20 million from Brookfield and $10 million from FHL.

Public Purpose

The purpose of the Project is, to provide a new public amenity to improve public access, connectivity and pedestrian safety between Penn Station – North America's largest transportation hub – and destinations on Manhattan's Far West Side. The Project would create two connected public bridges linking the High Line to publicly accessible open space, at Manhattan West, providing an ADA-accessible passage from the High Line spur to Ninth Avenue directly across from the Farley Office Building and Moynihan Train Hall. This new elevated pathway would provide a safe, seamless, and inviting connection for pedestrians through a heavily trafficked and uninviting area, and would improve public access, pedestrian safety and pedestrian mobility for residents, commuters, and visitors between transportation hubs, to the east (Moynihan Train Hall and Pennsylvania Station) and Hudson Yards, the High Line, and Manhattan's Far West Side. In doing so, the proposed Project would also complement and support the recent public and private investments that are transforming Manhattan's Far West Side.

Discretionary Actions

A number of ESD discretionary actions are subject to review, pursuant, to the UDC Act. These actions include awarding a $20 million grant to FHL for the design and construction of the Project and affirming the General Project Plan. After a public hearing is held on the draft General Project Plan and a subsequent 30-day public comment period is concluded, it is expected that if appropriate, ESD will modify and/or affirm the General Project Plan and enter into a grant disbursement agreement with FHL to administer the State's $20 million Project grant. In addition, to effectuate the Project, as described in the General Project Plan, ESD would exercise its statutory authority to override the New York City Charter, the New York City Zoning Resolution, the New York City Administrative Code and the Rules of the City of New York, to the extent they are inconsistent with the Project and the procedures for implementation of ESD projects under the UDC Act. This override includes, but is not limited to, the applicability of the Uniform Land Use Review Procedure ("ULURP") insofar as it otherwise would be applicable, to the Project, Public Design Commission review, and procedures for the issuance of revocable consents by the New York City Department of Transportation and any other local laws which are inconsistent with the design/construction of the Project and the General Project Plan. Subject to such overrides, the New York State Uniform Fire Prevention and Building Code (the "Building Code") will apply, including with respect to all construction, structures and infrastructure on the Project site.

Availability of the General Project Plan

The General Project Plan, which contains a detailed description of the Project, is on file, at the office of ESD, 633 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017, and is available for inspection by the general public between the hours of 9:30 A.M. to 5:00 P.M., Monday through Friday, public holidays excluded.

The General Project Plan is available, at the ESD website, at https://esd.ny.gov/high-line-connector. The public may also inspect and/or obtain copies of the General Project Plan, by emailing HighLineMoynihan@esd.ny.gov, or calling (212) 803-2477., pursuant to Section 16(2) of the UDC Act, ESD also has filed a copy of the General Project Plan, including the findings required under Section 10 of the UDC Act, in the office of the New York City Clerk and has provided a copy thereof, to the Mayor of the City of New York, the Manhattan Borough President, the Chair of the New York City Planning Commission and the Chair of Manhattan Community Board 4.

FISCAL YEAR 2021 Annual Report

Carmelyn P. Malalis, Chair and Commissioner Message From Mayor Bill de Blasio

October 2021

When I took office nearly eight years ago, I made a promise to all our residents that my team and I would do everything in our power to build a city that works for every New Yorker. We had a vision for the future where every person, no matter their race, background, beliefs, sexual orientation, gender identity, or the borough they call home, had an equal shot, at success and access, to the endless opportunity New York has to offer. As I approach the end of my term, I have had the chance to reflect on all we have achieved in service of these goals, and I am proud to say that when it comes to advancing human rights, there is much to celebrate.

Through the leadership of the New York City Commission on Human Rights, we have made significant strides in our efforts to protect the rights of our residents and ensure justice for all. This past year was no exception, and in spite of the unprecedented challenges presented by the COVID-19 pandemic, we have strived, to continue fulfilling this mission and found new ways to fulfill our commitment to human rights, at a time when the Commission's work centering equality and fairness was so desperately needed.

To enact our progressive vision to protect all New Yorkers, my Administration worked with the City Council to implement a significant expansion of the NYC Human Rights Law, covering employment, housing, and public accommodations. We have reached over 100,000 New Yorkers through the Commission's Community Relations Bureau and launched campaigns that educated New Yorkers about their own human rights and how to stand up for the rights of others, offering a steady stream of bystander intervention and Know Your Rights workshops. In addition, the Commission has worked to end source of income discrimination and issued an unprecedented number of legal enforcement guidance addressing discrimination based on gender identity, pregnancy, immigration status, disability, race, age, and more, including discrimination on the basis of hair

I am proud of what we have achieved. This work has not only benefited New Yorkers and made our city a better place to live, work, and raise a family, it has also served as a model for those beyond the five boroughs who are looking for new and innovative ways to champion the values of dignity and respect in government. As we look towards a future that is made brighter and stronger by its equality and inclusivity, I hope that this record of service is remembered as an important milestone in the journey to a better New York.

| Sincerely, |

Message From Chair and Commissioner Carmelyn P. Malalis

As I reflect on the work that the Commission has undertaken since my appointment in November 2014, I am struck by how much of it is rooted in the notion of "solidarity in action.", at its heart, our agency serves as a human rights defender and catalyst for action to expand protections of basic rights. The Commission not only supports communities in efforts to secure their rights, but serves as a bridge across communities that are often times marginalized and discriminated against. This has certainly been the case over the course of the last year.

At the beginning of FY 21, we found ourselves in the onset of the pandemic. COVID-19 related discrimination was just emerging as a threat. The targeting of Asian American and Pacific Islander (AAPI) New Yorkers, exacerbated by the previous presidential administration's racist rhetoric, was infecting our city. As the City's human rights enforcement agency, we responded quickly to launch a public education campaign that ran on social media, in communities, and in community and ethnic media. With simple, compelling graphics, we informed New Yorkers that discrimination against individuals with, or perceived to have COVID-19, is unlawful under the New York City Human Rights Law (NYC Human Rights Law). In rapid sequence, the Commission partnered with other city and state agencies, as well as community-based organizations, to host a series of town halls in multiple languages. We shared information on how to report bias incidents and increased offerings of bystander intervention training in partnership with organizations like the Center for Anti-Violence Education and Hollaback. The aim was to equip New Yorkers whose communities were being targeted to prevent or respond to discrimination, harassment, and, at times, physical, attacks.

