Helpful Hints for Writing Effective Applicant Placement Descriptions

Positives of Placement Descriptions:

- Placement descriptions tell candidates what you are looking for. This helps the Fellow to get a clear understanding of what the position entails and it triggers their interest in the position.
- Placement descriptions set clear expectations. In order to create the best possible experience for you and the Fellow, ensure that you are clear of what is expected of the Fellow in the position.
- Placement descriptions show where the Fellow fits in. The description makes sure the people you select are aligned with your goals, vision, and mission. Fellows should be able to visualize their place in the whole.

Do's	Don'ts
Give Specifics – It is best to spell out the position's requirements. Explain the duties, logistics, expectations, and expectations for meeting deadlines	Use subjective terms, opinions . Avoid using words that are subject to differing interpretations such as, "this job is the best one in the City."
Use Accurate Adjectives – Include adjectives that describe the pace of work (deadline driven, fast paced) or the work environment (enclosed area), but avoid flowery and overly long descriptions.	Use abbreviations or acronyms, vague, general wording or jargon or technical terms. Spell it out.
Allow for some flexibility – the placement description should never restrict supervisors from assigning additional duties not specified in the description. Don't box yourself in too much.	Gloss over essential versus non- essential duties and responsibilities . If your descriptions are fuzzy about essential functions, there possibly will be room for misinterpretation.
Include clear expectations for the Fellow and the supervisor. We recommend that the placement description include the expectation for meeting routinely with the Fellow and what he/she should get out of the meetings.	Use negative statements, such as "does not respond to inquiries without the supervisor's approval.