Throughout this year, we collaborated with incredibly talented artists to reinforce the importance of solidarity. We were honored to have not one, but two, public artists in residence through the Department of Cultural Affairs' Public Artist in Residence (PAIR) program. Amanda Phingbodhipakkiya's breathtaking public awareness campaign and art series, "I Still Believe in Our City," was featured in the city's subway system, on bus shelters, LinkNYC kiosks, and prominently, at the, atlantic Terminal station. The artwork that appeared, at, atlantic Avenue- Barclays Center subway station and, atlantic Terminal was particularly focused on the theme of solidarity, with Black and Asian people featured alongside messages supporting Black Lives Matter and decrying complacency in the face of hate. The campaign's striking images and words soon migrated, to the streets, at protests, rallies, and vigils countering racism.

Our partnership with celebrated photographer Andre D. Wagner produced work that has reinforced the importance of solidarity. Andre worked with Commission staff and partners to capture beautiful images of New Yorkers supporting each other during difficult times and finding solace in places of worship. In addition, Andre's portraits of Black business owners in Brooklyn inspired a public education campaign dedicated to thanking and uplifting Black business owners whose creativity, resourcefulness, and care not only allowed their businesses to weather COVID-19, but also helped to anchor their communities, at the height of the pandemic and economic crisis. These projects elevated stories of community interdependence and dedication, and celebrated what makes New York the unique place that it is.

I hope that you enjoy reading this year's report, which differs from previous years' submissions. Unsurprisingly, much of what you will read focuses on the major challenges the city confronted this year—the continuing problem of anti-Black racism, ongoing manifestations of anti-Asian bias and anti-Semitism, and many other types of discrimination and harassment in the midst of the pandemic. You'll also note that this year's report has fewer photographs resulting from the fact that the agency hosted and participated in a very small number of in-person events due to public health restrictions. Even without the images of the Commission in action, the following pages illustrate the strength of our commitment to human rights and the tremendous amount of work that our dedicated staff was able to accomplish. And I hope this report inspires you, to continue fighting for human rights in your communities, and in all parts of New York City, forging new connections along the way.

Carmelyn P. Malalis Chair and Commissioner

The Commission: Past, Present, and Future

In 2014, at the start of his mayoral administration, Mayor Bill de Blasio appointed Carmelyn P. Malalis to lead the New York City Human Rights Commission as its Chairperson and Commissioner. Commissioner Malalis assumed the role in February 2015 with an urgent mandate by Mayor de Blasio: revitalize the agency and make it a credible venue for justice for all New Yorkers. One of Commission's first initiatives was to establish the Office of the Chair, a new arm of the agency to house the Commission's policy, intergovernmental affairs, communications, and adjudicative functions under one umbrella. It is through the Office of the Chair that the Commission implemented some of the agency's most significant transformations.

The Office of the Chair worked closely with the administration and the City Council to grow the agency from 50+ staff to a total allowable staff size of 160 people speaking over 30 different languages, and to move the agency from a budget that relied almost entirely on federal block grants to one that was fully funded through City taxlevy money, and thus allowed for more flexibility in the agency's work. Internally, the Office of the Chair bolstered other areas of the agency to build out much-needed operational support and increase capacity. Human Resources, Operations, Information Technology, the General Counsel's Office, the Office of Mediation and ADR, and Communications and Marketing - all areas that had zero to two staff supporting their functions – were expanded and invested in, to provide more substantive support for the Commission's work and other agency staff. The Commission has continued to invest in digital technologies to automate and improve its business processes, which has enabled the agency to migrate its case management and data systems from antiquated platforms to modern, secure, and integrated cloud technology that allows the agency to better track and report on the work being done. Law enforcement and community outreach staff were also able to access basic but important tools for performing their work.

Advancements in the law and reforms, at the agency mean very little if New Yorkers themselves don't know about their rights and how to effectuate them. The Commission saw equal value in their public education responsibilities as it did in its community relations and enforcement mandates. Since 2015, the Office of Communications and Marketing launched 22 campaigns about crucial aspects of New Yorkers' rights, with many of them making national and international headlines. With an explicit focus on New York City's most vulnerable, these campaigns were in community and ethnic media print outlets, on bus shelters and subway stops throughout the city, and utilized innovative digital strategies to appeal to hard-to-reach audiences online. Together, these 22 campaigns amassed thousands of mentions in press and secured over 600 million impressions.

The Office of the Chair also strategized to empower the Commission's two major bureaus to more comprehensively perform their mandates. In the Law Enforcement Bureau, this meant adding staff experienced in civil and human rights issues and litigation, as well as creating a testing program and the following new units: Intake, Employment, Housing, Public Accommodations, Gender-Based Harassment, Source of Income, Fair Chance, Early Intervention, Public Accommodations, Commission-initiated, Testing, and Policing. In the Community Relations Bureau, staff with professional or personal experience with target communities were added, as were positions that focused on outreach to communities with historically strained or absent relationships with government.

In these last nearly seven years, the Commission listened to different community stakeholders and advocates, and worked with the administration and City Council to implement a significant expansion of the NYC Human Rights Law, already one of the most comprehensive anti-discrimination laws in the nation, covering the areas of employment, housing, and public accommodations, as well as discriminatory harassment and bias based profiling by law enforcement. Driven by the administration's vision of a law that protects all New Yorkers, the Commission has shaped and informed 15 major amendments, to the NYC Human Rights Law.

To ensure covered entities understand how the agency implements and interprets the expansive protections of the NYC Human Rights Law, the Office of the Chair issued an unprecedented number of legal enforcement guidance and quasi-regulatory documents, which clarify Human Rights Law protections. Addressing discrimination based on gender identity, pregnancy, immigration status, disability, age, criminal and credit history and other issues, the guidance and notice-and-comment rules provided transparency for people with rights under the law as well as entities with obligations.

The Office of the Chair was also created to resurrect the Commission's statutorily mandated functions of convening public hearings and issuing publications and reports, which had vanished through decades' past underfunding of the agency. Hearings provided a pivotal avenue to engage the public and shape recommendations that advance human rights in areas including pregnancy and caregiver discrimination, as well as sexual harassment.

The Commission also undertook research in two other areas which culminated in published reports. In 2018, the Commission issued on a report on discrimination, hate, and acts of bias experienced by Muslim, Arab, South Asian, Sikh, and Jewish New Yorkers following the 2016 presidential election cycle. The report culled information collected from over 3,000 surveys collected over several months. This report was followed by the Commission's report on Black New Yorkers' experiences with anti-Black racism that was released in June 2020. Building on the agency's focus on addressing normalized forms of anti-Black racism, research for the report was the result of 19 focus groups conducted with 190 Black New Yorkers from across the five boroughs.

The Office of the Chair was also structured to more efficiently to adjudicate administratively filed matters that were tried before the Office of Administrative Trials and Hearings. Following a trial and an interim order from an administrative law judge, the Chair and Commissioner issues a Decision and Order. The Office of the Chair issued Decisions and Orders in 26 matters.

These reflections of the agency's past and present is an invitation to envision an even bolder future, the possibility of which has been made tangible when considering the accomplishments of the de Blasio administration. New leadership for the city and the Commission will have their opportunity to make a positive human rights impact. It remains as urgent as ever that future leadership bring with it the vigor and commitment to chart its own path championing human rights on behalf of all New Yorkers.

A Human Rights Focus in the Fight Against COVID-19

COVID-19 continued to disrupt the way the city and the Commission delivered critical services to New Yorkers. This once-in-a-century pandemic forced government agencies, employers, housing providers, and business owners to create new policies and procedures to respond, to the evolving nature of the pandemic. The Commission stepped in, to provide support and guidance, bringing a human rights lens, to these challenges, with little in the way of a blueprint.

The Commission became a hub for resources and information for employers, housing providers, and business owners on how to develop COVID-19-related policies and practices that complied with the NYC Human Rights Law. From understanding questions like using paid sick leave for mandatory quarantine, to paid time off for testing, to reasonable accommodations for face covering guidelines—Commission policy and enforcement staff became experts on every aspect of the impacts of COVID-19.

Early in the pandemic, as employers shifted to remote work seemingly overnight, there was growing concern that new employer policies may have isolating effects on older workers. In FY 21, in conjunction with the release of the Commission's legal enforcement guidance on employment discrimination based on age, the Commission issued a supplemental COVID-19 resource. This resource reminded employers that COVID-19 did not alter the core principle that an employer cannot discriminate against an employee based on age, in remote work, returning to work, or in COVID-19 testing requirements.

In summer 2020, the Commission became aware of fraudulent face mask "exemption cards" in news reports and on social media. Bearing what appeared to be a U.S. Department of Justice seal, these cards claimed the cardholder did not need to follow mask guidelines in businesses or other public places. The Commission knew immediately that there was no legal basis for these fraudulent cards and anticipated the confusion they would create for businesses and everyday New Yorkers. The Commission took quick action, working with the Mayor's Office for People with Disabilities and the NYC Department of Health and Mental Hygiene, to call out these fraudulent cards and emphasize the importance of masks in fighting the spread of COVID-19. This was an important time to highlight that the law provides a right to disability accommodations, and the Commission used the opportunity to also educate businesses of their obligations under the NYC Human Rights Law.

The Commission has had an intentional focus on marginalized communities since COVID-19 took hold in New York City. This focus permeated the Commission's work with sister city agencies. The Community Relation's Bureau was part of a working group established to address the unique impacts of COVID-19 on communities of color and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, intersex, and asexual plus (LGBTQIA+) communities. Convened with the Mayor's Community Affairs Unit, NYC Commission on Gender Equity, NYC Department of Health and Mental Hygiene, Health + Hospitals, and the Mayor's Office of Immigrant Affairs, this group worked proactively to combat discrimination in medical settings while also addressing concerns around testing, treating, and vaccinating LGBTQIA+ communities, non-English language speakers, and many others in a culturally competent manner. Further, we led community- and neighborhood- focused virtual resource fairs that identified community needs in collaboration with community organizations and city agencies.

In spring 2021, quickly and safely delivering COVID-19 vaccines to millions of eligible New Yorkers became the foremost challenge  $\alpha$ for the city. With partners, at the NYC Department of Health and Mental Hygiene, the Commission got ahead of early concerns about the safety of vaccines for people using HIV medications and Pre-Exposure Prophylaxis (PrEP). Additionally, in partnership with the Mayor's Office for People with Disabilities, the Commission released a foot sheet outlining how vaccine distribution controp can comply with fact sheet outlining how vaccine distribution centers can comply with disability access requirements under the NYC Human Rights Law. Finally, collaborating with the Mayor's Community Affairs Unit, the Commission released a resource on how vaccination sites can serve Muslims during Ramadan. These resources became valuable tools for articulating how to meet the range of needs of New York's diverse

The Commission continues to be a key part of citywide conversations on combating COVID-19, providing leadership on an equitable testing, vaccination, and recovery strategy that includes all New Yorkers.

Undoing the Harms of Systemic Racism

This is a complex moment for those who have long been fighting for racial justice. The 2020 presidential election ushered in a federal administration that campaigned on explicit commitments to racial equity, which are now being implemented in policy. This is a welcome development, but we remain a country divided locally and nationally. We confront unparalleled challenges with an ongoing public health crisis, profound economic inequality, worsening consequences from climate change, and threats to core values of democracy. These challenges, which have roots in our nation's history of racism and white supremacy, disproportionately harm Black, Latinx, and other communities of color. In this context, the Commission remains steadfast in the fight against racism. This year, our work has bridged the worlds of culture, policy, research, and community engagement - all necessary ingredients for transformative change.

Building upon work that began with the release of legal enforcement guidance in 2019, the Commission was proud to adopt rules on hair discrimination in FY 21. The agency convened a hearing in October 2020 to hear from the public about its proposed rules, which covered both race and religious discrimination based on hair, at the hearing, advocates who work closely with Black, Jewish, and Sikh New Yorkers offered testimony on the importance of codifying these protections. Three months later, the Commission voted to adopt the proposed language into rules.

In FY 21, the Commission leveraged its enforcement powers to address systemic racism, at its root. Following concerns from advocacy groups, the Commission launched an investigation into drug testing practices of newborns and their parent, at Montefiore, Mount Sinai, and New York Presbyterian, which have facilities across New York City. Bias and anti-Black racism are well-documented in medical settings and this investigation represents the first action by a local law enforcement agency seeking to eradicate discriminatory drug testing practices. That practice so often results in the unjust and unnecessary separation of Black and Latinx newborns from their parents, even though evidence shows similar rates of drug use across racial categories. As this investigation continues, the Commission remains committed to evaluating systemic and institutional policies and practices that have disparate outcomes for vulnerable communities.

In FY 21, the Commission was also privileged to host two legal fellows focused specifically on racial justice, who helped to bolster the Office of the Chair's capacity to conduct legal research, develop policies, and run programs that center Black and Latinx communities. By hosting racial justice advocates early in their careers, the agency hopes to contribute, to the development of a pipeline of future leaders in the space.

Celebrated photographer Andre D. Wagner, one of two of the Commission's public artists in residence in FY 21, captured images of New Yorkers in worship, in protest, in moments of celebration and in acts of service to one another. Of particular note was Andre's partnership with Weeksville Heritage Center and NYC Small Business Services on "You Do It with Your Heart: Black Business Solidarity Initiative." The collection of oral histories paired with Andre's powerful portraits documented how Black business owners were navigating systemic racism, COVID-19, and the economic recovery. The Commission later drew upon these images to create a campaign thanking Black-owned business for teaching a powerful lesson about solidarity. This campaign appeared in subways during the spring of 2021 as well as in community and ethnic media.

The everyday trauma of anti-Black racism compounded by the ravaging impact of COVID-19 on Black communities created the need to hold healing spaces for young people. As a result, the Commission's youth team facilitated safe Black affinity spaces for young people to convene in virtual talking circles as a part of their healing journey.

Responding to Anti-Asian Discrimination and Harassment

Spurred on by COVID-19-related fears, anti-Asian bias, discrimination, and harassment went unabated in FY 21. The Commission observed a seven-fold increase in anti-Asian discrimination and harassment between 2019 and 2020. And with nearly 150 reports in only the first six months of 2021, we anticipate exceeding anti-Asian bias incidents from 2020. While centering human rights in the citywide reopening more broadly, the Commission doubled down on its efforts to combat anti-Asian discrimination and harassment through enforcement, public education, and community engagement.

In FY 20, the Commission launched the COVID-19 Response Team to handle all reports related, to the pandemic. Comprised of staff from the Law Enforcement Bureau and the Community Relations Bureau, the team has succeeded in efficiently tracking and supporting New Yorkers facing harassment and discrimination connected to COVID-19. The team has also worked diligently in advising businesses of their obligations under the law to preempt discrimination. The COVID-19 Response Team took over 300 actions in FY 21 including closing 14 rapid response inquiries, issuing over 200 advisory of obligation letters to businesses, conducting 23 successful emergency interventions, and filing 39 complaints.

With the help of one of its Public Artists in Residence, Amanda Phingbodhipakkiya, the Commission launched a public education and art campaign entitled "I Still Believe in Our City." The public education campaign and series emphasized the strength of Asian American and Pacific Islander (AAPI) communities in the face of racism and white supremacy, while also celebrating the solidarity between Black and AAPI communities. The series launched with a stunning takeover of the, atlantic Avenue Barclays Center subway station in Brooklyn. Once a site of an egregious incident of anti-Asian hate, the installation itself was a reclamation of space for AAPIs facing the horrors of these, attacks. "I Still Believe in Our City" appeared in bus shelters, subway lightboards, LinkNYC kiosks, storefronts, and on posters, at rallies and demonstrations throughout the country. An unreleased artwork appeared on the cover of Time magazine, and some of the artworks were acquired by the U.S. Library of Congress and The Victoria and Albert Museum in London. With 122 million impressions, "I Still Believe in Our City" is the largest public education campaign in the Commission's history.

The uptick in anti-Asian bias was punctuated by two especially violent episodes in FY 21. The first was the racist and misogynistic killings of six Asian women spa workers in, atlanta, Georgia. The second was the, attack against Filipina elder Vilma Kari who faced racial epithets and brutal physical violence while walking to church in the Hell's Kitchen/Times Square area of Manhattan. Particularly astonishing was the dehumanizing way in which bystanders, including security staff of a nearby building, ignored Ms. Kari's calls for help. These incidents solidified the need for healing in the aftermath of bias incidents, and the Community Relations Bureau responded. Following both incidents, the Commission, with the New York Peace Institute, organized healing circles with AAPI New Yorkers. Trained "circle keepers" held space for AAPI New Yorkers reeling from these devastating, attacks, creating opportunities for communities experiencing fear to process the events and share resources.

These incidents also highlighted the ways in which the Commission's enforcement mission and restorative justice approaches are complimentary. The Community Relations Bureau spearheaded the Commission's efforts to use bystander intervention training to equip AAPI New Yorkers and allies on how to defuse bias incidents in real-time. In FY 21, the Community Relations Bureau hosted nearly 50 bystander intervention trainings in English, Mandarin, Korean, and Cantonese empowering over 3,400 New Yorkers with the tools to be upstanders against bias and violence. The Commission also piloted bystander intervention training in Spanish and is committed to offering this training in other languages.

Channeling #MeToo for Change

The #MeToo movement started by Tarana Burke in 2006 launched nationwide demonstrations calling out the realities of genderbased harassment in the United States. As #MeToo went viral, the Commission held its first public citywide hearing on gender-based harassment since the hearings in the 1970s convened by then-Chair now-Congressperson Eleanor Holmes Norton. In the two years that followed, the Commission has sought to leverage the momentum of the movement to aggressively enforce the NYC Human Rights Law's powerful provisions against gender-based discrimination and harassment, to include creative resolutions, to these cases, and to affirmatively educate people on their rights in this area.

The Commission's Law Enforcement Bureau, including its Gender-Based Harassment Unit, has worked to aggressively pursue claims of sexual harassment. Since the #MeToo movement went viral in 2017, the Law Enforcement Bureau has assessed over $9 million in damages and penalties in situations involving workplace sexual and gender-based harassment.

For example, following Fox News hosts' reports of workplace sexual harassment, the Law Enforcement Bureau launched an investigation to examine whether and how workplace policies and practices affect other women, at Fox News Network. After a years-long investigation, in FY 21, the Commission settled the investigation with a historic $1 million civil penalty, the largest fine ever issued in Commission history. Perhaps most notable, however, was the settlement provision requiring Fox News Network to exempt from mandatory arbitration any claims brought under the NYC Human Rights Law. The exemption will be included in Fox News Network's employment contracts for a period of four years from the date of the conciliation. Because mandatory arbitration provisions force employees to litigate their claims in private proceedings, pervasive workplace cultures of sexual harassment are allowed, to continue. By removing this provision from employment contracts, the Commission is able, to ensure that Fox News Network employees that sign such contracts during the four-year period will be able to raise their claims in the forums of their choice and publicly call, attention to issues of sexual harassment.

To prevent sexual harassment, we must change workplace culture around identifying and reporting these violations when they happen. The Commission's sexual harassment prevention training, which launched in 2019 is available in 11 languages, has become a national model for such training and has been adopted in dozens of corporate employee trainings across the city. Since 2019, the training has been completed more than 760,000 times.

In FY 21, the Commission's Youth for Equity and Solidarity (YES) Council spotlighted sexual- and gender-based violence in collaboration with Public Artist in Residence Amanda Phingbodhippakiya. In summer 2020, young South Asian, Arab, and Muslim New Yorkers made waves by sharing their survivor stories on social media. These disclosures inspired the YES Council and Amanda Phingbodhipakkiya to create an art installation supporting the work they were doing to heal from their experiences. The interactive installation in the Meatpacking District used technology to transform the accounts of survivors into large, room-scale sculptures. "In 'May We Know Our Own Strength' I have created a space where private sorrow can still see the light of day," said Phingbodhipakkiya. "Through this installation we spin our strands of personal suffering into an unbreakable thread of courage and renewal and give our community a long-awaited moment of cathartic release."

Strategic Innovations in Enforcement and Accountability Guided by Principles of Restorative Justice

Through a more intentional and holistic approach to community relations, policy development, rulemaking, and enforcement informed by restorative justice principles, the Commission has grown to meet its mandate and innovate to better serve New Yorkers and combat discrimination.

In FY 21, the Commission continued to reimagine the meaning of "accountability" for a law enforcement agency. In many cases, the Law Enforcement Bureau resolved and settled investigations by implementing creative approaches to center the experiences of harmed individuals and communities while reducing the likelihood of future harm. These resolutions include a race discrimination case in which the settlement included having the Respondent, an international retail corporation, consult with community leaders and experts on diversity, racial equity, and inclusivity; continue to work to increase cultural sensitivity, awareness, and education across the organization, including in design and marketing; establish a Global Equity Board; and create a multicultural design fellowship program for communities underrepresented in the industry. In another race discrimination case, the individual who allegedly made racist comments agreed to perform twenty hours of community service with a not-for-profit organization focusing on racial justice, in addition to training on bias. Apologies were also part of settlements, including in an employment case involving age and race discrimination, and a housing case with alleged gender-based harassment of a tenant, and source of income discrimination cases. In source of income cases, settlements also included setting aside units specifically for applicants with vouchers and creating an incentive program which awards bonuses to real estate agents who successfully place voucher holders in suitable housing.

The Commission's work to end source of income discrimination against New Yorkers offers another clear example of innovations in protecting human rights. In many source of income discrimination settlements, the Commission's Law Enforcement Bureau has required housing providers to set aside a number of units specifically for renters using public assistance. In one of the Bureau's landmark source of income discrimination conciliations in FY 21, Maxx Realty agreed to set aside 36 units for voucher holders across their portfolio of properties. The Commission settled the matter on behalf of a complainant who, despite a 751 credit score, was rejected from an apartment for being a Section 8 voucher recipient. The Commission is the first local civil rights enforcement agency to leverage this strategy—securing "set asides" in source of income discrimination conciliations in a step toward resolving the underlying systemic issues of access to affordable housing. Since implementing this strategy in 2020, the Law Enforcement Bureau has secured a total of 126 set-asides for voucher-holding New Yorkers.

To inform its work, the Commission has been active in seeking input from communities affected by discrimination. For example, after a spate of incidents in which racist paraphernalia was found in public parks, the Commission convened talking circles with Black residents in the area to understand the impact of these incidents and the types of responses that those residents believed would repair the harm they experienced. In spring 2021, the Commission convened a series of focus groups with Black New Yorkers to gain further insight into how, if, at all, Commission responses that, attempt to address harms, at the individual and community levels should be deployed after incidents of anti-Black racism, especially when people seek to weaponize other government agencies against Black people. With continued emphasis on a restorative justice framework, the Commission can promote both positive community relations and healing.

A City Agency Grounded in Communities

Since Mayor de Blasio's appointment of Chair and Commissioner Carmelyn P. Malalis in 2014, one thing was clear: the Commission must be driven by the enthusiasm and experiences of New Yorkers representing every corner of this great city. It is because of the diverse representation of its staff that the Commission has been able to build inroads with New Yorkers who are not accustomed to government agencies responding, to their needs. It is also because of this diverse staff that the Commission has prioritized communities systematically excluded from government in its programs, policies, and enforcement actions.

Starting in 2016, the Commission hired lead advisors and liaisons to specifically provide concentrated outreach to Muslim, Arab & South Asian communities, Jewish communities, East Asian communities, African communities, LGBTQIA+ and transgender, non-binary, and gender nonconforming communities, formerly incarcerated persons, youth, and other communities and peoples often targeted for discrimination and harassment. Beyond individual liaisons, the Commission has established outreach initiatives for young people, people with disabilities, and Indigenous communities. The connections gained through these advisors has enriched Commission programs and guided its policy, rulemaking, and public education priorities.

In FY 21, the Commission welcomed its first cohort of the Youth for Equity and Solidarity (YES) Council, comprised of 23 youth ages 13 to 21, hailing from all five boroughs. The Council's goal is to improve the Commission's engagement with young people. In FY 21, these efforts blossomed. The council developed and participated in citywide programming, bringing an often-forgotten youth lens to conversations on policing, education, and gender justice. In June 2021, the council organized the Youth for Equity and Solidarity Symposium: Our Future, Our Rights. With the NYC Department of Youth & Community Development, the symposium included workshops and artist performances that used a human rights lens to examine the impact of COVID-19 on youth and schools.

The Commission also works, to ensure that New York City government, at all levels adopts a human rights ethos for marginalized communities. In FY 21, the Community Relations Bureau delivered workshops and trainings to city agency partners. In its work to combat COVID-19-related bias, the Commission also supported Mayor de Blasio's Taskforce on Racial Inclusion and Equity in arranging bystander intervention training for all of its members. In partnership with the borough presidents of Manhattan, Queens, the Bronx, and Staten Island, the Community Relations Bureau also trained 1,500 members of local community boards on the experiences of discrimination of transgender, non-binary, and gender nonconforming people, Muslims, and communities of color. As a result of one of these trainings, Manhattan Community Board 7 passed a resolution on combating sexual harassment and gender-based violence.

The Commission's commitment to diverse communities is also reflected in its policy and regulatory priorities. In FY 21, the Commission converted into notice-and-comment rules its 2019 legal enforcement guidance on race discrimination on the basis of hair. This fiscal year, the Commission also released new legal enforcement guidance addressing age discrimination in the workplace. Finally, the Commission launched a public education campaign coordinated with legal service providers such as The Legal Aid Society and re-entry from incarceration organizations like the Osborne Association to promote a new guidebook for workers with a criminal history. The guidebook included important information regarding people's rights in this area following an amendment, to the NYC Human Rights Law that provided even greater protections in this area.

Due to COVID-19, in FY 21, the agency's Community Relations Bureau operated a fully virtual community engagement strategy. In FY 21, the Bureau hosted or supported 1,683 events, panel discussions, town halls, cultural events, workshops and trainings, and presentations on the NYC Human Rights Law—nearly two times as many community events as compared to FY 20. Through these community outreach efforts, the Commission served 102,121 New Yorkers across all five boroughs.

The Community Relations Bureau hosted workshops and events in the following languages other than English: American Sign Language, Bengali, French, Korean, Mandarin, Nepali, and Spanish. These events were, attended by 14,509 people in FY 21.

Advancing Human Rights Through Policy

The Commission's Office of the Chair directs the agency's policy, legislative, and adjudicatory work and implements major Commission projects. The Office serves as the point of contact for the Commission's inter-agency and external partnerships; contributes to legislation, and promulgates rules, legal enforcement guidance, and other outward-facing materials that interpret and clarify provisions of the NYC Human Rights Law, and convenes the appointed Human Rights Commissioners on a quarterly basis.

The Office regularly engages with members of the public on the implementation of new laws and initiatives, many of which are described in the preceding pages. In FY 21, the Office of the Chair implemented five significant updates, to the NYC Human Rights Law, including expanding protections for lawful source of income to include housing of all sizes, and amending our law to remove outdated terminology related to immigration status, including the term "alien." The Office of the Chair also convenes hearings that are pivotal to identifying pathways to advance human rights in specific areas. For example, the Commission convened a citywide public hearing on pregnancy and caregiver discrimination in 2019. This hearing was followed by a report detailing the issues raised, at the hearing, and informed rules and guidance developed in FY 21. The Office also identifies opportunities to reach the public in innovative ways. In June 2021, the Office of the Chair released an activity book for youth to promote good will and eliminate prejudice and discrimination.

Enforcement of the New York City Human Rights Law

The Commission's Law Enforcement Bureau (LEB) implements and enforces the NYC Human Rights Law. Through the enforcement of one of the most comprehensive civil rights laws in the nation, LEB addresses discrimination in employment, housing and public accommodations in New York City, in addition to discriminatory harassment and bias-based profiling by law enforcement. The, attorneys in LEB evaluate and investigate allegations of discrimination brought, to the Commission by members of the public and utilize the agency's investigatory and prosecutorial powers to root out pattern-or-practice or other forms of discrimination through Commission-initiated investigations. LEB's specialized units, including the Early Intervention Unit, Source of Income Unit, and Gender-Based Harassment Unit, offer the option of resolving claims in lieu of filing a complaint, leading to a quicker resolution. These units also allow LEB to streamline responsiveness to urgent issues. Resolutions through pre-complaint intervention have significantly increased over the past several years, as LEB has worked, to provide timely resolutions despite an increased caseload. Where appropriate, LEB also refers cases, to the Commission's Office of Mediation and Conflict Resolution to help parties avoid lengthy litigation.

Inquiries

Allegations of discrimination are brought, to the Commission's, attention in a variety of ways. The most common way is when a member of the public contacts the agency. LEB's Human Rights Specialists fielded 9,055 inquiries from members of the public in FY 21 in the form of phone calls, emails, letters, and queries to mobile intake units dispatched to community sites or Commission events. Human Rights Specialists who answer the Commission's Infoline speak six languages in addition to English. Infoline staff assess each person's situation and directs them for pre-complaint intervention, for further assessment by an, attorney, and/or refers them to another City agency or community resource.

The chart below provides further information about these inquiries. Because many individuals alleged more than one jurisdiction and/or protected class, the total below (9,983) exceeds the number of inquiries addressed by LEB (9,055). Inquiries in FY 21 were nearly twice as high as in calendar year 2015 when the number of inquiries the agency received was 5,296. The increase in inquiries reflects the Commission's sustained efforts to raise its visibility and inform communities about the broad protections afforded by the NYC Human Rights Law and improve access, to the Commission's services to New Yorkers with limited English proficiency. In FY 21, the Commission continued to focus on outreach to hard-to-reach communities using remote platforms and through strategic partners: reaching over 100,000 across 1,683 conferences, workshops, and trainings, with bystander intervention trainings in English, Mandarin, Korean, and Cantonese. The increase can also be, attributed, to the agency's elevated social media outreach and strategic campaigns focused on affirming all New Yorkers' right to live free from discrimination and harassment. The Commission's "I Still Believe in Our City" campaign – one of the 22 campaigns launched since 2015 – generated 122 million social media impressions, and thousands of press mentions.

Inquiries by Protected Class and Jurisdiction July 1, 2020 – June 30, 2021

See Charter See Charter § 905(e)(8). The reporting period for Annual Reports published prior to 2018 was calendar year (i.e., January 1 – December 31).

Non-English Language Inquiries

The Commission takes pride in maintaining a staff that reflects the diversity of New York City and the individuals who seek help from the Commission. The Commission's Infoline staff answering calls are fluent in Spanish, Haitian Creole, Hindi, Urdu, Nepali, and Portuguese. Across the agency, Commission staff speak more than 30 languages. When there is a need for a language other than those spoken by available staff, LEB reaches out to an outside service provider to connect staff with an interpreter by phone. In FY 21, the staff fielded 687 such inquiries in 12 languages. The chart below shows which languages, other than English, were spoken by members of the public who made inquiries, to the Commission.

Pre-Complaint Interventions

The Law Enforcement Bureau intervenes, when appropriate, before or in lieu of filing a complaint in order, to provide immediate relief from continuing harm and/or, to provide a quick resolution. In the past few years, LEB launched the Early Intervention (EI) Unit, the Source of Income (SOI) Unit, and the Gender-Based Harassment (GBH) Unit. The EI Unit primarily assists members of the public with issues that may be resolved quickly without filing a complaint. The SOI and GBH Units assist the public with seeking immediate relief, but also address allegations that may necessitate the filing of a complaint. Pre-complaint interventions significantly reduce the time it takes to investigate and then possibly litigate and obtain a resolution for the complainant.

The units intervene in a range of situations, including:

The EI Unit negotiates, on an expedited basis, for disability-related accommodations in housing, such as installation of grab bars, roll-in showers, ramps, or moving to more accessible housing. In employment, employees who are still employed, but have been denied a reasonable accommodation by their employers, may opt to have the situation resolved promptly through the pre-complaint intervention process with the staff, attorney informing the employer of its legal obligations and ensuring compliance with the NYC Human Rights Law.

- The SOI Unit works in real time with complainants who have been denied housing because of their voucher status, negotiating with housing providers to obtain leases for those complainants.
- If an employee is facing ongoing discrimination because of their gender identity or harassment, the GBH Unit may, after evaluating the circumstances and, in consultation with the complainant, reach out, to the employer and address the issue prior to or instead of filing a complaint. This may involve working with the employer to enter into an agreement addressing the harassment and providing relief for the employee, in accordance with the NYC Human Rights Law.

If early intervention efforts do not succeed, LEB will often file a complaint and proceed with investigating the allegations of discrimination. In addition, the Commission itself may determine that a pre-complaint intervention is necessary when a clear patternor-practice violation comes to its, attention. LEB may send a cease-and-desist letter or otherwise contact the discriminating entity to demand that it immediately stop the illegal practice, and among other requirements, attend a training on the New York City Human Rights Law. Often, LEB does not need to file a complaint and initiate a formal investigation because LEB is able to obtain a full resolution through pre-complaint intervention when the entity responds and complies with the law. In these instances, LEB will often formalize the terms of the intervention through a stipulation and order.

In FY 21, LEB resolved 214 matters without filing a complaint. Of these interventions, 46 were the result of Commission-initiated investigations. The chart below lists the area of jurisdiction and the protected classes involved in the successful interventions. Some interventions involved claims under more than one jurisdiction and many involved more than one protected class.

Commission-Initiated Pre-Complaint Interventions

The Commission has the power to initiate its own investigations in order, to ensure that employers and housing and public accommodations providers are complying with the law and are not engaging in discriminatory policies or practices. In addition to filing complaints and implementing testing, both of which are further described below, the Commission sends cease-and-desist letters or advisory letters and also uses a range of investigative methods, such as requests for information on policies and practices, demands for documents, and interviews of key witnesses. The investigative process can result in enforcement actions.

In FY 21, the Law Enforcement Bureau launched 48 new Commissioninitiated pre-complaint investigations, which covered 15 protected categories, and resolved 46 matters without having to file a complaint.

The chart below provides a breakdown of the Commission-initiated pre-complaint investigations that were resolved, according, to the area of jurisdiction and protected class(es). Most investigations involve more than one protected class, and some involve claims under more than one jurisdiction.

Testing

The Commission uses testing, a historically effective investigative tool used in civil rights litigation, to determine whether there is discrimination in housing, employment, or public accommodations. As part of an investigation, the agency may send testers to perform in-person tests or have testers conduct telephone tests of potential employers, employment agencies, landlords/real estate brokers, restaurants, hospitals, gyms, stores, or other public accommodations to see if our testers are treated differently or are given different information because they belong to a protected class. Due, to the COVID-19 pandemic, testers could not perform in-person tests; however, they still managed to test 878 entities. An entity may be tested for potential violations in multiple jurisdictions and/or multiple protected classes.

Total Complaints Filed in Fiscal Year 2021

The Commission filed 643 complaints of discrimination in FY 21. Sixty three percent (63%) of those cases were in employment, twenty percent (20%) were in housing, and fifteen percent (15%) were in public accommodations. Disability-related claims were the most common across all areas of jurisdiction, at twenty percent (20%); other claims include gender (15%), race (15%), and national origin (8%). The types of discrimination claims filed with and by the Commission during FY 21 are below. Listed first are the number of claims filed in each jurisdiction, and second, the number of claims in each protected class. Most complaints allege more than one violation, sometimes under more than one jurisdiction and, more commonly, under more than one protected class. Complaints filed by members of the public and Commission-initiated complaints are included. Therefore, the numbers below overlap with the Commission-initiated complaints in the chart above. Note that the graphic shows only categories with one or more claims.

After the Law Enforcement Bureau has undertaken a full investigation, a determination of either Probable Cause or No Probable Cause is issued. The following is the Commission's standard in making a determination: whether probable cause exists to credit the allegations of a complaint that an unlawful discriminatory practice has been or is being committed by a respondent where a reasonable person, looking, at the evidence, could reach the conclusion that it is more likely than not that the unlawful discriminatory practice was committed.  $\,$

12 Includes children that are, may be, or would be residing there.

| No Probable Cause | 1   | >1% |
|-------------------|-----|-----|
| Probable Cause    | 194 | 21% |

Settlements

The Commission resolved thirty percent (30%) of cases closed in FY 21 through settlement. In such cases, the parties and the Commission enter into a conciliation agreement, which is an enforceable Commission order. Some cases also resolve through a private settlement agreement and then a withdrawal of the case, at the Commission. Finally, cases resolved through the Commission's Office of Mediation and Conflict Resolution are also included in these totals.

Nearly all conciliations include some form of affirmative relief, which may include training on the NYC Human Rights Law, monitoring, and/ or a policy audit. Additionally, settlements may include compensatory damages for complainants, including full back pay in applicable cases. This year, the Commission increased its use of restorative remedies in settlements ordering, for instance, housing providers to set aside units for voucher holders, or negotiating new partnerships and programs between respondents and racial justice organizations. In Commission-initiated cases involving smaller businesses with first-time violations, the Commission often orders affirmative relief in lieu of civil penalties in order to have a greater impact.

Administrative Closures

An administrative closure may be issued in several circumstances:, at the complainant's request; when a complaint is deemed non-jurisdictional after investigation; when LEB is unable to locate the complainant after diligent efforts; or when the bureau has determined a case is unlikely to lead to probable cause. Notably, an administrative closure preserves a complainant's right to bring the same claim in another forum.

Withdrawal

Some complainants request to withdraw their complaint because they have decided not to pursue the matter further or have decided to file their claims in another forum.

Over the past few years, LEB has committed to resolving complaints more efficiently. As part of this commitment, LEB has increased its pre-complaint intervention work over the past three years. In FY 21, on average, it took approximately 159 days to resolve a case through pre-complaint intervention. These cases do not involve full, longer investigations and possible litigation that are characteristic of filed complaints. The average time that filed complaints were pending while moving to a determination was 838 days. LEB has dedicated significant resources in FY 20 and FY 21 to resolving aging cases. The longer processing time for filed cases is also influenced, in part, by the fact that the NYC Human Rights Law has been amended to include more protected categories, expanding the Commission's mandate. These changes in the law combined with the Commission's efforts to increase awareness through publicized legal enforcement guidance and media campaigns have contributed both to an increasing number of inquiries from the public and the increasing number of matters handled by LEB across all protected classes. The Commission's focus remains on balancing the need to conduct thorough investigations, creating alternative pathways to resolution through pre-complaint intervention to resolve matters more expeditiously where appropriate, and ensuring that LEB's resources are utilized most effectively and efficiently.

Office of Mediation and Conflict Resolution

The Commission's Office of Mediation and Conflict Resolution (OMCR), transformed in early 2017, is a voluntary mediation program that provides a neutral and empowering process for all parties to facilitate a quick, efficient, and mutually acceptable resolution of claims. The OMCR assists in facilitating resolutions, at various stages of the process, including pre-investigation, mid-investigation, conciliation and/or after a finding of probable cause. OMCR provides these mediation services, at no cost.

OMCR is staffed by a Mediation Director and a staff, attorney. In FY 21, the Mediation Director successfully mediated 47 cases to resolution—the highest in this category since 2009—representing, in the aggregate, damages for complainants totaling $2,179,250 excluding non-economic terms and affirmative relief such as agreements, to provide reference letters and conduct trainings. The average time from the acceptance of a case in mediation to its closure was 154 days.

Adjudication

When LEB issues a finding of Probable Cause, a case is usually referred, to the City's Office of Administrative Trials and Hearings (OATH), where an Administrative Law Judge conducts a trial and issues a report and recommendation as to whether there has been a violation of the NYC Human Rights Law. That report and recommendation is then sent, to the Commission's Office of the Chairperson to review de novo, solicit additional briefing from the parties, if warranted, and to either remand the case back for further factual development, or to issue a final decision & order. In FY 21, LEB referred 13 cases to OATH. There was one decision and order issued in FY 21.

Summaries of past decisions and orders are available on the Commission's website.

Damages Awards and Civil Penalties

In FY 21, the Commission, through conciliations, mediated settlements, and withdrawals with benefits obtained $9,741,100 in compensatory damages to complainants and civil penalties, the highest in Commission history for the third year in a row, and $2.2 million more than in FY 20 ($7,519,147). The Commission obtained $8,063,100 in compensatory damages for complainants and $1,678,000 in civil penalties. In a landmark conciliation with a large media company, the Commission obtained $250,000 in civil penalties per alleged violation, for a total of $1,000,000.

Investing in Minority & Women-Owned Business Enterprises

The Commission continues to focus its efforts in supporting the minority and Women-Owned Business enterprises (M/WBE) program as part of our human rights mission, to ensure diversity and inclusion when contracting with minority and women vendors.

In October 2020 the Commission appointed a Chief Diversity Officer to oversee and facilitate the agency's M/WBE program and we have been identified as one of two agencies to have received an "A" grade for four consecutive years in the Comptroller's "Making the Grade: NYC Agency Report Card on Minority- and Women-Owned Business Enterprises."

In FY 21, the Commission spent 50% of its eligible budget with minority and women vendors. In addition, the Commission increased its overall spending with M/WBE vendors by 2%.

Fiscal Year 2021 Budget

The Commission's funding comes almost exclusively from city tax-levy monies. Additional funding has also been provided through a contract with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) for cases the Commission resolves that also could have been filed under federal law, at the EEOC.

| City Tax Levy Additional Program Grant Funding – EEOC | $12,663,147$309,000 |

| Contract (Workshare Agreement)  Total                 | $12,972,147              |

Office of Communications and Marketing

As New York City navigated through the COVID-19 pandemic, the Commission's communications efforts became more important than ever. In response to a drastic increase in anti-Asian bias and discrimination stemming from COVID-19 stigma, the Commission partnered with Public Artist in Residence Amanda Phingbodhipakkiya on "I Still Believe in Our City," a public education campaign that gave a voice, to the city's AAPI communities. This kicked off in a takeover of the, atlantic Avenue-Barclays Center subway station and, atlantic Terminal billboard garnering over 122 million estimated impressions, making it the Commission's largest campaign to date. The Office of Communications and Marketing has worked to bring, attention, to the Commission's community relations, restorative justice, and enforcement actions in press, amassing nearly 3,000 press mentions throughout FY 21. The Office of Communications and Marketing also led "You Do It With Your Heart:' Black Businesses Solidarity Initiative," a campaign raising awareness of the economic impact of COVID-19 on Black entrepreneurs. Throughout each campaign this year, the Commission maintained a 100% investment in community and ethnic media print advertising.

MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET

■ NOTICE

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT BLOCK GRANT PROGRAM NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT AND NOTICE OF INTENT TO REQUEST RELEASE OF FUNDS

This notice shall satisfy two separate but related procedural requirements for activities to be undertaken by the City of New York.

REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

On or about November 1, 2021, the City of New York (the City) anticipates submitting a request to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for the release of Community Development Block Grant (CD) funds authorized under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1992, to undertake the City's Demolition Program Citywide.

The Department of Housing Preservation and Development's (HPD) has authority to contract out for emergency and non-emergency demolitions when an owner fails to do so pursuant to a Department of Buildings (DOB) declaration, as established by the New York City Administrative Code. The Code requires the treatment of any structure that may become "dangerous or unsafe, structurally or as a fire hazard, or dangerous or detrimental to human life, health, or morals." Pursuant to DOB guidelines, this would include deteriorated residential and commercial structures determined to be unsafe and/or debilitated in any area. HPD is responsible for surveying the site, providing a scope of work and cost estimate, and overseeing and approving all demolition, cleaning, and grading of land. CD funds are expended for full and partial demolition of privately-owned residential and commercial properties, and some City-owned properties.

The Demolition program is funded at \$10,957,000 in the Calendar Year 2021/CD Year 47 budget. Please note that Federal Fiscal Year 2021 funds cannot be spent on demolitions until the City receives  $\operatorname{HUD}$ 's environmental clearance at the conclusion of the environmental review process.

FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT

New York City's Office of Management and Budget is the Responsible Entity for this project and has determined that the project will have no significant impact on the human environment. Therefore, an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA) is not required. Additional project information is contained in the Environmental Review Record (ERR). The ERR will be made available to the public for review either electronically or by U.S. mail. Please submit your request by U.S. mail to Julie Freeman, Assistant Director, New York City Office of Management and Budget, 255 Greenwich Street, 8th Floor, New York, New York 10007 or by email to freemanj@omb.nyc.gov.

PUBLIC COMMENTS

Any individual, group, or agency may submit written comments on the ERR to NYC OMB at the above address or via email to CDBGComments@omb.nyc.gov. All comments received by October 31, 2021 will be considered by NYC OMB prior to authorizing submission of a request for release of funds. Comments should specify which Notice they are addressing.

ENVIRONMENTAL CERTIFICATION

NYC OMB certifies to HUD that the City and Julie Freeman, in her capacity as Certifying Officer of the City's Community Development Block Grant Program, consents to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to the environmental review process and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. HUD's approval of the certification satisfies its responsibilities under NEPA and related laws and authorities and allows the City of New York to use CD funds.

OBJECTIONS TO RELEASE OF FUNDS

HUD will accept objections to its release of funds and NYC OMB's certification for a period of fifteen days following its actual receipt of the request only if they are on one of the following bases: (a) the certification was not executed by the Certifying Officer of NYC OMB; (b) NYC OMB has omitted a step or failed to make a decision or finding required by HUD regulations at 24 CFR Part 58; (c) the grant recipient or other participants in the development process have committed funds, incurred costs or undertaken activities not authorized by 24 CFR Part 58 before approval of a release of funds by HUD; or (d) another Federal agency acting pursuant to 40 CFR Part 1504 has submitted a written finding that the project is unsatisfactory from the standpoint of environmental quality. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedures (24 CFR Part 58) and shall be addressed to CPD_COVID-19OEE-NY@hud.gov. Potential objectors should contact HUD to verify the actual last day of the objection period.
